The backs of course lack experience but Maynard showed that he was a cool heady player last year and with his old running mate Pete Campbell playing at quarter they should be able to do wonders with the excellent material they have.—Toronto News.

There will be a big practise of the West End Rugby Club at Riverside Park at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, when every player in the city is invited to be out in uniform. Daylight practises come only once a week in Peterborough, unfortunately, so that it is imperative that the Saturday workouts should be attended by every one who expects to play the game. It is likely that two teams will be chosen to-morrow, and a practise game played. Last night's practise at Central Park was well attended and the team is beginning to round into shape. A good turnout to-morrow will help things along immensely.

FOOTBALL

JOHNNIE CANUCK EXPLAINS THINGS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In the editorial notes of the Review of Wednesday evening, I notice the following: "You cannot always tell what a man will be like as a member of Parliament from his actions in private life." Well, we hope not, but at the same time, we feel that as some one has got what he wanted for a long time, it will be from bad to worse, in his case.

We Liberals have the right and privilege to criticise the actions of the Conservative representative in this riding, and his party, and when those actions do not meet with our approval we may be severe, but the public can rest assured that we will in the future, as we have in the past, be decent about it, not abusive and insulting, like our opponents in the political campaign just ended.

It is well for the people to understand that although the Review tries to offer some encouragement by stating that power may bring out some real worth in the man, our present member stated in his address to the electors that he can only appeal to his record as to what will take place in the future, and that record will bear him out as one likely to stand by what he says. Let us deal with a few of the many things he says: Article four of his address states that he is against bonused immigration. Will he stand by this statement in defiance of the actions of the Whitney Government when the campaign starts for the local legislature? Well, I think not. At the same time he can thank this bonused immigration for his seat in the House of Commons at Ottawa to-day. In article eleven, he also states that he is in favour of making the selling of watered stock a criminal offence. I can see our Joe Flavelle and the class he represents trembling in their boots; and they have every reason, as this man's record shows that he stands by what he says, and that they are commercial bandits, holding up the people without let or hindrance. I think we have heard this somewhere before. Just about when the opportunity presents itself to get in some work along those lines. "Ham" will be making a speech in favour of Colonel Sam's bill to prohibit freight trains from flying the green flag on the caboose.

Now, when our honoured member is doing his utmost to get the Government to stand the whole loss of the farmers in the Farmers Bank swindle, would it be too much trouble to please come to the rescue of the York Loan victims at the same time. Some people are trying to boost Mr. Sam Hughes for Minister of Militia, after his making the statement in the House a short time ago that if he were living in the United States at the time of the Revolution, that he would have fought against England and the U. E. Loyalists. He and our pro-Boer member would make a great team.

When the Liberals take into consideration the results in other parts of Ontario and knowing the character of the different people that go to make up this constituency, and how each class was appealed to in a separate and special manner, they have every reason to congratulate themselves that the majority was not greater against them. If we had not a superior candidate to work for results would have been worse. As it was, West Peterborough did the best from our point of view of any riding in the Province.

JOHNNIE CANUCK.

A FINE FLOCK

A large flock of sheep arrived at the city weigh scales at the market yesterday afternoon. They had come all the way from the undulating pastures of Apsley. Commencing their journey on Monday afternoon, they were driven by easy stages, and their arrival in the city yesterday heralded the termination of their long trek. The aggregate weight of the 175 sheep, which comprised the flock, was 16,220 lbs. There were 125 lambs and 50 sheep. The latter were weighed separately. They tipped the scales at 6,000 lbs. Messrs Howden and Davidson were the buyers.

Country Presbyterian Homes Were Visited Canvassers Progressing

An interesting feature of the house-to-house conference now being carried on by the Presbyterians was the visitation yesterday by one of the ministers of the families in a country section of his charge. The minister was accompanied by an elder. It is generally supposed that it is fatal for a minister to engage personally in such work. And the laymen who are expert business men may wish to know the result of the day's work in so far as such a day's work can be tabulated.

Fifteen families were called upon. Definite amounts were subscribed by 9; with an annual increase of 34.20 for current revenue and 41.40 for missions—a total gain in the two departments at $75.60. Five others kept their cards and promised to hand them in on Saturday or Sunday. Two families in the district were not reached, but will be called upon later. When the work is completed there will be a gain in this district of over $100. Two men definitely promised the minister to unite with the church at the Communion in October. The minister was received most cordially, and no deaths from shock are reported up to our going to press. It is safe to say that the attendance at church from this district will be larger than ever next Sabbbath. No one was unduly pressed for money, but the Church's job in its reality and bigness was brought home to the several families, and it was taken for granted that each would do his share, and the results are satisfactory. There will be a demand for envelopes, and it is doubtful if the supply, which was generated as abundant when the order was placed at the beginning of the year, will be adequate. In one church this supply was exhausted before the present movement took shape, showing that the year's growth was beyond the expectations of the officials. In some families where only one member formerly contributed, there will now be two or more.

In Knox Church, 78 cards have been returned, of which 68 promise definite amounts for current revenue ranging from 5c to $1.60 per Sabbath, while 84 promise definite amounts for the building fund, payable December 1st, 1911, ranging from $1.00 to $25.00, and 53 make a definite subscription to missions ranging from 5c to 25c per week.

But other than financial results are being achieved. One worker reports becoming acquainted with a family which had been in Peterborough for 2 years, and had not entered a church. This will not be the case after next Sabbath.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember, the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to secure lasting benefits.

It's a Bad Habit—

That of taking tonics for digestive troubles.

Indigestion is usually caused by wrong food.

Drugs won't and can't cure the trouble, so long as the cause is continued and anyone who tells you that they will is evidently ignorant of the facts.

The sure quick way to relief is to remove the cause—change your mode of eating.

A good start is to begin on

Grape-Nuts

with cream for breakfast

Chew the crisp granules of this food thoroughly, as nature intended food should always be eaten.

Grape-nuts is made of Wheat and Barley and contains all the food elements in these cereals, including the Phosphate of Potash (grown in the grain) put there by Nature for rebuilding Brain and Nerve cells.

FOOD FACTS.
What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent physician of Rome, Ga., went through a food experience which he makes public.

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know from having prescribed it, to convalescents and other weak patients that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion, and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weight very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely and go to the mountains of this state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact, I was not quite as well as when I left home. My food absolutely refused to sustain me and it became plain that I must change. I began to use Grape-Nuts food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without the least fatigue and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers I consider it a duty to make these facts public." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Trial 10 days on Grape-Nuts when the regular food does not seem to sustain the body will work wonders.

The reason we sell so many Happy Thought Ranges is because while other ranges have one or two special features the Happy Thought combines all the good features known in modern range building. The most of them were originated by the makers of the and are found in no other range. We have adapted and improved all the latest inventions in stovemaking, so that now we have achieved what they have been so long striving for—a range that gives perfect satisfaction.

Have you ever tasted a roast, prepared in the Happy Thought oven—cooked perfectly, yet retaining all its juicy, appetizing qualities? The reason of this is because the Oven Ventilation is thorough and effective. A current of fresh air, constantly circulating, keeps it fresh and pure.

This is only one of the host of special features that has made the Happy Thought so highly prized by Canadian housewives.

More than a quarter of a million "Happy Thoughts" are in daily use in Canada.

WARSAW NEWS

Special to The Examiner.

WARSAW, SEPT. 27.—The annual fall shooting matches of the Warsaw Rifle Association will be held on the ranges on Thursday and Friday of this week.

The prizes won by the local team in the Canadian Rifle League have been received. They are in the form of sterling silver sugar shells, one of which goes to each member of the team.

Miss Isabella Coleman, A.T.C.M., Mus.Doc., who recently returned from Smyrna, Turkey, where she was connected with the American Institute, is visiting her sister, Mrs. David Miller. Miss Coleman has decided to accept a limited number of vocal and instrumental scholars during her stay here, which will probably extend about one year. Local musicians are arranging for the formation of a Choral Society similar to that conducted here three years ago, and which was most beneficial and entertaining. It is understood that Miss Coleman will accept the leadership.

Mr. N. Stabler, Peterborough, was in town on business on Monday.

Mr. Fred. Edwards, of North Battleford, Sask., arrived on Tuesday on a visit with his parents here.

Mrs. E. T. Weide, Hartford, Conn., is spending a week, the guest of Mrs. A. F. Choate.

Rev. H. Brown conducted services at Apsley on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall, Peterborough, were in town on Monday.

The Sale of Home Cooking on the market will be continued to-morrow morning and following Saturdays by the Ladies' Aid Society of Knox Church. 1d

TWO GREAT GLACIERS

Messrs. Dr. N. Collie and A. L. Mumm, of London, England, have returned to Edmonton after two months spent in the Canadian Rockies on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. These gentlemen have been exploring a hitherto unknown region in the vicinity of Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, and were accompanied by a train of 20 pack horses, and they state that in some places the forests were so impenetrable, that they had to cut their way through. Several discoveries were made. In one locality they came across two great glaciers larger than any known in the Rockies, and sighted a towering peak that had the appearance of being even larger than Mount Robson, which is 13,700 feet above the level of the sea. One of the glaciers was 40 to 50 miles in length, and 7 to 8 miles in width, and of striking formation.

Ald. Morgan Back From Milwaukee Convention Was A Great Success

Ald. Harry Morgan ,chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council, returned last night from Milwaukee, where he was in attendance at the convention of the International Association of Fire Engineers. The Peterborough contingent, in addition to Ald. Morgan, consisted of Fire Chief Howard and Mrs Howard. The latter will not be home for a few days having remained over in London to visit Mr. Howard's mother.

Ald. Morgan reports that the convention was the most successful in the history of the Association. There were over one thousand delegates present, consisting of fire chiefs, fire committee chairmen and mayors from all over the United States and Canada, and they were royally entertained by the people of Milwaukee. The latter undoubtedly should be experts in the gentle art of entertaining as for twenty five days of the present month the city has had delegates pgesent at different conventions.

The Fire Engineers' Convention discussed a number of very important problems, including that of proper methods of prevention, the system which has been adopted in Peterborough, of having the chief inspect the yards and premises, coming in for approval.

A feature was the exhibition of fire fighting apparatus which was made by the different manufacturers in a hall situated near the Convention Hall. Every variety of fire fighting apparatus was shown, a feautre being the motor-driven apparatus.

Ald. Morgan is very enthusiastic over the motor chemical engine and says this is the apparatus that Peterborough should have. The motor engine gets on the scene of the fire very quickly and is equipped with the ordinary three inch hose as well, so that if chemicals fail the fire fighters can use the water. Neither in Chicago nor Milwaukee did Ald. Morgan see a better equipped hall than the Peterborough station, with the exception of motor engines.

The ladies of the party were entertained to an auto drive around the city while all the delegates were the guests of the Pabst and Schlitz firms at a big banquet. The manufacturers gave the visitors a ride on the fire apparatus and a demonstration of their use at a fire.

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It makes the Hair Beautiful

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

McDermid and Jury guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favourite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c. at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by McDermid and Jury. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

THE BIG GATHERING TO BE HELD IN THE METROPOLITAN CHURCH, TORONTO

1881—London.
1891—Washington.
1911—Toronto.

Few organizations there are in the world that do not meet more frequently than once in ten years. Only of these is the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, the fourth session of which will be held in the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, from October 4th to 17th. Delegates will come from every part of the world where Methodism in any of its branches is represented. In all there will be about 500 delegates, some of them coming from Australia, South Africa, and Japan, and others representing local bodies in all parts of Great Britain, United States and Canada. Canadian delegates are as follows:

Rev. Dr. Carman, Toronto.
Rev. Dr. Chown, Winnipeg.
Rev. G. J. Bond, River John, N.S.
Rev. Dr. Briggs, Toronto.
Chancellor Burwash, Toronto.
Rev. Thomas Manning, London.
Hon. J. A. M. Aikins, K.C., Winnipeg, Man.
Hon. R. K. Bishop, St. Johns, N.B.
Hon. W. H. Cushing, Calgary.
Mr. J. W. Flavelle, Toronto.
Hon. George P. Graham, Brockville.
T. R. Lush, Sackville, N.B.
Judge Maclaren, Toronto.
Mr. C. D. Massey, Toronto.
N. W. Rowell, Toronto.
S. R. Drake, D.D., General Superintendent, British Methodist Episcopal church, London, Ont., is also a delegate.

THE METROPOLITAN CHURCH
Toronto, where the Ecumenical Conference of the Methodist Church will be held.

REV. DR. BRIGGS,
Of the Methodist Book and Publishing House, who will give the address of welcome.

The delegation from Britain includes eight members of the British House of Commons, one of whom, it will be seen is Mr. Arthur Henderson, the Labour leader, who is a member of the British Commission appointed to adjudicate on the recent great railway strike. The following are the names of the Commoners:

Sir W. Howell Davies, M.P., Bristol.
Mr. Thomas R. Ferens, M.P., Hull.
Norval W. Helme, M.P., Lancaster.
Arthur Henderson, M. P., London.
William Middlebrook, M.P., Leeds.

REV. J. J. HEDDITT,
Secretary of the Executive Committee having charge of the preparations for the Conference.

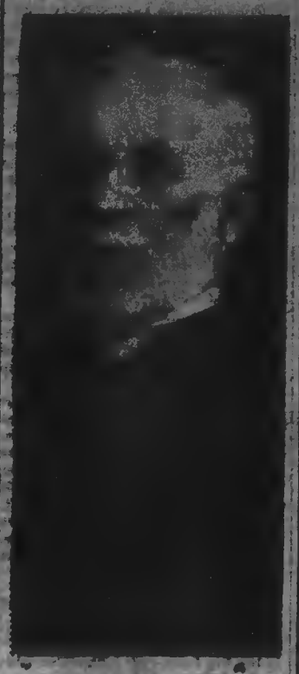
Ebenezer Parkes, M. P., Birmingham.
Dr. John Wilson, M.P., Durham.
R. W. Kenny, [illegible]

In addition to this parliamentary representation the Minister of Education in the British Cabinet, the Right Hon. Walter Runciman is to take part in the programme, delivering an address on "International Relations and Responsibilities". Among other distinguished men from abroad, who will take part in the programme are Sir Robert Parks, England; Rev. Dr. Fitchett, Australia; Bishop Hose, Southern States; Rev. J. Scott Lidgett, England; Bishop Berry of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Rev. Dr. Humphries, United States; and Bishop Nuesleu.

Prominent Canadian Methodists have not been overlooked in the programme, among those who will represent Canada in this regard being Dr. Carman, Rev. Dr. Briggs, Judge Maclaren, Mr. N. W. Bowell, Rev. Dr. Chown, Chancellor Burwash.

The delegates are divided into what is known as the eastern and western sections, the latter being the Continent of America and the former all outside of that continent. They include 41 bishops, 16 from the Methodist Episcopal, 7 from the Methodist Episcopal South, 7 from the African Methodist Episcopal, 8 from the African Methodist Episcopal of Zion, 2 from the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church and one from the Union African Methodist Episcopal Church.

It is interesting to note that one of the delegates is Mr. George J. Cochran, Los Angeles, son of the late Rev. Dr. Cochran, who was the first Minister of the Metropolitan church. Other former Canadians include Hon. A. J. Wallace, Los Angeles, who is Lieutenant-Governor of California, and ex-Governor Hanley of Indiana.



CHANCELLOR BURWASH,
Of Victoria University, where some of the meetings will be held.

Elaborate preparations are being made in Toronto for the entertainment of the distinguished visitors. All delegates from the eastern section will be billeted with Methodist families throughout the city, but many of those coming from the western, or home section will according to custom meet their own expenses. A great many of these latter delegates however, will stay with friends in Toronto.

In the preparations of the programme the nights were kept as free as possible from important addresses or discussions so that that part of the day might be given over as much as possible to dinners and social gatherings. The Methodist pulpits of Toronto and neighbouring cities will be occupied during the two Sundays of the conference by visitors, the pulpit committee having arranged, as far as possible, to have a western and eastern delegate take the two services in each church.

REV. DR. CARMAN,
General Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada.

N. W. ROWELL, K. C.,
Toronto, who will address the Conference on "Interdenominational Co-operation."

The Ecumenical Conference has no legislative authority and convenes simply for counsel and advice. Generally speaking, the following outline of themes shows the usual range of discussion at these denominational gatherings:

The doctrinal basis of Methodism.
The itinerant ministry and other means of evangelism.
Home Missions, including Sunday School Unions, and all Associations for Church extension and for the culture and conversion of special classes.
Education in Church and State and especially theological seminaries and training schools for Christian workers.
"Intemperance, pauperism, Sabbathlessness and generally the evils and crime of modern civilization.
Publishing houses, periodicals, and the use of the press for the world's conversion.
Foreign Missions.
The resources of the Methodist body in numbers, wealth, culture and spiritual life, for doing the work of Christ and the corresponding accountability and many other themes of a kindred character.

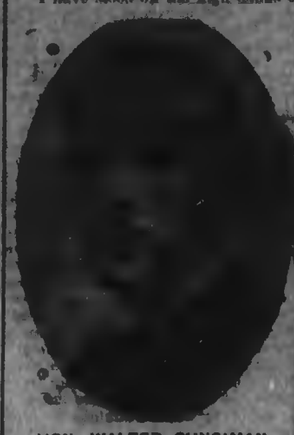
The Conference is under the control directly of two executive committees of twenty members each, one in the eastern section and one in the western. On this western committee Canada has had two representatives, namely, Rev. Dr. Carman and Judge Maclaren. The programme for the approaching conference crossed the Atlantic four times from one committee to the other before being finally ratified. In this connection it is interesting to note how it was that Canada was selected for the meeting of 1911. It was understood ten years ago, in London that the next conference would be held on this side of the Atlantic. Commissioners therefore who were appointed to select the place of meeting met in July, 1900, at Ocean Cove, and the various invitations from different cities of the United States and Canada were considered. The contest finally got down to a fight between St. Louis and Toronto. The American city made the biggest bid, offering, among other things, to pay the expenses of delegates from the eastern section from New York or other ports of landing to St. Louis. Finally a ballot was decided upon, Toronto obtaining 24 votes and St. Louis 13.

The Ecumenical Conference owes its origin to a resolution of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, in Baltimore, in 1876, which appointed a committee to correspond with Methodist bodies in all parts of the world, with a view to a general meeting once in ten years. So satisfactory were the responses that the first Ecumenical Conference was arranged to be held in the City Road Chapel, London, England, on September 7th, 1881. The delegates, 400 in number, represented 26 different Methodist denominations and came from England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Africa, India, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Polynesia, United States, Canada, South America, and the West Indies. The delegates from Canada were as follows:

Rev. George Douglas, Montreal.
Rev. E. B. Ryckman, Brantford.
Rev. John Wakefield, Hamilton.
James H. Beatty, Thorold.
Rev. E. H. Dewart, Toronto.
Rev. A. Sutherland, Toronto.
John Macdonald, Toronto.
Rev. Henry Pope, St. John, N.B.
Rev. A. W. Nicolson, Annapolis, N. S.
David Allison, Halifax, N. S.
Rev. James Dove, New Foundland.
Rev. S. G. Stone, Hamilton.
Rev. E. J. Badgeley.
Rev. J. C. Antliff, Toronto.
Robert Walker, Toronto.
Rev. J. H. Nott.
Charles Hobbs.
Rev. Joseph O'Banyoun.
Rev. W. J. Butler.

In connection therewith it is said to note that very few of those first delegates are now living. Notable among the dead is the Rev. George Douglas, that prince of pulpit orators, whose blindness in later years merely added to his zeal for the cause nearest his heart. At the first conference he was one of the chief speakers, a passage from that address being worthy of reproduction here:

"I have stood on the high banks of the Lower St. Lawrence and watched the closing of the day. It opens with promise, it advances with usefulness into splendour, it closes with shadows as the dew weepeth for the departed day; but over the river the departing sun sent up its silvery light which silvered into amber, which umbered into gold, and goldened into purple, which filled the heavens until every cloudlet became as a chariot festooned with purple, and burnished with gold; and then began the triumphant march away and away to the orient gateways of the morning. Gloriously, like the departing day, has the Conference begun; the unction and inspiration of its opening will abide with us. I believe it will advance in usefulness, and will become historically influential. When the shadows fall, as they will do at its close, when we clasp hands that will be parted forever upon earth, it will be only for a little, to mount the chariots of God, and then away and away to the ascending centuries of the universe. Wesley, numbers of thousands of sleeping saints around us and the millions that lie in these islands; Cane, with thy tens thousands in our Dominion of Canada; Asbury, with thy millions in the great Republic; John Hunt, with thy dusky sons from the far-off isles of the South; Leigh and Waterhouse, and Draper, with your sons from beneath the Southern Cross, the sable sons of Africa; they look on us to-day; may we catch their spirit; may we emulate their labours; may we follow their example till the isles shall cry to the continent, the valleys to the mountain.



HON. WALTER RUNCIMAN,
President of the Board of Education in the British Cabinet, who will address the Conference on "International Relations and Responsibilities."

HON. G. P. GRAHAM,

Dr. Douglas was also a delegate to Washington in 1891, but died shortly afterwards.

The executive committee in charge of the local arrangements in Toronto, is as follows:

Hon. Justice Maclaren, Chairman.
Rev. William Briggs, D.D., Vice-Chairman.
W. B. Willmott, D. D. S., Treasurer.
Rev. J. J. Redditt, Secretary.
H. H. Fudger, Chairman Finance Committee.
Rev. J. H. Hazlewood, D.D., Vice-Chairman Finance Committee.
C. D. Massey, Chairman Places of Meeting Committee.
Rev. W. Burwash, S. T. D., Chairman University Functions Committee.
J. W. Flavelle, L.L.D., Chairman Public Functions Committee.
Rev. J. J. Redditt, Chairman Publicity Committee.
Rev. A. Carman, D. D., Chairman Reception Committee.
N. W. Rowell, K.C., Vice-Chairman Preachers' Meeting Committee.
Rev. W. H. Hincks, D.D., Chairman Preachers' Meeting Committee.
Rev. J. F. Germain, D.D., Chairman Pulpit Supply Committee.
A. W. Thornton, D.D.S., Chairman Sunday School Union.
P. G. Price, Chairman Epworth League Union.

TONIC KRYPTOKS
It is a Real Pleasure
To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily, from wearers of these modern glasses. They are certainly the finest produced in any country, and they recommend themselves by whom ever used. We take a most thorough examination of the eyes, and are most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye.

The Untruth of
$5.00 Glasses for $1.00 Exposed and Explained
Of the many deceptive agencies at work in the Optical business, none is more dangerous to the public than the so self-called Optical Specialist who advertises $5.00 and $3.50 glasses for $1.00
Of course very few if any who visit these fakirs ever get a pair of glasses for $1.00, but such an advertisement serves the purpose of bringing in the victims, and the would-be Optician, who is in charge of the sale relies on his showmanship to do the rest.
The trick is to attract the people to call for the $1.00 glasses. Then the game is to tell the caller:—"Your case is different" and "You need glasses made to order," the result is that the patient pays from $3.00 to $10.00 for glasses which never give satisfaction and are not worth half the price paid. The testing is simply guess work, the glasses that the patient appears to see the clearest through is the one fitted.
This would-be-Optician generally makes it a practice when he strikes a town of going to some druggist, and by allowing him about 10 per cent. is permitted to use the druggist's name and also his store, to do business in. He is supposed to be a graduate or director of some wonderful Optical College (which exists in name only); notice also that his name never appears in his advertisement.
Is this the class of man you would entrust your eyesight to? Men who have never made a study of the eyes. Would you jeopardize your eyes by allowing such men as these to fit you with glasses? I think not. The people of Peterborough are getting everlastingly tired of hearing "Reduced from $5.00 to $1.00." You know and we know that no one is going to give gold dollars for fifty-cents.
Peterborough has had a sample of this method of selling glasses and the results that have followed should be an object lesson to her citizens.
I have changed scores of glasses fitted by these fakirs, glasses which would have ruined the sight if they had been used for any length of time.
Every day brings to my office people who have been victimized, I can produce facts—and victims—to prove instances where people have paid $8.00 for glasses not worth over $2.50.
If you value your eyesight beware of the above kind of fakirs.
This is the first of many letters to the public in regard to the care of their eyesight that I intend to write during the Winter.

An Unwelcome Visitor

He Was an American Trespasser on the Czar's Premises

By EDGAR B. THOMPSON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When I was a young man I traveled a great deal and usually instead of riding about the places I visited I walked. Among other countries, I sojourned in the Crimea, the scene of a great war that occurred about the middle of the last century and where is Livadia, the favorite summer residence of the czar of Russia. I was out on a tramp the day after my arrival and, coming to a narrow valley with cliffs on either side, it struck me that from the summit of the one on the right I would get a fine view.

The ascent would have staggered any one but a good climber. I, however, had ascended a number of the Swiss mountains and this one did not faze me a bit. The side of the cliff was mostly covered with timber, and since it was the summer season the leaves were out; therefore I could not lay out a route from below. I plunged into a thicket and fought my way through underbrush till I emerged on a rock. From there I took my bearings, then made my way through more brush to a ravine, by which I attained the summit.

Turning to enjoy the view, I saw a soldier below me leaning on his musket. To the right and the left were other soldiers strung along at open points from which they could see about them. I wondered what they were guarding and why they had not seen me, for had any one of them caught a glimpse of me he would surely have turned me back. I began to feel uncomfortable lest I might be on forbidden ground.

However I was in for it and concluded that I would rather make my way back to my hotel by going on than risk another passage of that line of soldiers. On passing over the edge of the cliff the country about me assumed a very cultivated appearance, and I came to a smooth carriage drive.

"WHAT IS IT YOU WISH TO KNOW?"

Then it occurred to me that I was either in a park or the place of some nabob.

There was the sound of horses' feet on the driveway, and presently at a point where it turned about a clump of trees there emerged a young lady on horseback, followed by a groom. Desiring to know where I was, as she drew near me, I raised my hat and tried to ask the question in the Russian language. My knowledge of it being limited, I supplied what Russian words I needed and didn't know by English ones. The lady, who had reined in her horse, smiled and said:

"What is it you wish to know?"

"I fear," I replied, "that I am an intruder on some private grounds. I have just made the ascent of the cliff"—

I paused. The lady's face was taking on a horrified expression. "Do you mean to say that you came up that way, past the guard?" she asked.

"I did. I saw no guard till I reached the summit, and I fancy no guard saw me."

"Heavens! You are in the grounds of the emperor. There is Livadia."

It was my turn to be astonished—not only astonished, but terrified. I knew very well how carefully the czar is guarded from those who seek his life; yet here was I in the imperial inclosure. As soon as it was known that I had no right to be there I would most likely be taken for a would be assassin. If I were not cut down by some over zealous defender of his majesty's sacred person, I would be arrested, and how could I prove that I was not the agent of a revolutionary circle? I would be hurried away to disappear from the world.

All this appeared in the lady's face as well as in my own mind.

"You are English, I perceive," I said.

"I am attached to the suit of the czarina."

"Being familiar with the conditions here, possibly you may advise me."

Few realise the power of the human countenance. Without a word it may tell a story—a story of mirth, of danger or of tragedy. This is what the face of the young lady told me in a few moments:

"If he gives himself up and tells the truth as would be the first policy in any other country he will run a terrible risk. If he tries to leave the inclosure without permission the consequences will be as bad or worse. If he is known to be here without permission, and I am seen talking with him the consequences will be as frightful to me as to him. Shall I ride on and leave him to whatever fate may have in store for him or try to help him?"

Then I saw a mental struggle in her fair face, and I knew it involved a decision with regard to taking the risk of putting into practice some plan she had in her mind. Suddenly her face was illumined with the light of one ready to take a great risk for a fellow being.

"Assist me to dismount," she said.

I did so and lifted her to the ground. She said something in Russian to her groom, who took her horse from her. Then bidding me come with her she walked with me to the edge of the cliff.

"Your least risk," she said, "will be to try to pass out between the chain of sentries as you came in. By noting their distance you may be able to fix upon a point between them where you will not be seen. Better, if you can remember your exact path coming up, by following it in the descent you may meet the same conditions. Go. My groom has seen me converse with you and has seen me come here with you. If you are taken I shall be under suspicion of having been in league with an assassin. Even the empress may not be convinced of my innocence of such a charge. God grant that you may pass safely through."

"That you may not be compromised," I added, and, taking her hand, I pressed my lips upon it fervently.

My faculties were sharpened far more by the danger for her than the consequences to me. I proceeded warily, and it almost seemed to me that I could scent my own footsteps on my upward course so keen was I to proceed by the same route. Luck favored me, and I emerged upon the road within a few yards of the point where I had entered the thicket.

I looked up and there, standing where I had left her, was the girl who had been the means of extricating me from my dangerous dilemma. I stood out in an open space where she could easily see me and, taking off my hat, waved it to her. The moment I did so I saw her place both hands over her heart, and I knew the emotion she felt. She did not return my greeting, but turned and, walking up over the top of the cliff, disappeared from my view. I turned and went back to my hotel, where I ordered a stimulant, which I never before or since so greatly needed.

I would have been eager to learn something about the girl who had taken a frightful risk for a stranger and whom in consequence I regarded as a saint, had it not been for the fact that in the first place I would not be able to do so, and in the second she was probably of noble birth or she would not have been of the entourage of the empress, and her social status would lift her so far above an untitled American that he would better not give way to personal interest in her. So I resolved to be content with worshiping her memory, and this I did devoutly.

Three years from the summer of my meeting her I was in London, about to return to America. When strolling on the path beside Rotten row I saw driving with an elderly lady and an elderly gentleman, the latter wearing canonicals, the lady who had befriended me in my great need. The carriage was soon lost in the multitude of other vehicles, and I was saved from yielding to an impulse to stop it and seize the opportunity to thank my preserver, it seemed hard that she was in London, and it would now be perfectly safe for me to know her and yet be kept apart from her. I could not bring myself to leave England, at least not at once, and canceled my passage ticket on the liner.

My resolution to let this woman alone from this time gradually weakened. I knew some persons of social importance in London whom I asked to discover what English girl answering my preserver's description was with the czarina during the summer of my adventure. This was not a difficult thing to do, and I learned through them that the lady was Miss Gladys Stackpole, the daughter of a simple clergyman of the Church of England. Her position at Livadia was that of instructor to the imperial children. This information sent a thrill of hope through me. I had supposed she was at least a countess and would not have been surprised to find her a duchess. That she was not even an "honorable" was a mystery to me. But on inquiry I learned that it was the woman and her ability that had been required and not rank.

I finally succeeded in getting a mutual friend to introduce me to Miss Stackpole, simply giving her my name without referring to our previous meeting. It was arranged that I should go to call upon her for afternoon tea. Our go-between told me that, notwithstanding the lady had numerous requests for introductions from persons she had never seen in this case, she manifested some curiosity.

My coming was a pleasant surprise to her, inasmuch she had often told in England the story of my danger and the risk she ran in the matter, but she had never expected to meet me again.

I did not return to the United States for six months. Miss Stackpole kept me. Her connections were very aristocratic, but we American men are as desirable to Englishwomen for our gold as Englishmen are to our girls for their titles. Besides, Miss Stackpole had an interest in the man she had saved possibly from great trouble. At any rate, I brought her back with me.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman, thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

BASEBALL COACHING.

In the Big Leagues the Sign Language Is Constantly Changing.

Hugh S. Fullerton writes in the American Magazine on baseball coaching in the big leagues. He says:

"Each team has its different systems of coaching, its different language of signs, motions, cipher words or phrases, and no one can hope to learn them all. The worst of trying to study the sign language of the game, by which the coachers from the little spaces near first and third bases give or transmit the orders for plays, lies in the fact that the sign languages change rapidly, often being altered or entirely changed in a day. If Artie Latham jumps into the air and screams 'Hold your base!' it may mean 'Steal second' today and tomorrow it may mean 'Hit and run.' One never can tell what a sign means. Hughie Jennings hoists his right knee as high as his shoulder, pulls six blades of grass and Delahanty bunts. You are certain that Jennings signaled him to sacrifice, so the next day when Cobb is at bat and Jennings goes through the same motions you creep forward and Cobb hits the ball past you so fast you can't see it. If Connie Mack tilts his hat over his eyes and Eddie Collins steals second base as the next ball is pitched, naturally you watch the hat, and, lo, Barry plays hit and run. You hear Clark Griffith yelp 'Watch his foot!' and see two of his players start a double steal. The next time he yells 'Watch his foot!' you break your neck to cover the base and both players stand still. Some players and most spectators give up striving to learn the sign language of the game and just play ball without trying to anticipate moves or to prepare for the style of attack."

Submarine Paint.

In 1895 a special submarine paint was prepared by Holzapfel, the object being first coated with an anticorrosive deposit and then with a second layer containing toxic substances. Owing to the reactions which occurred between the two layers, however, the paints were liable to crack and would not last for more than six months. Recently this drawback has been remedied by the production of a paint in which the outer coating consists of an amalgam of copper incorporated with an earthy pigment and a waterproof medium. As soon as marine organisms attack this coat the amalgam is exposed and voltaic currents are produced which set free poisonous compounds of copper and mercury and destroy the intruders. Thus the action is only brought about in places where it is necessary and the life of the paint is doubled.

DEPARTMENT OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

Intercolonial Railway
BADDECK BRANCH LINE.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tenders for Alba-Baddeck Branch," will be received at this office until eighteen o'clock on Thursday, October 19th, 1911, for the construction of a branch line of railway from a point on the Intercolonial Railway near Alba to the town of Baddeck, a distance of 22.7 miles.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into may be seen and full information obtained on and after the 15th inst., 1911, at the office of the Chief Engineer, of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Intercolonial Railway at Moncton, N.B.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $30,000.00, made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. K. JOHNS.
Secretary.

Nurse Returns After 10 Years on Shores of James Bay

Sisters St. Martins and St. Jude, two members of the Grey Nuns, who have been for the past ten years at Albany, James' Bay, and, having now completed their term, have returned to civilization. The places of these two sisters will be taken by two others also from the mother house at Ottawa. They are Sisters St. Perpetue and Octave. Sister St. Perpetue was one of the first nuns ever sent to Albany, and she is now returning to the scene of her former labors although well advanced in years. Sister St. Jude, one of the returning sisters, was for a long time connected with the St. Patrick's Orphans' home in Ottawa, while Sister St. Martins was formerly superior at the Bethlehem home, Ottawa, and just previous to going to Albany, of the Ville Marie convent. For ten years they offered their services in the interests of the natives in the far northlands. They taught school and conducted a small hospital at Albany, where they are greatly beloved by those who received learning and assistance from them. There are six sisters still at the home, and these, with the two nuns who have left, will continue the work.

COOKS, COOKS, COOKS

Record Registration for Cooking Classes at Montreal Technical School

There should be a falling off in the Montreal dyspepsia statistics, and possibly an increase in the number of approaching marriages, for never before in the history of the Commercial and Technical High School has there been such a rush to the cookery classes. This year there are eleven cookery classes, each having twenty-four pupils, as against seven classes last year. Thus far there are three millinery classes, with thirty pupils each, as against two classes last year and five dressmaking classes as against three last year, with twenty pupils each.

QUITE A YARN ABOUT CANADA

What the London Chronicle Hears From an Immigrant

A recently-arrived immigrant writes to us from Manitoba to emphasise the contention that Canada is not quite truly pictured by the immigration agents and other interested parties. "Who ever would have thought, for example," he writes, "that in Winnipeg the price of a small bottle of Bass is 10d., and that it is the easiest thing in the world to find that one's scene of occupation (at a few pounds a week) is seventy miles from the nearest public house? Such points are discreetly veiled from us before we set out." He has other grievances against the country, but lest a false impression should be created about his tastes, it should be mentioned that he deals also with the water supply. "Before I sailed," he says, "I was told of the fine fishing in Canada. There is; but some of us are hundreds and hundreds of miles from it. Alas! I haven't seen a trout or a trout stream settled, water to drink is scarce, and just recently I was severely reprimanded by my employer for washing my face twice on the same day. Such waste, he swore, was intolerable!"—London Daily Chronicle.

SAVED FROM THE SURGEON'S KNIFE

"Fruit-a-tives" and Appendicitis

Newaygoo, Ont., Feb. 15th, 1910.

"Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella (fourteen years) was taken with terrible pains in the right side. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation. We took her to a Hospital in Kingston where she was again immediately examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once, if we wanted to save her life.

"Luckily for us and for her, an uncle came in with some "Fruit-a-tives" and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent almost from the first dose, and the treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health".

"LITTLE RUSSIAN PRINCE" DEAD

Celebrated Dwarf Expires at London After Exhibition

"The Little Russian Prince" died at London, Ontario. He had just finished his week at the Western Fair, where he had been seen by thousands, and was at the railway station awaiting his train for Detroit to appear in the Midway at the State Fair, when he succumbed to heart failure. The "Prince" was 36 years of age, 27 inches in height and weighed 164½ pounds. When born in Siberia he weighed only eight ounces, and a cigar box was his cradle. By order of the Czar he was taken to Court by his father, who took the opportunity to plead for his freedom, the elder Nicholl being a political prisoner. The latter was pardoned. The dwarf is said to have accumulated a fortune in sideshows. He was accompanied by a manager and a nurse, in whose arms he died, and his brightness of mind was widely commented upon by all. The remains were taken to New Orleans for interment.

"My oldest son, five years old, got very bad with cholera infantum; two days after my next son took it, and the third day my little girl also took it. I doctored with all kinds of things, but they kept on getting worse and the doctors could do them no good. I then started the Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and after two or three days could see a difference, so kept on with the treatment, but they were so bad it took about two weeks to complete the cure. Different people have asked me how I saved my children's lives that time, and I always say it was Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I am now never without it in the house."

FINE RESIDENCE FOR GOVERNOR

The New Home of the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario Will Be Palatial

No residence in Toronto will equal that of his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of this province, according to the plans and perspective of Mr. F. H. Herbes, who planned and designed both the building and the landscape effect for the new property in Cherley Park. The Chateau Frontenac in Quebec, and the Hotel Lemoine in Ottawa are practically the only consistently carried out French chateau designs in Canada. In Cherley Park house will be built a French renaissance chateau consistently carried out, it will be more elaborately finished than the Chateau Frontenac, though, of course, not so large. Its windows will look out over a magnificent prospect of woods, valleys and gullies. Around its walls will circle a terrace with a stone balustrade overlooking the tree tops of a steep gully leading down to the old Belt Line tracks. In front of the porte cochere will extend a balustraded brick-paved court, connected by a bridge over a gully, with a circular outer court, also brick-paved and balustraded. A drive leads from the outer court over another bridge to Roxborough Avenue. Down stone steps from the terrace on the lower flat will be situated the tennis court, surrounded by trees, with a peep into the beautiful valley of the Don. North-east of the main building on the edge of the ravine is the site for the stable and garage. The servants' wing stretches out from the main building on an unconventional slanting angle, with kitchen, scullery, serving pantry, servants' dining-room and sitting-room, bed rooms, and everything complete and all practically detached from the main building.

Where the grounds are level on the north and west a stone wall will form the outer boundary on the ravine side, to the east and south the terrace will be supported by a retaing wall of concrete reinforced by twisted steel rods and wire mesh binding. In one place this wall will be 30 feet high, with almost a bird's-eye view of natural forest grounds reaching down away into the valley. The house itself will be built of grey Credit Valley stone. The contract for the stone work was let to Fred Holmes and Son at $135,000. The front entrance, or porte cochere, leads first to a vestibule, then to a large circular lobby, behind which is the grand hall. The latter will be open for three storeys to a skylight, with a balustrade at each story. To the right of the hall a State reception room and drawing room are arranged en suite. To the left a magnificent State dining room and a private dining room for the Lieutenant-Governor's family on ordinary occasions. At the rear of the Grand Hall is an immense ball-room, with an alcove and a verandah overlooking the ravine. The living room adjoins the main hall on the east, with a palm-room of glass and a writing-room.

The building will have a frontage of 154 feet, with a depth of almost as much. With three storeys, a tile roof, and its pointed turret towers, it will follow somewhat the lines of the French palaces. The inside construction will be carried out in marble and wood. The color scheme has not yet been decided upon. Steel and terra cotta provide practically for fire-proof construction.

BERNIER COMING BACK

No is Heard of After Absence of Six Months

Capt. Bernier, the Canadian-Arctic explorer, is back from a year's cruise in the far north. Bernier wintered in the arctic seas, and had not been heard from for over six months, when the Arctic was reported off Point Amour, on the Labrador coast. Capt. Bernier's long silence, and the uncertainty as to the exact whereabouts of the Arctic, had caused some anxiety in official circles in Ottawa. The return by way of Labrador suggests that Capt. Bernier failed in his intention of making the northwest passage.

TO EXPEL A DANCE

The Berlin dancing masters and ball-room proprietors have had their artistic feelings greatly shocked by the latest developments of the dance there. The principal causes of offence are, first, the American cake-walk, and then its successor, the Parisian apache dance, which has "caught on" to an alarming extent in Germany, its gyrations and dislocating movements, although possessing a certain amount of rhythm, are described in a resolution passed by the Society of Ball-Room Proprietors as "disgraceful and indecorous," and as tending to the demoralisement of the deeds of gangs of "[illegible]ings," and steps are to be taken to expel it from Berlin.

ADVENTURES of the WORLD'S GREAT DETECTIVES

By George Barton

The Great Bullion Robbery

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY W.G.CHAPMAN.

AGAR OPENED THE SAFE AND SECURED THE BULION BAGS.

(This is one of a new series of stories concerning adventures that have occurred in the lives of the world's greatest detectives. Mr. Barton has gathered his material from real life, but in some cases imaginary names have been substituted for real ones, simply as a matter of justice to the innocent descendants of culprits mentioned in the narrative. Formidable liberties have been taken in the construction and arrangement of these fact stories, but in all that is essential they may be regarded as human documents of unusual interest and value.—The Editor.)

One September morning several decades ago, when the express officials lifted out the bullion which had been brought to Boulogne by way of the Southeastern railway, they noticed that the bags were not quite as heavy as usual. They were opened and found to contain nothing but shot. Thus, hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of gold had mysteriously disappeared in the journey between London and Boulogne.

The amazing part of it was that almost superhuman means had been taken to protect the precious dust. The gold was packed in the guards' vans packed in iron boxes, each of which was deposited in a safe with a Chubb lock. The safes each had two locks, and naturally there was a separate key for each one. These keys were in triplicate and were in the possession of the trusted officers of the company. One set was kept by the traffic superintendent in London, another by the head of the Folkstone railway office, and the third by the captain of the Folkstone-Boulogne boat.

Each of these men was beyond suspicion. They were all willing to swear that the bags had been sealed in the usual form, duly fastened and locked. How had the shot been substituted for the gold? And where? No one could answer these questions. It seemed like black magic.

James Sweeney of Scotland Yard was put on the case, and associated with him were a number of the best detectives in England. The investigators first visited the railway office at Folkstone and made a careful examination of the premises. That brought no results. After that there was a second and more careful scrutiny of the railway car. One of the finds here was an old carpet bag.

That was a beginning. The Scotland Yard men took the bag and began one of those systematic searches in which they are excelled only by the secret police of Paris. Many shopkeepers had sold many bags within the period of time under investigation. Some were sold to citizens with whom they were acquainted, while others were disposed of to strangers whose features they could describe only with difficulty. However, the work of "running out" these vague clues was started and carried to a conclusion. It involved weeks of patient labor.

In the meantime it became increasingly evident that the robbery was the work of skilled professionals. Little items of information picked up here and there proved that the scheme had been carried out by a gang of thieves. Finally, enough was learned to convince the detectives that the thieves had secured a wax impression of a set of the real keys, which enabled the thieves to manufacture a set of false ones. But even with this, it was necessary to secure the assistance of someone employed by the railway company.

At this stage of the game one of the carpet bags was traced to a man named Peter Agar. That, in itself, sounds commonplace. But the importance of it becomes evident when it is stated that the portrait of Mr. Agar occupied a place of honor in the Rogues' gallery at Scotland Yard. Copies of the picture were made and sent all along the line. The guards and the ticket collectors immediately recognized it as that of one of the men who had traveled in the train on the day the gold had disappeared.

Two things could be done. One was to arrest Agar at once and depend upon getting his assistance in bringing his pals to justice. The other was to shadow him in the hope of securing additional evidence that would result in recovering some of the gold and rounding up the gang. The second course was agreed upon. So a close espionage was kept upon the skilful and gentlemanly Mr. Agar with the intention of ultimately taking him into custody.

Just as the police were ready to pounce down upon the fellow, he upset all of their plans. He committed a fresh crime. And it was of a character that could not be ignored. He was caught uttering forged checks, and in wholesale quantities. An army of shop-keepers went after him and he was arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced to transportation for life. The detectives who had been after him for the great bullion robbery tried to get him to make a confession of that affair, but he only smiled and remarked that he had nothing to say for publication. They even tried, in a mild sort of way, the kind of persuasion that we call the third degree, but it was of no use. Agar shut up like a clam, merely saying that he was ready to take his punishment for the forged checks. He was sent away, and with him the only clue relating to the theft of the gold dust.

The affair was about to be cast into the limbo of unsolved mysteries when a note was received at the office of Captain Fraser from a woman who gave the name of Mrs. Kay. She said that if the police would call at her home she would give them some information that would interest them exceedingly.

It was the old story of revenge—and a woman's revenge at that. The officer who called on Mrs. Kay expected to hear of some petty offense, but instead of that she poured into his amazed ears the complete story of the great bullion robbery.

"Why do you tell this?" asked the officer.

"Because John Pierce has tried to cheat me out of my just dues."

"Your just dues?"

"Yes, the money that belonged to me—the money that was intended for the support of myself and my child."

"Perhaps," suggested the plain-clothes man, "if you begin at the beginning we may come to a better understanding."

"Very well," was the response. "I can start by saying that the plan for the robbery was conceived by John Pierce."

It seems that Agar and Mrs. Kay lived together as husband and wife and that he had given her all of the details of the robbery. Pierce, at the time, was a clerk in a bucket shop. He had been concerned in several shady transactions and the possibilities of the gold train appealed to him very strongly. But it was too big a job for him to undertake alone. So he sought the professional advice and assistance of Agar. That gentleman seized the suggestion with avidity.

The first step necessary was to win over one of the employes of the company. So they approached one of the guards named Burgess, who was usually in charge of the trains carrying the gold. He fell in with the scheme and explained the methods of transportation.

As the gold was carried in the guard's van it was plain that the robbery would be easy when Burgess was on guard. The question was how to open the safes. The answer to that was plain enough—to get false keys in place of the real ones. Agar told his pal that he would have to get a wax impression of the real keys in order to make the duplicates.

AT REDHILL TESTER WAS HANDED A PORTION OF THE GOLD.

"That's too bad," was the response; "the keys are kept in the office of the company."

"Then we'll have to get an accomplice in the office," was the cool retort.

And so the conspiracy, which had been deep enough, now became deeper. Another employe of the company succumbed to temptation. His name was Tester and he was in a position to lay his hands on the keys of the safes.

This fellow was employed in the Traffic department at London Bridge. He entered into the scheme with avidity. He reported to his pals that there were times when the safes were sent to Chubbs for repairs, and that, on these occasions, one of the keys was sent with the safes. Such an occasion arose very soon, and then Tester cleverly managed to abstract one of the keys; but there was still an impediment to the complete success of the conspiracy. As each of the safes had two locks, and the key to but one was sent to Chubbs, it was the second key that baffled Tester's best and worst efforts.

But what they failed to get by shrewdness came singularly enough by chance. One of the second keys was always kept in the Folkstone office hanging in a little closet. Pierce ascertained this fact, and he hung about the office in the hope of getting his clutch on it. His opportunity came. One morning the cupboard was empty, and Pierce, stepping into the office, which was vacant, grabbed the key and passed it to Agar, who had a handful of warm wax. He immediately took the impression of the key, returned it to Pierce, who put it back in its place, and the two of them left the office together without being detected.

The next thing to learn was when the large consignment of bullion would be dispatched. Tester obtained this information. In the meantime the conspirators arranged their part of the scheme. Carpet bags were purchased and filled with shot which was intended to replace exactly the amount of gold taken from the bags. Agar more than once traveled up and down the line for the purpose of testing the false keys that he had manufactured with Pierce's assistance. Burgess admitted them to the guard's van, where they fitted and filed the keys until both worked easily in the lock of the safe.

Finally the great night of the enterprise arrived. The conspirators purchased tickets on the Southeastern train, boarded it and handed their bags, filled with shot, to the porters, who placed them in the guard's van. As the train was starting, Agar managed to get into the van with Burgess, while Pierce secured a seat in the first-class carriage. The industrious Agar began work at once. He opened the safe, secured the bullion bags, removed the gold, substituted the shot from the carpet bag, refastened and resealed the bullion bags and replaced them in the safe. The trick was partially turned. At Redhill Tester met the train and was handed a portion of the gold. The two other safes were robbed in the same manner as the first. When the train reached Folkstone the unsuspecting officials removed the safes, which were filled with shot, and not gold. The rascals went on to Dover, having previously obtained tickets to Ostend. Later on they returned to London unobserved, and little by little disposed of the stolen gold.

The bandit, as already stated, was first discovered at Boulogne. Mrs. Kay said that when Agar was sentenced to transportation for life and knew that he could not escape, he handed to Pierce forty-five thousand dollars which he requested to be settled on Mrs. Kay for the support of herself and her child. Pierce paid her a few small sums and then calmly confiscated the remainder of this fortune. She came to the police in great rage and disclosed the story of the robbery as it has been here related.

Agar, who was in Newgate, heard how Pierce had misrepresented Mrs. Kay and he eagerly turned state's evidence. As a consequence of this, Pierce, Burgess, Tester and several others were arrested, convicted and sentenced to life terms in prison. The company only recovered a very small portion of the stolen money.

This true story points a moral that will not be overlooked by the discriminating reader. It is to crime, even viewed from a sordid worldly standpoint, does not pay. Pierce and Agar had already spent many years in jail and their final crime was that the remainder of their existence should be lived out behind prison bars. Every one associated with the robbery of the Southeastern railway suffered life-long scars—scars that have healed, but that nevertheless left their mark on the victim.

Students of criminology are unanimous in the belief that crime is the least profitable of all human undertakings. "Easy money" seems to carry its own punishment. Even though the crook makes what he calls a "get away," he suffers constantly from the fear of detection. That comes sooner or later and then comes the misery of arrest and the haunting fear that mother or wife may be in want or suffering. Attempts to care for them with tainted money usually ends as did the Pierce-Agar compact. Honesty, therefore, is not only the best, but the most comfortable policy.

May Make Clothes From Trees.

"These cotton men, the growers of cotton, I mean, had better not be too importunate in their demands," remarked Herbert N. Tillinghast, from the Sheboygan District of Wisconsin. "We have made almost everything out of our spruce timber, including a lot o ftrouble for the tariff adjusters down here in Washington. Paper from wood is an old tale, and now comes the proposition to make clothes from wood, and good clothes that will wear better than the most of the cotton stuff. The cotton spinners have long been experimenting with cellulose extracted from our spruce timber, and they have proceeded on the assumption that bleached cotton is really almost pure cellulose. Following that idea the investigators have discovered a method of making thread from wood pulp."—Washington Post.

Phonographic Postcards.

Sending little love messages or snatches of love songs by postcard to be translated by your sweetheart's phonograph is the latest development in the picture postcard craze. On the back of the postcard is a small record resembling the regular disc records used on some machines. It is a very thin film pasted on the card and containing some phrase of tender sentiment or a bit of some popular music. The card has a hole in it so that it may be placed on the machine and when this is done the needle makes the card talk and the one to whom it was sent gets the message. The idea was born in Germany, but the foreign buyers of the American stores this winter are said to have bought up about all the German makers could turn out.

Treasure Trove in Old House.

To find a roll of bills while repairing the floor of a house he had bought, was the good fortune which befell Patrick Kerwick of Trenton, N. J., some days ago. Mice had chewed the bills, but happily Kerwick had discovered them before they were quite destroyed. The $100 mark was quite recognizable. How the money got there is a mystery, but it is supposed the house was owned by somebody who distrusted banks, and who died without having confided the secret of the hidden treasure.

In Hungry New York.

A horse harnessed to a wagon of the New York Poultry Market, loaded with a dozen crates containig six hundred chickens, ran away on the Williamsburg bridge and crashed into the runaway gate at the Brooklyn terminal. The crates were smashed and the chickens set free. The chickens scattered in every direction and many were caught by men and boys who forgot to return them to the driver. Many others were killed or maimed by cars.

Used Fists Instead of Pens.

A unique method of settling a political dispute was recently adopted by two Queensland journalists, Mr. Murphy, editor of the Charleville Times, a Liberal organ, and Mr. Kilner, editor of the local Guardian, Labor. They decided to settle the matter by a public fight with boxing gloves. The hall was crowded and both men fought fiercely. The first round was decided in favor of Mr. Murphy. In the second round Mr. Kilner fared even worse. The third finished him completely and in less than a minute he was hanging on the ropes in a dazed condition.

Yankee Twepence-Ha'Penny.

Congressmen are giving some attention to the proposal for a 2½-cent piece, for which there appears to be a considerable demand. Such a coin would keep in the customer's pocket the odd half-cent he now so frequently gives to the dealer when he buys one article sold at two for a quarter. Whether it is otherwise desirable is a question. The two-cent and the three-cent pieces formerly in circulation were a nuisance and were withdrawn. A 2½-cent coin to be handy should be easily distinguished by the "feel" in a pocketful of change. If that can be accomplished there is no objection to including it in the minor coinage.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

Music Teachers Protest.

At a congress of German music teachers in Berlin an earnest protest was raised against what was called "scavenger or gutter music." According to the principal speaker, this class of music takes the form of operettas of a degrading and silly character. "It is art," said the speaker, "which degrades composer, executants, and those who hear the music and think of the words sung to the most popular airs of this school. Alone and divorced from their catchy melodies, no sane man would willingly utter the inanities contained in them."

Delightful Ignorance.

Walter Damrosch, the musical conductor, was describing a very ignorant foreign critic. "In short," Mr. Damrosch added, "he was as ignorant of music as old Jed Shucks and his wife were of city ways. Jed was describing his recent visit to New York. 'An' we went to a big department store,' he said, 'an' we got into one o' them 'ere things wot whisses ye clean up to the top—wot in tarnation is their name, ma?' 'Shoplifters, Jedediar,' Mrs. Shucks replied."

SIR LOMER MARRIED

Quebec Premier's Marriage to Miss Amos Solemnized at St. James Church, Montreal

The marriage of Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of the Province of Quebec, to Miss Alice Amos, Montreal, took place very quietly at St. James Cathedral, Dominion Square, only immediate relatives and intimate friends being present. The ceremony, which was performed by His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi, assisted by Rev. Father Gouin, brother of the bridegroom, took place in one of the small chapels at the church, which had been decorated for the occasion.

Punctually at nine o'clock, as the bride entered the west door of the cathedral, the triumphant strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mr. Pelletier, pealed forth, filling the building to its remotest corners.

Preceding the ceremony itself Archbishop Bruchesi, having donned his bishop's cape and mitre and taken in his hand the massive gold crozier, the insignia of his priestly office, addressed the bride and bridegroom in a brief sermon, reminding them of the sacred importance of the step they were about to take.

The Premier was supported by Sir Louis Jette, Miss Alphonse Boyer acting as witness for the bride, who was gowned in taupe satin with hat to match.

Following a wedding breakfast which was served at the Windsor Hotel, Sir Lomer and Lady Gouin left for New York, where part of their honeymoon trip was spent.

Montreal friends presented Sir Lomer with a solid silver tea service in honor of the occasion, comprising seven pieces. He was also presented with a dinner service of solid silver by the Liberal members of the Legislative Assembly, both gifts having been made especially for him.

ELECTRICITY ON FARM

Satisfactory Test at John Prouse's in West Oxford

A highly satisfactory test with Hydro-electric power was made on the farm of Mr. John Prouse, West Oxford, when a large number gathered to witness the progress of silo-filling by the aid of the current. Among those in attendance was Hon. Adam Beck, Chairman of the Hydro-electric Commission, the Ingersoll Power and Light commissioners, and a number of representative farmers. Mr. Prouse has installed an equipment which is being operated by Niagara power, and which worked very satisfactorily in the test. Mr. Prouse has had his residence wired, as well as his barns and outbuildings, even to the milk-house, probably being the first farmer in western Ontario to adopt the "white coal" for agricultural purposes.

Tribute to Sir Wilfrid

Inspired by patriotism and enthusiasm for his art, and with the object of paying a tribute to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. D. Beauchamp has just finished an illuminated copy of Sir Wilfrid's message to the Canadian people on the eve of the dissolution of Parliament. Five weeks barely sufficed for the accomplishment of Mr. Beauchamp's self-appointed task, and had he worked less than ten hours every day, he could not have finished his work so quickly. One whole week was spent in perfecting the maple leaf which shows dimly through the inscription, and for the drawing of the little circles which decorate the border, one whole day proved almost too short. Around the message there is a chain made of large and small links, the large ones each containing a pithy extract from the message.

SALE OF RELICS

Comprising Autograph Letters of Lady Hamilton and Scabbard Worn by Wellington

One of the most interesting sales of relics, curios, and works of art of recent years will be held at Manor House, near Dorchester, when the Bridge collection will be put up to auction by Messrs. Waring and Gillow.

The collection was formed by Mr. John Bridge, who died in 1851, and his son, John Gawler Bridge, who survived him for eighteen years. They were both members of the firm of Rundell, Bridge and Rundell, who were jewellers to four monarchs—George III., George IV., William IV., and Victoria.

Nelson and Wellington are both represented in the collection. There is a pathetic relic of the great Admiral—an autograph letter written by Lady Hamilton to the then Prince of Wales enclosing a lock of Lord Nelson's hair and thanking the Prince for his kindness in calling on her in the hour of her bereavement. The lock of hair and the original wrapper of the letter, with the black seal, are intact.

The Iron Duke is represented by the original scabbard of the sword worn by him during the Peninsular War, together with [illegible]

BODY IN MOUNTAIN GLACIER

A Fall of Ice Reveals the Body of a Man

A guide recently came into Kandersteg, from the Lootschenthal, Switzerland, and brought the news that a fall of ice from the Lootschen Glacier had revealed the body of a mountaineer and a hat supposed to belong to another man. The guide believed he had solved the mystery of the two Englishmen, Messrs. Cohen and Bencke, who were lost on the glacier in 1895, when they were surprised by a snowstorm and fell into a crevasse. A later report, however, states that the body is that of a Swiss who disappeared in 1899. The discovery was due to the abnormal melting of the ice owing to the great heat. The discovery of the body came about as follows: A guide went with a lady over the Lootschen Pass towards Kandersteg. Instead of the usual way over the Lootschen Glacier the lady expressed a strong inclination to take another path, and they came across a very little used track, on which they found the body.

ANGLICANS AT KHARTUM

Great Crowds Will Attend the Consecration of the Cathedral

Plans for the consecration ceremonies of the new Anglican Cathedral at Khartum on January 24 next are now completed, and invitations to witness the event are already being issued. As a large number of English Churchmen and their families are expected to go from London to Khartum for the occasion, the committee has arranged for special reduced-rate excursions for parties of fifty or more, which will include stops at Alexandria and Cairo, a voyage by steamer up the most picturesque part of the Nile, and short trips to Omdurman and other points in the Soudan where historic associations and characteristic native life appeal to the imagination and interest of the traveller. In addition to the English pilgrimage to the consecration of the cathedral, it is expected that Khartum will be filled with visitors from Cairo and the north, for at that season of the year there is usually a considerable exodus, due to the inclement weather of Egypt, to the warmth and sunshine of the Soudan.

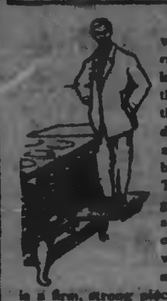
Millions of Tourists

The high-water mark of tourists visiting Switzerland was reached in July, when the Swiss Federal railways, exclusive of the funicular lines, transported 1,972,000 travellers, and the receipts amounted to $3,600,400, which totals have never been attained in previous years.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Fennell and Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Fennell, of Sudbury, Suffolk, have just celebrated their silver weddings. The two men are brothers and married sisters on the same day.

The Peerless Peninsular

a durable cast-iron range with modern conveniences



You don't want to use a range as a step-ladder—not as the ordinary thing—but you do want a strong, well-built range. This picture is given here to show that the oven door—a weak spot in most ranges—is a firm, strong piece of construction in the Peninsular and it is typical of the whole make-up of this durable range.

Some people prefer a cast-iron range but want one or two features usually found only in steel ranges.

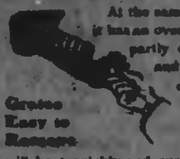
The Peerless

is designed for just such people.

It has the perfectly-fitting doors and parts, the firm, substantial body

Low Closet for Pots and Pans

and the cosey, homelike appearance peculiar to cast-iron ranges.



At the same time it has an oven made partly of iron and partly of steel

Greater — an Easy to — oven

will heat quickly and evenly all over.

It has a large oven, two inches deeper than any other range of the same size, just large enough to cook four pies at once.

It has a drop oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

These are all things that you can see—very important things, but not more so than the things you cannot see—the interior construction, which decides whether or not your pies will burn, whether your oven will twist and bend, whether it will be perfectly tight so as to keep out dust and smoke; whether it will wear.

These unseen points you can be sure of when you buy a Peerless Peninsular, or in fact any Peninsular range.

Fifty years of building stoves—honest stoves—are behind every range that bears the name "Peninsular." That alone says the materials are good—the fine arrangement is good—the oven is built to heat evenly—the range will wear.

It may be had with a hot water reservoir and a steel warming closet or not, as desired. The warming closet has a drop door like the oven, making it easy to pull out dishes and adding double shelf room when needed.

Top Raised for Broiling.

There is a Peninsular range to suit every purse and to please every taste in range architecture.

"The Cost"

illustrates some of the more popular lines and explains why Peninsular ranges cost less in the long run than others. Don't buy a range before reading this book. It's free.

INMATE OF WORKHOUSE HUSBAND OF COUNTESS

Martin Townsend is Said to Have Been Married to a Titled Lady

After making their customary round of the Newport Workhouse some time ago, the Visiting Committee made the following entry concerning an inmate named Townsend: "An actor, stated to be married to a countess." Townsend chivalrously declines to divulge his wife's name as he is anxious not to hurt her feelings, but he himself claims that she is a countess.

The romance appears to date from July, 1895, when a marriage took place in the Registry Office in Charles Street, Cardiff, the bridegroom being Martin Edward Townsend, who described himself as a professional and a bachelor, and gave his age as 23. The bride, who was fashionably attired, described herself as a widow, and her age was also entered as 23. The name she then gave has a rich aristocratic flavor. Apparently the romance was short-lived, for the couple soon separated. Townsend is said to be an excellent companion, and his conversation shows him to be well read and a man of considerable culture.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

The first duty of a man is to his home, to his wife, and his children, if he is so fortunate as to have them.

We believe many lives are wrecked, not as much by the storms of life, as by drifting with the tide and striking those rocks and coming in contact with the hidden dangers that are always along the shore. Push it on the deep water, head your bark up the stream, some but lazy, indolent people drift with the tide.

In the family relation every one should always be at his best. The home ought to be a heaven. It ought to be as nearly heaven as is possible on earth. There should be and purposely withered flowers about the hearthstone and no purposely clouded countenance. Sometimes all ought to be sufficient to make home conduct exemplary. Certainly all want a pleasant home. Certainly all want smiles instead of frowns.

Do not sit and ponder over trouble; you cannot dispel it by making yourself miserable. Never look into the future with despair; you cannot cross a bridge until you come to it. Don't harrow your mind over things that cannot be helped. Live confiding in the present. The past cannot now be remedied, and you have yet to try the future.

Half the marriages in the world are nothing but bubbles and barter. A man wants a wife. He casts about for an even exchange. In a year he is tired of his bargain. In five years love is dead, and cold-browed tolerance inherits Love's garments. In twenty years tolerance is at its grave and hate reigns supreme. The wife is nagsy and prickly and peckish. The husband is dogmatical and reticent and mean. But there they hang together on the bough, like two gnarled and frosted apples; until the winds of death dislodge them and away they go. The only way to be rid of bubble marriage—marriages that turn out emptiness with one drop of water as the residuum, and that drop a tear—is to educate our boys and girls to something higher than playing with pipes and soapy water. Give them something more earnest to do and see that they do it. Compel men and women to choose their life companions with at least a tithe of the solemnity they bring to the selection of a carriage horse or a ribbon.

Laughter is day and sobriety is night, and a smile is the twilight that hovers gently between both, and more bewitching than either.

Many a child goes astray, not because there is a want of prayer or virtue at home, but simply because home lacks sunshine. A child needs smiles as much as flowers needs sunbeams.

A homestead without a pair of old folks—"Time's doting chronicles"—seated contentedly in the chimney corner, would hardly be a homestead at all. If they are in the picture, it is complete. There you may find them day in and day out, in all sorts of weather, steadfast to their please and to one another. When the eaves drip, in the idyll of the winter forenoons the old man with head of silver abandons his post and newspaper to make the accustomed tour of the kitchen offices, the shed, or the barn, lingering by the way to throw down a handful of grain for the pinched poultry. With what minuteness he is cautioned by grandmother not to go out insufficiently clad, and with what a single-hearted joy she welcomes him when he comes back to her again.

Parents, through lack of recognition of the individuality of children, often try to force their minds as a burglar opens a safe, using the jimmy of parental command or the dynamite of punishment. It is so much easier, so much more natural, so much more effective, to find the combination of the safe,—the individuality of the child that is the key to its mental and moral processes and peculiarities! Then the mind opens to truth naturally, simply, automatically. A bud does not become a flower by irreverent fingers forcing its delicate petals apart; it requires merely self revelation, self development through self activity, natural unfolding, normal growth in harmony with its environment.

We know fro sad experience that it is very inconvenient to be poor, but no man is poor who has a happy home and it does not require lace curtains or velvet carpets to make a home happy.

Do not ask the teacher or some class-mate to solve that hard problem. Do it yourself. You might as well let him eat your dinner as "do your sums" for you. It is in studying as in eating; he who does it gets the benefit, and not he who sees it done.

The mother who radiates peace, radiates strength also. The restlessness, the noise, the rush of the life of to-day, make it all the more necessary to maintain within the home an atmosphere of serenity and sweetness so that the threshold once crossed, the outside noise and clatter and strife are left securely behind. This is, perhaps, an old-fashioned conception of home.

It one desires to improve in manners he can never do so except by mingling with the refined and good Diffidence often keeps back those who have in early life but few social advantages. The only way to overcome this painful difficulty is to plunge in. It is one of the most easily cured of all maladies. A bath in the braving ocean of social life will enable a person to keep his footing bravely.

OLD-TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

From time immemorial, sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and falling hair, and for making the hair grow.

In olden times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this sort, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Oct. 1st, 1911.

(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Prophet Ezekiel a Watchman. Ezek. iii.

Golden Text—Hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me. Ezek. iii: 17.

1. Verses 1-3—What is it that is to the soul like food is to the body?

2. Do men get in these days, special messages from God as Ezekiel did? If so, specify.

3. What is the immediate effect upon us of new knowledge?

4. Verses 4-7—Which are most susceptible to the claims of the gospel, a people who have rarely heard it preached, or those who are constantly hearing it? Give your reasons.

5. What is the effect of preaching the gospel upon those who reject it?

6. Verses 8-11—Is it always true, that we have sufficient strength to do the work to which God appoints us? Give your reasons.

7. Does God know in advance, "whether they will hear or whether they will forbear," when he sends a message to a people? Why or why not?

8. If our hearts fail us in the difficulties of our God-appointed work, how much are we to be blamed?

9. Verses 12-14 — When we are "bitter," or angry, or even sorry to carry out the work to which we are appointed, what attitude does God likely take to us?

10. May we make every work, no matter how hard or disagreeable, a joy, or does God know and expect that we shall sometimes be sad?

11. When we do God's work against our will, or inclination, are we praised or blamed by Him?

12. Verses 15-17—Is it either essential or an advantage in order to get best results, for missionaries to dwell among the people to whom sent and become a part and parcel of them?

13. When we are appointed by God to do a thing, should we sit around and wait for special inspiration, or start right at the work, and expect all essential help?

14. Verses 18-19—How can we justify God in making the salvation of a sinner depend upon the warning of a saint?

15. Who is the guilt, and what will be the punishment of a man who fails to warn, is the means of a sinner dying in his sins?

16. If a Christian refuses, or neglects, to give to his utmost ability, to the missionary cause, will he be adjudged guilty before God for those who could have been saved through the influence of the money he might have given?

17. Verses 20-21—To what extent are we guilty for the backslidden state of so many members of the church? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

18. How is it that some who were really earnest Christians, lapse into a sinful life?

19. Verses 22-23—Which person gets more revelations from God, the one that gives himself up to contemplation chiefly, or the one who is in the thick of the fight for God?

THE LAST STATES.

Arizona and New Mexico Will Complete Uncle Sam's Family.

Since the thirteen colonies became the nation in 1783 thirty-five states have been added to the Union. The United States have multiplied at the handsome rate of one state for every three and a half years of national existence. Decidedly there is a shock in the suggestion that we now have come to the end of our father, for the end, if end it prove, closes an epoch.

Congress has passed the act enabling Arizona and New Mexico to form state governments and become equal shareholders in the Union. Thus the last of the contiguous territories are bidden into the great American federation.

Many questions arise: Shall we forever remain a close, compact brotherhood of forty-eight mutually dependent and respectively independent states? There is no such design, yet further changes are evidently far off in time. Doubtless one or more states will be founded in Alaska. Some say the Japs, Chinese and spineless natives of Hawaii even now aspire to be voters of a mid-Pacific state. Our brown charges in the Philippines are experimenting, under surveillance, with a royalike gift of self government. Porto Rico, really ambitious for statehood, already has a territorial government granted by congress and boasts a voteless delegate in the house of representatives in Washington.

It is only too certain that the next state will represent an important departure in American history, involving difficulties akin to the negro problem. But we shall, as the politicians are fond of saying, cross that bridge when we come to it.—Metropolitan Magazine.

He—Dearest, I am tempted to steal a kiss.

She—Well, you don't see a cop anywhere around, do you?—Philadelphia Telegraph.

"How can I get this package home?" he asked, with husky cough.

"I wouldn't try," the clerk replied. "I'd go and sleep it off."

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Our Little Boy of Fits"

A family can suffer no greater affliction than to have a child subject to fits or epilepsy. Many a father or mother would give their all to restore such a child to health.

"I am heartily glad to tell you of our little boy whom was completely cured of fits. He commenced having them when he was 2 years of age and had from 20 to 30 per week. I tried three doctors and one declared that all of them could not be cured, but Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills made a complete cure. He was entirely well for a year. It had been nearly three years since he had the last one. I shall give Dr. Miles' medicines praise wherever I go. You are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit and anyone writing to me I will gladly answer if they enclose stamp for reply."

SOUVENIR FURNACE
(New Idea Series)

Keeps the house warm and cosy in the severest winter weather, and heats all rooms equally well.

It is very simple to operate—just touch the lever and you dump the ashes; there never can be dead coals at the sides of the firepot; the ashes are readily removed.

It is easy to control the heat and regulate the fuel consumption, which means a saving of 30% to 50% in fuel bills.

It is a clean and healthful furnace—gas and dust cannot get into the hot air chamber and then into the living or sleeping rooms. It forces pure air through the whole house.

THE HAMILTON STOVE & HEATER COMPANY, Limited
Successors to Gurney-Tilden Co.

Every league of a Souvenir Furnace is protected with a legal bond on date of purchase, guaranteeing against defective cracks or breaks of any kind for 5 years.

Turkish Destroyers Driven Ashore in First Battle of the War

PETERBOROUGH ITALIANS MUCH EXCITED OVER THE CONFLICT

TURKISH FLEET HEADS TO THE DARDANELLES

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, SEPT. 30.—The Turkish transport Derna, with the new Governor for Tripoli, large reinforcements of troops, ammunition and provisions has been captured by the Italian blockading fleet, without a shot. One Italian cruiser ran aground in shallow water during the manoeuvring.

SALONIKA, TURKEY, SEPT. 30.—Two cruisers and a battleship, with a destroyer, all under Admiral Gronet, appeared off the seaport of Prevesa early this morning, destroyed the Government House, and sank a Turkish torpedo boat which had taken shelter in the harbour after engagement of yesterday. It is stated that the Turkish casualties are heavy, although little, if any, resistance was made. The inhabitants fled into the interior in terror as the terrible shells fell around the town.

ROME, SEPT. 30.—One newspaper despatch wirelessed from a neutral warship off Tripoli says a contingent of sailors and marines landed during the night, and after sharp fighting captured the forts east of the town of Tripoli, and took prisoner the General who commanded the Turkish defences.

CONSTANTINOPLE, SEPT. 30.—Said Pasha, who has taken up the Grand Vizership, because the late premier was in favour of surrendering unconditionally to Italy, has held a continuous meeting of his Cabinet since taking office. This morning the Sultan himself was present at the Cabinet meeting, and, it is understood, favoured resistance to the last ditch against the aggressions of Italy.

The first act of Said Pasha's Government this morning was to send out to all European Powers a message expressing pained surprise at Italy's unnecessarily declaring war against Turkey, and appealing to the peaceful, humanitarian and friendly sentiments of the great Powers to assist in convincing Italy of the conciliatory intentions of Turkey and its desire to prevent the useless shedding of blood and grief to thousands of families. The official report here of the naval engagement of Privesa is that two Turkish destroyers were attacked by an Italian cruiser and torpedo boat. One Turkish vessel took refuge in a harbour and the other ran ashore. The crew was saved.

THE FEELING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, ENG., SEPT. 30.—Popular opinion throughout England is by no means in favour of Italy in the present embroglio. There is a feeling of strong sympathy for Turkey as an under dog that should have the assistance or at least the moral support of one of the great Powers. Many people cannot see Italy's justification in commencing war. "Traditional British justice demands that Britain make some inquiry into this matter," says one influential paper this morning. Then again there are many British officers in the Turkish service.

Germany has undertaken to take charge of the Italian interests in Turkey during the hostilities, and the United States has been requested to protect the Turks initially from harm or loss.

TURKISH FLEET IN FLIGHT.

LONDON, SEPT. 30.—A despatch to the Times says that the main part of the Turkish fleet is making for Dardanelles with three cruisers of Italy in chase.

ROME, SEPT. 30.—From telegrams received here, it seems that the famous Duke Abruzzi, who sought for the hand of a United States millionairess, and was repulsed, was in command of the operations in front of Privesa yesterday, but Granet is in charge to-day.

CONSTANTINOPLE, SEPT. 30.—Parliament has been summoned for next week. In the meantime the Cabinet of the new premier, Said Pasha, has again been rent asunder by internal disputes.

NOW TELEPHONE COMPANY'S BIG STICK SWINGS HERE

Mr. Doan, in an Interview With Examiner Says That Only Subscribers May Use Phone and at That None But Their Own.

RULES TO BE CARRIED OUT

The question of whether a man may allow his neighbour to use his telephone has become a live issue. Heretofore the regulation governing this has been almost a dead letter, for while the prohibition has been plainly enough stated in the contracts given to subscribers by the Bell Telephone Company, the enforcement has not been insisted upon.

In view of the recent action between the Union Stock Yards Company and the Bell Telephone Company, the Examiner called up Mr. Doan, Manager of the local branch, to ascertain his views as regards local conditions. Mr. Doan's reply was that conditions here were identical with those in Toronto, and that it was within the jurisdiction of the Bell Telephone Company to enforce the rules in that particular respect.

"Do you have much trouble here in getting subscribers to live up to the rule?" queried the Examiner. "Well, I would rather that you would ask some other question," replied Mr. Doan. "We do have trouble sometimes. A non-subscriber called me up one day and asked me to go two blocks with a message to a friend. I recollect another case of here a lady went into a grocery store and telephoned an order for groceries to another grocer. This is only one of the many incidents which come to our ears; it serves to indicate the 'nerve' of some people."

Employees are also forbidden by the rules of the subscribers' contract from using the phone of the firm for other than business in connection with the firm. When an employee uses the phone for a personal matter he is violating the rules.

However, the outcome of the Toronto Stockyards case will be awaited with interest.

KILLED IN ELECTION CELEBRATION

Special to The Examiner:

RIMOUSKI, QUEBEC, SEPT. 30.—The Coroners jury in the case of Dudley Canston, theatrical manager, killed on a train here while watching a political celebration, returned a verdict that a bullet from a revolver fired accidentally by Eugene Banville, a liquor manufacturer, was the cause of death. Banville will stand trial.

PRISONERS REMANDED

Examiner Special:

HAMILTON, ONT., SEPT. 30.—Geo. Kenneau and John Hughes, the Canadian Express employees who were arrested yesterday with the theft of eight thousand dollars, appeared in Police Court this morning and were remanded for a week. The money has not yet been located.

GREAT CONCERN

Local Italians are Excited Over the Declaration of War Between Their Mother Country and Turkey

SOME LOCAL VIEWS

Mr. Thomas Minnecola was again interviewed by the Examiner as regards his opinion concerning the new phase which has developed in the situation of the Far East. Mr. Minnecola still fosters the hope that a settlement will be reached. He emphatically denounced the actions of the Government in trying to force the issue at the point of the sword, against the wish of the populace. "The people are becoming intellectually stronger every day, and the number of young men who are unable to read, or do not take a keen interest in the affairs of the State, are an insignificant consideration. The ministers are loath to sacrifice their dignity," declared Mr. Minnecola. "He was of the opinion that the trouble could have been settled in a more satisfactory manner some time ago, and the present crisis averted."

"Will the reservists be ordered home, following the declaration of war?" asked the reporter. "No, not until conditions warrant such action," said Mr. Minnecola. "Italy can put from 125,000 to 250,000 men in the field on a few hours' notice, and if these prove effective, no further call will be made on the reserves. In Italy every able-bodied man is a soldier, and they are numbered as units according to the year they were born in. For instance, I was born in the year 1877," said Mr. Minnecola, "therefore I am known as reservist 77, and form a part of the unit bearing the same numbers. Twelve of these units, ranging in numbers from 70 to 91, have already been called in. He related a case of a young man who arrived in this city from Italy about three weeks ago. He was drafted from active service a few months ago, and his regiment is now on board a warship. He has written home to his father to see if he cannot be excused.

TELEPHONE CO'S. RULE RULE

"The right of the subscriber is to use the instruments and connecting lines where the company may place them, but not elsewhere, under such rules as the company may from time to time prescribe. He shall not extend their use to other individuals, except his servants upon his business; nor shall they be used for any tolls or consideration to be paid by any person other than the subscriber: nor does this confer on him the right to use any other instrument."

REVIEW OF THE TURKISH ITALIAN SITUATION BY A LOCAL AUTHORITY

Mr. F. Munding Gives Some Interesting Information in Regard to the Conflict---A Critical Comment Upon the Nations Involved and the Outcome of the War.

A TIMELY ARTICLE ON THE PRESENT CRISIS

Italy is entering again an area of colonial politics. The first misstep in this direction, of the united kingdom of Italy was to miss the chance of annexation of Tunis. The annexation of Tunis by Italy was considered as a matter of course and a question of the near future until 1881, when this part of northern Africa was annexed by France.

Italian immigrants populated this country and developed it successfully. The European language was Italian, and it is still so to-day, to a certain extent, and it would not have been possible for France to carry out her colonisation as successfully as she did without the assistance of the Italian element of the population.

Italy looked out for compensation in other parts of Africa. Her eyes fell on Abyssinia. It is well known how bitter was the end of this part of her colonial history. Italy succeeded then in getting an informal consent of France to an annexation of Tripoli, which would serve as a completion of her own African colonial empire, as well as Morocco, and she (Italy) is now trying to realise this claim. It may be hoped that the European concert will exercise enough political wisdom and influence to prevent the outbreak of war on the Balkan peninsula, where Greece, the father-in-law of King Victor Emanuel of Italy, and some always unruly tribes of the European Turkey will show inclination to join Italy.

One thing is sure: Italy's ally, Austria-Hungary, will not join her in her struggle, as she is at present sincerely interested in the maintenance of the status quo in Turkey, and is as absolutely opposed to her (Italy's) Adria-and-Balkan politics, and also certainly will do her best to keep all the smaller Balkan states in order. She got her share from the Sick Man as long as he was really sick; that is, before the first Parliament met (or in fact the second Parliament; the first ch after the Turkish Russian war, about 1880, and the present Government can blame the old governments for that loss.

As to the chances of the war, it can be said that the Italian navy is superior to the Turkish navy, and that Turkey has no chances to transport an army on the landway to Tripoli, even were it supposed that a transport through Egypt, which is officially still under Turkish sovereignty, would not be opposed by England. The complete want of railways would forbid such a scheme. These two facts will assure a short and comparatively unbloody struggle. But if by any event, or combination, the Turks will have a chance to fight on land, then it must be remembered that the Turkish army, drilled by German instructions, and that the moral and physical qualities of the Turk, and their fatalistic faith and religion, make them the best soldiers of the world.

It is also not well enough recognised that the modern young Turkish administration is one of Puritan clearness, and only some supporters of the old government and non-Turkish tribes can to-day be charged with crookedness, grafting, and intolerance to non-Moslems.

H. Munding.

HONOURED ON EVE OF HIS DEPARTURE FROM PETERBORO'

The managers and employees of the Canadian Cordage Co. gave their fellow-workman, Louis S. Jackson, a fine send-off, on his leaving town to take charge of his new position with the International Harvester Co., Kinburn, N.Y., by presenting him with a beautiful leather suit case and address, which proved to be a great surprise to him. He thanked them most heartily, saying that he appreciated their action very much, because it showed the good feeling between them.

The following was the address:

Dear Mr. Jackson,—As you are about to sever your connection with the Canadian Cordage Company, we, your fellow-employees, feel that we could not let you go without expressing to you our regrets at your departure, and our good wishes towards your future success. We ask you to accept this small token as an expression of the good fellowship that has at all times existed between us, and as a remembrance of the friends which you leave behind.

AN ENGLISH ACTOR ON THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Lawrance D'Orsay Says People of Canada Will Like Their New Governour-General Immeasely---An Interesting Anecdote in Which His Highness Figures Favourably

"It-ah affords me great pleasure to know my deah friend the Duke of Connaught has been given the important post of Governor-General of Canada," said Lawrance D'Orsay, "and I feel sure the people of Canada will like him, for he is a deah chap, and, my word, has plenty of brains, and will, I know, work hard for the growth and-'er prosperity of this wonderful country. It is amazing the way you are growing ovah here, and on my trip this year I have been more surprised than ever at the -ah progress you know and the wonderful development of the country I have seen.

"While in London this pawst summer I met the Duke of Connaught, and he was so jolly kind as to awsk me to call and see him when we played Ottawa. I told him I had a personal interest in Canada, because I had made some investments in land here not so long ago which have, bah jove, quite doubled themselves, but I remarked I thought it was to my advawntage to hold them, and the Duke said he thought if I was wise it was just that jolly thing I should do.

"The people here will find the Duke of Connaught a most kind, thoughtful and considerate man, and one who will have the interest of Canada at heart. A little thing which came under my personal-ah observation this pawst summer when I was home in England will show the claws of man the Duke is. He invited me to go motoring with him one day, and as we were about to leave London I noticed there were hampers enough on the car to feed several people. It would have been in bad taste to have commented on the fact or awsked about it, so I made no remark. We had a delightful-ah trip, and then when we were some distance from London the car stopped at a modest farm house, and the Duke said, D'Orsay, I am going to awsk you to a surprise party. It is my old nurse's birthday, and every year I go to see her, and, blawst me, if the hampers were not all taken in the house, and there was one happy old lady in England that day. But it was just like the Duke of Connaught, and the people here will soon learn what a deah man he is to all who come in contact with him. One of my most prized possessions is a cane he gave me," said D'Orsay.

A Great Musical Event In St. Paul's Church

The world's greatest trumpeter, Mr. William Short, L.R.A.M., Principal Trumpeter to His Majesty King George V.'s Band and State Concerts, Buckingham Palace and the State Trumpeter of England, will accompany Gatty Sellars, the famous English organist composer, to this city on Thursday, October 12th, at St. Paul's Church. Mr. Short, with the assistance of the organist, will perform the Coronation music as recently played at Westminster Abbey, when he will play the exact trumpet fanfares played by him at the Coronation.

The program is quite unique in the musical annals of America, this being probably the first time the State Trumpeter of England has ever visited America. Unusual excitement is being aroused in this tour, seeing that he is to come direct from the Coronation in Westminster Abbey, and perform the same fanfares and historical trumpet calls that he rendered at the Coronation before probably the greatest assemblage of royalty the world has known, whilst also playing standard works for the trumpet and organ. The program will include masterpieces for the organ and such orchestral arrangements as the "Introduction of the Third Act of Lohengrin" (Wagner), Tschaikowsky's "Cherubic Hymn" and fanfare of trumpets, original descriptive pieces new to this country, and popular trumpet solos. The final item will be the Coronation music. In this piece the organ is heard interspersed with cathedral chimes, and followed by a chorale, "O God, our Help in Ages Past," the Coronation marches, and the exact trumpet calls played by the King's Trumpeter at Westminster Abbey. The climax is reached in the performance of the English National Anthem, in which the trumpet, carillon of bells, and the full resources of the grand organ are employed, producing an effect which makes a magnificent ending to a program full of such historical interest.

TRADE WITH GERMANY.

The defeat of reciprocity does not destroy the principle that constitutes the value of the removal of trade restrictions. Since the removal, about a year ago, of the Canadian surtax on importations from Germany, the trade between that country and the Dominion of Canada has very sensibly and rapidly increased. The total trade with Germany, in 1909, amounted to $7,476,686; the total trade figures of 1910, were about a third larger—$10,450,450.

RAIN.

What's one man's meat is another man's poison, is a saying, that in principle, applies to the recent rains. They have made a plenty of mud, but they are a boon to the farmers. They help, or would help, the fall plowing, if there had been a little more abundant, and they will be of great benefit to the root crops. Potatoes and mangolds have done their growing, but Swede turnips have still a month of growth before them, and this crop will be greatly benefitted by the rains.

WHERE IS PETERBOROUGH'S SHARE.

The despatches state that the Hupp Motor Car Company has closed a deal for the purchase of a site of three acres in the city of Windsor, upon which will be erected extensive factory buildings to employ in the beginning 150 to 200 men.

The White Machine Works of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, have also purchased lands for a cement building for a factory for the manufacture of sawmill machinery. Our City Council and Board of Trade will have to look to their laurels. At the recent rate of progress Peterborough will be behind in the race for new industries.

WAR!

The millennium is still far away—the time when swords shall be beaten into ploughshares, and spears into pruning hooks. War is in the human blood, and it seems that the time is far away when nations will forego exercise of the arbitrament of arms in the settlement of disputes. Italy has declared war on Turkey for a few aspects of desert; and if the self interest of other semi-allied, or associated nations can keep them out of the fray, the war will be of comparatively brief duration. The advantage is with Italy, which has the larger fleet, and the better transport service. Italy has massed her fleet upon the front of Tripoli, whose ports are more or less effectively blockaded. Naval strength will be the key of success and in this respect Italy is much superior to Turkey. Italy's fighting navy consists of 181 vessels of all kinds, and Turkey's consists of only 24 ships of all kinds. As Tripoli will, according to present appearances, be the fighting ground, the evident advantage will fall to the nation having the most powerful fleets and capable of bringing to the arena of conflict the largest number of troops and munitions of war. The Boers in the South African war had pretty much their own way till Great Britain brought into play her mighty fleets and transport service and brought the fight to more even terms: then there was no questions of British success. The Napoleonic epigram that Providence is on the side of the big battalions, stands to have its justification in Tripoli, and in Italy's interest. It will not be difficult for her to throw as many troops from her standing army of 235,000 as may be required into Tripoli, and to prevent with equal ease the landing of Turkish troops. Aside from external complications the war promises to be of short duration.

GOOD ROADS AND GOOD STREETS.

The question of [illegible] and [illegible] demand are on the highway to the higher civilization, represented by high-character highways. They are [illegible] to contribute to systems of good roads, the sum of half a million dollars, including the proportion the province will [illegible] the good roads legislation [illegible].

This fact, together with the mud created by recent rains, recalls attention of the problem of good roads and good streets. Our city fathers are again considering the subject of permanent pavement. There is, however, no precedent of "consideration" itself ever building a square yard of permanent pavement.

Permanency is the only thing that really counts in general street construction. The further urgent work is from permanence the nearer it is to, and the more it is, waste of money and effort.

Next January, Peterborough will have been an incorporated town for sixty-two years. In all that time, probably half a million dollars have been expended on our streets, with the disappointing result that we have not a single yard of properly built ad permanent street—aside from our excellent system of concrete sidewalks That is to say, not a lineal yard of street, built in accordance with sound engineering principles, as to grade, foundation and drainage, and material—all capital considerations in the construction of permanent roadways.

We have, in round numbers, twenty five miles of streets. If, during the past 60 years, we had built each year only half a mile of permanent macadam street, at even the extravagant figure of $15,000 per mile—two times more than necessary—we should have had to-day every street of the city supplied with first-class, practically permanent, roads, for a total expenditure of $375,000, leaving $125,000 for interim maintenance and repair, in order to equal the $500,000 which it is assumed we have spent upon our streets in the past sixty years. With the result, as stated, that we have not one yard of properly built street, and not even one mile of street better than the old gravel road, which was buil "right" by the late Henry Collins, sixty years ago, and is still generally good, because its foundation and drainage were adequately considered.

It is well for the City Council to consider the question of permanency in street work: it is better late than never; but it is not much promise of better system, when it is proposed to begin with the western end of Hunter street, by replacing the best approximately good stretch of macadam street in the city. It may be done as a test, but it is no adequate test. There is next to no heavy traffic on this portion of the street. What is wanted is a test of pavement that would answer for the heavy traffic of central George, central Charlotte, and central Hunter streets.

It is not too late in the day, either to begin a crusade for permanent macadam streets, built according to orthodox engineering ideas, built to last and built to serve the legitimate purposes of a city street—a good, smooth driving surface, dry as possible at the wettest season, as the middle of Hunter street is from Stewart to Aylmer street. But even this has the defect that the sides of the street next the pavements, is not properly metalled—not metalled to the pavement. The result is that on either side of a good middle driving surface, is a slough of mud, to be cut up by even the lightest wheel. One thing that contributes to this prevailing condition in every street of the city is the fact that our streets, especially our residence streets, are laid out with too wide a driving surface, making them unduly costly to metal from sidewalk to sidewalk, and unduly costly to maintain.

There is no greater and no easier civic problem to solve than dealing with our streets in a way to secure permanency, avoid waste and get satisfactory results.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—There continues to be a good enquiry from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat, and sales of a few loads of low grades were made, but bids this afternoon on regular grades were 3d per quarter lower, in spite of war rumors between Turkey and Italy. The foreign demand for oats was good, and several loads were sold to Bristol and Manchester. A fair local grade continues to be done at firm prices.

American No. 2 yellow corn in round lots sold at 74c per bushel afloat. A fairly active business was done in flour, with sales of 90 per cent. winter wheat grades at 3s 9d to Glasgow, but bids in some cases for spring wheat grades were 6d out of line. Demand for bran and shorts is good. Cheese is steady and butter has advanced under an improved demand from English buyers. Eggs are stronger, and prices have advanced 1c to 1½c per dozen. Provisions fairly active.

Trampled to Death by Horses.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—With his school books under his arm, Alexander Trudeau, ten years of age, stood on the corner of Atwater avenue and St. James street at 7.35 yesterday morning. Two 1,500 pound horses attached to a heavily laden ice wagon swung around the corner, unnoticed by the boy as he started across the street. A moment later he lay a huddled heap in the road, trampled by the horses, with his skull crushed by one of the back wheels. He lived for barely ten minutes. The lad was a son of Mr. Octave Trudeau, of 831 Albert street.

Strike Is Not Spreading.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—There is little probability of the strike of the laborers on the water front increasing. Thursday almost 100 men, mostly engaged about sheds in the employ of the Dominion Transport Co., refused to work, others having joined them, but only in small numbers.

The striking men are asking an increase of five cents per hour, from 20 cents, and 25 cents and 35 cents an hour.

Officials of the Transport Co. said they were getting all the men they require.

NEW SECRETARY WELCOMED

The boys of the Y.M.C.A. welcomed their new secretary, Dr. Sterling L. Spicer, at a banquet last evening, and in point of attendance and jolly good time, the occasion has never been surpassed. The boys provided their own refreshments, and the Ladies' Auxiliary served the tables.

Mr. Taylor Sritten, Provincial Boys' Work Secretary, was the speaker of the evening, and in one of his best moods, he gave the boys some sound advice. He was received with true boyish enthusiasm, as he is a great favourite in the Y.M.C.A. in Peterborough.

Addresses of welcome were delivered by the president, J. J. Turner, jr.; Mr. R. F. Downey, John Laing, and others, and these were responded to by Dr. Spicer in a few well selected remarks.

Mr. R. F. Downey performed the duties of chairman in a very satisfactory manner.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

We were speaking of a young girl, who although only twenty-one or three years old, looks thirty.

She has not had a particularly hard life. There is nothing especially aging about her work. She has not had any more than the ordinary mortal's share of sorrows and disappointments.

Why, then, this strangely premature aging, we debated.

Said the lady-who-always-knows somehow, "I'll tell you just what I think it is. It's because she has so many responsibilities."

"Responsibilities," we scoffed, "what particular responsibilities has she, a girl of twenty-three, with a father and mother who give her a pleasant home, and not even any younger brothers and sisters to worry her?"

"Well," said the lady, "She has her father's business to carry on, and then there's her mother's housework, and just think of the responsibility of that married sister's home and two children, and then there's her older brother's business—think what a tax that must be for her."

"You mean that she carries all the family responsibilities as well as her own?"

"Exactly," said the lady, "Just as most of these people who get old before their time do."

Isn't it true?

Aren't there innumerable people everywhere who are wearing themselves out just because they have not yet mastered what Harriet Beecher Stowe calls one of the most important parts of the scheme of living—"to learn just what our responsibility is, and to let other people's alone?"

When we were out driving the other day, our horse became frightened and bore down upon a crossroad at a most undesirable smart pace. Just as we reached the crossing, another carriage loomed up in front of us, and although we pulled in as hard as we could it looked for an instant as if something were going to happen. Fortunately, the other man whipped up his horse and got past in time to avoid a collision.

"Didn't you think we were going to run into them?" I said afterwards.

"Oh, no," said my companion cheerfully, "I knew that if the other man did his part we would be all right, and I thought he would. I believe in not trying to do the whole thing, but in giving the other fellow credit for having sense, as well as you."

It seems to me that that is a philosophy which is too little regarded by many travellers on the King's Highway.

We feel that the whole responsibility of avoiding a collision rests on our handling of the reins, while all the time the other fellow is doing just as much to avoid it.

We feel the burden of whole situations upon us, while in reality we are only responsible for some tiny corner of the business.

We insist on thrusting our shoulders beneath other folks' responsibilities, even though in so doing we do not help at all, but merely weary ourselves and hinder and impede them.

If only we could throw off this foolish weight of other people's responsibilities that we are struggling under, how many of us might throw back our shoulders and lift up our heads and breathe freely once more.

Can't we?

Can't we relax from the strain of all the little cares and worries, lest things go wrong in spite of us, and from the fear that something will happen in this old world if we let go? Can't we quietly listen and rest in that great big question that God asks us as He asked Job, "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?"

A commonplace life we say and we sigh;
But why should we sigh as we say?
The commonplace sun in the commonplace sky
Makes up the commonplace day.
The moon and the stars are commonplace things,
And the flower that blooms and the bird that sings,
But dark were the world and sad our lot
If the flowers failed and the sun shone not;
And God who studies each separate soul,
Our of commonplace lives makes his beautiful whole.

The Best Treatment for Itching Scalps and Falling Hair

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura Ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura Ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It will be found a most effective dressing for the hair to retain a light covering over the hair to keep the pillow from soiling. The first morning, shampoo with Cuticura soap and hot water. Repeating about every fifth day as need or often as agreeable, and once every week, make a change by using the Cuticura Resinol or Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Do not forget that a single set, consisting of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, is often sufficient for the whole treatment for women and children. Complete external and internal treatment for every humour, from infancy to age, may be had for one dollar, consisting of Cuticura Soap (25c.), to cleanse the skin, Cuticura Ointment (50c.), to heal it, and Cuticura Pills (25c.), to purify the blood. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A. Send for "Cuticura," Dept. 4R, Boston, U. S. A., for a free sample of Cuticura soap and ointment, with 32-p. book on skin and hair.

A Ghastly Find

(Port Hope Guide.)

The body of an unknown infant was found on the embankment of the C. N. R. near the railway crossing of the side line leading north from Gage's Creek on Wednesday afternoon.

The section men were working at the culvert when they noticed a parcel on the bank. One of them touched it with a shovel, and upon further examination they found it contained the remains of an infant. The body was in a very bad state of decomposition and was wrapped in a skirt and underwear, in all probability belonging to its mother. A Toronto Star of September 14 formed part of the parcel.

Coroner McKinley was notified and had the remains removed to Walker's Undertaking Parlours. Constable Garbutt empanelled a jury and they viewed the remains yesterday afternoon, after which an adjournment was made until Monday. The authorities have not the slightest clue.

5 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Coaticook, Que., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said it could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

POLICE COURT

Ira McMellen was fined $2.00 in the Police Court this morning for being drunk. McMellen had been drunk for three or four days, and during his spree, lost $6.00.

Joe Sibo, a Russian, was fined $2.00 for the same offence. Sibo came to the city yesterday, from Bethany, where he had been engaged on the construction work of the C. P. R. He has spent all but $1.80 of his cash, and asked for ten days to pay the fine, which was granted.

Kidney Pains in the Back

Could Not Stand or Even Turn in Bed—Legs Greatly Swollen

All Doctor's Medicine Failed—Cure Effected by Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Again this great medicine has triumphed over kidney disease of a severe type. From a bed of suffering and helplessness Mrs. Walsh was restored to health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Kidney pains in the back tortured her. Dropsical swellings had set in and she had no reason to hope for cure since the doctor's medicine failed to even relieve her. Read what the husband says about this remarkable cure.

Mr. Thos. D. Walsh, Pictou, N.S., writes: "Two years ago my wife took to her bed after suffering for a long time from kidney pains in the back. She was not able to stand on her feet or even turn herself in bed. The doctor's medicine was no benefit whatever, that we could see. Sometimes her legs would swell considerably. Reading about a woman in similar condition being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, we purchased two boxes, and when these were used she was able to sit up. With three more boxes she was restored to health and doing her own housework.

"As for myself I also found these pills all that is claimed for them. I give this statement in order that others may obtain the same ease from suffering as that experienced by my wife and myself."

One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

KIT'S COLUMN

She stood waving [illegible] until the [illegible] disappeared [illegible] then [illegible] turned [illegible] step of the train, [illegible] "There goes the last of my summer guests, and I feel so [illegible]—I have to talk it [illegible] for it." She looked ready to drop as she entered her face for the day was one of those late hill days which [illegible] made up for by the [illegible] which top [illegible] know it I'll ever get [illegible] smile which I [illegible] if you wish [illegible] don't [illegible] take a [illegible] until you have dressed to [illegible] parlour and only with [illegible] with your friends' [illegible] friends' friends' [illegible] with a gasp. "[illegible] your relatives [illegible] friends and their [illegible] Lord! when I think of all I've put up with this summer I could just go and have a good [illegible]

Talk of [illegible] City people grumble [illegible] to the newspapers if a few [illegible] country cousins come to town [illegible] for. Why, do their best or [illegible] can only stop two weeks, [illegible] may not out to pay of their [illegible] for the inconvenience laid [illegible] and a number—and serve them [illegible] Didn't they enjoy spend half a [illegible] with their country friends and [illegible] their town relatives to fill in the other half! I've come to the conclusion that people do not come to live in the country for their family's comfort, but for that of their friends'. In reality they take it to run a free-for-all boarding-house which brings no returns and leaves them wrecked in body and mind. Look at me!" Her rosy face shone with good nature.

"And the ungratefulness of them!" She flung grammar to the winds. "Take that woman who just went off to the station in the buggy. Why, I used to like her, though I only met her twice at a friends house. It was this friend that rang her in on me on a vague, general sort of invitation I was foolish enough to give the year before. Out she came, bag and baggage, and sat here for a full month."

"But she helped you about the house?"

"Help? That woman! My dear, she didn't even make up her own room and me with one lone maid and five children and just all we can do to keep a decent face on the house! Help me! Why, I had to tidy up the verandah after her and pick up all her boy's toys and get her fancy work out of the hammock and mail after her half the day. And she wasn't satisfied either. To hear her talk of how dull life in the country was, how inconvenient country houses were—'lacking in facilities,' she called it. Lacking! Well, she was lacking in some things I'd like to tell her about!

Of course it's quiet in the country. That's why we came here. We didn't want a vaudeville theater round the corner nor the wild excitement of an organ player on the front lawn. If it was dull why did she stay here a month and break my best china pitcher, and let her boy smash our Jim's hobby horse, and put me to the expense of buying a silk lamp shade for her room, and eat up most of our fresh eggs and then turn up her nose at everything! Why, a neighbour of ours at a picnic we got up for her told me she had something nasty to say about everything that was passed to her when she knew I had got it all up—cold tongue and everything right here at home. 'More cold tongue,' she said, with a sneer; 'I seem to have lived on cold tongue since I came to the country.'"

And she nearly fell off the bottom step in an effort to crane up at me.

"Well, I am glad she's gone. She's been here long enough to have saved quite a sum in board bills. She can buy her fall gown and hat with it and tell her husband what a wretched time she had of it with those Dobsons. 'No amusement and such rough fare.' That's what you get for having your friends' friends' friends—Well, I've said enough, only I hope she'll have the decency to replace the china jug she broke and maybe she'll send Jim a rocking horse at Christmas.

"But I know she won't."

He is a courageous man indeed who will wear a straw hat after the unwritten message that flies on the wind goes forth to order its dismissal to the attic of out-of-date habiliments. Now just here is where the women show their greater sense. As long as the warm sun shines, no matter how late in the fall or how close to Christmas it is, a woman will wear her straw hat. She has at least that much individuality for all that she has been called sheep-like in her habits. It is the man, not the woman, who cares to account to public opinion. It is the man, too, who is the vainer. The men affect to look on woman as Vanity personified, but we do not bother half as much about our clothes as the men do. Take a man and his ties. You will find his top bureau drawer stuffed with this one extravagance. Ties of every hue and fabric are here, more or less crumpled and disarranged. A man tires of a tie in a week, a day, and hankers after something new and expensive. The same with his socks (as if anyone cared about his socks), and with his braces (who save his suffering wife ever sees his "braces"), and, most of all, the same with his straw hat. The infinite pains he took choosing it! Whether to have a higher or lower crown, a deeper or narrower rim, a fancy ribbon or a plain band. Whether it hid or revealed that bald spot on the back of his head; or came down too close to his ears; or gave him too rakish a look; too goat-dressed-as-lamb an expression. And then one day—one warm, fine, sunny day when a straw hat is of all things the most fitting and comfortable, forth he comes in his new felt tile—a slave, if ever lived one, to fashion and public opinion. Your young chap would pretend to be ill rather than walk out with the dearest girl in the world in a straw hat in September. Paterfamilias would hold himself in contempt did he unable to transform a Panama after the first frost had brought down the first Russian gunboat from "great pop," shaking him [illegible] his old head into a Christy when the first fall days arrive. It is only [illegible] sensible, wise and always beautiful, who, until forced by the rough hand of old winter to [illegible], can afford [illegible] many, misty, [illegible] list of straw wreaths [illegible] dear [illegible] of summer.

It is [illegible] to will [illegible] the pen of [illegible] protest, if not [illegible] horror heart [illegible] affection of [illegible] have come [illegible] this subject upon whose genius have rested their way into every Canadian home, and whose productions we remember for the pleasure that they gave. A [illegible] for the purpose of publishing a de luxe edition of Miss Johnson's works has been inaugurated in Vancouver, where Tekahionwake (Miss Johnson) now lives and has elected to remain. Mr. Stanger says Miss Johnson supports herself by the fruits of her pen, and like most people of genius, she is not rich. In fact, she is unprovided for. The Canadian Women's Club of Vancouver has led the way with substantial assistance towards helping this [illegible] and you [illegible] will know that love her splendid [illegible] and who have known such pleasure because of her and through her, will not see the little enterprise go to the wall for the want of willing and loving help. The daughter of the chief of the Five Nations, who helped as much as any to build our empire, he who was at his post when wanted, must not be permitted to know a day of want. Canada is behind the child of those Indian braves who helped Canada and Britain in her hour of necessity. Need I add anything but this address: The Pauline Johnson Trust Fund, Bank of Hamilton, Vancouver.

An "Ugly Duckling" article appears in a current magazine in which a plain girl discourses humorously on the folly of pinning one's faith to the beauty doctors' harmless platitudes and equally harmless nostrums. "Be natural and you will be beautiful," she declares, "is the grimmest of all Grimm's fairy tales that ever was grimmed."

Well, she can bless her stars since so she wishes it, that few women are absolutely natural these days. To be natural, as our essayist informs us, is "woefully often to be humped, freckled, gnarled, twisted, fan-eared," and all the other ugly etcetras. Nature will make up none of our deficiencies, hence the vogue of the beauty doctor and the big sales of your face creams, skin foods, hair dyes, and Japanese washes. One woman in New York is making a fortune out of an oriental cream that never saw the Orient; another is living, and living well with an "a" before it, on a hair tonic that is supposed to grow hair on a billiard ball, and will grow it there quite as easily as on your head or mine, madam. The papers teem with advertisements of things to make you fat, things to make you lean; things to give you "real natural peachy pink cheeks" (that won't wash or rub off); things that will backward turn backward O Time in his flight; things that will make you look sixteen when you have ten grandchildren, and lovely when you are 90 like Ninon de L'Enclos, who has never been permitted to lie five minutes together in her grave since she went there, what with "Ninon rouge," "Ninon wrinkle-remover," "Ninon corn plasters," "Ninon waist regulator." Only the other day a beauty doctor in England admitted in a court of law that she made twelve thousand pounds every year out of the weakness of women in their mad search after youth and beauty. (Did I say men were vainer? Well, in a Toronto shop it is a regular thing for men to buy creams and rouge for their "sisters," and, anyway, if there were no men the women would have no need to look beautiful; besides, those other matters of the straw hat and ties—so I am taking nothing back). As a matter of fact, it is a good thing for the artistic sense of the world generally that humans are vain enough to make the best of themselves and not leave everything to Mother Nature. How do you think we could have worn last season's hats without puffs and curls and things? and weren't these aids to beauty exposed in the shop windows that he who ran might see? A naturally beautiful woman is the loveliest thing God ever made, but with all due respect. He did not make enough to go round. Why the rest of us were put here God only knows. Life is hard enough on the average woman without plain looks making it harder. One consolation we have, and that is that there is a crowd of us and we'll never lack company. Yet this is poor consolation, of the same brand as that which they offer to those who frequent hades. "Be good, and you will go to heaven," they tell you, and in the same breath say that "all the pretty women and witty men" will go to the other place. And who would care to be one of a heaven made of homely women and dull men?

The best remedy the Ugly Duckling has to offer for homeliness is to "forget it." I don't agree with her. Make the best of it, is my advice. If your nose is red, a dust of powder on it will break no commandment; if your hair be thin, a little twist of a switch helps. Your pretty friend, who has no need for them, takes all these aids to loveliness and many more, so why shouldn't you? And why wear "any old thing," you who, of all others, need smart clothes and the best in shoes and gloves and the little details of the toilet? Cream your rough skin, dear homely sister, and put a crimp in your straight hair, and go your little way with a smile and a cheery heart, remembering that

Are sisters under their skins.

But "what a fine complexion the colonel's lady has! There, that little sigh will out, after all. My! I wish I was a good fairy or a four-leafed shamrock or something! I'd make every woman beautiful.

And I'd begin with myself.

NO DYSPEPSIA OR STOMACH DISTRESS

Heartburn, Gas, Sourness and Stomach Misery Vanishes

There would not be a case of indigestion here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This helpful preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the current sour stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odours from the breath.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on each 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily understand why this promptly cures Indigestion and removes such symptoms as Heartburn, a feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, Belching of Gas and Eructations of undigested food, water brash, Nausea, Headache, Biliousness and many other bad symptoms; and, besides, you will not need laxatives to keep your stomach, liver and intestines clean and fresh.

If your Stomach is sour and full of gas, or your food doesn't digest and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and, besides, one 50-cent case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Pape's Diapepsin which will always, either at daytime, or during night, relieve your stomach misery and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

WORK FOR YEARS TO COME

In a letter received by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway from Mr. Arthur O. Wheeler, the well-known mountain climber and topographer, who is at present in the Canadian Rockies making observation for the purpose of mapping out the district, he says:

"We have a great amount of splendid material for publication and a collection of photographs that cannot be surpassed. We have just completed what is very nearly a 100 mile circuit around Mt. Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. The peaks and valleys, lakes and waterfalls on all sides of it, and the glaciers are very fine. The region is immense, and there is work for years to come, exploring, mapping and depicting. There is a fine bunch of high peaks and large snowfields and glaciers south-west of Tete Jaune Cache. There are also great peaks up the Athabaska and Fraser headwaters, tributary to your line. The most showy part of Mt. Robson is the Robson Pass and Glacier, and Berg Lake."

In addition to the above Mr. Wheeler reports that his party have collected over 200 specimens of animal and bird life, and a good botanical collection as well. The expedition, which was undertaken by the Grand Trunk Pacific, has been a most successful one, and when its results are published will be of great value. The land will doubtless have the general impression that the territory contiguous to the mountain division of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will surpass in scenic beauty that which can be seen on any other of the North American transcontinental lines.

WINTER SCHEDULE

The Grand Trunk Railway announces the its winter schedule in connection with the Peterborough-Lakefield branch will go into force on Monday. The morning train which has been leaving Peterborough at 9.35 throughout the summer will hereafter leave at 7 a.m. and will arrive here in Peterborough at 8.15, instead of at 9.50 a.m. The evening train which has been leaving Peterborough at 5.40 p.m., and arriving here at 6.40 p.m., has been cancelled.

Room Size Rugs of Artistic Value

Also of Splendid Durability.

We invite critical inspection of our first showing of room size Scotch Axminster and English Wilton Rugs for the new season.

Artistic beauty of design and colouring are the most impressive features of the new floor-coverings. They have been selected with a strict regard to their decorative value as well as their superior wearing qualities.

People who anticipate adding to the furnishings of their home in the way of floor-coverings should see these splendid specimens at their earliest opportunity.

They come from manufacturers with world-wide reputations---manufacturers who could not afford to turn out a single rug which was not strictly up to the highest standard. Each season sees a marked increase in the beauty and excellence of their products, the rugs we now present being far superior to any which they have hitherto made.

RICHARD HALL & SON

"THE EARL OF PAWTUCKET."

There is something refreshingly clever in "The Earl of Pawtucket," which John Cort will present at the "Grand" next Friday, Oct. 6th, with Lawrance D'Orsay as the star in his famous role of Lord Cardington.

The play is considered by the critics as one of the best Augustus Thomas ever wrote, and is a comedy pure and simple; very diverting with its complications and entanglements. The language is witty and sparkling, and the situations are both amusing and original. The comedy was first produced at the Madison Square Theatre in New York, and quickly achieved a decided success. There was such a demand for the play this season that Mr. Cort decided to make an elaborate revival of "The Earl of Pawtucket," with Lawrance D'Orsay in his original role of Lord Cardington, a part with which his name is identified all over the country. Mr. D'Orsay is an English comedian, who has a large host of friends among the theatre-goers of the country. His humour is profuse and infectious, while his facial expressions of surprise, disgust and other inward feelings are in themselves a source of delight.

The action of the comedy is supposed to cover only six hours, and all of the scenes are laid in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. The play begins in the breakfast-room, where Lord Cardington is found in close, yet unobtrusive, pursuit of a young woman whom he met accidentally, but informally, three times, while they were travelling on the continent.

While in America, Lord Cardington has decided to travel incognito, using the name of Montgomery Putnam, whom he met in London, and who himself suggested the use of his name. The lady with whom the titled traveller has fallen in love is none other than the divorced wife of the real Montgomery Putnam, but Lord Cardington does not know her identity. This opens a way for the most interesting complications.

They finally secure an introduction, which was mutually desired, as Miss Fordyce and Montgomery Putnam. From the first the lady suspects the true character of her acquaintance, but keeps this to herself, and in the meantime complications continue to pile themselves on the shoulders of the titled Englishman. The attorneys for Putnam's wife see Montgomery Putnam registered at the hotel, and immediately present a bill for alimony, which was long overdue, and the Earl is very much surprised to find he owes alimony, but his surprise doesn't help him out of his trouble.

A detective forces his way into the apartments of his Lordship and threatens to arrest him for murder, but this does not in the least disturb the calm of the Earl, who has but one thing in mind, and that is to win the lady of his affections, no matter what troubles he may have.

The relatives of the real Montgomery Putnam arrive in New York from Pawtucket, R. I., and expect to find a member of their family, but are surprised to see an Englishman.

They immediately denounce him as an imposter. One of the relations in particular, Aunt Jane, makes things especially lively for the Earl. Notwithstanding all of his trouble, the Earl never gets a faint heart, and in the end is successful.

In the cast of merry players supporting Mr. D'Orsay will be Ernest Elton and Louise Sydmeth. Both were with him in the original production of the play, and will be seen in their old parts of Wilkins and Miss Jane Putnam. Others in the cast are Katherine Emmet, Susanna Rusholme, H. J. Carvill, John Alden, Leonard Ide, Robert W. Smiley, Harry Driscole, John Taylor, Lewis E. Parmenter and G. H. Stewart.

TO-DAY'S MARKET

Butter, eggs and chickens were features on the market this morning. They were in piles on the tables, but this did not alter the price any, however. There was not much change from last Saturday, but there was a greater supply of nearly everything, especially chickens and other fowl. The markets for the last four Saturdays have been kept up to a high standard, and the produce is all high-class stuff. To-day's prices were as follows:

Inside.

Eggs, 28 and 29; they sold very slowly at 29 cents.
Chickens, 60 up at 85 cents, according to size.
Ducks, 65 cents each.
Geese—$1 20 and $1.40 according to size.
Butter—30c per lb.
Potatoes—$1.35 and $1.40.
Carrots—50c per bush.
Onions—$1.75 per bag or 35c peck.
Cauliflower—5 to 20c each according to size.
Pickling onions—10c per quart.
Cabbage—5c per head.
Apples—25 and 20c per peck, according to variety.
Citrons—10c each.
Beets—3 for 10c.
Squash—10c each.
Lamb—13 and 15c.
Pigs—$4.60 per pair.

CROSS COUNTRY RUNS OF COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The annual Senior and Junior Cross Country runs in connection with the Collegiate Institute Athletic Society were held yesterday afternoon, and were the cause of much interest among the students. Clarence Fuele who won the senior event last year, ran true to form yesterday and had no difficulty in carrying off first prize for the second time in succession. The ex-Campbellford boy was in grand shape and led from the start, winning as he pleased. Although the course was muddy and the footing treacherous, he galloped home only a few seconds behind the record, and had he had any opposition, would have undoubtedly cut up new figures for the race. He was a minute and twenty-three seconds in front of the second man, Dalton White, at the finish. Cecil Brown was third.

The Junior race was a more even battle, the junior winner turning up in the person of Clare Stewart, who was second last year. Stewart's chief opposition came from little Arthur Lipsett, the youngster giving the winner a grand battle. The two remained together until the long hill on Smith street was reached, and here Stewart drew away from his rival and set up a lead that was sufficient to win the race for him.

The course for both races was the same as last year. The contestants started on McDonnel street, opposite the Collegiate Institute, and the course ran along that street to the Boundary Road, along that road to Smith street, down Smith to Water, and back to the Collegiate via Water and McDonnel streets.

The results:

Senior.

1—Clarence Fuele, 16 minutes 3-5 seconds.
2—Dalton White, 17 mins., 23 secs.
3—Cecil Brown, 18 mins., 5 secs.

Junior.

1—Clare Stewart.
2—A. Lipsett.
3—L. Anderson.

The annual field day of sports in connection with the Collegiate Institute, will take place on Thursday afternoon next at Riverside Park, the pupils being given a half holiday for the occasion. With good weather, one of the best meets in the history of the School is expected.

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE HAS REGULAR SESSION

The City Finance Committee met last evening and transacted considerable business. There were present Ald. Bradburn, chairman; Mayor Morrow, Ald. Metheral, and Ald. Graham. Ald. Metheral stated that the work on the south end sewer was progressing very rapidly, and on Thursday 15 feet of pipes was laid. He also reported favourably on the progress in connection with the new sidewalks.

The communications were first dealt with. A letter was read from R. A. Elliott, who kept the bowling alley, for a rebate on his unexpired licence. No action was taken in the matter. The Committee decided to deal with all cases like this in the same manner in future.

A letter was received from the authorities of the Mimico Asylum, charging the expenses of Sarah Burns and Margaret Davis who were sent to that institution from this city some time ago. The expense will be paid by the city.

DYSPEPSIA CLAIMS MANY LIVES

Woodstock, N.B., Aug. 10, 1910

"I had a very severe case of stomach trouble which caused me great pain and a lot of distress. I tried several doctors, but could get no relief. I also tried about all the patent medicines that are recommended for stomach trouble, and still I was getting worse—in fact, I felt like dying, and had to stop work. My friends thought my days on earth were few, and I thought so myself. I had heard a great deal about the wonderful skill of Father Morrisey, and thought I would go and see him. He prescribed his No. 11 Dyspepsia Cure for me, and I took his medicine as he directed, and soon began to feel relieved, and to-day I am a very well man; have gained in flesh—have no pain in my stomach, and am feeling first-rate. There is no doubt but that he saved my life and I only wish I could find words to express my gratitude. I hope all who suffer as I did will use his marvellous No. 11 Stomach Remedy."

John H. Michell.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

Price, 50c. per box at your dealers, or Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Limited, Montreal.

Social Was A Success

Very enjoyable, and successful to a marked degree, was the evening spent in Charlotte Street Sunday school rooms last night. The occasion was a social given by the Men's Bible Class of that church.

Rev. Mr. Henderson made a very able chairman, and during the course of a short address, he referred to the splendid work which had been done by the class in the past, and he concluded by expressing the hope that it would be duplicated on a larger and more progressive scale.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the excellent programme which was provided, and the applause which followed the rendition of each number was indicative of the able manner in which the performers handled their parts. The programme was as follows:

Opening hymn, "All Hail the Power"; prayer; chairman's remarks, Rev. Mr. Henderson; selection, march, Bible Class Orchestra; vocal solo—"Back to the Old Home," Mr. Fleming; recitation—"When the Minister Comes to Tea," Miss Greta Lebar; selection—Serenade, Orchestra; vocal trio—"The Old Rustic Bridge," Messrs E. and P. Naish and Fleming; reading—"Dublin Fusiliers," Mr. R. Soden; vocal solo—"Patriotic Song," Mr. P. Naish; reading—"Poleon-Dore" Mr. R. Soden; selection—"Entrac," Orchestra.

Following the programme refreshments were served by members of the Bible Class, while the Orchestra rendered some very choice selections. It was the intention of the Managing Committee to devote a portion of the evening to business, but time would not permit.

A significant feature in connection with the above program was Mr. Soden's readings. Mr. Soden is a delightful reader, and his efforts last night were greatly appreciated. It is the intention of the class to form a debating society in the near future.

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Examiner,—

Sir,—The people of Peterborough are perhaps not aware of the fact that there has been a bylaw passed by our city council, which when enforced, will prohibit the sale of all milk in cans and will compel all dealers to bottle their milk in sterilized bottles with air tight stoppers, etc.

Now, Mr. Editor, we believe that the health of the people should be looked after, that all care should be taken to see that milk men keep their stables and cows clean, that their cows get good water to drink, that no one should be allowed to handle their milk who has a virulent or infectious diseases. All milk cans should be well inspected to see that they are kept clean, and well tinned, etc., etc. We believe all this should be done, and well done, but why compel us to drink milk out of bottles that are circulating daily through our city, standing twenty four hours in all the dirty and disease infested houses in the city. To-day a bottle may be in a house where several of the children have diphtheria, and these children sucking the milk out of the bottle; to-morrow, Mr. Editor and reader, under this bylaw that same bottle may be in your house or mine. To-day a bottle may be in a house where the children have the itch or measles; to-morrow under this new system that identical bottle may be in your house or mine.

But, exclaims some one in favour of the bylaw, these bottles are to be sterilized every day before they are re-filled. Yes; and they will need to be sterilized. But why sterilize them? Why, the Medical Health Officer and everyone knows that if these bottles stand twenty four hours in a house infected with measles, diphtheria, scarlet fever, consumption, itch, cancer, small-pox, and handled by infectious hands, that one hundred chances to one that some of the microbes or germs of these diseases are fastened to that bottle, hence the imperative need of sterilizing these bottles, or in other words, as sterilize means to make barren or unproductive, these microbes must be rendered barren and unproductive and destroyed.

Science, Mr. Editor and reader, has done a lot for the world. Science has revealed to us the marvellous activities of these disease microbes. Why they can hang on to a glass bottle, and scamper around it with as much ease and alacrity as a monkey will play on a bamboo tree.

Now, Mr. Editor, it is because of our faith in what the medical men and men of science tell us, that makes us afraid of this miserable milk bylaw coming in force.

They tell us that these bottles are all to be thoroughly sterilized every day Well we have no gaurantee that every bottle that comes into our home has been sterilized—we must just take the milk man's word for that.

Now, we will suppose that when this bylaw comes in force—Heaven forbid that it shall—that every milk bottle delivered in the homes of our city has been thoroughly sterilized. The milk man starts out with his load of thoroughly sterilized bottles. Now, we all know there are scores of homes in this city where there are infectious diseases which the medical health officer never hears of. There are foul, loathsome diseases among both men and women, running sores and ulcers, cancers, many of which must be dressed several times a day. Our milk man delivers his clean sterilized bottles and collects his empty bottles.

He comes to a home where the children have itch, or measles, or the diphtheria, he takes their empty bottle, carried out to him by the little girl or boy whose hands are covered with itch. The empty bottle from another home is placed in his hands by a woman who has just run from her little child, suffering from diphtheria, and has just been swabbing out her throat. Our milk man has to handle all these infected bottles with the same pair of hands that he handles our clean sterilized bottles, and the danger of carrying contagion into our homes is a thousand-fold greater than under the present system, which has been in use for generations past.

If the rich man wants to buy his milk out of sterilized bottles that have been circulating every day in and out of all the dirty, diseased and infected houses of our city, and wants to pay nine cents, or nineteen cents, for that matter, per quart for it, why let us give him perfect liberty to do it, but Mr. Editor and reader, in the name of God and in the name of our common humanity, let the poor have the same liberty to buy his milk from his milk man out of a clean, scalded can (that has been in no disease stricken house) for five or six cents per quart.

JOHN CARLISLE.

GRAND TRUNK EXHIBITS

In connection with the Grand Trunk Exhibit at the Festival of Empire, Crystal Palace, London, England, further advices dated September 12th have been received from London regarding the awards that were given to the Grand Trunk, and the Grand Trunk Pacific, and it is gratifying to know that these companies have received four "Grand Prix" for their splendid display instead of the two that were announced in the cable received on September 1st.

These awards have been made under the following: "Arts and Crafts"; "Engineering, Lighting and Transportation"; and "Building Trades"; also "Advertising." This is considered by the Companies named as a great honour, as other railways exhibiting at the Exhibition have only received one award.

The official report from the Grand Trunk representative at this Exhibition, for week ending September 9th, shows that the number of persons visiting the Grand Trunk Pavilion was 21,186, bringing the attendance up to September 9th to 279,942 people.

Effective September 18th, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway inaugurated a mixed train service to be operated on the Regina Branch between Melville and Regina. This train will run Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, leaving Melville at 10.35 a.m., and arriving at Regina at 7.35 p.m. Leaving Regina Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays at 7 a.m., arriving at Melville at 4 p.m., and will make stops at the intermediate stations.

MR. LASTAR DESCRIBES CONDITIONS IN JAFFA

Here is another interesting letter, written for the Examiner by Mr. B. Lastar, who has just returned to Canada after visiting the Congress of the Zionist in Switzerland.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I was once at Ringling Bros. circus, and the only memory I have is that of a headache because the variety was so great that I could not see everything at the same time. I found myself in the same position when I first came to Jaffa. To tell you of my impressions and of the feeling of disappointment I had at first sight, when I stepped down from the ship and landed, would not be difficult, but my opinion changed in a very short time. The first moment I will not forget as long as I live. I came from the ship and came into the narrow, dirty little yard of the custome house, where I was accosted by dirty, human beings, who demanded "backsheesh," (or presents, in English). The payment of "backsheesh" relieved me of having my baggage examined, and I had not even to show my passport, so I found out the power of money as "backsheesh." Leaving the custome house we began to climb a hill between walls so close together that one would think they were trying to shake hands with each other. Here we came into contact with Arabian beggars, both male and female, and donkeys and camels, some with baggage and some without, and a procession of English, French and German passengers, jostling and pushing each other. I had an Arab carrying my luggage on his head and with a rope hooked on his nose. I thought at first that he would tear his nose off, but, wonderful as it may be, these people sometimes carry from two to three hundred weight on their heads in the same manner. After shoving our way through this narrow passage and through a small opening, we began to laugh. This was the main street of Jaffa. We passed a market, a combination of Turkish, Arabian, Jewish and European merchants. You could hear every language in creation spoken here, and the noise is so deafening that you would imagine you could hear it in Canada. I looked around and could see the ship which had brought me there, and, to be candid, I was sorry that I was not on board that steamer. I was very much disappointed. "Is this the chosen land our forefathers have given their lives for?" I asked myself, for this was supposed to be the chief landing place in Palestine. I went to my hotel full of disappointment, but after having had my dinner, did not lie down, as I was anxious to see something worth seeing. I went to visit the Jewish gymnasium that I had heard so much about, and here I saw one of the wonders that have happened lately. However, before describing this place, I want to tell you something of the streets, houses and people of Jaffa. In short all the streets—if you can call them such—are narrow and crooked, and the houses, with their iron bars, give you the impression of passing street after street of prisons. There is very seldom any sidewalk and where there is pavement it is only about a yard wide. The people are, for the greater part, Arabs, or Bedouins, and sixty per cent. have sore eyes. The women keep their faces covered when on the street.

When you go out in the outskirts, however, you are amazed to find the new town Tel Oviv, built by the Zionists, in a place which just a short time ago, (two years, to be exact), was a desert, with not a stick to be found. Here you find a little town, built on the European style, with wide streets and cement sidewalks, parks, water works in every house, bath rooms in many, and houses with every convenience and comfort to suit the most critical European. You are amazed when you enter a big modern structure, the first Jewish gymnasium of Teloviv. This gymnasium, or better, Jewish University, is the pride of the Zionists, and all Jews in the world. There are the best professors that can be secured. Better still, they are idealists and are sacrificing their time, wealth and lives for the education of their brothers and sisters, and one feels that he sees the beginning of the resurrection of the Jewish nation. The official language in the schools, shops, market, and even the Court of Justice, is Hebrew. Everything, although modern, follows the old Mosaic law. When you see the people coming home and hear the voices of the young people coming from the houses to the accompaniment of piano, mandolin or violin, and realise that the songs are all Hebrew, your heart jumps with joy. You think at last you have found a place of rest, from prosecution, and you are able to show the world that the Jew is just as good as the Gentile when it comes to building towns. I went back to my hotel that night, glad that I had come to Jaffa.

"There's a Reason"

A PRESENTATION

Yet another of Peterborough's boys is leaving the city to study at St. Michael's College, Toronto, in the person of Mr. Frank Hickery, of 537 Reid Street.

In view of this, a number of Mr. Hickery's friends met last evening at his residence, where a social evening was held. Some excellent music, both vocal and instrumental, was appreciated, and after lunch, he was presented with an address and a magnificent signet ring.

Mr. Hickery has up to the present time been following the occupation of a machinist at the Canadian General Electric Works. He has for many years been a devoted member of the St. Peter's T. A.S., and his many friends with whom he was very popular, feel that he will ge greatly missed. He left for Toronto this morning.

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE"

Harry B. Watson & Company Make a Big Hit at the Grand in This Delightful Spectacular Tune Show

HERE AGAIN TO-NIGHT

"What is love?"

"Love is an insane desire on the part of a man to become a woman's meal ticket."

"It must be hard to lose a wife."

"It's almost impossible."

"My you are well preserved."

"I ought to be, I've been pickled nearly all my life."

These are some of the bright things our old friend Happy Harry B. Watson) gets off in "The Cat and the Fiddle," the merry spectacular musical jingle, which appeared at the Grand last night, and which will be seen at matinee and evening performances to-day. The production added to the laurels it won there last season and last night's big audience found it entirely to their liking if the rain of applause which fell heavily throughout the performance can be accepted as a criterion. Last year's splendid cast is almost intact, and the whole show goes with a snap and swing that is refreshing. The principals are capable, the chorus comely and with more than the average vocal ability and the scenic effects are lavish in the extreme. The story of the action is too well known to need any reference here—it is sufficient to say that the production is even better than last year. Harry Watson, in the role of "Happy" had the house with him from the start, and his clever comedy methods kept the audience convulsed. He is one of the brightest and best low comedians who visits Peterborough, and his part in this production fits him like the proverbial glove. He is surrounded by clever support, and the whole company seems to take an interest in their work, with the result that the action never drags for a moment. Nellie Waters made a charming soubrette, and the other feminine roles were in good hands. The musical number that won the greatest favour was the hit of last season, the dainty little song "My Maid in the Moon," which had to be repeated a half dozen times. The comedy trio "You'll Find it in the Almanac" and 'Happy's' topical song, "Oh, What a Lovely Dream," were enthusiastically received.

Peterborough is fortunate in having this production here for two days and no doubt there will be another big crowd on hand to-night to bid 'Happy and Company' farewell for another season. It is announced that "The Cow and the Moon," the companion show to "The Cat and the Fiddle" will be seen here later on in the year.

Large Number Turn Out ... ---Refreshments Were Enjoyed by Everybody

A large number of people turned o... to hear an eloquent address by D... Joseph Sullivan at Murray Street Baptist Church last night. The event, which was held in the basement of the church, presented the appearance of an over-grown tea party. A number of small tables were brought into requisition, and, at the conclusion of the address, dainty refreshments were served, and, instead of the usual custom of having a bevy of young ladies wait upon the tables, this duty devolved upon the men. Needless to say, they performed their duties gallantly.

A first-class orchestra was on hand, and played a number of excellent pieces, which were well received.

The meeting was opened in the usual orthodox manner, after which Rev. R. J. Webb, who acted as chairman, introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Joseph Sullivan, of Montreal, and his colleague, Mr. David Bentley, also of Montreal.

Dr. Sullivan is a genial Irishman, brimful of wit, which he was wont to intersperse throughout his address.

"Never be ashamed of being a Baptist," said Dr. Sullivan. "The largest denomination of Protestants in the United States to-day are Baptists. Some of the most influential men, together with the finest institutions, such as colleges, etc., go to make up that wonderful organization. When I arrived in this beautiful city to-day I looked round about me, and saw that the Baptist denomination here was not dead. They are very much alive," declared the speaker. "The beautiful new structure which is nearing completion and which is to replace the one we are in to-night will stand as a monument to the fidelity of the Baptists of Peterborough. You are doing a great work here. Your pastor, whom I happen to know very intimately, is a man among men, and is fully qualified to act as leader in the promotion of the interests of the church here. We are all equal. The Baptist Church is the most democratic institution in the world." (Applause). "Order is the first law of heaven. Study in deed, this caption.

"I am very broad in my work; very Catholic in my faith," declared Dr. Sullivan. "It is a great thing to be a Baptist. We don't believe very much, but what we do believe we can prove." (Applause).

The speaker jocularly referred to the

THE HERPICIDE GIRL KNOWS

While shopping the most annoying thing for me is to have someone try to sell me something "just as good" when I ask for Newbro's Herpicide. To be sure there are not many druggists who did this but what few there are should know that such a policy will destroy the customer's confidence When they try it on me I never wait for the story, simply hunt a store where they will sell me what I want.

It is absurd for anyone to say that a preparation is as good as Herpicide. I don't think they believe it themselves. Every druggist knows that there is but one genuine, original dandruff germ destroyer and that is Newbro's Herpicide.

It keeps the head free from dandruff, prevents the hair from coming out and stops itching of the scalp.

Herpicide is really a wonderful remedy which does just what you want and expect it to do.

A STRANGE CASE

Hamilton, Sept. 30.—Following the sensational discovery of the theft of more than $8,000 from the vault in the local office of the Canadian Express Co. at an early hour yesterday morning, George H. Kennough, night clerk in the office, was taken into custody by Detective Cameron on suspicion of being implicated in the robbery, and the police claim they now have sufficient evidence to justify a charge of theft against him in connection with the affair.

The police made a second arrest when they captured John Hughes, an agent of the London Life Insurance Co., formerly employed at the Canadian Express office. He was arrested at his home on Bay street north, and taken to the cells. No formal charge has been made against him, and the police will not say what connection he is supposed to have with the case.

Detectives left for Dundas yesterday afternoon to search the Kennough home there.

The police department last night refused to discuss the matter or to give out any further information, but it is understood that no clew has yet been discovered as to the whereabouts of the stolen money. The exact amount taken from the vault was $8,574.24. Of this sum $5,000 was contained in one parcel of bank notes, $2,000 in another, and the remainder was in small bills and silver.

The robbery was discovered by W. A. Robinson, local agent for the company, who was called to the office shortly before 7 o'clock in the morning by one of the drivers, who was unable to gain admittance to the office as usual. Kennough was found lying in the vault, bound hand and foot with two pieces of small grass clothes-line, which was quite new. The police department was promptly notified, and Detective Cameron went to the scene at once.

Kennough before being unbound told a story to the effect that two men entered the office from James street, and before he was aware of their presence one of them placed a revolver to his head and demanded the money in the vault. After securing their booty they tied Kennough's hands and feet and put him inside the vault, where he was later found by Mr. Robinson. Kennough said the robbery were masked and he was unable to give any description of them, other than they were short and stout.

The police say that Kennough's feet were very loosely tied together and that he was able to move about after being placed on his feet. It is also alleged that the rope which bound his hands was nearly untied when he was found.

Examiner Road Races On Larger Scale This Year Than Ever Before

With the drawing near of Thanksgiving Day comes the announcement that the sixth annual senior road-race for the championship of the Midland Counties and the fifth annual junior road-race for the junior championship of the same district will be held at Peterborough under the auspices of the Peterborough Examiner on the morning of Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 30th. No more successful sporting events are held anywhere in Eastern Ontario than these two big races, which have become very popular on account of the policy which has been carried out of fair play and good treatment to every contestant. The strict adherence to the rules and the impartial and fair manner in which the events have been conducted have placed the Examiner's Thanksgiving Day races on a firm footing.

The senior Examiner road-race was inaugurated in 1906, and from the start the event was a success—so much so in fact that next year the Examiner decided to establish a similar race for junior runners and a five-mile race open to boys under eighteen was added. As with the senior event, the junior contest became popular at once and has been steadily growing in favour. Each year sees more entries, and the running game has taken a firm hold on the youngsters of the district. It is a noticeable feature of the events that runners from outside the city of Peterborough have carried off many of the prizes. Albert Smoke, of Chemong, has won the senior championship for the past two years, while Keene furnished the junior winner for 1909 in the person of Willie Edwards, and Douro the 1910 champion in Frank Leahy.

At first the events were confined to residents of Peterborough County, but two years ago the Examiner decided to enlarge the scope by throwing the events open to residents of the surrounding counties as well.

The distance for the senior race is ten miles, while the juniors have a course of exactly one-half that distance. The contestants must be bona fide amateurs and residents of either Peterborough, Haliburton, Victoria, Northumberland or Durham Counties, while junior entrants must be under the age of eighteen. This rule will be strictly carried out, and last year Willie Edwards, of Keene, had to be disqualified for infringing this condition.

The prizes have not yet been announced, but arrangements are being made to give even better awards than in other years. As usual, there will be four prizes in each event, the senior winner holding the Examiner trophy for one year, as well as receiving a handsome individual prize.

The winners of the different races since the inauguration of the events will be of interest:

Junior, 1910—
*1—Frank Leahy, Douro.
2—G. Holnbeck, Cobourg.
3—Cecil Armstrong, Peterborough.
Time—29 minutes.
*Willie Edwards, of Keene, disqualified.

For Peterborough entrants the entrance blanks in the Examiner may be used. Outside entries may send their names and addresses to the Sporting Editor of the Peterborough Examiner, who will supply all the necessary information upon inquiry.

Junior Runners Must Be Fourteen Years Or Over

The Examiner has decided to make a change in the conditions regarding the Junior Thanksgiving Day road-race this year. In order to keep the smaller boys out of the event, it has been decided that the Junior race shall be confined to boys who are fourteen, or over, and under eighteen years of age. For the last couple of years there has been a horde of youngsters, some of them under ten, who had no chance of winning, and who only hampered the real contestants, while at the same time there was some chance of the "kids" doing themselves harm in attempting to run five miles. The first Junior entry has come to hand, P. L. Crowley, of 140 Park street, being the first youngster to send his name in for the big race.

DID THE TRICK

CLEVELAND, SEPT. 28.—"Well, we did the trick," remarked Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, this morning.

Continuing, Manager Mack discussed the approaching world's series. "Sure, I think the Athletics will win, but I do not agree with you when you say it will go seven games. It is going to be won in either five or six games."

Makes Him Laugh.

"All this talk about the base running of the Giants makes me laugh. The Giants' stolen bases are not worrying us a bit. When was a world's series won by base running? Never. World's championships are won in the pitcher's box, and that is where we are going to show the advantage. Base running? It makes me laugh. It's a joke.

"We are going to be stronger in the box this fall than we were a year ago. Then we had two pitchers, now we have five in Coombs, Bender, Plank, Morgan and Krause. Yes, Krause. There is one great left hander now. He has finally developed into a good curve ball pitcher, and is as good a left hander as there is in the league. Just keep your eye on him. He never had a curve ball until lately.

Thomas a Star.

"Ira Thomas? That's a man I like to talk about. World's series are just like ordinary games to him. You simply cannot get him rattled. He has no nerves and the tighter the pinch the better he likes it. I bank on Ira. That's all there is to it. If you will remember, he caught the only game for Detroit that Detroit won from Chicago in two world's series, and it was the only game he caught for the Tigers in those series at that. And he had a sore arm then, too. And before we played the Cubs last fall we heard how Kling was going to show Ira up. Did he?"

Asked if there was any truth in the rumour to the effect that he was going to retire from the management of the Athletics and become president of the club, Connie replied:

Will Not Retire.

"I do not see how that rumour started. Nothing is further from the truth. I am working for a living and managing a baseball team is my work. I am not the rich man many say I am. Every cent I have is tied up in the Philadelphia baseball club and plant, and I hope to continue as manager until the stockholders fire me. Even if I were a rich man, I would not voluntarily retire from the management, for I love the job. I would not feel at ease in any other position."

NO FOUL PLAY.

Wiarton Death Was Natural, Says Coroner Wigle.

Wiarton, Sept. 30.—There is a possibility that the body of the late James McCartney, which was found in a field near his home ten miles from here, may be exhumed and another inquest held, to satisfy a curious public.

On Tuesday last Coroner Wigle, sr., held an inquest on the body and called a number of witnesses, one of whom was Dr. Charles Wigle, his son. The latter made the post mortem examination, and under instructions from the crown authorities at Walkerton, made only a superficial examination of the cuts in the head, which are said to have been merely flesh wounds which went as far as the bone of the skull.

In the evidence submitted by Dr. Charles Wigle, he stated that all the wounds could have been inflicted by a stone or by falling on a stone, and the jury decided, after much discussion, to bring in a verdict, to the effect that "James McCartney came to his death from wounds on the head, inflicted by some person unknown."

Dr. Wigle takes the ground that, no matter what the internal condition may be, it would not explain the wounds on the head. He stated that he had treated deceased for nervous trouble and dizzy spells a week before he died, and that McCartney was very depressed and seemed to be in terrible fear of something. He was weak and more or less in a condition of collapse at that time.

High Constable Ward visited the scene Thursday, and found some small blood marks and hair on a stone near where the old man lay, as well as some marks which looked as if the dead man had had a water brash.

At the Woodbine.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—The Sixth day of the Ontario Jockey Club meeting resulted as follows:

First race, six furlongs, purse $500, for three-year-olds and up, selling—Rye Straw, 1st; Carmillon, 2nd; Cooney K., 3rd. Time, 1.15.

Sixth race, Rothschild Cup, one mile, purse $1,000, for three-year-olds and up—Michael Angelo, 1st; Rockville, 2nd; Cast Steel, 3rd. Time, 1.43 1-5.

Seventh race, 1 1-8 miles, purse $600, for three-year-olds and up, selling—Dr. Holsberg, 1st; Lad of Langden, 2nd; Cattyhunk, 3rd. Time, 1.56 3-5.

Cochrane Seems Certain.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—Up till last night two men and no more than two had been definitely slated for places in the Borden Cabinet. It is said on what should be the best authority that Cabinet forecasts so far published are wide of the truth and that the authentic list of Borden Ministers when finally announced will surprise men highly in the party heretofore and closest to the Premier-elect.

Mr. Borden is making his own Cabinet, although he is taking the advice of such men as Sir James Whitney. It will not be, according to the best information available last night, composed wholly, or nearly so, of men who have been known in the political world, or who have long held office.

Hon. Frank Cochrane and Hon. Robert Rogers are regarded as the two whose entry into the new Government is a settled thing. Their portfolios have not been designated, and the probability is that none of the men who are finally chosen will be assigned a portfolio until the Cabinet personnel itself has been settled.

An effort is said to be being made to bring Hon. Richard McBride to Ottawa as Mr. Borden's right hand man, but the British Columbia Premier has not yet replied.

Extreme but not Vulgar

THE suit here shown is modelled from the latest high grade fashions of New York, and is designed to meet the requirements of the man who knows what's what.

Shoulders slightly sloped, the coat is shaped at the waist and shows a slight dip in front.

Prices vary according to materials used, but the most popular for this style are $20, $22 and $25.

DRUGGIST FINED $100 FOR SELLING ALCOHOL

Several Prominent Druggists Assemble in Police Court This Morning to Witness Fate of a Brother Druggist—Drug Business in This Line Will be Ruined

MAY APPEAL THE CASE

A local druggist was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a charge of selling intoxicating liquor (alcohol) without a license, and without a prescription from a medical man for the same. The sale was made on the 24th ult., (Sunday). Mr. J. Stewart, License Inspector, laid this charge, with the result that the defendant was found guilty and fined $100.00 and costs.

The defendant was represented by Mr. B. Hall, who, in his defence, maintained that a druggist was within his right in selling alcohol as a medicine on Sunday, or any other day, but the Magistrate overruled his motion for an acquittal.

The Magistrate said that whiskey would be no use without alcohol in it, and whiskey would not be an intoxicating drink unless it had a certain percentage of alcohol in it, therefore the druggist was committing an infraction of the liquor license act, when he sold the alcohol without a prescription from a doctor.

The defendant stated that he had been in the drug business for ten years, both in the States and Canada, and this was the first time that he heard of such an action. He stated that there were dozens of intoxicating beverages on the shelves of a drug store that were sold without a medical prescription right along and he never heard that a druggist should even keep a record of the sales of alcohol made. He admitted that he had never kept a record and had been selling it right along. He said that alcohol was used very much for external purposes, and if a person had to get a prescription it would be very inconvenient. He said he always used his judgment, and if he saw a man was not using alcohol for purposes, he always told him that he did not keep it.

Several local druggists were present, and one gave evidence. He is one of the city's most prominent druggists, and he made the statement that over 80 per cent. of the druggists were selling alcohol all the time the same as they were, and the same as the defendant had, and this was the first action of its kind that he had ever heard of. He said that it stated in their drug journals that it was perfectly legal to sell alcohol without a prescription, and that there had never been a prosecution for so doing.

The Magistrate was firm in his judgment, and concluded that he would make a test case of it, and accordingly imposed the above fine.

The man who purchased the alcohol was Herbert Johnston, and he has since been put on the black list. In his evidence, he stated that the dose had nearly killed him. The bottle contained six ounces, and he stated that he and three friends had drunk the contents of a bottle of the same size previous to this one on the same day.

Sect. 32 of the Liquor License Act, concerning the sale of liquor by chem-

NEWS FROM SEAT OF WAR IS SCARCE AND STORIES UNRELIABLE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 2.—Not only has Italy got the Turks bottled up in Tripoli and Turkey, but her system of blockading and cable cutting and censorship has been so complete that scarcely a line of news has filtered through from the seat of war since Saturday night. There have been lots of rumours and unreliable news despatches, subsequently contradicted, but all conflicting. Tripoli may or may not be already occupied by Italians, but it is certain that several small warships and possibly a larger cruiser and a transport with a thousand soldiers aboard, have been captured or sunk by Italian fleets during the last thirty-six hours. All the news out of Constantinople recently was the further appeal of the Turkish Cabinet for protection of her country and the assurance of the German Emperor that he would do what he could, but could not do much without the backing of other powers. This was received by Pasha Said from the Kaiser this morning. It is the general opinion here that Turkey wants peace at most any price. It would not surprise people here if the war was all over in a few days, but it is agreed here that Italy will have and hold Tripoli at the finish.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS IN AUSTIN HORROR

Special to The Examiner.

AUSTIN, PENN., OCT. 2.—The work of identifying the dead in the awful flood following the bursting of the Bayliss Pulp and Paper Co's. dam goes on slowly. Every hour carts and automobiles bring fresh bodies from beneath the ruins, or partly buried in the mud which was brought down by the rush of millions of gallons of water, when the dam broke away. One of the greatest sufferers is Mayor Baldwin, who mourns the loss of his wife and father, and mother. All three were swept to death in the awful torrent. The Manager of the Bayliss Company says that their pecuniary loss will only be a hundred thousand dollars, and owing to the extensive interests in Canada this would not cause insolvency, but add to this the loss of homes, and other buildings in the town, and this will be about three-quarters of a million dollars. Your staff correspondent here has learned that the dam was condemned some time ago, but in spite of this fact more than two hundred people daily worked right on its bridge when the crash came.

Heavy rains yesterday and this morning added to the great difficulties of searchers. It is believed that some victims are still alive among the debris of the houses and efforts are being concentrated now on their rescue.

The bodies of a mother with three children clasped tightly with her, and all dead, were found this morning. One girl, whose relatives were killed, in her frenzy of despair, when the flood rushed down Saturday, threw herself on a table and covered herself with the cover to hide the approaching calamity. Miraculously, the debris formed an arch over her and she was rescued alive this morning. There were many such miraculous escapes.

20 DROWNED IN COLLISION

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 2.—The British steamer Hatfield was sunk after an early morning collision with the British steamer Glasgow in the English channel and her crew of twenty men drowned. It seems that the Glasgow had broken her steering gear and the Hatfield was going to her assistance when the collision occurred. The Glasgow was towed into this port all safe.

SEVERE COAST STORMS 200 LIVES LOST

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 2.—During a severe gale in the English Channel and North Sea on Saturday night there were several wrecks and loss of life along the coasts. The Belgian, French, and Holland coasts suffered very severely, the casualties being at least two hundred.

CABINET MAKING.

So far as is known, there is only one member of the new Dominion government positively decided upon, and that is Hon. Mr. Borden, the premier. Sir James Whitney admits that he was offered a front row seat, but declined it—had rather rule in Ontario than serve in Ottawa. Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Mines in the Whitney Cabinet, is still the unknown quantity of the problem. More from a purely party point of view than from any other, Mr. Cochrane has won a title to a place in Mr. Borden's cabinet by the peculiar way he managed the peculiar campaign in Ontario in Mr. Borden's interest. In event of Mr. Cochrane being transferred to Ottawa, a vacancy in the Ontario cabinet wil have to be filled. Mr. W. H. Hearst, of Sault Ste Marie, is spoken of as a possible selection. As regards Mr. Borden's cabinet, it is expected that he will be in a position to announce its personnel on Wednesday or Thursday. The Mail and Empire places Mr. Cochrane in the cabinet and also slates Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works and Hon. George E. Foster and Mr. F. D. Monk (Nationalist) as members in the new cabinet.

THE ADDRESS EVIL.

One's sympathies naturally go out to our incoming vice-regent, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. He will be bombarded with addresses, from everybodies, including nobodies. Several societies in Ottawa are contemplating the perpetration of addresses to darken the young life of our new Governor-General, in a new land—a gruesome "welcome to this fair country." One cannot recall anything less read and generally less worthy of reading, and less heeded, than the formal address that custom has made the piece de resistance of the coming of a governor-general, or the presentation of a cigar-holder to a benedict-to-be, except in the matter of wedding, the richly-bound family Bible, whose chief function is to gather dust and testify to the financial strength of the piety of the family. Nothing is less read than an address published in a newspaper, except perhaps a petition that one is asked to sign. But Connaught is a soldier and will have to make up his mind to bear the hardships that go with his position, not the least of which will be the making of speeches, that say nothing in reply to addresses that say less and don't say it originally, either.

THE TRIPOLITAN TROUBLE.

The trouble between Turkey and Italy in regard to the interests of the latter is Tripoli, which culminated on Saturday in an Italian descent upon Tripoli, have their origin as far back as 1878. The treaty that concluded the Russo-Turkish war, is understood to have involved the acquiescence of the powers in Italy's having "pacific penetration" of Tripoli. Turkey still claims that this right has been respected by her. Italy's counter-claim is that, while this right has been nominally recignised, and that Italy has been permitted to develop her interests in Tripoli till they are very considerable ,her subjects have been maltreated by the Ottoman authorities, and subject to vexations and irritating discrimination. This claim can well be believed; for, wherever Turkish power has been paramount, subject peoples or foreigners have been atrociously ill treated and subjected to intolerable indignities. These or allied conditions in Tripoli have been the subject of frequent remonstrance on the part of Italy, but diplomacy has yielded no satisfactory results. We shall soon see how the arbitriment of the sword will work. The result will probably be that Italy's influence in Tripoli will become predominant, and that Turkey's interests and influence will be reduced to merely nominal proportions.

THE LIMITED VIEW.

The Toronto News says that "our (Canada's) only reason for building a fleet is to assist in the maintenance of British sea power, so as to lighten in some degree the burden upon the Mother Country." As an autonomous part of the empire, the additional reason for Canada building a navy is to provide the special protection of our own coasts and commerce. The fisheries of Canada are of an annual value of nearly a quarter of the revenue of the Dominion. A Canadian navy is especially demanded to protect them. We need not, and should not, expect the Mother country to provide this protection. She has withdrawn her fleets from both the north Atlantic and north Pacific stations. This might very easily be interpreted as a hint to Canada that she should do something in the direction of self protection; by doing this she would be indirectly assisting in the defence of the Imperial interests, by leaving free for service in other parts of the world, the naval forces that had been previously devoted to territorial defence in Canadian waters. Besides, a Canadian navy would be at the disposal of the imperial authorities in time of war stress, the time when our assistance would most largely count. A Canadian navy is necessarily and evidently a part of the British navy in time of war. The military and naval resources of Canada, as a unit of the Empire would be at its disposal in times when imperial interests would be at stake. A Canadian navy, built of our own resources, built, as Mr. Borden has said, "by our men of our own material," while serving the purposes of protection of domestic interests, and helping in time of need to protect imperial interests, would be an assertion of Canadian self-respect and self-resource, and at the same time develop a new national industry that would not be confined to the production of fighting machines, but be made a factor in the establishment of a new outlet for Canadian enterprise— the building of ships for commercial and transoceanic ferry services. The News takes the limited view.

RESPONSIBILITY.

To emphasize the fatuity of one of the objections to the late lamented reciprocity agreement, it may be mentioned that Mr. Borden is conducting his cabinet-making operations behind closed doors. It was urged against the agreement that it was "secretly" negotiated, and that the public were not put in possession of the progress of the negotiations from day to day. In regard to both an arrangement like the reciprocity agreement, and the work of forming a cabinet, it is as evident in one case as the other, than a certain degree of secrecy should exist. Mr. Borden will have trouble enough in harmoniously "assembling" the embarass des riches of cabinet material, so generously placed at its disposal, and some of it presenting the problem of fitting the round man into the square hole. His difficulties would be greatly intensified, if in addition to their intrinsic seriousness, he were to be deluged with advice to the extent of obstruction of his work, as he would be if the progress of his work from hour to hour were made public. He is constitutionally commissioned to do the work, the responsibility is upon him, and the outcome, not the manner of doing it, is what he will be held accountable for. If he is to be held responsible, he should have a free hand, and to have a free hand, is to conduct his work as quietly—as secretly as possible, and without the interruption and complications that undue publicity would create. We designate a premier and elect a parliament to respectively form a government and do our business. We should permit and require both to do their duty, without undue personal or popular interference. The doctrine of the referendum is an attack upon the responsibility of parliament; if we refer every matter of national concern, within the legislative competency of parliament to a plebiscite, we make parliament a mere registering instead of a legislative and representative, body. The responsibility of parliament is the essence of the British parliamentry system.

The Relation Of The Civil Service To Good Government

(Ottawa Journal (Conservative)

Some talk having arisen in Hamilton over the patronage question, Mr. T. J. Stewart, one of the re-elected Conservative members for Hamilton, has announced that he will be no party to the removal of any public servants appointed by the late government—that he is opposed to the principle of removing civil servants from office merely because they do not belong to the dominant arty.

That is right, and the Journal has no doubt that the Borden Government will stand pat on that principle. To do so will not be too easy. The Conservative victory in the recent general election will be followed by great pressure in all parts of the country, and particularly in Ottawa, upon Conseravtive Ministers and members to provide government employment for party stalwarts. To the extent that such pressure can be met by the use of legitimate openings of new positions or of ordinary occurrences of vacancies the Conservaitve party owes preference to its own members. But we are confident that the era is past in Canada for any disturbance of civil service conditions anywhere in consequence of change in the ruling party, save in cases in which persons in public employ are shown to have taken an active part in politics. Even fifteen years ago the incoming Laurier Government acted with tolerable fairness in this matter, and the victory of Whitney in Ontario in 1904 was followed by absolute impartiality towards the Ontario Civil Service. The incoming government of the Dominion is not at all likely to show any retrograde idea in the matter. Mr. Borden's promise to this country of clean and honourable government will assuredly be kept, and the promise necessarily includes protection of the Civil Service against partisan attack.

'An efficient Civil Service is necessary to good government. An efficient Civil Service is impossible if tenure of office is a matter of party spoil. A civil servant who has shown himself an active partisan should be dismissed. He richly deserves it. When a man enters the public service he becomes a servant and trustee of all the people, and should drop party work. But no other civil servant should be affected. Not merely should his position be safe, but, even though appointed by an opposing party, he ought to have just as good a chance of promotion on merit as any civil servant known to be of the same colour of politics as the party in power. The Civil Service is a national business institution, which should be conducted on business principles.

FOLKS PAST FIFTY MUST USE CASCARETS

What glasses are to weak eyes, Cascarets are to weak bowels—a 10 cent box will truly amaze you.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

(1) Nothing in Section 49 and 50 of this Act contained shall prevent chemists and druggists, duly registered as such, under virtue of the "Pharmacy Act," from keeping liquors for sale for strictly medical purposes, or from selling liquors for strictly medical purposes in packages of not more than six ounces at any one time, or from selling for strictly medical purposes, any mixture containing liquors mixed with any other drug, or medicine, in packages of not more than one pint, but in either case only under a bona fide prescription of such liquor or mixture duly signed by a legally qualified medical practitioner.—R. S. O. 1897.

(2.) It shall be the duty of such chemists or druggists to record in a book, to be kept for that purpose, every sale or other disposal by him of liquor, sold under, and forming any ingredient in such prescription; and such record shall show as to every such such sale or disposal, the time when, and the person to whom the same was made, the quality sold, and the prescription, when one is required, of such medical practitioner; and in default of such sale or disposal being so placed on record, every such sale shall be held in contravention of the provisions contained in said sections 49 and 50 of this Act.—R. S. O. 1897.

(3) The said book shall be kept open to the inspection of the License Commissioner and Inspector.

(7) Any chemist or druggist who sells or otherwise disposes of any liquor to beconsumed on the premises as a beverage, or with soda water, seltzer, appolinaris, ginger ale, ginger beer, sarsaparilla or any aerated mineral or effervescent drink, shall be liable to the penalties imposed by Section 72 of this Act.

(6) A chemist or druggist who is also a duly qualified medical practitioner, may in a township himself give a certificate, provided for in this section, and may also give such certificate in any village or police village, where there is no other medical practitioner resident and practising therein, but not otherwise.

The penalty, under Section 72, for the above offence is not less than $100, besides costs, and not more than $200, besides costs.

What the Druggists Think.

The druggist involved in the affair has not as yet decided whether to appeal the case or not. The druggists of the city, however, intend to hold a meeting to discuss the matter, as the effect of the judgment in this morning's case will be very damaging to the drug business. In conversation with a druggist this afternoon, the reporter was informed that the druggists could not purchase alcohol from the wholesale houses, according to this morning's judgment. If a citizen wanted to purchase 25 or 30 cents worth of alcohol they would first have to get a prescription from a medical practitioner, for which they would pay $1.00, paying $1.30 for what they are now paying 30 cents. They could not sell it to the hospitals without the latter having a prescription. If a person wanted to get some alcohol for domestic purposes, they would not be able to get a medical man's prescription. How will they get it? It will cripple the drug man's trade. It will tie up business completely in this line. These were a few impressions of the druggists of the city, when seen by an Examiner reporter this afternoon. They further stated that this was the first case of this kind they had ever heard of in Ontario. They maintain that alcohol is a drug, sold almost exclusively by druggists, and that as druggists they can sell it as a drug, despite the fact that it is a sort of liquor. It is no more intoxicating than several other drugs that are being sold at the present time, according to their story, and they fail to see the reason that they are prohibited from selling this and allowed to sell similar drugs that have a like result and effect.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

It isn't particularly pretty — or unusually fragrant.

It's just a sturdy little blue flower that grows by our back door-stoop, but I seldom see it without having that kind of feeling that makes a man take off his hat to show his reverence.

And this is why.

In that rough, ugly, unfertile bit of ground by the stoop, we have tried to make many things grow. Nasturtiums, pansies, geraniums and a rose bush we have planted there from time to time.

And they all refused to live — as if they said, "This is such an ugly spot — not fit for flowers. We will not demean ourselves by growing here."

And then we planted a slip of the blue-eyed Susan, and instead of sulking and fading, it thrived and flourished and blossomed and spread until soon that ugly scar in our garden was quite healed.

It isn't a very beautiful flower, nor unusually fragrant. It's just a sturdy, wholesome, happy, little blue-eyed thing that grows and thrives and produces as much beauty as it knows how wherever you plant it. And do you know, it seems to me that just as I love and am proud of my blue-eyed Susan, so God must be proud of His blue-eyed-Susan folks.

You know what I mean—the dear, sturdy, simple cheerful folks who don't disdain to thrive and blossom and bring forth all the beauty they know how to, no matter how uninteresting or how cheerless or unfertile the plot of ground in which God has seen fit to plant them.

While we are admiring and praising the wonderful rose, or orchid, or poppy, people that bloom in beauty and fragrance in some fertile spot in the world's garden, who knows but He is far more proud of His blue-eyed Susan folks. You know who they are — the self-ignoring mother who brings a measure of harmony and happiness into the home where there would be only discord without her, the sweet old maid aunt who thrives in cheerful industry in the unpropitious soil of a married sister's or brother's home, the father who into a life which is one unending round of relentless toil and self-denial, can still bring optimism and liveableness, "Commonplace people" they are, of course, beside the wonderful rose and orchid and poppy people.

But think how many ugly spots there would be in this garden of life if they refused to grow in them.

If you are, God bless you—and I know He will.

MISSIONS A MAN'S JOB
SAY PRESBYTERIAN LAYMEN

Since the inauguration of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, one frequently hears the expression, "that the work of missions is pre-eminently a man's job." We may not know the exact idea which the man who first coined the expression attached to it, but he evidently had in mind the fact that the task which is set the church to evangelize the world is a big enough one to interest the best, the biggest, the brainiest men in the church. He may have had in mind, too, that the work of church missions should no longer be left to the women of the church. It was to a company of men that Christ said: "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." The first great missionaries were men. The Church to-day, in laying emphasis on the part which men must take in this movement, is simply returning to apostolic methods. In the great conventions held all over the country within the last few years, the thing that has impressed one more than anything else is the large number of prominent business men, who met together to give time, thought and energy to the consideration of the best means to be adopted to carry out Christ's commission. Then these men are giving thousands of dollars, where before they gave cents for this work. Many of them are going up and down the country advocating the cause of missions at men's conferences. At the present time Sir Andrew Fraser, who has just returned from India, after a long life of strenuous toil in the service of his Sovereign, is devoting most of his remaining days to the advocacy of the cause of missions. He is at present in Canada and begins in a few days, in company with the Moderator of the General Assembly, and others, a campaign which will touch the chief cities from the Pacific to the Atlantic in our great Dominion.

The response which the men of the church all over, as well as the men of Peterborough, are making to this new appeal, shows that, when the work and duty are put squarely up to their consideration they see the reasonableness of the demand, and that it is indeed "a man's job". And this is what the men of the three Presbyterian churches have been doing night after night throughout the week. Over fifty men from all walks in life have been visiting their brethren and conferring with them as to their duty to have a share in this great work. And they are meeting, as they ought, with a most hearty response. Men are saying: "We never looked at the matter in this light before. This is our work. This is our business in the world. Enroll us as co-workers". In one family visited recently three members of the home asked for weekly envelopes, who never contributed before. One man increased his weekly offering to missions from 50c to 75c, another, who gives yearly, increased his from $50 to $100.

Conferences of the workers will be held in each of the churches to-morrow night after service. It is intended to prosecute the work until every Presbyterian in the city has had an opportunity of saying yes or no, to the appeal. Few, it is believed, will say no. It is not a big thing that is asked for after all. The price of a cigar in the week, or an average of 5c per week, per member, or about 10c per family, will do the job.

A Marvel
Of Healing
Salt Rheum of Ten Year's Standing Healed as if by Magic Hands Cracked so Could Not Work —Cures Effected by
Dr. Chase's Ointment
It does not take long for Dr. Chase's Ointment to prove its magic healing power. A single night is often sufficient to produce the most startling results.
Internal treatment for skin diseases is nearly always disappointing. By applying Dr. Chase's Ointment to the diseased parts relief is obtained almost immediately, and gradually the sores heal up and disappear. Here are two letters which will interest you:—
Mrs. Chas. Gilbert, Haystack, Placentia Bay, Nfld., writes:—"I was a sufferer from Salt Rheum for ten years, and had about despaired of ever being cured, so many treatments had failed. Reading of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment, I commenced using it, and was entirely cured by eight boxes. I want to express my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Ointment, and to recommend it to all sufferers."
Mr. Stanley Merrill, Delaware, Ont., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my hands cracking, often becoming so sore that I could hardly do any work. I got some of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and happily find that one or two applications of same to the affected parts make them well. I have had no trouble since using the ointment for sore hands."

T. A. S. NOTES

A regular meeting of the Sacred Heart Branch of the T. A. S. was held yesterday, when several new members were initiated.

Flourishing debating and social clubs have been organized in connection with the Sacred Heart branch.

Work has commenced on the new athletic grounds east of the Sacred Heart church and this splendid recreation field will be in fine shape for next season.

Both St. Peter's T. A. S. and Sacred Heart T. A. S. will attend Communion in a body next Sunday.

A $200 BLAZE

The fire department received a call to a fire at the home of Mr. Bert Reynolds, 274 Hunter street, last night. The blaze, which proved to be a stubborn one, was located between the sheeting of the wall adjacent to the fireplace, and before it was extinguished it succeeded in burning a hole through the first and second floors. Eight chemicals were used in extinguishing the flames. The damage will amount to about $200. The fire is supposed to have originated from the gas stove. The house is owned by Mrs. Connors.

WILL RETURN SOON

The Fire Chiefs Convention, which was held in Milwaukee recently, Ontario came second for the largest number of new chiefs in the organization. At the opening of the convention there were two members present from Ontario. Illinois came first with fifteen representatives. Fire Chief Howard, who has been attending the convention, is expected home this week.

A Trip To Kirkfield

Mr. J. W. Burnham, M.P.-elect, Mr. J. H. McClellan, Superintendent of the Trent Canal, Mr. Boyd of Bobcaygeon and Mr. Meatrthur of Fenelon Falls, took a trip to Kirkfield in the "Bessie Butler" on Thursday and Friday of last week, returning to Peterborough on Saturday.

SIR WILFRID.

The curtain rings down on the life
where the Mighty Sir Wilfrid was vanquished;
From Rupert Bay, down in the Lakes they are chanting the dirge of the fallen.
For he was a valiant Sir Knight, a leader, aye, almost an idol;
Beloved of friends, and of foes, almost as dearly beloved.

The full, mellow years of a life without blame did he give to his people.
Working with head and with hand, dreaming fair dreams of the future;
Planning to build on the rock of his country's advancement and glory;
Spending himself for her sake until he grew grey in her service.

Much he achieved for this land: gave her a place with the nations;
Set he her lusty young feet right on the road of the Future;
Boldly he wrought—not too bold—for e'en as he planned it, it happened.
Until one and all, we acclaimed him, not Leader, so much as a Prophet.

Then, at last, as the apex and crown of a life that knew nothing of failure,
He looked far away to the south for a mart for this lusty young nation.
'Twas the dream of our statesmen of old:
Grit and Tory, alike, they had sought it.
And now after long waiting years, it was won by the noble Sir Wilfrid.

But the Trusts and the men with the cash said we don't want to trade with our neighbours.
And day after day they proclaimed that this pact was disguised annexation;
If our wheat went across to the South, then our love and allegiance would follow;
And in selling our hogs to the States we would barter for dollars, our birthright.

And the men of the land took the bait and they "voted for English connection".
It was hard to defeat the Old Chief, but they did it "to cement the Empire."
They were fooled by the moneyed combines, but time will reveal the deception;
And this, in a brief setting, down is the tale of the fall of Sir Wilfrid.

—D. A. Casey.

EXECUTIVE MET

The Executive of the Augmentation Committee of the Presbyterian Church met in Toronto on Thursday last. The claims of Presbyteries for the quarter ending Sept. 30th, were carefully considered and generally approved. It was decided to publish a leaflet on the work of the Committee, which might be put into the hands of men engaged in the campaign to raise for the Augmentation of the Church $800,000 this year and $1,000,000 next year. The Committee is extremely anxious to be able, next March to supplement the stipends in Ontario and Quebec up to $900, in Northern Ontario, and the Prairie Provinces up to $1,000, and in British Columbia up to $1,100. It is felt that the adequate support of the Canadian ministry is absolutely vital to the success of the whole work of the Church at home and abroad. In order that the ambition of the Committee may be realised, it will be necessary that Presbyteries and others concerned exert themselves to the utmost and that congregations assign to this Fund its fair share of their contributions to the schemes of the Church.

WANDERED FROM HOME

Carl, the two-year-old son of Mr. J. T. C. Lang, Edinburgh street, was the subject of considerable excitement at his home and the adjoining residences on Saturday, when he wandered away from home about four o'clock in the morning, unseen by any person around home, and did not even come back for dinner. The little fellow was found at 4.30 p.m. Saturday playing in the street down at the C.G.E. gate. Mr. Lang had informed the police department and the police force turned out to look for the missing boy, while Mr. Lang got a horse and began a search of the city, which terminated at the C.G.E. The gate man informed him that the youngster had been there since noon, and did not appear to realize that he was lost.

The Prince of Wales

THE mere fact that a young man takes porridge for his breakfast is not especially significant.

But when the young man happens to be the future ruler of the British Empire, the fact becomes important.

H.R.H. The Prince of Wales has been reared with extreme care, that he may be fit in mind and body for extreme responsibilities.

His diet and exercise are guided and watched over by wise and great physicians. Regularly at breakfast he eats porridge.

Ask your doctor to tell you about the value of porridge to growing children.

Then make Tillson's Rolled Oats the daily breakfast food in your home.

Ready-to-wear Section Prepared to Take Care of Every Fall & Winter Garment Need Splendid New Stocks Now Complete

An impressive array of stylish, becoming garments greets the visitor to our ready-to-wear section these Fall days.

Every Season finds this department a little better equipped than the previous one, to take care of the garment needs of the women of this community.

Fall stocks are the largest and most attractive we have ever carried, and feminine Peterboro has not been slow to recognize their superiority as well as the extremely modest prices which prevail.

Faultless workmanship gives distinction to the simplest models. Few men's clothes can lay claim to the high order of tailoring represented in these suits and coats.

Street and visiting dresses possess marked individuality. The fashion centres of the world have furnished inspiration for their truly fetching models which have been developed with expert adroitness.

Greatest varieties, most attractive styles and best values invite immediate buying.

Perley's Health Will Keep Him Out Of The Cabinet

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, OCT. 2.—It is now said to be unlikely that the Borden Cabinet will contain G .H. Perley, the chief Conservative whip in the last house, and one of the mainstays of the organization during the campaign. The reason given for Perley's probable absence from the Council table is his health, which is far from good. He was mentioned among the [illegible], but was not at all anxious so that up the hard work that falls to Cabinet Ministers.

The retirement of Jas. Conmee in Thunder Bay and Rainy River, with the certain result of the election of a Conservative, leaves only Yukon and that generally goes with the Government, so that Dr. Alfred Thomson may get down as also certain to be elected for the northern constituency. This will place the Conservative majority at 48, with a slight possibility of a change of one or two either way when the recounts have taken place. The Roman Catholics in the new house number 71, with the likelihood of two more in Laurier and Forget's second seats. The Methodists and Presbyterians are tied with 46 each, while the Anglicans have 45. There are 5 Baptists, 3 Lutherians, 2 Congregationalists and one Quaker.

PARALYZED LIMBS

Today it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Ronsburger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

Gramophones

Victrolas, Cabinets, Aux-i-to-phones, from $35.00 to $600.00. A complete stock of these may be seen at The Peterboro Typewriter Co., Corner Charlotte and George Sts, under the Town Clock. 3eod-77

"Globe" Is Enthusiastic

Over Lawrance D'Orsay Who Appears at "The Grand" on Friday Night

It was more than a cordial audience that fairly filled the Royal Alexandria Theatre last night to welcome Mr. Lawrence D'Orsay on his return to the title role of Augustus Thomas' comedy, "The Earl of Pawtucket". The appreciation which met his unique characterization was in fact extremely enthusiastic from a representative gathering of the patrons of the drama. Mr. D'Orsay's portrayal of Lord Cardington masquerading under the alias of a Mr. Putnam of Pawtucket has been compared with that of the late Mr. Sothern as Lord Dundreary, but the comparison is not exact, as Mr. D'Orsay's impersonation has an individuality of its own. It has more delightful naivete and less insanity than the Dundreary role, amusing as that was. Mr. D'Orsay's portraiture of the English noblemen, who is always a gentleman in the most embarrassing and droll situations, is as delightful as ever in the "sangfroid," its ease, and its seeming absence of self-consciousness. The plot of the play is familiar to local theatre-goers or to those who read the dramatic columns of the newspapers. The performance was smoother, more finished than on the occasion of the first presentation here. Mr. D'Orsay is admirably supported by a company selected by himself. Katharine Emmet was bright and vivacious as Harriett, the divorced wife of the Putnam, whose name Lord Cardington has assumed, and Susana Rushoime was engagingly attractive as Ella Seaford, Louise Sydneth gave a capital, well-outlined character sketch as Jane Putnam. Mr. D'Orsay was recalled several times after the fall of the curtain on the second act, and responded in a neat and humorous little speech. The play is handsomely staged.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF MARGARET HARDING

One precious to our hearts has gone;
The voice we loved is stilled;
The place made vacant in our home
Can never more be filled.
Our Father in His wisdom called
The boon His love had given;
And, though in earth the body lies,
The soul is safe in Heaven.

DEATH OF AN ESTEEMED RESIDENT OF SMITH

It is with sincere and deep regret that the Examiner is called upon to chronicle the death of one of the oldest and best known residents of Smith, in the person of Mr. Alexander Edmison, who passed away suddenly early Sunday morning at his home, lot 9, concession 2, Smith. The deceased had been in Peterborough on Saturday apparently in good health, but became ill on returning home and sank rapidly, his death taking place at 4.30 o'clock on Sunday morning. He was a lifelong resident of Smith, a man of splendid qualities and deservedly popular and respected in the community, and the intelligence of his demise will be received with deep sorrow. He had always taken a keen interest in everything that pertained to the benefit of his fellowmen and was liked and esteemed by everyone with whom he came in contact. He is survived by three sons, Messrs. J. H., P. J. and G. A. Edmison, all residing in Smith, and by one adopted daughter, Mrs. James McEwen, of Elgin, Manitoba. Three brothers and three sisters are also left to mourn his loss. They are: Rev. Henry Edmison of Brandon, Mr. P. H. Edmison of Sioux Falls, U.S.A., and County Magistrate Geo. Edmison of this city, and Mrs. Jos. Millburn, Smith, Mrs. William Andrews, St. Marys, Ont., and Mrs. (Dr.) Beatty, Parry Harbour, Ont.

The deceased was a staunch Liberal in politics and in religion was a Presbyterian and a member of St. Andrew's church, Peterborough.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon from the family residence, Smith, to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Jas. Rollins, pastor of St. Andrew's church, will officiate.

SENTENCED TO ONE MONTH IN GAOL

One month in gaol was the sentence meted out this morning to Michael Scott, who appeared in court a few days ago, charged with creating a disturbance on a C. P. R. passenger train. He was fined $4.00 and costs, amounting to $7.95, but he was unable to pay it. He will spend the month on the hill. Provincial Constable Mr. Broddy, Mr. Dodds, Station agent of the C. P. R., here, and Mr. D. W. Park, Conductor on the train on which the incident occurred, were present. Mr. Broddy was on the train at the time, and was able to furnish almost a full account of the affair.

The charge was that Scott had obstructed the Conductor, when asked for his transportation pass, and assaulted Provincial Constable Broddy in the discharge of his duty.

The Conductor stated that the defendant was in the second-class smoker, apparently dozing, when he came along, and when he asked Scott for his ticket, he told him that he must go away and leave him alone. The Conductor then informed Mr. Broddy of the affair, and when the latter went to take charge of him, he bit him or scratched him on the hands, when he was attempting to put on the handcuffs.

Scott was finally overpowered and handcuffed and then taken into the smoking department of one of the first-class coaches, where he used very bad language.

The prisoner said he was drunk at the time, and was very sorry that it had occurred.

The Magistrate thought that the information was sufficient, and accordingly dealt with the matter as above stated.

A local man was arraigned on a charge of being drunk. He was discharged.

A charge was laid against J. Grady for the non-payment of wages amounting to $17.00, by Edward Tighe, but neither men appeared so the case was dismissed.

THANKED THE BAR-TENDER

A man went into one of the city hotels this morning and asked the bartender for a drink. The bartender refused him, saying, "You have had enough." Upon this the man put his hand in his pocket and extracted a twenty-five cent piece. Throwing it across the counter to the bartender he exclaimed. "It's worth that, I've been told several times that I'd had too much, but never before that I'd had enough." He left the hotel apparently satisfied.

EIGHT CHILDREN BURNED

Special to The Examiner.

INDIANA, PENN., OCT. 2.—Eight children were burned to death in the destruction of the homestead of Wm. Dias near here. The parents made a brave attempt to rescue them, and may be fatally burned.

IMMIGRATION IS LARGE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, OCT. 2.—A total of 212,854 immigrant settlers, one-third of them from the United States, settled in Canada during the last five months, being 18 per cent. increase in immigration figures over same period last year.

WERE VERY AGGRESSIVE

Considerable trouble was experienced during yesterday's fire in keeping the crowd back. So persistent were they in their endeavours to crowd around the building, that one of the firemen narrowly escaped serious injury. He was tripped by one of the spectators while carrying a chemical and thrown heavily to the pavement, but beyond a slight injury to his leg he was unhurt. The firemen have the authority during the course of a fire to prevent anyone from entering the building.

A GREAT REPUTATION

The reputation that the firm of J. J. Turner & Sons enjoys, not only at home, but abroad, is shown by the fact that Messrs. Turner and Sons have received a letter from the big company of Emil Savor in Berlin, Germany, asking for a catalogue and price list. The letter stated that they proposed to import Canadian boots and other articles for which there was a big demand in Germany.

Judge Huycke And Mr. E. A. Peck Present Cups Athletic Contest Saturday

The "Howden" and "Eastwood" Cups, emblematic of the all-round athletic championship of the city, have been supplemented by two magnificent trophies. One for boys who have not yet reached their 14th birthday, has been presented by Mr. E. A. Peck, the other for boys under 16 years of age, presented by Judge Huycke. This will no doubt be good news to the younger athletes of the city. Every boy has a chance to compete with boys of his own age. The events for the "Peck Trophy" for boys under 14 will be 80 yards, 220 yards, running high jump, running broad jump, 100 yard hurdle.

The events in the "Huycke" trophy for boys under 16 will be 100 yards, 1-4 mile, running high jump, running broad jump, 8 lb. shot put, 100 yard hurdles.

The events in the "Eastwood Trophy" for boys under 18 years will be: 100 yards, running high jump, 8 lb. shot put, running broad jump, 120 yard hurdles, 1-2 mile run, 1-2 mile walk.

The events for the "Howden Trophy" for senior competition will be: 100 yards, running high jump, 12 lb. shot put, running broad jump, 120 yard hurdles, 1-2 mile walk, mile run.

The above events will be run off next Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park, commencing at 1.30 p.m.

While these events are conducted by the Physical Department of the Y. M. C. A., they are all open to every man and boy in the city.

The scoring will be done on the point system, each competitor will receive points for each event according to his performance. The man or boy with the greatest number of points will be declared the winner. Entries close with J. J. Thompson at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday evening.

300 ARE DROWNED

Entire Village of 3,000 Persons is Wiped Out of Existence by Bursting of Dam

FIRE COMPLETES DISASTER

Austin, Pa., Oct. 2.—Three hundred or more persons met their death through the bursting of a dam above this town Saturday. Fire followed, and completed the work of destruction.

The curtain of night which was rung down on the flood scarcely before its victims had all been claimed and its surviving spectators fully realized how great a tragedy the elements of water and fire had enacted in the natural ampitheatre of the Allegheny Mountains here, was lifted by dawn yesterday, revealing a ghastly scene of death and devastation.

Austin itself, Saturday, a busy mill town of 3,000 people, many of whom were enjoying a fine autumn afternoon as a Saturday half-holiday, is only a ghost of a town to-day.

Torn to pieces by water and eaten by fire, the wet and charred remnants of its buildings, believed to hold the remains of three hundred or more persons, were strewn along the valley edge, piled in windows where the main street business section was, or swept in scattered masses far down the ravine.

Spectators, many of whom barely escaped being victims of the disaster, and hundreds of people from surrounding towns, looked down from the steep hillsides on Austin and Costello through a veil of fog yesterday morning to see the wreckage here of some four hundred houses, a score of business blocks, three churches and several large lumber mills, and three miles further down the river at Costello the ruins of more than fifty buildings. The flood did not spend its force until it raced for more than ten miles from the reservoir. Wharton, still further on, suffered somewhat, but is practically intact. The loss of life at Costello, where the residents had more warning, is believed to be but three.

The property loss in the valley is estimated at upwards of $6,000,000.

In Austin, out of the hundred directly enveloped in the deluge, hardly a dozen survive. The furious flood let loose when the Bayless Paper & Pulp Co.'s dam crumbled Saturday, picked up a heavy battery of big timbers in the mill yards at the dam and with thousands of planks and logs, rammed its path with terrible havoc.

At the hospital to-day there were but six injured for the care of the small army of physicians and nurses who poured into the devastated town all night and day. The medical supplies remained unused in the cars rushed here by the Buffalo & Susquehanna and the Pennsylvania Railroads, and the only use found for blankets and bedding was for the care of the few recovered dead, which up to a late hour last night numbered but fifteen.

The state constabulary yesterday afternoon took charge of the situation, which seemed too appalling for the local committee, which had worked all night. Immediately orders were issued to the railroads to bring no more sightseers to Austin, and sentinels were placed on the chief roadways with instructions to pass none but workmen. Hundreds of automobiles and carriages were turned back.

During the night searching parties with engine headlights, automobile lamps, pine torches and improvised lanterns of every sort poked their way into every pile of wreckage that was accessible, seeking any who might be alive, but scarcely a body was found in which life was not extinct. The night had been one of hardship and horror filled with experiences which had severely tested the mettle of the men whom circumstances had pressed into first-aid rescuers in the flood-devastated village.

Credit for the quick spreading of the alarm was given to Lena Binckey, a telephone operator. Upon receiving the message from the Cliff House that the dam had broken, she pushed the alarm button connecting with the fire department and the engineer's office of the Goodyear Lumber Mill below the town.

The engineer tied his whistle down and the firebell in the town was sounded continuously. She then rushed to the street screaming the warning cry. "The dam has broken." Then she fled for her life toward the steep hillside at the north end of Main street. Turning toward the valley, she saw the great wall of water descending upon the town.

"From where I stood," she said yesterday, "the wall of water seemed fifty feet high. Above it rose a great cloud of spray in which houses seemed to toss, bumping against one another, spinning and turning as they fell to pieces or were swept out of sight. The noise was appalling.

"When I fled from Main street there were scores of people behind me, many of them children. They did not seem to realize the magnitude of their danger.

"Some turned into stores as if to make a casual purchase. While I was looking down upon them, utterly helpless to give further warning, the cloud of mist that seemed to precede the flood hid them from view and a moment later the green water buried the homes from my sight."

One of the striking and pathetic features of the day, according to Dr. Thomas H. A. Shipe, chief of the state dispensaries, was the practical absence of children among the survivors. It is thought that when the wreckage has been cleared away, and the bodies of victims recovered—although many have been entirely destroyed—it would be found that a large proportion were those of children.

Will Not Oppose Carrick.

Fort William, Oct. 2.—James Conmee has declared that he will not be a candidate for the House of Commons at the deferred election to be held on October 12, and as there is no other candidate to face J. J. Carrick, he will be declared elected by acclamation on Thursday, the 5th. In a letter to the press, Mr. Conmee says: "Owing to the change of government at Ottawa, and having regard to my condition of health, I do not feel disposed to accept the nomination."

Mr. Conmee will at once leave for the south, where he hopes to regain his wonted strength. He has been very feeble since an attack of typhoid, and his physician has ordered a long rest.

Death of Brockville Lawyer.

Brockville, Oct. 2.—The death occurred here Saturday night of J. H. Botsford, one of the rising young lawyers of Eastern Ontario, and a member of the firm of Buell & Botsford for the past five years. Deceased had been ill for several months.

Mr. Botsford was 38 years of age, and a native of Brockville. He was prominently identified with the Knights of Columbus, holding at the time of his death the office of secretary of the Ontario council. He leaves a widow and one child.

NERVES UNSTRUNG, WAS "DOWN AND OUT"

Feels 10 Years Younger

After Taking Morrisey No. 14 Blood Tablets

MONTREAL, P. Q., May 16, 1911.

I was all run down and felt all out of sorts. My appetite was bad—my complexion sallow — my spirits low, and I didn't seem to have any ambition to do my ordinary housework. I was in this condition for about a year, although several physicians prescribed a tonic for me, and I tried several well advertised remedies, but all without success. About three months ago one of your booklets was left at my house, and I read of the wonderful success of Dr. Morrisey and of the remarkable cures that his medicines were making, and decided to try his No. 14 Tablets. I used one box, and before it was half gone I began to feel better, and it gave me courage to keep on. I have just finished the third box, and only wish I could tell you how much better I feel. My work is now a pleasure to me, and I feel ten years younger. You certainly have the best real Blood Tonic and blood maker that I have heard of, and anyone in need of such a remedy will find yours the very best and most reliable.

Mrs. Anna Hafferty.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

WEDDING BELLS

STEWART—DOWNARD.

On Thursday, Sept. 28th, at 234 Arthur street, Toronto, the marriage took place of Elizabeth Eleanor (Lily) Downard, to Mr. Arthur Kramer Stewart, Toronto, son of the late Dr. W. H. Stewart, Pittsburg.

The marriage was performed by the Rev. Dr. Sowerby, of College street Baptist church. After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart left on the 7.30 train for Stoney Lake and Fort Royal, the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Dunford, the bride wearing a blue tailored suit, with black beaver hat with white ospreys.

On their arrival a sumptuous supper was served, including a large wedding cake, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Dunford. Mrs. G. Parson assisted her aunt, Mrs. Dunford.

The bride was the recipient of numerous and costly presents. On their return to Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart will reside at 225 Grace street.

IRWIN—DEEPROSE.

Miss Lillian Winnifred Deeprose, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. Lewis Crawford Irwin, of Brooks, Alta., in Calgary on Sept. 26th, by Rev. A. Mahaffy, B.D., pastor of St. Andrew's church.

TOWNSEND—GOODWIN.

Park Street Baptist Church was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding yesterday morning, at 10 o'clock, when Walter F. Townsend and Marjorie S. Goodwin, youngest daughter of Mr. Henry Goodwin of the Canadian General Electric Works, were joined together in the bond of holy matrimony, by the Rev. W. C. Riddiford.

The bride, who was charmingly attired, in a white silk dress, was given away by her father, while the bridesmaid was unattended.

After a dainty wedding repast had been participated in, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend left by the evening train for Toronto, and on their return will reside at 536 Patterson street.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES McCLIGGOTT.

One of the best known and highly respected residents of Douro, passed away last evening, in the person of Ellis Jane Moher, wife of Mr. Jas. McCliggott, Lot 8, Con. 6, after an illness of two weeks. The deceased, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Moher, was fifty-one years of age and was a life-long resident of Douro. She enjoyed the esteem and friendship of a very large number of people, who will mourn her loss. Twenty-six years ago she was married to the late Patrick Condin, and after his death was married to Mr. Jas. McCliggott, who survives her. Three sons, John Condin, Cecil and James McCliggott and one daughter, Miss Johanah Condin, all of Douro, are also left. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Moher of Douro, and six brothers and six sisters also survive. The sisters are Mrs. Foley of Rochester, Sister Josephine, of St. Joseph's Hospital, Mrs. M. J. Leahy, of Douro, Miss Anastasia, Miss Zita, and Miss Eleanor, of Douro, and the brothers, Dr. Moher, of Cobourg, William of Peterborough, Stephen and Francis of Edmonton, Alta., and Vincent and Albert of Douro.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, from the family residence, Lot 8, Con. 6, to St. Joseph's Church, Douro, and thence to St. Joseph's cemetery, Douro, for interment.

Coming of the Duke.

Quebec, Oct. 2.—His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, the new Governor-General of Canada, will arrive in Quebec on Friday, October 13. The official program for the day will be as follows:

At noon His Royal Highness will take the oath as Governor-General of Canada in the Legislative Council chamber, which has been especially renovated for the event.

At 7 p.m. dinner will be served and at 8.30 there will be a reception at Spencerwood.

The entire city will be illuminated in the evening, and His Royal Highness, after a drive through the principal streets of the city, will leave for Ottawa by special train.

Mr. Mulvey, Under Secretary of State, is in Quebec conferring with Sir Lomer Gouin, Mayor Drouin, and Captain Victor Pelletier, A.D.C., relative to the reception to the new Governor-General.

Neck Nearly Broken.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Coming close to having his neck broken in an elevator accident, young Walter Rudman reposes at St. Michael's Hospital. On Saturday afternoon the boy, who is but ten years of age, looked down an elevator shaft at the St. Lawrence Market to see where the car was. The car was coming up, and before the boy could jump back, he was jammed tightly against the top of the door.

His cries brought the men working around, quickly to his aid. His head is badly bruised and squeezed, and it will be a long time before he recovers from the shock.

TIGER BRAND UNDERWEAR

MOST everyone knows that underwear difference is something more tangible than trade mark. There is, for instance, the difference of quality. The Tiger Brand trade mark is valued not for what it is, but for what it represents.

Tiger Brand Underwear

The Tiger Brand trade mark stands for something real and desirable. It positively assures the purchaser of pure wool, careful and accurate workmanship, excellent finish, correct fit and tub-and-wear resisting durability. An examination of the garments and their construction will reveal these points. Not a detail is slighted. Even the buttons are sewed on good and tight. And the purchase of every garment is made with the feeling of confidence that full money's worth is obtained in underwear satisfaction.

FOREIGN TRADE INCREASE

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—The election campaign evidently had no bad effect in checking the Dominion's steady growth of business prosperity. During August Canada's trade increased by no less than $18,306,133, or nearly thirty per cent., as compared with August of last year. The total trade for the month was $81,490,654, of which $47,405,591 was in imports, a gain of nine millions. In exports the principal gain was in agricultural products, which totalled $7,238,396, an increase of nearly five millions over the preceding August.

For the first five months of the fiscal year trade has totalled $350,523,426, an increase of $34,705,645, of which $22,629,971 was in imports entered for consumption.

Coin and bullion were imported during the five months to the value of $1,0894,959, as compared with $2,889,965 for the corresponding five months of last year.

Customs revenue for the month just closed indicate that the rapid growth of imports is being maintained. The total customs receipts for the month were $7,710,181, an increase of $1,252,341 over September of last year. For the first half of the fiscal year customs revenue has totalled $41,306,326, an increase of $5,746,784, or nearly one million dollars per month.

The new administration will take office with trade and revenue increasing at the most rapid rate in the history of Canada, and with the way paved for another huge surplus at the close of the fiscal year.

Approves the Agreement.

Paris, Oct. 2.—France's rejoinder to the latest German despatch in the negotiations relative to the Moroccan question was considered by the members of the Cabinet yesterday.

The Ministry approved the instructions drawn up by Foreign Minister De Selves to the French ambassador at Berlin, M. Camdon, embodying the Government's comments regarding the German note, and also approved the "editing" of the proposed agreement.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Raised Me From the Grave".—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Blum, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicines. If anyone had offered me $100.00 for the second bottle of Nervine that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"

MRS. THOMAS TAYLOR, Blum, Tex.

Nervous exhaustion is a common occurence of modern life. The wear and tear on the nervous system is greater, now than at any time since the world began. For sleeplessness, poor appetite and that "run down" feeling, nothing is so good as

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man can scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Our health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

All Saints' And St. James' Were Saturday's Winners In Church League Games

Brilliant weather prevailed on Saturday for the church soccer games and St. James and All Saints were the winners from Knox and Park St. respectively. All Saints and Park St. had both won two games each and lost none and a good fast game was looked for, and the large number of spectators who witnessed the game came away well pleased with the class of football shown by both teams.

When Park street and All Saints lined up, Park street were without Dawson and All Saints without James, but both teams seemed quite strong from appearance, especially Park street, as they had the old star, Billy Milburn in goal, who has been for a trip out west and just landed home on Friday night. They also had Mr. Hitchen of Havelock, who has been the star of the Midland League for many years.

All Saints' won the toss and decided to play with the sun and wind at their backs, while Park street had to face a very strong sun.

The Saints opened out the game by bright and fast play, with their forwards doing some clever passing, but were checked hard by the right division of Park street defence, who, by the way, are all Scotchmen, in Allen, Donnell and Irwin, and the latter showed his class by holding E. Dawson and T. Williams, the Saints' fast left wing, from getting very close or dangerous. Then came the time for the spectators to cheer, when a pass by Dawson to Gash, who passed Renshaw and beat Milburn for Goal No. 1, on a hard shot from the right.

On play being resumed, All Saints pressed around their opponents' goal, but were unable to score owing to very poor shooting and the first half ended with the sphere in mid-field, with the score 1 to 0 in favour of All Saints'.

The defenders on both sides were called upon early after the resumption, the ball being raced smartly from end to end with Park street having a little better of the play, but they could not get through the Saints' defence, who are the best in the Church League and can be depended on by their fast little forwards.

Then the All Saints' followers had the chance to cheer their stalwards once more, for by a nice pass from Monk to Edwards to Williams, the latter scored Goal No. 2 on a close-in shot. This ended the scoring and the game ended with the sphere in mid-field and the Saints the winners of a well contested game, by the score of 2 to 0. Mr. Pagett gave good satisfaction as referee. The teams lined up as follows:

All Saints	Goal	Park St.
Morsity		Milburn
	Backs
Gamble		Donnell
Hull		Renshaw
	Half Backs
Vickers		Irwin
Robinson		Allen
Hooper		Hitchens
	Forwards
Monk		Smith
Gash		Follis
Edwards		Miller
Williams		Tooley
Dawson		Williams

Tecumsehs Were Badly Beaten By Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C., OCT. 1.—Vancouver blanked the Tecumsehs Saturday afternoon in the first game of the Minto Cup series by a score of 5 to 0. It was an easier win than the game a fortnight ago when the cup was taken from New Westminster. The challengers were outplayed all along the line, and quite a few bets were made at half time, with the score in Vancouver's favour, that Tecumsehs could not score. The game was tame compared with the series with the Salmon Bellies, as their style of play and that of the Tecumsehs is essentially different. The crowd of nine thousand people enjoyed the game as they might have watched a tennis match, for while there were periods of spirited play, even this was hardly sensational.

The first ten minutes of play settled the result, for in that time the champions took the visitors' measure .R. H. Cheyne, of Westminster, did excellent work as referee. Play was not clean, neither could it be described as particularly rough. The members of both teams offended about equally.

Rugby Teams Rattling Practice On Saturday

A big squad of pig-skin chasers were out in uniform at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon and a lively workout was the result, the players showing good form. Frank O'Connor coached the bunch and put them through their facings on the jump, the practice being of great benefit. The players are rounding into shape and will be fit and ready when they are called upo to play their first game. There will be a workout tonight at Central Park at 7.30 o'clock and also on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week and every player is expected to be out in uniform at all these practices.

Something About The Teams That Will Meet For World's Championship

NEW YORK, SEPT. 30.—The country now might just as well settle back for the world's series between the Giants and Athletics. Nothing but an earthquake or a miracle can stop such a meeting now. But these prospective rivals have cinched the pennants of their respective leagues beyond question of doubt. What a championship series it should be! Connie Mack undoubtedly has the finest club that the American League has ever produced. The world's champions are better balanced by far than when they won their laurels from the wonderful Chicago Cubs almost a year ago.

"Rube" Oldring was out of the series, and he is one of the best outfielders of the game. Harry Davis, the veteran first baseman, played for the White Elephants a year ago. Little "Stuffy" McInnis, who has supplanted him—if what he has shown New York is his usual speed—is one of the most sensational and valuable first basemen the game has ever produced. No one at the position is more certain in fielding and McInnis is a terrific hitter and a good base runner. His presence gives Mack the best hitting and fielding infield that the game has produced since the old Chicago Cubs were in the heydey of their glory.

Possibly Chicago never could compare to the present generation of kids, offensively. Taken all in all, the Giants are the classiest lot of athletes that have had the honour of representing the National League in many years. The locals do not boast the hitting strength of the world's champions, but what is lacking there is made up in speed on the paths. No team in history has ever boasted better base running ability than McGraw's dashing boys.

Test Up to the Pitchers.

With teams so evenly balanced, pitching is bound to cut an important figure in the ultimate result of the tussle. The fact that the rivals are now so far ahead in their respective races will give each a chance to conserve its box strength for the remainder of the campaign, and nurse it along to the keenest pitch by the time the big gun is fired.

In the matter of numbers, Connie Mack has the call on pitching power. He has four wonderful twirlers in Bender, Coombs, Morgan and Plank, all of them veterans who have been through the fire before. McGraw may count on no more than three reliable twirlers, at most. It looked a week ago as if he had but two—Mathewson and Marquard. But "Red" Ames has come to life, as he usually does in cool weather, and just now he is travelling along as effectively and steadily as either Mathewson or Marquard. It would not be surprising if Ames turned out the great "hope" of the Giants in this series, for he has works of confidence in himself. Touch-luck pitcher that he is, Ames has outlived a series of discouragements in poor support that would have broken any but an iron nerve.

Little may be said of Mathewson. He is right for the first time this year. When right he is practically invincible. He has lost but one post-season series game in his life—that to the Boston Red Sox in 1909.

Marquard Needs a Rest.

Marquard is the puzzle just now. Without doubt he is the best left-hander in either league, but he is suffering from a kink in his pitching elbow. He has been bothered in his last five starts. The trouble appears to be overwork. He will now be able to rest up and if he is in shape for the Athletics, McGraw will face Philadelphia stronger than his club has ever been before.

Next to pitching, in this prospective series, strength behind the bat is going to tell the tale. Chief Myers and Ira Thomas are both good backstops. The Indian is by far the better hitter. He is also the steadier thrower. But the work of Thomas in the series last fall against the Cub runners was simply a revelation. He looked like the greatest catcher that ever happened. He is one of those fellows who rise to emergencies. Meyers has never been through such a test, and he may be affected by nervousness. Indeed, the same may be said for the rest of McGraw's young club. The Athletics from last season's experience, with so much at stake, figure to play the steadier baseball.

If Thomas falls down badly, the Athletic cause will suffer; that is, if McGraw's men are able to get on bases against the world's champion pitchers. The natural speed of the Giants will more than offset Philadelphia's superior hitting if Thomas is unable to stop base running. A team that has shown up the best catchers of the National League, as the Giants have done, simply must be kept off the bases if low scores are to prevail.

Of course, so far as that goes, Chief Meyers is not going to have any picnic of it, either. Connie Mack can turn loose some speed on the paths, too, and with the well-established harmony among his batters and base runners that has characterised this club's play all season, is likely to demonstrate a versatile line of inside play if the Giants are not careful.

Golden Harvest for Players.

As to the ultimate result, it seems a bit premature as yet to venture a guess. Too much may happen in the remaining games of the regular championship schedules.

For the players who participate this year's world's series should prove the greatest bonanza of history. It would not be surprising if the loser's end will surpass any previous winning ed. Brush Satdium, at the Polo Grounds, has already accommodated over 40,000 spectators without utilising the upper tier or any field space. It will be possible to place circus seats in the outfield under the bleachers walls which are fifteen feet in height. If such a easure is taken, the Polo Grounds will be able to accommodate upwards of 60,000 persons at each game of the series here.

Shibe Park, in Philadelphia, has one of the most commodious stands of the country outside of the Brush Satdium. Consequently, every game is likely to surpass the present record for attendance at a World's series game. It is dead certain that the games in New York will almost double the present record notch. The proximity of Philadelphia to New York" minimizes travelling expenses, and swells the pool to the highest possible figures.

All Saints' And St. James' Were Saturday's Winners In Church League Games

Brilliant weather prevailed on Saturday for the church soccer games and St. James and All Saints were the winners from Knox and Park St. respectively. All Saints and Park St. had both won two games each and lost none and a good fast game was looked for, and the large number of spectators who witnessed the game came away well pleased with the class of football shown by both teams.

When Park street and All Saints lined up, Park street were without Dawson and All Saints without James, but both teams seemed quite strong from appearance, especially Park street, as they had the old star, Billy Milburn in goal, who has been for a trip out west and just landed home on Friday night. They also had Mr. Hitchen of Havelock, who has been the star of the Midland League for many years.

All Saints' won the toss and decided to play with the sun and wind at their backs, while Park street had to face a very strong sun.

The Saints opened out the game by bright and fast play, with their forwards doing some clever passing, but were checked hard by the right division of Park street defence, who, by the way, are all Scotchmen, in Allen, Donnell and Irwin, and the latter showed his class by holding E. Dawson and T. Williams, the Saints' fast left wing, from getting very close or dangerous. Then came the time for the spectators to cheer, when a pass by Dawson to Gash, who passed Renshaw and beat Milburn for Goal No. 1, on a hard shot from the right.

On play being resumed, All Saints pressed around their opponents' goal, but were unable to score owing to very poor shooting and the first half ended with the sphere in mid-field, with the score 1 to 0 in favour of All Saints'.

The defenders on both sides were called upon early after the resumption, the ball being raced smartly from end to end with Park street having a little better of the play, but they could not get through the Saints' defence, who are the best in the Church League and can be depended on by their fast little forwards.

Then the All Saints' followers had the chance to cheer their stalwards once more, for by a nice pass from Monk to Edwards to Williams, the latter scored Goal No. 2 on a close-in shot. This ended the scoring and the game ended with the sphere in mid-field and the Saints the winners of a well contested game, by the score of 2 to 0. Mr. Pagett gave good satisfaction as referee. The teams lined up as follows:

All Saints	Goal	Park St.
Morarity		Milburn
	Backs
Gamble		Donnell
Hall		Renshaw
	Half Backs
Vickers		Irwin
Robinson		Allen
Hooper		Hitchens
	Forwards
Monk		Smith
Gash		Follis
Edwards		Miller
Williams		Tooley
Dawson		Williams

Tecumsehs Were Badly Beaten By Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C., OCT. 1.—Vancouver blanked the Tecumsehs Saturday afternoon in the first game of the Minto Cup series by a score of 5 to 0. It was an easier win than the game a fortnight ago when the cup was taken from New Westminster. The challengers were outplayed all along the line, and quite a few bets were made at half time, with the score in Vancouver's favour, that Tecumsehs could not score. The game was tame compared with the series with the Salmon Bellies, as their style of play and that of the Tecumsehs is essentially different. The crowd of nine thousand people enjoyed the game as they might have watched a tennis match, for while there were periods of spirited play, even this was hardly sensational.

The first ten minutes of play settled the result, for in that time the champions took the visitors' measure. R. H. Cheyne, of Westminster, did excellent work as referee. Play was not clean, neither could it be described as particularly rough. The members of both teams offended about equally.

Rugby Teams Rattling Practice On Saturday

A big squad of pig-skin chasers were out in uniform at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon and a lively workout was the result, the players showing good form. Frank O'Connor coached the bunch and put them through their facings on the jump, the practice being of great benefit. The players are rounding into shape and will be fit and ready when they are called upon to play their first game. There will be a workout tonight at Central Park at 7.30 o'clock and also on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week and every player is expected to be out in uniform at all these practices.

Something About The Teams That Will Meet For World's Championship

NEW YORK, SEPT. 30.—The country now might just as well settle back for the world's series between the Giants and Athletics. Nothing but an earthquake or a miracle can stop such a meeting now. But these prospective rivals have cinched the pennants of their respective leagues beyond question of doubt. What a championship series it should be! Connie Mack undoubtedly has the finest club that the American League has ever produced. The world's champions are better balanced by far than when they won their laurels from the wonderful Chicago Cubs almost a year ago.

"Rube" Oldring was out of the series, and he is one of the best outfielders of the game. Harry Davis, the veteran first baseman, played for the White Elephants a year ago. Little "Stuffy" McInnis, who has supplanted him—if what he has shown New York in his usual speed—is one of the most sensational and valuable first basemen the game has ever produced. No one at the position is more certain in fielding and McInnis is a terrific hitter and a good base runner. His presence gives Mack the best hitting and fielding infield that the game has produced since the old Chicago Cubs were in the heyday of their glory.

Possibly Chicago never could compare to the present generation of kids, offensively. Taken all in all, the Giants are the classiest lot of athletes that have had the honour of representing the National League in many years. The locals do not boast the hitting strength of the world's champions, but what is lacking there is made up in speed on the paths. No team in history has ever boasted better base running ability than McGraw's dashing boys.

Test Up to the Pitchers.

With teams so evenly balanced, pitching is bound to cut an important figure in the ultimate result of the tussle. The fact that the rivals are now so far placed in their respective races will give each a chance to conserve its best strength for the remainder of the campaign, and untie it along to the topmost pitch by the time the big gun is fired.

In the matter of numbers, Connie Mack has the call on pitching power. He has four wonderful twirlers in Bender, Coombs, Morgan and Plank, all of them veterans who have been through the fire before. McGraw may count on no more than three reliable twirlers, at most. It looked a week ago as if he had but two—Mathewson and Marquard. But "Red" Ames has come to life, as he usually does in cool weather, and just now he is travelling along as effectively and steadily as either Mathewson or Marquard. It would not be surprising if Ames turned out the great "hope" of the Giants in this series, for he has worlds of confidence in himself. Tough-luck pitcher that he is, Ames has outlived a series of discouragements in poor support that would have broken any but an iron nerve.

Little may be said of Mathewson. He is right for the first time this year. When right he is practically invincible. He has lost but one post-season series game in his life—that to the Boston Red Sox in 1909.

Marquard Needs a Rest.

Marquard is the puzzle just now. Without doubt he is the best left-hander in either league, but he is suffering from a kink in his pitching elbow. He has been bothered in his last five starts. The trouble appears to be overwork. He will now be able to rest up and if he is in shape for the Athletics, McGraw will face Philadelphia stronger than his club has ever been before.

IMMIGRANTS ARRIVE IN THE CITY

A number of emigrants from the old land arrived in the city to-day and were quickly disposed of by Mr. Howson, the emigration agent. They were a promising looking lot, most of them having been farm labourers in the old country. Mr. Howson still has for disposal a married man, aged thirty, with wife and two little girls, the latter being 7 and 9 years old respectively. The husband is an experienced farm labourer and a splendid stock man, in fact Mr. Howson considers him to be as good a man as he has had come to him this summer. Mr. Howson had a position for him a week ago, but the prospective employer had secured help elsewhere a couple of days before arrival of the party mentioned above. Those desiring a good experienced man and can supply a house, would do well to communicate with Mr. Howson.

PEACE IS IN SIGHT

Germany May Arrest Fighting in the Turco-Italian War

BOMBARDMENT UNLIKELY

London, Oct 3.—From present appearances the Turco-Italian war promises to be the shortest and most bloodless war in history. Thus far its distinguishing characteristic has been the absence of fighting, and with Germany acting as peacemaker, it may be ended before fighting occurs.

It is concluded that no mediation will be accepted by Italy until she has accomplished the military occupation of the Tripolitan coast.

After that negotiations will be much easier and are likely to be successful, if Turkey will accept a money indemnity for allowing Italy to establish herself in Tripoli, as Great Britain did in Egypt.

The news filtering in from various points continues to be of a negative kind. Evidently Tripoli has not been bombarded, and is not likely to be, if the Turks do not oppose the Italian landing.

The warlike operations are confined to a blockade and the capture on either side of a few small vessels.

It is now admitted from the Turkish side that Prevesa, in European Turkey, is not occupied. Italy's announcement that she has no intention to carry the war into European Turkey, will do much to allay apprehension over the Balkan or other complications.

Turkey's ministerial difficulties have not been solved, but generally the situation looks more hopeful.

No Bombarding Before To-day.

Rome, Oct. 3.—A despatch to The Tribuna from Malta, says that a steamer, which arrived here at six o'clock yesterday evening, brought the news that the Turkish transport Derna had been shelled and sunk in the harbor of Tripoli It confirmed the other advices that the bombardment would not begin until Tuesday—this in order to give the population time to withdraw to a place of safety.

Keep Hands Off Balkan Peninsula.

London, Oct. 3.—A despatch received here by a news agency from Vienna, says that Count Von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, has informed the Italian ambassador that any further action by the Italians on the Albanian coast will make it necessary for Austria to despatch warships thither.

Count Von Aehrenthal asked the ambassador how he reconciled Italy's naval movements in the vicinity of Albania with her declarations that she was keeping her hands off the Balkan Peninsula.

Children Burned to Death.

Texarkana, Tex., Oct. 3.—Eight children of [illegible] and Mrs. Dias, of Heshbon, near here, ranging in age from thirteen years to three months, were burned to death early Sunday, when fire destroyed the family home.

The parents, after discovering the flames, left the children in their beds and went to the first floor, where they made an attempt to extinguish the fire.

The blaze spread rapidly, however, and they were unable to return to rescue the little ones.

Assassins Must Wait Trial.

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 3.—The case of Daniel Devilliers and W. L. Dunn of San Antonio, Texas, charged with conspiracy to assassinate Francisco I. Madero, who was elected president of Mexico on Sunday, was postponed until Nov. 1. The reason was the absence of B. J. Villoen, the state's chief witness.

TAIT FOR THE T.N.R.

RESIGNATION DELAYED

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The resignation of the Laurier Government, which was to have taken place on Wednesday, goes over for another day.

The reason is that the Governor-General will be in Montreal on Wednesday saying good-bye to the Mount Royal Club.

The delay means that the Borden Ministry will not be sworn into office till Thursday or Friday. In the meantime, every day produces new Cabinet possibilities.

It is stated to-day that Dr. Roche's chances for a western portfolio have slumped and that on the other hand George H. Perley, chief Conservative whip, has signified his desire to be left out of the new Government.

One of the most interesting reports circulated yesterday was that the chairmanship of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission would be turned over to Sir Thomas Tait, formerly of the C.P.R., and more recently of the Australian Government railways.

Yesterday's arrivals included A. E. Kemp, Major Currie, Major Sam Sharpe, and H. B. Ames. Mr. Borden had a lengthy conference with the Governor-General last night.

The only Laurier Minister who survived in Ontario is in danger of losing his seat. The election of Hon. Charles Murphy in Russell is likely to be protested. A meeting of 200 workers was held yesterday and charges of corruption in the election are plentiful.

Another protracted Cabinet council was held last night. The big item under consideration is said to have been the letting of the contract for the extensive harbor works at St. John, N.B. The right of the defeated Government to let these contracts is denied.

There is some talk of the Borden Cabinet journeying to Quebec to be sworn in by Lord Grey on Oct. 12. This would be His Excellency's last official act.

Graham For Glengarry?

Montreal, Oct. 3.—It is stated in Liberal circles that Mr. McMullin, the Liberal member-elect for Glengarry, who carried the county by over two hundred majority, will soon resign his seat, and the Opposition will bring forward the Hon. George Graham, defeated in Brockville on the 21st. It is understood that if the ex-Minister of Railways will accept the nomination, Mr. Duncan McMarvin, who was the Conservative candidate, will not run again.

Never Again, Says Berthiaume.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—Hon. T. Berthiaume, proprietor of La Presse, in a statement, denied that he had in an interview stated that Sir Wilfrid could never be resuscitated as a successful leader.

He claims that he was misinterpreted and states that he was asked what effect he considered the recent election would have on Sir Wilfrid's future; to which query he replied that Canada could not expect to see another French-Canadian again at the head of the Government.

These words were interpreted, he states, as having particular references to Sir Wilfrid.

Sir Wilfrid For The Hague.

"It was given out yesterday morning by a man prominent in the counsels and friendship of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that the ex-Premier would be offered the position of president of The Hague Peace Tribunal very soon, being the unanimous choice of President Taft and the English authorities. Both great nations had expressed their confidence in Sir Wilfrid Laurier and commissioned Lord Strathcona to offer the ex-Premier the position, and this commission is the mission of Lord Strathcona's visit."

Addresses to Earl Grey.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—Three farewell addresses were presented to Their Excellencies, Earl and Countess Grey, and their family at Government House yesterday.

The civic farewell was presented by Mayor Mopewell, six ex-mayors and a number of other officials.

For the Halifax Canadian Club, the address was read by Sir Sandford Fleming, while Lieut-Col. Benoit of Montreal, presented one on behalf of the Canadian Artillery Association.

Earl Grey spoke in feeling terms of his relations with the Canadian people, and predicted a great future for the Dominion.

Sentenced for Smuggling.

New York, Oct 3.—Abraham Lichtenstein, president of the Lichtenstein Millinery Co. on Fifth avenue, yesterday pleaded guilty to being concerned in a conspiracy to undervalue goods imported to this country and was sentenced to serve four months in the penitentiary.

In sentencing the man Judge Hough said he believed the defendant to belong to a class who have been corrupting business methods in the United States for many years, and that smuggling for profit must be stopped. Lichtenstein made a settlement with the Government after his arrest for $120,000.

Entombed Men Rescued.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Oct. 3—The fourteen men who were entombed at the Shakespere Mine, on Dome Creek, were rescued yesterday, none the worse for their confinement of 54 hours.

A drill hole, through which they had been provisioned, was enlarged by thawing until it was big enough to permit the body of a man to pass.

Then the imprisoned miners were pulled one after another to the surface of the ground, 1,374 feet above.

Signs of a Hard Winter.

Whitby, Oct. 3.—Farmers in Ontario County are preparing for a hard and long winter, because the red squirrels and chipmunks have become very busy laying in their winter food store, even going to the extent of collecting green chestnut burrs, breaking them open and hiding away for future use the unripe chestnuts. The natives declare they never before knew the squirrels to open green chestnut burrs or to begin storing food so early in the fall.

Charge New Manslaughter.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—O. Lefebvre may be charged with manslaughter as the result of a fight in which he took part a couple of weeks ago, when, it is alleged, he knocked Patrick O'Hanley down on Clarence street, causing him to break his leg. He has been in Water Street Hospital ever since, and last Saturday, died as a result of his injuries. The prisoner was yesterday morning remanded for a week.

Royalists In Portugal.

Santiago de Compostela Spain, Oct. 3.—The newspaper Eco says that the Royalist leader, Capt. Conciere, and the chief Portuguese Monarchist conspirators entered Portugal Sunday at the head of 3,000 men with several guns and quickfirers, and one hundred and fifty mules.

How He Saved $40.

Peterboro, Oct. 3.—Michael Scott pleaded guilty to obstructing and assaulting a C.P.R. conductor when asked for his ticket, and was fined $40. He took the alternative of one month in jail.

Artillery Efficiency Contests.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—A militia order has been issued, giving the results of the artillery efficiency contests held at Petawawa during the summer.

The 2nd Ottawa Battery heads the list with 568 points. The other leaders in order are: 17th Sydney, C.B., 515; 3rd Montreal, 510; 19th Moncton, 507; 4th Hamilton, 500; 21st Westmount, 486; 9th Toronto, 482; 23rd Ottawa, 475; 22nd Sherbrooke, 414; 15th Granby, 450.

Brockville Man's Sudden Death.

Brockville, Oct. 3.—Hote Wyckware, aged about 60 years, while dining at the home of a friend last evening fell forward in his chair and expired instantly of heart failure. Wyckware was a lifelong resident of Brockville and vicinity. He leaves two daughters and two sons. The latter are: Dr. B. Wyckware of the civil service of Ottawa, and Dr. Buss, Lehigh, of the staff of the Mimico Asylum.

Schooner Was Disabled.

City Island, N.Y., Oct. 3.—The British schooner Neva, from Perth Amboy for Bear River, N.S., which sailed from here Oct. 1, returned and reports when off Middle Ground, Long Island Sound at 4 a.m., yesterday, during a heavy northeast wind her forestall was carried away. She will make repairs here.

Aviator's Machine Wrecked.

Huntingdon, Ind., Oct. 3.—Caught in a sudden gust of wind, C. P. Rodgers' aeroplane dived to earth just after he had started from this city toward Chicago yesterday The machine was wrecked and Rodgers painfully injured.

Lady Drummond's Illness.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—The condition of Lady Drummond, who is seriously ill with appendicitis in the Royal Victoria Hospital, yesterday showed a slight improvement. Her state is such that only her son is allowed see her.

THE DEATH LIST LESS

Fatalities in the Austin Flood is Now Estimated to be 150

EPIDEMIC NOW THREATENS

Austin, Pa., Oct. 3.—Twenty-four known dead, eighty-six missing and believed to be buried beneath the debris, is the official census last night of Austin's loss of life in the flood of Saturday. It is conceded, however, that several, if not indeed many, visitors and strangers were in town that day, and undoubtedly perished. Including these and allowing for inevitable errors in compilation, the total of the dead will probably reach 150. Twenty-one of the bodies recovered from the ruins have been identified and of the missing hope is entertained that some may yet be accounted for.

The problem of the hour in Austin last night is to recover her dead from the thousands of tons of debris choking the narrow valley. To do so before it becomes necessary to burn the ruins and save the living from an epidemic an army of laborers must reach the town within the next 36 hours, officials say. Otherwise the torch may transform the wreckage into a pyre of most of those who have perished.

The single line of wire swinging between Austin and the outside world carried an urgent plea for workmen to the mayors of Buffalo, Pittsburg and Philadelphia. Samuel C. Dixon, state commissioner of health, supreme in command at Austin, voiced the appeal.

Encouraging responses are hoped for.

"Give us our dead," is Austin's cry, voiced by State Senator F. E. Baldwin, who lost father, mother, sister and other relatives. Only the body of his father, John E. Baldwin, had been recovered up to this morning. The others are locked in the ruins.

The nine-mile line of railroad leading here from Keating's Summit was given over yesterday to the cause of rescue and relief. Locked cars pulled out of the Summit for the scene of the disaster. When they reached the terminus here, the workers determined; the drones, kept aboard, were sent back.

Every man on Austin's streets except the newspaper men were conscripted in the service, but despite the vigilance of the authorities only 250 were working at sunset.

Smouldering flames in the debris burst forth anew in the lower end of the wreckage yesterday afternoon, but it is not believed that the timbers shielded any of the dead.

Austin stands to a man against the suggestion that it may be necessary to put a torch to her ruins. Feeling runs high and should the authorities be forced to, there is no forecasting the result. The iron grip of the Pennsylvania State Constabulary holds the town in its grasp, however, and the troopers will remain here until Commissioner Dixon gives the word to go.

Eight men charged with looting the ruins were arraigned last night before Magistrate Johnson and committed to the Coudersport Jail for grand jury action. One man, a boarding-housekeeper, complained yesterday that his home had been robbed of $2,800; another, a storekeeper, declared that thieves had smashed his cash registers and stolen $300. A little girl entered a wrecked building and left with jewelry valued at several hundred dollars. She was stopped and relieved by the state police of her loot.

Colonial Office Changes.

London, Oct. 3.—The Canadian Associated Press learns that Sir Charles Lucas, head of the Dominion Department of the Colonial Office, who retired yesterday, is to be succeeded by Sir H. W. Just, Chief Secretary of the Imperial Conference, who made an extensive tour of Canada last spring.

He was born in 1864, and was educated at Bristol Grammar School and Corpus Christi College, Oxford. His ripe experience in colonial affairs eminently fit him for his new office.

Ship Under Arrest.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—The case of the six seamen of the steamship Melville, who were arrested for desertion, entered upon a new phase yesterday when all six consolidated their claims for wages against the owners of the ship, and, headed by a man called Gragan, visited the Admiralty Court swore out a warrant and had the ship put under arrest.

Their claims for wages amount to about $250. The case will come up in the civil courts.

Men Die of Glanders.

New Haven, Oct. 3.—Medical specialists are puzzled at the death by glanders of Dr. James H. Kelly, a leading veterinarian. Cases of humans being afflicted with the disease are rare.

Dr. Kelly undoubtedly became infected through attending a horse afflicted with the disease.

Baron Dies In Poverty.

New York, Oct. 3.—Leon Le Metayer Masselin, Baron De Guichainville, died Sunday night at Bellevue Hospital of injuries received when he was run down by a trolley car. The baron, who was 81 years of age, lived with a blind daughter and a son, in the basement of an apartment house on West Seventeenth street.

The French Consul-General will take charge of the old nobleman's body, for he died in poverty, after having eked out a living for years by odd jobs for coin dealers. When he was in Am-

Want "Rush" Abolished.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—The abolishment of the McGill "rush," a species of "free fight," between sophomores and freshmen, which for years past has been a regular incident of the university opening, is being agitated by members of the science faculty and others. The college authorities are opposed to the present "rush" and will exert all efforts to have it abolished. Every year there has been increased opposition owing to the injuries sustained by participants.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

BUT ONE CHURCH OF THE LIVING GOD

All Who Desire to Serve God Will Receive Divine Blessing.

Brooklyn, N.Y., Oct. 1.—Pastor Russell preached this afternoon in Brooklyn's largest and finest Auditorium which was crowded to hear his discourse on "Which is the True Church?" It may not be strictly true to say that everyone in the large audience went home fully satisfied that he had located the one true Church to which the Bible continually refers. It is not too much to assert, however, that the vast majority of those who heard were both pleased and convinced. No really great man is without his enemies, but it may surely be said that Pastor Russell is gaining many friends throughout the Christian world every week through the widespread reports of his sermons. The text for the occasion was, "The Church of the First-Borns, whose names are written in heaven."—Hebrews xii, 23.

He adverted to the Scriptural records which refer to the Church of Christ as one, not as many. Pastor Russell declared that in this matter the Church of Rome and the Church of England hold aloof from many Protestant denominations. They claim that to recognize them as churches would be unscriptural, since there is but one Church of the Living God. The various Protestant denominations started out with similar views, similar theories, though to-day they have abandoned them. The Church of England formed an organization separate from that of Rome, believing that the former had been the one true Church but had departed from the faith, and that it was the duty of the faithful to recognize her as Babylon, confusion.

The claim to be the true Church they applied to themselves. Similarly, Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, Adventists, Disciples, etc., have withdrawn, and many of these originally claimed to be the one true, loyal, faithful Church of Christ. To-day, however, the pendulum has swung to the other side. Moreover, the narrowness of the past is rapidly giving way. All are learning that to be a Christian means more than merely to be immersed; more than merely to be sprinkled; more than merely to believe in the doctrine of Election; more than merely to believe in the doctrine of Free Grace; more than to believe in the doctrine of Transubstantiation or Consubstantiation. With this enlargement of mind Christians are indeed in danger of losing sight of the fact that the True Church is the custodian of "the faith once delivered to the saints"—which acknowledges "one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father of all, and one Church of the living God."

The key to the situation is found in our Lord's words: "Not all that say unto Me, Lord Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven"; not all who call themselves Christians, with one denominational tag or another, are members of the one Church, the Church of the First-borns, mentioned in our text. As good, rich milk is sometimes called cream, so all the members of Christian denominations are sometimes called Christians—in a complimentary sense, because not unsympathetic with true Christian principles. Nevertheless, only those in all denominations who have conformed to the conditions required of Christian discipleship, the saintly ones, constitute the True Church—"The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven.

If we had a box of sawdust and scattered through it a paper of tacks until the latter were quite hidden from view, surrounded and covered in the sawdust, we know that we could take a magnet and, by passing it to and fro amongst the sawdust, the magnet would attract to itself every tack.

The tacks of this illustration represent a small class of humanity, zealous at heart for God and righteousness. The magnet represents the Gospel invitation which is now passed up and down, hither and thither throughout the civilized world, and to some extent, into the heathen world.

When we convince our hearers that the non-elect of this Age are not doomed to eternal torment, but will have a blessing of inferior degree to that of "the elect," the effect should be to right our minds and to cause us to think carefully and critically of the stringent terms of discipleship which the Bible lays down as conditions for membership in the one true Church.

Heretofore, with the false thought in mind that all except the Church would be eternally tormented, we have all shrunk from making any reasonable application of the Scriptural texts regarding saintship, discipleship, the becoming members of the Church of the First-born. This was partly because of fear for ourselves, lest we might not come up to the standard of saintship, but especially was it because of our realisation that the great mass of humanity in Christendom, as well as in heathen lands, came far short of the terms of discipleship laid down in God's Word. To-day the matter comes close home to us all, for we realise that many who were very near and dear to us have died outside of the nominal church, and far outside the special line of conditions which marked the Church of the First-born.

Amongst other texts cited by the Pastor as showing the exclusive and high standard of the elect Church, we note the following: "If any man will be My disciple, let him take up his cross and follow me; and where I am there shall My disciple be also"; "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne"; "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Luke ix. 23; Matthew vii. 14); "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race set before us" (Hebrews xii. 1); "If these things be in you and abound (the graces of that Holy Spirit) they will make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord . . . for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."—II Peter i. 8, 11.

St. Paul informs us that all the various features of the Jewish Law were types of still higher, still better things. In our text the expression, "Church of the First-born," has reference to a type instituted in the very beginning of Israel's history, when God brought that people, by the hand of Moses, the Mediator of the Law Covenant, out of the land of Egypt. To this type the Apostle refers in his expression, "The Church of the First-born." The entire nation of Israel, twelve tribes, God had separated from the other nations to represent those who would be a blessing to all other nations, under the Abrahamic Covenant. God's oath to Abraham was: "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Pharaoh, King of Egypt, was holding back the nation from going into Palestine, the Land of Promise. One chastisement after another failed to move him to submission until finally an intense calamity availed. The tenth plague was the smiting of the first-born of Egypt, while the Israelites were protected, thus showing Divine interest in and care over Israel. Their first-born were miraculously preserved — to represent in type the Church of the First-born. The true Church of Christ are not all that will be saved, in the Divine Program, but merely, as St. James says, "These are a kind of first-fruits unto God of His creatures" (James i, 18; Revelation xiv, 4). The after-fruits will come in due time, under the further development of the Divine Plan of the Ages—as the result of Messiah's reign of a thousand years.

Some time after their deliverance from Egypt, by Divine direction, the first-borns of all the families and tribes of Israel were exchanged, person by person, for the one tribe of Levi. The Levites thereafter represented the First-born of the Church—they alone represented the first-borns of Israel passed over in that night. Subsequently the tribe of Levi became the instructors of the nation in religious matters and from them was chosen one family for the Priesthood—Aaron and his sons.

The Scriptural picture is plain. In the antitype we are still in the night of passing over. Soon the Morning of the New Dispensation, under Messiah's reign, will begin, and all desirous of serving God and having His blessings will be delivered from the oppressing power of Satan and his hosts, typified by Pharaoh and his army. God intends to deliver the whole world from Satan's power. Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, during Messiah's reign, and is ultimately to be destroyed, and the people of God—all who desire to worship the Lord and to enter into the glorious Land of Promise—will be led forth. The first-born of these is the Church of this Gospel Age, which will be associated with Christ in His heavenly Kingdom—"the Church of the First-borns, whose names are written in heaven."

The entire tribe of Levi was specially consecrated to the Lord, and specially separate from the other tribes and was given no inheritance in the land. Thus the entire Church of Christ are begotten of the Holy Spirit to a superior, heavenly nature; they will have no inheritance with mankind in general in the earthly blessings—restitution to human perfection and participation in the blessings of the world-wide Eden to be. The promise under which they are now being developed is a heavenly, spiritual one. Their change will be a glorious one from earthly nature to a heavenly nature—they will all be like Christ. "They will neither marry nor be given in marriage, but will (in this) be like unto the angels; neither can they die any more."

But as from amongst those first-borns of Israel the family of Aaron was selected to be the priests, so from this Church of the First-borns God shows us that He is selecting a Royal Priesthood — a "little flock." Aaron and his sons were few in comparison to all the tribe of Levi, so only a saintly few expect to attain to glory, honor and immortality with Christ. These are referred to in the Scriptures as "members of the Body of Christ," even as the under-priests, Aaron's sons, in the type, were members of Aaron. Under another beautiful figure this Priestly few are styled the "Bride of Christ," and His joint-heirs in His Kingdom and work.

As these Levites, including the priests, were elected, or selected, for the purpose of being the instructors of Israel, so we perceive the Scriptures to teach that the Church of the First-born, when glorified, will be associated with Messiah in His great work of blessing and instructing all the people — all the families of the earth. The knowledge of the Lord at that time will be made known to all mankind; all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. All the Levite class will share in the work of blessing, which the Lord for so many centuries had declared through the mouth of all the holy Prophets.

The merit of the death of Jesus, the Just for the unjust, when applied on behalf of the whole world, will be efficacious for the cancelling of the sins of the world, and their full reconciliation to the Father. It will be Divine mercy, however, which will prevent mankind from being at once turned over directly to the Father, as soon as the satisfaction for their sins shall have been tendered and accepted at the close of this Age of dealing with the Church. Instead a New Law Covenant will be sealed and made operative with Israel, and under that New Covenant the whole world will be privileged to come into relationship with Messiah and the blessings of His Kingdom, which will represent to them Divine mercy, power and opportunity for returning to human perfection and an everlasting, earthly home — or, rejecting this grace, they will die the Second Death, from which there will be no recovery.

The effect of the New Covenant will be to bring the willing and obedient of all the people of earth fully back into harmony with God; and this, attained at the end of Messiah's reign of a thousand years, will prepare the way for the surrender of everything to the Heavenly Father, that He may be all in all, and that the world thereafter may be dealt with as perfect beings, along the lines of absolute justice and without any further need of a Mediator or other merciful provisions.

This is the pith of St. Paul's argument in our text and context. He points us down to the consummation of this Age—to the time when the Church of the First-born shall be completed on the plane of glory—to the time when Israel and the world of mankind will reach the place where God will introduce the New Covenant, typified in the Law Covenant. As the latter was introduced by the shaking of Sinai, in a general time of darkness, thus, the Apostle intimates, the New Covenant is about to be inaugurated, in the end of this Age, by a time of most awful trouble, of which that at Sinai was merely a symbolic picture or type. God's voice then shook the earth, but in the antitype He will shake everything that can be shaken. Things which are absolutely just, true and righteous will remain unshaken, and we, the Church of the First-born, the antitypical Priesthood, will receive a Kingdom which cannot be shaken.

In the past we failed to see who would be members of the true Church because our eyes of understanding were beclouded by error. Similarly, we have failed to see the grandeur, the honor and blessing which God has promised shall be the portion of the one true Church, the "little flock." We mixed heavenly things with earthly things. We confounded the blessing of Restitution to human perfection and an earthly Eden with the spiritual blessing. We appropriated to ourselves the promises made to the faithful of Israel, that they should "build houses and inhabit them, and plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them, and should long enjoy the work of their hands." In general we were confused.

Now as we come to see God's great Plan and the different features of the same, we are able to discriminate and to apply properly the Scriptures relating to each class. The Royal Priesthood are to be joint-heirs with the Redeemer, partakers of the divine nature and sharers of their Lord's glory, honor and immortality, (Romans ii, 3). The large company, symbolised by all the Levites, aside from the family of Aaron, are to be the honored servants of the Royal Priesthood; and the world of mankind are to have the glorious opportunities and blessings of earthly restitution.

Only the consecrated and spirit-begotten can have any share in the selection and salvation now in progress, and these must all be tested as to loyalty to God, to the Truth, and to the spirit of righteousness and the spirit of love. The "little flock," the priestly few who are to share the divine nature, will be composed of such as have demonstrated their loyalty to the Lord most satisfactorily. They will be copies of His dear Son, their Redeemer and Lord. This is the one, true Church. To membership in it is our "high calling." The spirit which every member of it must have is the Holy Spirit. The faith accepted by each member in it is "the faith once delivered unto the saints"; the baptism to which every member of it must voluntarily submit is the baptism into Christ's death. "If we be dead with Him we shall also live with Him."

Balzac's Impecuniosity.

Of Balzac it is stated that whenever he was hard at work he went to roost "like the fowls," as he himself put it, at 7 in the evening. He was called at 1 in the morning and wrote till 9, then took another hour and a half of sleep, then after a light meal went to work again until 4 in the afternoon. Then he took a bath, saw a few friends, took perhaps a short walk and immediately after dinner went off to bed.

"I shall be compelled," he wrote, "to lead this nigger's life for a few months without stopping in order not to be swamped by those terrible bills that are due." And yet he was always hard up for money.

The Last Train.

An Irishman got a job as a porter on one of the English railroads. Shortly after he began his duties a woman went up to him and said:

"I have just lost the train. How long shall I have to wait for the next?"

"Be jabers, you had better go and find the one you lost, else the company will be after yez," returned Pat.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

And the Passenger Was Interested in the Car Signs.

The passenger with the retrospective chin leaned forward in the south side elevated train and touched the open faced young man on the shoulder.

"Excuse me, sir," he said, "but do you ever read the signs stuck up in this car?"

"Sometimes. What the"—

"Wait a moment, please. Did you ever happen to read the one over there that says, 'Passengers will please keep their feet off the seats?'"

"I don't know that it's any of your business."

"Well, it is my business, just the same."

"What is it to you whether I ever did or not?"

"It's a thundering sight to me, young man!"

"Are you one of the officers of the road?"

"I'm more than one of the officers of the road, you sqtab!" said the passenger with the understudy of a chin, raising his voice. "I'm one of the advertisers. I pay good money to have a printed sheet of cardboard put up in these cars, and if I thought, by George, that the traveling public paid no more attention to it than you pay to that notice I'd take it down quicker than you could say 'I'm a thick headed chump!'"

The open faced youth turned a deeper shade of red, but he made no other response.

The "Bo'n Orateh."

It is narrated that Colonel Breckinridge, meeting Majah Bullo'd on the streets of Lexington one day, asked, "What is the meaning, suh, of the co'se befo' the co'thouse?"

To which the majah replied:

"General Buckneh, suh, is making a speech. General Buckneh, suh, is a bo'n orateh."

"What do you mean by a bo'n orateh?"

"If yo' or I, suh, were asked how much two and two make, we would reply 'foh.' When this is asked a bo'n orateh he replies, 'When in the co'se of human events it becomes necessary to take an integah of the second denomination and add it, suh, to an integah of the same denomination, the result, suh—and I have the science of mathematics to back me in my judgment—the result, suh, and I say it without feah of successful contradiction, suh—the result is fo'.' That's a bo'n orateh."—Lyceumite.

Good Reason.

A young Boston lawyer who is going to be married met another young lawyer who was married away last year on the street Thursday evening. They exchanged felicitations and inquiries.

"The only thing that bothers me," explained the about to be happy man, "is the subject of expense. Of course I'm not plunging into this thing with my eyes shut, but"—

"Now, look here," interrupted the experienced benedick. "I'll tell you an absolute fact. I don't spend half the money I did before I was married."

"You don't?" exclaimed the other. "How do you work that?"

"I don't have it to spend."—Boston Traveler.

Troublesome.

Arthur Collins tells a good story about a certain well known member of parliament, who is a personal friend of his.

"This M. P.," he says, "on one occasion, when instructing his chauffeur on the importance of driving carefully, remarked:

"'You need not keep quite such a watchful eye on grownup people, as they can look after themselves. But, whatever you do, mind you exercise the greatest care when you see children and babies in the road.' Whereupon the chauffeur replied:

"'Yes, them feeding bottles do cut up the tires dreadful!'"—Tit-Bits.

Intercolonial Railway
BADDECK BRANCH LINE.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alba-Baddeck Branch," will be received at this office until sixteen o'clock on Thursday, October 12th, 1911, for the construction of a branch line of railway, from a point on the Intercolonial Railway near Alba to the town of Baddeck, a distance of 22.7 miles.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into may be seen and full information obtained on and after the 15th inst. 1911, at the office of the Chief Engineer, of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Intercolonial Railway at Moncton, N.B.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $30,000.00, made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

1911 CROPS MOST VALUABLE IN HISTORY

General Rains Improve Conditions---Growers' Prices High

That the bugbear of hard times prophesied in connection with recent reports of general crop failures is thoroughly unfounded is proved by the annual crop reports issued by Lord & Thomas for 1911.

President O. E. Erwin, in discussing his sources of information which led to the above statement, mentioned that he had designed optimistic conclusions from data gathered for him by the agricultural press all over the country.

"Farm papers," said Mr. Erwin, "particularly those with restricted or localized circulation, are in the very best position to give net facts as regards production and conditions. Practically all the papers furnishing Lord & Thomas with crop information received their reports, not from a mere personal inspection of conditions generally, but from their subscribers as to the actual production of each township and many individual farms."

While it is true that, speaking nationally, there will be a shortage in grain products, on the other hand prices for these products show a much higher percentage over last year than the product does a loss.

Howard N. Whitney, managing editor of the Register & Farmer, of Des Moines, in giving details of Iowa conditions, states that the total value of the field crop in Iowa in 1911 is $305,331,065, as against $243,114,536 in 1910.

The corn crop this year in Iowa is less than last year, averaging about 280,000,000 bushels, as against 344,000,000 bushels last year. Notwithstanding the corn crop of 1910 exceeded this year's crop by more than 100,000,000 bushels, the price at this time is 55c per bushel, as against 37c to 38c last year. This fixes the value of the 1911 corn crop at $137,500,000, while that of last year was $127,422,340.

The oat crop this year amounted to 116,512,500 bushels, as compared to 168,-228,970 bushels in 1910. The acreage this year was 4,660,500 acres, and the average yield was 25 bushels. The value of this year's crop at present prices is $43,169,-625, as against $46,621,822 last year.

The winter wheat crop for 1911 amounted to 4,015,240 bushels, as against 4,125,828 bushels last year. The acreage was 289,-762 and the yield 20 bushels. The yield is now worth $3,212,192, as against $4,-546,206 in 1910.

Timothy seed this year commands an unusual price, many farmers having sold their crop for over $5.00 per bushel. The yield of timothy seed this year is 10,512,-500 bushels and is, therefore, worth $52,092,900. The official estimate of the value of last year's timothy crop is $1,000,000.

The fruit crop this year is enormous, being valued at $25,000,000. Last year's crop was a failure and was worth $3,000,-000.

H. E. Colby, editor of Kimball's Dairy Farmer, and James Atkinson, editor of the Iowa Homestead, send reports which correspond to the one submitted by Mr. Whitney.

NEBRASKA CONDITIONS EXCELLENT

The Nebraska Farmer, through its editor, Mr. L. S. Herron, states that the prices for farm products this year bid fair to be such as to give the farmers of this state, as a whole, more money to spend than they had last year. Corn is selling at the present time at from 54c to 70c in different parts of the state, due to the shortage of corn throughout the corn belt in general and the increased demand.

This state has over 8,000,000 acres planted, and recent general rains throughout the state will bring the corn crop to 175,-000,000 bushels, as against 178,923,926 bushels last year.

Potatoes, prairie hay and alfalfa average about the same as last year. Last year the farmers were getting for their wheat 85c to 90c. This year the prices exceed those of last year. Oats rule about 5c higher per bushel this year than last. Hay will probably run about the same as last year and will be in the neighborhood of $10 per ton as a farm price. Last year potatoes were selling at this time for $1.50 per bushel. Now they sell for from 62 to 63 per bushel. The potato growers this year are going to coin more money from the limited crop than from last year's crop.

On the whole, Nebraska is in better shape than in 1910, so far as crops are concerned, and the ability of farmers to buy goods.

J. T. Dunlap, general manager of the Nebraska Farm Journal, writes:

"Don't be alarmed about Nebraska. We are in the most prosperous condition I have ever known." His reports also show that the crops throughout Nebraska have had a good year and that all prices are high.

Present reports from Kansas are not as favourable as many of the other states. Winter wheat will approximate 51,365,000 bushels, or about 8,000,000 bushels under 1910. The quality of the crop is reported more than usually excellent and of extreme weight, the medium grade being limited mostly to those portions where yields were lightest.

The corn crop this year shows a decrease over last year of about 15 per cent. However, the prices show a greater valuation than heretofore. The horse and cattle industry in Kansas, according to reports, is showing a considerable increase, and 1911 has also been a remarkably good year for hog raising.

MICHIGAN FARMERS PROSPEROUS

The Michigan Farmer, in a report given by the editor, states that while the drought conditions affecting portions of the north central and middle western states have been severely felt over a considerable section of Michigan, crops and crop prospects have not been damaged to the extent which was predicted, and in the case of most crops the loss from this cause will be more than made up to the Michigan farmer through the better prices which he will receive for his products, owing to the fact that crop production is exceedingly varied in Michigan, while the yield of crops harvested and the prospects for growing crops are better than in many other states and in most instances at least better than the average for the country, as shown by the last government report.

The estimated average yield of wheat for the state was 18bushels per acre. With an acreage estimated to be 4 per cent. above the average for the past five years, this estimate would indicate an aggregate yield for the state in excess of 16,-000,000 bushels.

The hay crop this year in Michigan is estimated at 1 1-4 tons per acre, as compared with 1.3 in 1910

The condition of the bean crop, which is an important one in Michigan, was estimated at 81 per cent. of normal on Aug 1st, as compared with 85 per cent. one year ago. Conditions in many bean producing localities have materially improved since Aug. 1st, owing to favourable showers.

The Michigan Farmer also reports that apples this year suffered a drop. Notwithstanding this, however, and the fact that the winter varieties did not set as full a crop as the earlier varieties, the crop prospect is twice as good as it was one year ago. On Aug. 1st the official estimate placed the average condition of the crop at 61 per cent. of normal, as compared with 34 per cent. one year ago. The more favourable weather which has prevailed during August has materially bettered conditions, so that the estimate this year can be placed at twice that of last year.

The crop of peaches in the entire state will be about 75 per cent. of normal. The total production, however, will be higher than indicated by these figures, since the prospects are better in the fruit belt of western Michigan, in which territory the official figures for Aug. 1st, placed the condition at 94 per cent. of a full crop.

LIVE STOCK CONDITIONS FAVOURABLE

George N. Neff, of the Daily Drovers' Telegram at Kansas City, Missouri, reports that the prices of beef cattle, both corn fed and grass fed, are about the same as at this time last year. Feeding steers average 50c per cwt. lower than a year ago, while the finished cattle are selling at about the same prices as last year. With the abundant forage crops and fall pasturage, this present margin of profit will induce extensive cattle feeding activity in the corn belt.

The hog industry is in the best condition for a number of years. Although prices are lower than during the preceding period of shortage, the volume of business is much greater and more wealth is being distributed. Over 40 per cent. more hogs have been received in the Kansas City market this season than the same period of 1910, meaning an additional distribution for the year of about $15,000,000.

Sheep receipts at the Kansas City market show an increase of 27 per cent. over last year. The feeding and fattening of sheep has become an important branch of the live stock industry in this territory, and on the present conservative basis promises good profits this season.

Indiana this year will certainly have a bumper crop of corn. Last year's was called a bumper, but this year's crop averages 91 per cent. as against 84 per cent. in 1910. The report this year shows that Indiana has an acreage of 5,120,000 planted to corn. The wheat crop has also been immense and is rated at 86 per cent., as against 78 per cent. in 1910, and a ten-year average of 82 per cent. The report gotten out by the Department of Agriculture, July 19th, reported a fine showing for all crops in this state, including all fruits, especially apples and peaches.

The crop this year, although a little short of last year in some respects, is selling at prices that more than compensate for the falling off in quantity, and the producer will realize fully as much on his crops as last year.

According to John F. Cunningham, editor of the Ohio Farmer, the indications are that this year's wheat crop will turn out a little better than last year in both quantity and quality. The condition of corn was doubtful until the fine rains of Aug. 2nd and 3rd. These rains were general over this section and were the salvation of the corn crop, as some sections had suffered severely from the drought. The condition of oats improved during July and the yield was much better than anticipated.

The prices of all grains are very good this year, with the possible exception of wheat. Hay will be a short crop, but the prices are already very high, so that the smaller crop will realize as high a total price as in former years, without the added cost of transportation. The prices of potatoes are very high.

The crop conditions in Wisconsin are, as a whole, very good. The yield is somewhat spotted, below normal in some sections and a little light in others, owing to the prevalence of rain in certain parts of the state and lack of it elsewhere.

The Wisconsin Agriculturist has given the following report on conditions of crops on Aug. 1st: Corn, 91; potatoes, 50; peas, 90; beans, 87; apples, 89; cabbage, 85; tobacco, 90; sugar beets, 85; winter wheat, 89; rye, 93; spring wheat, 89; barley, 90; oats, 85; small fruits, 89.

Practically all the crops in Wisconsin have enjoyed a good season, and the prices are high.

Mr. P. V. Collips, of the Northwestern Agriculturist, of Minneapolis, writes: "Reports from this section show a total wheat production of 540,000,000 bushels, compared with the government's final yield of 695,000,000 bushels last year, which is equal to a ten-year's production and 50,000,000 more than the country requires for bread and seed. The aggregate yield of oats is 824,000,000 bushels, nearly 350,000,000 less than the government's final estimate last year, and only 25,000,000 less than a ten-year's average production.

"The yield of corn is estimated at 2,-200,000,000 bushels, which is just 10 per cent. under last year, and 100,000,000 bushels over a ten-year average.

"The hay crop is estimated at 45,000,000 tons, 17,000,000 tons under last year, and 2½ per cent. under the ten-year average. Barley, as much as last year; rye, 10 per cent. larger, and flax, problematic, depending upon the rainfall."

DAKOTA FARMERS CONTENTED

The North Dakota Farmer reports that the general crop conditions in North Dakota are a little below the average for the past eight or ten years, but in probably half the state the conditions are much above the average.

The hay crop is fully three times as great as that of last year, and there is every indication of an excellent flax crop. The wheat crop this year shows an increase of 43,695,000 bushels over last year, and the flax crop will yield from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels.

However, the returns from this great area in dollars and cents are far from discouraging, and the farmers are well satisfied.

South Dakota, except in a few spots, is in better shape this year than last, especially in view of the recent heavy rainfall all over the state. This last rain practically ensured a big crop of flax, of which there is a large acreage in South Dakota. Flax prices will inevitably be very high during the marketing of the 1911 crop because there is absolutely no surplus of flax carried over from last year.

An extraordinary gain in South Dakota's wheat acreage was revealed by the Federal Census of the acres sown to wheat in the spring of 1911. South Dakota had 8,000,000 acres, or about a million acres more than was credited to that state early in the season. This state ranks first with a wheat crop of 78,000,000 bushels.

South Dakota's crops this year are worth nearly three times as much as last year and more than ever before.

The Illinois farmers are indeed fortunate this year. On account of shortage in Iowa, Missouri and to the west and northwest, ensures high prices for the Illinois crops

Corn is worth twice as much as any other grain crop in the United States, and, considering the enormous amount of corn raised this year in Illinois, this state leads all the states by far in the production of this grain, hence it is the most important crop of this state. The yield this year averaged 50 bushels an acre.

Oats this year averaged a little less than last, but from the report given by the Illinois Farmer the Illinois crop this year averaged 68 per cent., as compared with an average of 79 per cent. for the past ten years. The wheat crop this year has also been a good one

After noting the losses on account of weather conditions, Illinois is pretty well off after all, and the farmers are satisfied that this has been a prosperous year.

According to the California Cultivator, California this year has had the biggest crop of oranges they have ever raised and will probably exceed the 40,000-car mark, from which the returns have been most gratifying. The shipments up to Aug. 2nd were 24,479 cars.

They also report that the lemons have had a good showing and the returns have been fine. The shipments up to Aug. 2nd were 5,819 carloads, which is nearly double the shipment of last year.

The yield of apricots this year, although only two-thirds of a normal crop, is netting 24 canneries prices. The canneries have been getting as high as $60 and $65 per green ton, while former years the price has not exceeded $30.

Altogether California has enjoyed a good yield from all her crops, and the returns have been good.

COLORADO HARVEST LARGE

According to Mr. L. M. Wilcox, of the Field and Farm, of Denver, everything in Colorado this year presents the picture of prosperity and the farmers are reaping one of the largest harvests ever turned off in this wondrous state, which has four million acres under irrigation and one and one-half times as many more devoted to dry-farming.

The wheat had a total yield of 24,000,000 bushels at 65c per bushel. The winter wheat was particularly bountiful, and as much as 70 bushels the acre was harvested from some of the dry farms.

The oat crop was 90 per cent. of a normal yield and valued at $6,000,000 for the state. Prices are exceptionally high this year because of the scarcity elsewhere. Some yields have been as high as 136 bushels to the acre. Colorado has had their biggest barley yield this year, and the crop has returned $2,000,000. The potato crop will be a little larger than most of the states, and the total shipments will be fully 25,000 carloads, at prices for the late crop around $1 a hundred pounds, but this figure will probably increase to $2 before the season is over.

Colorado this year has a total of 250,000 acres in sugar beets. The yield will be 15 tons to the acre, with a total valuation of $6,000,000. The fruit crop has been most excellent and will this season reach a total value close to $10,000,000. The apple crop alone will be 4,000,000 boxes, or the equal of so many bushels, and the price will be at least $1 a box, while some of the fancy grades bring $3 a box.

"Peaches and pears," says Mr. Wilcox, "are of the most superior quality and are bringing top prices. It was the biggest cherry year we have ever had, and the shipments to outside places amounted to 18 carloads. Our cantaloupe crop is 25 per cent. greater than that of last year and prices are better than usual."

The NorthWest Pacific Farmer writes us that the farmers of the Pacific slope were never in as prosperous condition as they are to-day. While taken as a whole, there is a bumper crop and prices—they can hardly be compared with the demand.

The wheat crop this year in Oregon was a very good one, averaging about 15% per cent. of last year. Oats also had a fine year, and the prices are high. Hops had an average yield, but the price is higher than it has been for years. Last year they sold for around 12c per pound and now they are up to 45c and still climbing. The biggest crop of sugar beets ever raised in Oregon was during the 1911 season.

While the fruits average about 60 per cent. of last year's crop, the prices average 60 per cent. higher, so that the increase in price goes to make up for the slight shortage in crop.

The Western Farmer of Spokane tells us that the crop of wheat this year in Washington will exceed any previous yield by several million bushels. Over 3,000,000 acres of wheat will be harvested this year. A conservative estimate places the total yield of wheat at 75,000,000 bushels. The hay crop indicated an increase of 5 per cent. to 10 per cent. over last year. The barley crop is estimated at 12,000,000 bushels, as against 11,011,000 bushels in 1910. The rye yield is estimated at 600,000 bushels, as against 589,000 bushels in 1910. The corn crop is estimated at 2,000,000 bushels produced on 70,000 acres.

HIGH PRICES OFFSET SHORTAGE

The Southern Fruit Grower reports that the droughts this summer have affected every crop in the south, and the strawberry crop, which brings millions of dollars to the farmers of the south, was cut down about 25 per cent., but even with a 75 per cent. crop the prices received more than compensate the farmers for the shortage of berries.

The cotton crop in Tennessee has been an excellent one this year, both in quantity and quality.

The Fruit Grower also states that with money already in hand for a good tomato, melon and berry crop, and the prospects in sight for a fine crop of corn and cotton, the south has never before presented a more attractive appearance for manufacturers or others who are seeking a field for business.

According to the Home and Farm, of Louisville, the widespread rains during the month of August improved the conditions for cotton, and the conservative estimates are for a yield of 12 to 13½ million bales. Although this is less than last year's crop, the returns in dollars will be as great, if not more, owing to the higher prices of cotton this year.

Tobacco, which is one of the leading crops of Kentucky, showed a slight falling off, due to unfavourable weather conditions. On account of the fact that Kentucky produces such a large percentage of the tobacco crop, the decreased acreage in yield will cause an increased price. The wheat crop was fully up to the average and the corn crop was equally as good.

Texas this year, according to F. P. Holland, of the Farm and Ranch, of Dallas, will have a bumper cotton crop, and the figures at this writing have been estimated at 5,000,000 bales. The tomato crop for a single county brought more than $500,-000, and the rest of the counties in the state have equally as good a crop of tomatoes.

The fruit and truck crop was short, but prices more than made up for whatever was lacking in yield.

The truck and fruit growers are particularly pleased at the good prices received for what they raised, and the people in the sections irrigated have found satisfaction and profit because of the good yield and magnificent prices.

The Southern Ruralist, of Atlanta, states in its crop report of conditions that this was one of the biggest cotton years the south has ever experienced. Last year the cotton crop brought the farmers of the south over a billion dollars, and the present crop shows an increase in acreage of about 5 per cent., so that this year the returns will be even greater than last.

The corn crop is unusually good, but the hay crop will be short on account of lack of rain. The corn crop averages 85 per cent. this year, as against 86 per cent. in 1910. The tobacco acreage planted, 1,200,-average 89 per cent. in 1911, as against 88 per cent. in 1910

Conditions in Virginia are in a normal condition. The tobacco crop this year averages about 75 per cent. of normal, and the corn crop was cut off about 10 per cent., according to J. F. Jackson, of the Southern Planter.

Apple growing in the state of Virginia is receiving much attention, and thousands of acres are being planted. However, on account of weather conditions the apple crop this year dropped from 25 to 40 per cent.

According to a report sent out by the Commissioner of Agriculture, covering the state of Vermont, although the weather conditions have not been very favourable and crops have had a hard struggle nevertheless the returns in this state have been better than in many other sections of the country.

Hay will reach about 60 per cent. of a normal crop. The quality is good and the prices high. Oats will reach about 90 per cent. The corn crop is very good.

According to the Oklahoma Farm Journal, as far as the farmer of Oklahoma is concerned he will be fully as well or better off than he was last year, for there has been an immense amount of forage crops put out and it is generally known that an acre of kaffir or milo has more money value than an acre of field corn.

The reports from this state show an increase in wheat and oats—wheat about 50 per cent. of a crop and oats about the same. Field corn will be about 70 per cent. of an average crop.

The Orange Judd Company states in its report on crop conditions throughout its territory that New York this year suffered a shortage of 2,000,000 bushels of wheat, and the corn dropped off 7,000,000 bushels, although the production ran up to a total of 40,610,000 bushels.

Pennsylvania produced only 7,000,000 bushels of wheat less than last year, and in corn dropped from 34 bushels the yield in 1910 to 30 bushels this year to the acre, which brings the total production from 40,392,000 down to 29,850,000.

The states of Tennessee and Kentucky had a yield this year almost equal to that of 1910.

Charles W. Burkett, Editor of the American Agriculturist, states that the crop situation is unfolding splendidly from the standpoint of the farm. The returns to each farm family is going to be even better than last year on the average. Farmers are closing up their year's work really better financially than they have for a good many years in the past

UNCLE SAM'S SILENT SPIES—ON THE SMUGGLERS' TRAIL

UNSEEN Operations of the Special Agents of the Treasury Department, by Which a Traveller Who Buys an Article in Any Part of the Globe May Be Apprehended on Failing to Declare It in New York.

JOHN E. WILKIE CHIEF OF UNITED STATES SECRET SERVICE

FORBIDDEN by an executive order to speak about their work, their stations or their remuneration, the special agents of the Treasury Department are daily performing their secret tasks at home and abroad, to the confusion of those who attempt to defraud the government of its tariff dues on goods from beyond the seas.

It is quite obvious that the secret work of the division, together with information relating to its inner workings, must be withheld from the public in order to permit its agents to exercise their peculiar abilities to the fullest extent. It follows, therefore, as a matter of course, that little or nothing relating to the actual work and personnel of this remarkable organization has ever been made public. From time to time brief articles anent the special agent and his romantic duties have appeared in various periodicals, but with the possible exception of the $100,000 award to Richard Parr, special agent, for his discovery of the secret spring used by employes of the Sugar Trust, newspaper accounts of the intimate doings of the special agents have been scant.

Although the division is an auxiliary to the customs service, working along similar lines to a common end, the special agents are entirely independent of the staffs of the collectors of customs at the different ports. They recognise but two superiors—Chief John E. Wilkie and the Secretary of the Treasury—and might be said to bear the same relation to a collector of customs that the rudder of a steamship bears to its propeller, in that each is dependent upon the other.

Since President Taft appointed John E. Wilkie as Chief of the Division of Special Agents, on May 24 of the present year, Wilkie has continued in charge of the Division of Secret Service. Thus these two important divisions of the Treasury Department have been combined under a single head—each one, however, preserving its identity as an entirely separate organization.

The territory of the United States is divided up into a number of districts, each one under the supervision of an officer entitled Special Agent in Charge. The district chief is usually selected from the highest salaried grade of the force, and as these men are in receipt of $12 per diem, and are paid for every day in the calendar year, their individual yearly salaries amount to the snug little sum of $4,380. They are also entitled to travelling expenses not to exceed $5 daily, and in the event that they should be instrumental in the seizure of smuggled goods they are entitled to a share of the proceeds ranging from five to fifty per cent, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Men of the second grade receive $10 per diem, while third grade agents worry along at the entrance salary of $8 a day until a successful coup or important seizure results in their promotion.

A customs district and a special agent's district differ in that what is known as the customs district of New York may consist of New York, Jersey City and Hoboken, while the New York district of special agents may embrace the entire States of New York and New Jersey. It takes thirty agents to cover the district of New York under Special Agent in Charge Cummings, while, on the other hand, one special agent covers the district of Texas, which takes in the Gulf ports of that State and extends along the Rio Grande to within a short distance of El Paso.

Confidential Agents Abroad.

Europe is divided into five districts, and the district chiefs are entitled Confidential Agents. The district of Paris takes in nearly the whole of France, and from his desk at the French capital Confidential Agent Howland knows what is "doing" in the silk mills of Lyons fully as well as he knows who purchases a necklace of matched pearls or a rare bronze in some Avenue de l'Opéra establishment near by.

Confidential Agent Chance, at London, keeps his finger upon the pulse of English manufactures and exports. He knows to a fraction of a farthing what it costs to produce a certain woollen. He knows of labor conditions in Manchester. He keeps in touch with the cutlery trade of Birmingham. What he does not know he finds out quickly and uses the cable. Should a shipment of merchandise consigned to New York and subject to an ad valorem duty be declared at a lower value than Mr. Chance approves either one of two things may happen. A whisper to the United States Consul and that official withholds his signature and seal from the consular invoice. Or a coded cable message to New York will stir up Mr. Loeb's board of appraisers, to the ultimate discomfiture of the scheming consignee.

Confidential Agent Kaufman, with headquarters at St. Gall, knows a thing or two about lace and embroidered textiles. He knows the rate paid by the hundred stitches by the Swiss manufacturers, and he knows how many stitches make a hundred. He receives one of the highest salaries ever paid a confidential agent and earns it over and over again. When he is not extremely busy in the lace establishments at St. Gall he slips across Switzerland to Geneva. Should an absent minded American tourist purchase a split second minute repeating chronograph in Geneva and forget to declare the same just before landing in New York, it is more than likely that the tourist would subsequently experience an unpleasant half hour, and that some jeweller's apprentice or Geneva hotel runner would in due time be the richer by a few francs.

At Berlin Confidential Agent Achenbach holds forth. Chemicals, colors and textile products from Saxony take up much of his time, when he is not otherwise occupied with porcelain and glass from Bavaria. His intimate knowledge of the German cutlery industry recently bore fruit in New York in the shape of certain seizures for undervaluation, and should the importers of German hardware hold an unpopularity contest at any time in the near future Mr. Achenbach would easily distance all other contestants. He enjoys a good salary and also the complete confidence of his superiors.

Confidential Agent Gottschalke is in charge of the district of Cologne. The diamond cutting cities of Antwerp and Amsterdam are situated within this district, and although the confidential agent is furnished with complete reports of the daily sales of precious stones he is very seldom called upon to take action. Diamond smuggling as a commercial proposition is a thing of the past. In the days when polished stones were subject to a duty of twenty-five per cent ad valorem it paid to smuggle them. Now that the duty is but ten per cent, scarcely any American dealer in precious stones is willing to risk the seizure of a lot of valuable diamonds for the sake of evading the comparatively small amount of duty.

True, from time to time sporadic attempts are made to smuggle diamonds into the United States. A retail jeweller abroad on his first trip, or a wealthy tourist with a desire to get something cheap might make an investment at Amsterdam. The chances would be about one hundred to one that Gottschalke would be furnished with a report inside of the space of four hours. The report would embody the name of the purchaser or his alias, his or her personal description, a description of accompanying person or persons, the local hotel address, the number of karats purchased, together with a minute description of the stones and the amount paid.

With this information in his possession the confidential agent would take steps to see that Uncle Sam got his share. The denouement might happen upon the International Bridge at Niagara Falls; it might occur some forty miles south of Montreal, or it might be upon a Jersey City steamship pier—the outcome would most likely be the same.

In addition to these five European confidential agents there are usually two other men in the field, who enjoy the complete confidence of the Secretary of the Treasury. These men hold roving commissions, as it were. They are constantly on the move, handling special matters. One day may find them conferring with the United States Consul at Turin. A day or two later may find one of them in an Austrian pottery, while the other may be on his way to London in response to a cablegram.

"We Seized a Large Number of Bales, Which Had Been Invoiced at a Low Rate of Duty as 'Fillers and Binders,' and Found Them to Contain a Select Quality of Wrappers."

These roving confidential agents are constantly changed. The Secretary of the Treasury may suddenly decide to send a new man abroad, a man unknown to the European agents. This man may remain abroad a year. He may reside in Cologne for six months or more without going near the resident confidential agent, or, for that matter, without making his presence known at the United States Consulate. He has his instructions and he carries them out. He speaks the language of the country like a native.

He knows who visits the resident confidential agent. He knows who his visitors are. He knows where he lunches and dines and with whom. He makes his reports through the mails, but, strange to say, his envelopes are never addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury. The confidential reports are mailed under cover to a "blind" address, and are subsequently forwarded to Washington from Baltimore, Philadelphia or some other city, as the case may be.

Not that the Secretary of the Treasury distrusts the resident confidential agent—not at all. He simply wishes to be kept thoroughly posted. The very best of men go wrong at times, and the Secretary wants to be sure. His European agents are subjected to almost every form of temptation under the sun. They are thousands of miles away from their homes. It takes men of fibre and calibre to hold out against this constant strain, and to the credit of the division of special agents let it be said that the confidence of the Secretary of the Treasury has seldom been misplaced.

There is another strain, however—the fear of not being able to make good. Matters were not running smoothly with Confidential Agent Bainbridge when he committed suicide in Paris a few years ago. His record and accounts were straight, though, and had he stayed his hand for a few days all would have been well with him.

Methods of the Special Agents.

"The public imagines that we're a lot of Hawkshaws that sneak around the country in false whiskers," declared a special agent. "Such is not the case. Nearly all of our work is straightforward and of the hardest kind. It has been reduced to a business proposition. We all get good salaries and we earn every penny of it over and over again. Parr drew a good salary and received a bonus of $100,000 for his work in connection with the sugar frauds. On the other hand, the government received millions of dollars. I don't know of a man in the service who doesn't save the government enough money inside of one year to pay his salary for ten years.

"Here's a case in point. Not very long ago one of our men discovered that a slight error had been made by the government in fixing the American equivalent in value of a Persian gold coin called a 'toman.' The error involved the duties on millions of dollars' worth of expensive rugs, carpets and other Persian exports and was in favor of the importers. The correct value was ascertained and the books were overhauled for a year back. It resulted in a sum of money being turned into the national treasury—enough to pay this man's salary for a lifetime, in fact.

"There may be something romantic about the European end of the game. Our men over there have constant dealings with spies, waiters, couriers and clerks of all kinds, who have stories to tell and want to become informers. But there's nothing romantic about the New York part of it. Our duties require us to keep in constant touch with trade conditions. If Panama hats are being improperly invoiced and classified, we're supposed to know about it. If kid glove values take a jump abroad we are advised and act accordingly.

"Many of our cases we dig up ourselves, but we couldn't get along without the informers. They are of all sorts and conditions of men and women, actuated by a thousand different motives. Trade rivalry might head the list of motives. Revenge, jealousy, a desire for an informer's fee and a love of fun all enter into the proposition. The chap who wrote us an anonymous letter some time ago and caused us to slice up a consignment of Dutch cheese in a search for a fictitious bag of diamonds had his fun. We're often compelled to chase imaginary clews all over the country by reason of anonymous letters of warning, but we can't afford to let those little things annoy us, nor can we ignore the letters sent in.

"Smugglers trouble us but little, as smuggling in a big way is a thing of the past. Diamonds are the least of our troubles, more and more of the Maiden lane people are importing their gems in the rough, free of duty, and the cutting and polishing done right here in New York. Max Lasar, the greatest diamond smuggler in the history of our customs service, at one time worth at least $200,000, would have a hard time to make a living at it nowadays. In the first place, the Maiden lane dealers watch each other so closely that no dealer with his senses about him would consider such a proposition. Secondly, Max wouldn't take a chance if he were given one. He's lost his nerve.

"It's the occasional smuggler that bothers us once in a while. We've made it so hot for the professional smuggler that we've practically driven him out of the business. The opium smuggling combine represents about the last organized effort to smuggle contraband goods into the country. We put a spike into them the other day when we burned up $50,000 worth of the drug and had a Chinaman sentenced to four years at hard labor. He was also fined $20,000, but he can swear that off. The next time an opium agent asks an American railroad employe or express company's messenger to run a can of 'hop' from Montreal to New York the latter will be quite apt to think twice before risking his liberty for a few dollars.

"An unpleasant part of our work is the necessity of watching men in the customs service. The underweighers in the sugar, cheese and fig frauds have had their fun, and now they've got to pay the fiddler. Fortunately for the country, the customs service at large is a fine, honest body of men. It's a mighty fine apple that hasn't got a speck on it, and it's the same way with the service.

The Dishonest Examiner.

"That customs examiner in a Chicago silk case made a good thing out of it for years until he was apprehended. The Chicago firm made a specialty of pongee silks. For a number of years they sold silk at a lower rate than they could import it from abroad. It was the same way with all the other big silk merchants in the country. The firm virtually cornered the market. It was too good to last.

"In due time the case came to us. We would have had it before had it been an instance of simple undervaluation. In that respect all was regular. We finally ran the matter down and traced it to a dishonest examiner. The buyer had been paying him to alter the weights on the invoices. Bales of silk weighing 500 pounds were invoiced at fifty-eight pounds; 400 pound bales were invoiced at forty pounds, and so on. One of the invoices had been altered by the examiner in such a manner that the firm had paid but $40 duty on a bale which should have paid $1,200 at least. It was no wonder that the concern could sell silks cheaper than any other American firm.

"A few years ago we received an anonymous telephonic warning to the effect that a certain firm of Havana leaf tobacco dealers in this city was selling Havana wrappers 'under the market.' We found that this firm had been importing its tobacco through the port of Tampa and thence by rail to New York. The usual and cheaper course is by direct steamers from Havana to New York. We seized a large number of bales, which had been invoiced at a low rate of duty as 'fillers and binders,' and found them to contain a select quality of wrappers, subject to a much higher rate of duty. There was nothing dishonest about the transaction in so far as the customs officials at Tampa were concerned. The introduction of the merchandise under a false classification had been made possible by a rather lax system of inspection at Tampa, which was subsequently remedied. The New York firm knew better than to try the game on at this port of entry.

"What are we before we become special agents? Everything, almost. Bank clerks, bookkeepers, clerks, furriers, weavers and chemists. The division has representatives who speak almost all of the living languages, as well as many of the dead ones. Some of our experts and confidential agents are naturalized citizens, but most of us are native Americans. The division is now under the civil service, and any man who enters it will be promoted as rapidly as he deserves.

"To a great extent we receive our various assignments according to our natural bent. If a special agent was formerly an expert bookkeeper, we'd quite naturally call upon him when it became necessary to go through the books of some importing house suspected of undervaluation methods or fake discount schemes. If the agent happens to be a former cow puncher from down Texas way, and great numbers of cattle were being driven across the Mexican border in an attempt to evade the payment of duty, the former cowboy would be very likely to find himself down in Laredo or thereabouts, with orders to take to the field and get to the bottom of the rascality.

"There are no great sums of money accumulated nowadays by our boys, as most of our work is preventive. We have no share in the spoils unless we make a seizure after goods have been smuggled. Parr's case is the exception which proves the rule. The good old days when the Moiety act was in force have long since passed. Mr. Jayne, formerly special agent, received $328,000 from the government for his share under the terms of the old act during a few years of service. He professed to have paid out of this sum nearly $200,000 to informers, who told him where and when to look for smuggled goods. It's no longer possible.

"It's very interesting work, though. Once in a while we get abroad. We find the Consuls very nice to us—always willing and ready to help us or entertain us. We're a self-supporting division. We're not a burden on the taxpayers, like some other——

"Hold on!" he interrupted himself; "I guess I've been talking too much, and it's strictly against orders."

William Loeb, Jr., the Collector of Customs, who has been largely instrumental in saving the government some $5,780,000 during the twenty-nine months of his stewardship, knows the value of the secret division, for during a recent hearing before the House Committee on Ways and Means he spoke substantially as follows:—

"I heartily approve giving these men (the special agents) larger salaries. If I have been successful in breaking up smuggling and undervaluation frauds at the port of New York and in securing the refund of substantial sums of money to the government at various times I wish it to be understood that the division of special agents has in no small measure been responsible for it. They are a loyal, valuable body of men, and in my opinion should be given more pay."

Verily, the Division of Special Agents of the Treasury Department is an important organization of men, far from being a burden upon the taxpayers of the nation.

Enjoyable Social At Bridgenorth

Special to The Examiner:

BRIDGENORTH, OCT. 2. — The young people held a dance in the C. O. F. Hall on Tuesday night last.

Chemong Park cottagers have all left for their respective homes.

Mr. G. Jopling & Son, James, are putting in a gang of men on Gull Lake, having made a contract with the Cavendish Lumber Co. to take out the timber up there.

On Thursday night the Sunday School held a social in the Methodist Church, which proved quite a success. It was arranged by the young men and by some of the older ones, too.

The Rev. Mr. Ireland occupied the chair. Mr. Charles Thornto and Miss Calander of Peterborough, sang two solos, which were much appreciated. The Telford Bros. and other local talent, with readings from R. Jobe, W. Jopling, T. McKee and Wesley Nichols, made up quite an entertainment. The Rev. Mr. Bonner gave an address, and Rev. Mr. Brown from St. James' church, Peterborough, gave a very fine discourse. Then came the refreshments.

The receipts came to about $25. All present agreed that they had had a good social and profitable time.

GRAY HAIR MAKES YOU LOOK OLD

A Simple Remedy Brings Back the Natural Color—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

How often one hears the expression, "She is gray and beginning to look old." It is true that gray hair usually denotes age and is always associated with age. You never hear one referred to as having gray hair and looking young.

The hair is generally the index of age. If your hair is gray, you can't blame your friends for referring to you as looking old. You can't retain a youthful appearance if you allow your hair to grow gray. Many persons of middle age jeopardize their future simply by allowing the gray hair to become manifest. If your hair has become faded or gray, try Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation which a chemist by the name of Wyeth devised a few years ago. It is simple, inexpensive and practical, and will banish the gray hairs in a few days. It is also guaranteed to remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

It is a pleasant dressing for the hair, and after using it a few days itching and dryness of the scalp entirely disappear.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Has the "Black Knight" come to your home?

Let him show you the quick and easy way to shine the stoves.

It's a paste—so there is no watery mixture to be prepared.

Just a few rubs with cloth or brush brings a mirror-like shine that "you can see your face in". And the shine lasts!

Most dealers handle and recommend "Black Knight" Stove Polish. If your dealer cannot supply it, send 10c. for a big can—sent postpaid.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—There was some business worked in No. 2 northern Manitoba spring wheat for nearby shipment to London, but the prices paid for future shipment were all out of line. The foreign demand for oats was good and further sales of several loads were made for October shipment to London. A good business continues to be done in spring wheat flour for export account, including sales of third grades to Liverpool at 27s 3d, and 90 per cent. winter wheat patents to Glasgow at 24s 6d. Millfeed is scarce and firm. Cheese and butter are strange and prices steadily advancing. Eggs firm and fairly active. Provisions steady.

Dressed hogs, abattoir, $9.75 to $10 per cwt. Beef, Plate, half barrels, 100 lbs., $7.50; barrels, 200 lbs., $14.50; tierces, 392 lbs., $21.50. Lard, compound tierces, 375 lbs., 9½c; boxes, 20 lbs. net (parchment lined), 9¾c; tubs, 50 lbs. net, grained, two handles, 9½c; pails, wood, 20 lbs. net, 9¾c; tin pails, 20 lbs., gross, 9½c. Pork, heavy Canada short cut mess, barrels, 35 to 45 pieces, $23.00; half barrels, $13; Canada short cut and back pork, 45 to 55 pieces, barrels, $23; Canada clear pork, barrels, 30 to 35 pieces, $20.50; bean pork, small pieces, but fat, barrels, $16.50. Oats, Canadian western, No. 2, 47c to 47½c, car lots, ex store; extra No. 1 feed, 46½c to 47½c; No. 3 C.W., 46c to 46½c; No. 2 local white, 45½c to 46c; No. 3 local white, 45c to 45½c; No. 4 local white, 44½c to 45c. Flour —Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.40; seconds, $4.90; winter wheat patents, $4.75 to $5; strong bakers', $4.70; straight rollers, $4.25 to $4.40; in bags, $1.90 to $2. Rolled oats, per barrel, $5.25; bag of 90 lbs., $2.50. Corn, American No. 3 yellow, 70c to 70½c. Millfeed—Bran, Ontario, $23 to $24; Manitoba, $23; middlings, Ontario, $27 to $28; shorts, Manitoba, $25; moullie, $26 to $32. Eggs—Selected, 28c to 27c; No. 1 stock, 21½c to 22c. Cheese—Westerns, 14½c to 14¾c; easterns, 14¼c to 14½c. Butter—Choicest, 25½c to 26c.

New York Dairy Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Butter—Firm—Receipts, 4,825; creamery, 27c to 29c; same held, 28½c to 29c; state dairy, 26c to 27c; process, 19c to 23½c; factory, current make, 19½c to 20½c.

Cheese—Firm; receipts, 1,143; state, whole milk, 14½c to 14¾c; fancy grades, 12c to 14; state, whole milk, daisies, best, 15c to 15¼c.

Eggs—Firm; receipts, 2,807; fresh gathered, 16c to 23c; fresh gathered, dirties, 12c to 17c; refrigerator, 18c to 21c; dirties, 13c to 16c; state, Pennsylvania and nearby, henery, 27c to 35c; gathered, 21c to 25c; western gathered, 23c to 28c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 176 carloads, consisting of 2915 cattle, 1313 hogs, 1204 sheep and lambs, 65 calves and 54 horses.

Exporters.

D. Degen bought for S. & S. Company 132 steers for London, 1230 lbs. each, at $6.85; 78 for Liverpool, 1265 lbs. each, at $6.65.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots and loads sold at $5.90 to $6.20; good loads, $5.60 to $5.85; medium, $5.30 to $5.55; common, $4.50 to $5.25; cows, $2 to $5; bulls, $2.50 to $4.50.

Millers and Springers.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were moderate and prices firm at $4 to $8.25, and one or two of extra quality sold at $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The sheep and lamb trade was fairly active. Lambs sold at $5.25 to $5.65; average price of lambs, $5.45 per cwt.; sheep, $3 to $4; average price, $3.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston bought for Gunns and paid $6.35 per cwt., fed and watered at the market.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 30, were 3050 cattle, 2040 sheep and lambs, 2875 hogs, and 535 calves. The supply on the market for sale consisted of 600 cattle, 1575 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 400 calves.

There were only four loads of Manitoba domestic cattle on the market, some of which sold at $6.35 per cwt., for mixed steers and heifers, which averaged about 1075 pounds per head. Choice Ontario steers, weighing 1200 pounds each, sold at 6¼c; good, at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 5c to 5¼c, and common, at 4½c to 4¾c per lb., and packers paid three cents per lb. for bulls for canning.

There continues to be an easy feeling in the market for hogs and prices since this day week show a further decline of 5c to 10c per cwt., on account of the more liberal supplies coming forward. The demand was fairly good and sales of selected lots were made at $6.35 to $7 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and heavy hogs and sows sold for $1 per cwt. less than the above figures.

A good trade was done in sheep and lambs, and as the offerings were not in excess of the requirements a firm feeling prevailed in the market and prices showed no change. Lambs sold at 5½c to 6c, and sheep, at 3½c to 4c per lb. The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $10, according to size and quality.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Hogs—Receipts, 25,000; market, steady; mixed and butchers, $6.05 to $6.80; good heavy, $5.80 to $6.10; rough heavy, $5.80 to $6; light, $6.10 to $6.80; pigs, $4 to $4.75.

Cattle—Receipts, 12,000 head; market, weak. Beeves, $4.70 to $8.10; cows and heifers, $2 to $6.15; stockers and feeders, $3.40 to $5.60; Texans, $4.25 to $6; calves, $6.75 to $9.25.

Sheep—Receipts, 25,000 head; market, weak; native, $2.25 to $3.90; westerns, $2.75 to $4; lambs, $4 to $5.90; western, $4.25 to $6.

Record in Piano Playing.

The Paris newspapers record a feat of endurance on the part of one Thorpe, described as a native of Bohemia, who played the piano for thirty hours and fifteen minutes without stopping. It seems that there is a record even in this kind of folly and that it was formerly held by Mr. Waterbury, whose performance extended over twenty-eight and one-half hours. The report states that Thorpe was fed and given stimulants during the entertainment. But nothing is said about the audience, as to whether they brought their beds or took their enjoyment in parts.

Great River Under Texas.

Geologists are claiming that the greatest underground river in the world flows from the Rocky mountains underneath New Mexico and Texas, emptying itself in the gulf of Mexico. This river is thought to be in places several miles wide, and it is believed that it feeds rivers that flow upon the surface. The artesian well belt of Texas is pointed to as the uplifting of the water from this river, often from 900 feet below.—Christian Herald.

Touching Him.

Visitor—I saw your husband in the crowd in town today. In fact, he was so close that I could have touched him. Hostess—That's strange. At home he is so close that nobody can touch him!

STRIKE OF BAKERS.

Dublin, Oct. 3.—The strike of the bakers here is causing starvation. The situation is aggravated by the closing of the small branch bakery shops in the poverty-stricken areas.

On Saturday afternoon a small army of men and women marched up and down the streets in front of some bakers' shops shouting, "We want bread, and we'll have it!" Later a bread van was attacked and broken, its contents scattered in the street and picked up by hungry women, who carried the bread off.

A hospital surgeon said in an interview:

"I am told by women visitors that children they visit are sometimes so ravenous that when food is brought to them they tear the loaf to pieces before the visitors' eyes. In many houses, I am assured, there is hardly a stick of furniture or any bedclothing. Everything has been sold with the object of sustaining life during this terrible time of strikes."

The Master of the Rotunda Hospital said:

"To-morrow we shall have no bread for either the patients or the staff."

The Maternity Hospital, after a bad day without supplies, got its own ovens to work and baked bread.

At the Mercers' Hospital, too, bread was baked by the nurses and sisters. The superintendent of Butler's Hospital said that on Sunday the bread supply at the hospital was completely cut off.

Hopes to Unseat Verville.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—The announcement was made yesterday by Mr. E. W. Villeneuve, the defeated candidate in Maisonneuve, that the recount which is to be made was only the preliminary to a contestation, by means of which he hopes to unseat Mr. Verville. He also charges that the ballot boxes have been left open since last Tuesday; that the returning officers have been opening envelopes containing the register of voters, and that they have been filling in omissions made before voting.

Returning Officer Gingras declared yesterday that these charges were groundless; not one envelope containing the ballots had been opened and proper care had been taken of the boxes ever since the elections.

Twas Case of Suicide.

Hamilton, Oct. 3.—What at first appeared to be another mysterious murder, but which investigation proved to be a clear case of suicide, was the drowning in Hamilton Bay Sunday night of Thomas Graham, a cab driver, 31 years of age, who lived with his widowed mother at 63 Napier street.

Blood on Graham's coat and a large lump on the back of his head suggested foul play, but after tracing the man's movement Sunday night, the police and Coroner Dickson reached the conclusion that the wound on the head was the result of Graham's own actions and that he had deliberately committed suicide. No inquest will be held in the matter.

Boasted of Burglary.

Prince Rupert, B.C., Oct. 3.—A man using the names of Alexander Johnson and William Wheeler was arrested here yesterday as a suspect in the New Westminster bank robbery. He had attracted attention from the police by displaying large sums of money at various amusement resorts. He at first boasted that the money was part of the $250,000 stolen from the bank. Later he said the money was received from the sale of a Montana ranch. When searched by the police, $960 in United States bank notes was found in his possession. He is also said to have deposited $10,000 in banks since arriving here.

Not a Wall Street Game.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 3.—The Men and Religions Forward Movement, which is to be country-wide, was inaugurated here Sunday by the opening of an eight-day campaign, to serve as a pattern for those to be conducted in seventy-five of the largest cities in Canada and the United States.

Thirty meetings were addressed by specialists in boys' work, Bible study, missions, social service, evangelism and community extension.

It was vigorously denied that the movement is financed by Wall street capitalists for the purpose of quieting labor.

Electrocuted at His Work.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—An electric shock while he was at work in the pipe mill of the Montreal Steel Works at St. Henri on Saturday afternoon is supposed to have caused the death of George Burdon, an electrician, whose dead body was found in the mill at noon Sunday.

Burdon had only started to work in the mill on Friday as an oiler. The body was found stretched out on the bridge, close to the motor, an oil can beside him. He had evidently been killed while oiling the machinery of the crane.

Child Burned to Death.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—Aime Berger, aged 4 1-2 years, living in St. Henri, was burned to death at eight o'clock yesterday morning. The little boy's mother had left him playing in the kitchen when she heard him crying, and rushing to the room, found him enveloped in flames.

Suing Railway For $50,000.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—An action for $50,000 damages has been entered against the Montreal Street Railway by the widow of the late Mr. William Arthur Stewart, who was killed in a street car collision at the corner of St. Catherine street and Lasalle avenue on Aug. 10 last.

How to Reduce Tax Rate.

Hamilton, Oct 3—Mayor Lees will ask the City Council here to adopt a unit system of civic accounting similar to many cities in the United States, and believes it will result in economy that will permit of a big cut in the tax rate.

Another Airman Dies.

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 3.—Cromwell Dixon, who aviated across the Rocky Mountains last Saturday, fell 100 feet in the Interstate Fair grounds here and received injuries which caused his death.

LAWRANCE D'ORSAY THE DISTINGUISHED ENGLISH COMEDIAN In "The Earl of Pawtucket"

Pronounced by "Globe," "Mail," "Saturday Night" the BEST COMEDY that has visited Toronto for some time

THE MILK BY-LAW GOES BACK TO THE COMMITTEE OBJECTIONS ARE MADE

Deputation of Milk Vendors Wait on the Council to Protest Against the Bottling Clause—Mr. John Carlisle Chief Spokesman for the Milk Dealers—Medical Health Officer Strongly in Favour of the Bottling Method.

The bottle clause in the milk by-law furnished the chief topic of conversation and occupied the greater part of the time at last night's Council meeting of the City Council. A deputation of some twenty of the milk vendors of the city, supported by Mr. John Carlisle, were present to object to the clause in question, principally on the ground of the expense involved in procuring the necessary plant. The aldermen too, were not a unit on the question and the net result of the discussion was that the clause in question goes back to a committee, while the by-law was amended, so that the bottling clause, which was to have gone in force on Sept. 27, does not become operative until November 27—if it is adopted at all.

Mr. Carlisle was the principal speaker of the deputation and laid before the Council his objections to the bottling clause, bringing out the same points as outlined in the interviews which have appeared in the Examiner. He asked that the Council give the poor people of the city a chance. The enforcing of the bottling clause would certainly result in the price of milk advancing, and the poor would feel the difference in price. The milk dealers would be forced to make an advance by reason of the expense of procuring and maintaining a bottling system. Mr. Carlisle did not believe that the system of delivering milk in bottles was any assistance in preserving the health of citizens and strongly objected to this clause of the by-law. He pointed out that in other cities the question was optional and he believed that a similar system should be in force here.

Mr. T. M. Hunter, Mr. Milburn of Smith and other milk vendors also addressed the Council, objecting principally to the bottling clause, on the ground of expense. Objection was also taken to the section of the by-law dealing with the cooling of the milk.

Later in the evening, Ald. Duncan introduced a by-law to amend the milk by-law and the result was a discussion in the Council over the measure.

Ald. Buller thought it should be made optional as to whether milk should be delivered in bottles or in cans. "The milk men are going to raise the price of milk as sure as we are sitting here," he remarked, "and I for one do not blame them." He moved that the clause be struck out and Ald. Graham seconded the motion.

Ald. Bradburn moved in amendment that the matter be sent back to the Property and Health committee for further consideration. He had heard some arguments from the milk men that he was not familiar with, and he wanted a little more time to investigate the matter before taking action.

Ald. Metheral concurred in this opinion and seconded the amendment.

Ald. Anderson expressed the view that the matter should be optional. There were some milk vendors who were cleanly in their person and in their premises, and there was no danger to be apprehended from these men. On the other hand there were men who were dirty in their habits and he did not think that any sytem of bottling would result in these men supplying clean milk. There was no necessity for the bottles; they were an unnecessary expense upon the working people and the public generally.

Dr. McPherson the medical health officer expressed himself very decidedly in favour of the bottling system. He would not have the matter optional at all. He pointed out that the Milk Commission appointed by the Government to investigate conditions all over the country, had advocated the bottle system, that the medical profession everywhere was in favour ofit; that the city of Toronto had adopted it after careful study of the conditions, and that he had met no one in Peterborough, either medical or laymen, except some of those who had spoken that night, who was opposed to the system. He felt sure that if any of the Council had lost anyone near and dear to them on account of impure milk, they would not hesitate in adopting measures of safety on account of a matter of a few cents. It was generally agreed that bad milk was the cause of considerable illness, especially among children, and the public was entitled to protection, which could be afforded only through the bottling system. The price of milk was bound to increase in Peterborough whether or not the bottling clause was enforced, and he could not see that the proposed measure would increase the expense. Under the present arrangements the dealers lost about 5 per cent., which made a considerable difference in a year. As for the statement that there would be danger of the spread of disease through the bottles, that was all "bosh."

Ald. Buller remarked that the speaker would have been more correct had he said that the danger from the can system was all bosh. He thought the bottle clause was utter rot, a piece of red tape, and he for one was not going to support it by his vote.

Ald. Morgan did not want to see a rigid rule adopted. He felt that the matter should be optional and that it was not fair for the Council to take any action that would increase the price of milk.

Ald. Bradburn's motion that the matter be referred back, was carried and on the suggestion of City Solicitor Hall, the clause was amended so that the bottling provision is not in force until Nov. 27 at least.

Other Matters Discussed.

Reports were passed from the Legal committee, Board of Works and Finance committee.

When the Board of Works' report was presented, Ald. Bradburn moved that the clause providing for the paving of Chambers' street be left over. He remarked that unless the sidewalk was first laid on the east side of the street he was not in favour of paving the street. If the sidewalk was not built before the paving was done, it would never be constructed.

There was no seconder to Ald. Bradburn's amendment to the report.

Ald. Anderson had the clause appointing Mr. Bartlett as sewer foreman amended so that if Mr. Bartlett does not accept the chairman of the Board of Works may appoint some one else.

Mr. Hickey waited on the Council to ask that an incandescent light be placed on Elm street. He pointed out that there was only one arc light on the street and that the west end of the street was very dark.

The matter was refrred to the Fire, Water and Light committee.

Ald. Edgar brought up the question of water for Bonacorde street. He said that the residents of the street were very anxious to have a water supply.

It was pointed out that the Fire, Water and Light committee had ordered a hydrant there and on motion the mayor was instructed to take the matter up with the Water Commissioners.

Ald. Edgar introduced a notice of motion that at the next meeting he would move that the city be governed by commission.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. asked to lease a portion of the city's property on the river front to use as a lumber yard.—Finance committee.

R. C. Braund and others complained of a big ditch filled with leaves and rubbish.— Referred to Board of Works. The same ratepayers petitioned for a concrete walk.—Board of Works.

The Treasurer was authorized to pay to Protestant Home executive half of city's grant toward a new home ($5,000) and that the remaining $5,000 be paid on certificate that terms and conditions entered into with the city have been complied with.

A petition for a concrete crossing on the south side of Hunter street, to connect with Driscoll Terrace was referred to the Board of Works, as also was a petition for a concrete crossing on Murray street ,to connect with the new Baptist church.

An intimation from Dr. McCullough, Provincial Medical Health Officer, that the city's sewage must be properly treated before being emptied into the river was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Regarding the diversion of Romaine street by th C.P.R., so that a right of way to the Monaghan road may be assured without crossing the tracks, Mr. W. H. Moore asked that notice be given through the public press of the city's acquiescence in the company's diversion of said road, in return for a portion of the company's property being deeded to the city equivalent to that absorbed by the railroad by such diversion. This matter was referred to the Board of Works.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

A BIG INCREASE IN PETERBOROUGH'S POPULATION DURING THE PAST YEAR

Assessors Returned Their Rolls Yesterday and Figures Indicate that the Population of City is Now 19,300, an Increase of Over 2,000 for the Year—The Assessment of the City Has Also Advanced by Nearly One Half a Million Dollars—Interesting Statistics Provided by a Study of the Rolls.

The assessing work for the year 1911 and 1912 was completed, as announced in yesterday's Examiner by the handing in of the assessment rolls by Messrs William J. Henry and William H. Thompson, assessors. The complete returns for the different wards of the city are given below, and a study of the figures will prove interesting. The population of the city as indicated in the assessors' returns is 19,300, a gain during the year of 2,377. The assessment has also grown the year to the extent of $466,360, reaching the grand total of $11,886,320. Here is the recapitulation for the entire city:

THE TURKISH FORCES IN TRIPOLI REINFORCED BY THOUSANDS OF ARABS

Bloody Battles Will Result if the Italians Attempt to Land Forces—Wireless Says the Bombardment Has Commenced But Report Has Not Been Officially Confirmed and Is Considered Doubtful.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ROME, ITALY, OCT. 3.—A wireless message received here to-day relayed from the fleet off Tripoli, says that the bombardment of the town has begun. While there were indications last night that shelling might begin this morning, there has been no official confirmation of the statement that it had actually commenced. In view of Turkey's plainly pacific attitude, it is doubted here that a shot will be fired from the ships of Italy until some manifestation of hostility on the part of Turkey.

ROME, ITALY, AUG. 3.— Latest word here says that all Italians and other Europeans, except the monks and priests, have fled from Tripoli, fearing bombardment, but the Turkish troops reinforced by thousands of Arabs from the plains, are holding the forts. It is realized here that a bloody battle will result from Italy trying to land troops at Tripoli. Two dirigible balloons with trained aeronautic corps have been sent to Tripoli. The Italian government has declined offers of thousands of Americans, Albanians and Greeks to go to Tripoli to fight the Turks.

PARIS, OCT. 3.—Le Temps has received a despatch from Rome, to the effect that an official despatch says the bombardment at Tripoli began at 10 o'clock this morning. Hellograph messages repeated say that the Italian ships are shelling in several places and the inhabitants are fleeing to the country.

HOW LOCAL JEWS OBSERVED THE DAY OF ATONEMENT

Yesterday was the Hebrew day of atonement. From sundown on Sunday until sunset last evening an unbroken fast was held by the people of Israel, who also spend the major portion of the day in the synagogue. Having no established house of worship in Peterborough, the local Hebrews utilized the hall of the Knights of Pythias, where services were presided over by Rabbi Philip Black, of Toronto. The larger portion of the services are spoken in the Hebrew language, which is the recognized language of devotion. The Day of Atonement, or the Great White Fast, as it is sometes called, is a day on which the Jewish nation repent of the sins committed during the preceding year.

The celebration commences with an evening service, known by the name of Kol Nidre, having reference to the individual. Following is a commemorative service for the dead, which assumes a very impressive nature. This is followed by the Mollah, in which the object of the day's proceedings are emphasized. This service terminates the day's devotion, and, with a solemn invocation of God's name, a trumpet is sounded, and the devout worshipper wends his way homeward, taking with him the assurance that having repented for all his sins, he is fully pardoned.

LOCAL YOUTH BEFORE THE MAGISTRATE THIS MORNING ON THE SERIOUS CHARGE OF FORGERY

Edward Kane, Aged 19 Years, Said to Have Forged and Cashed a Cheque for $91.50.

CASE REMANDED

Edward Kane, a youth of 19, was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a very serious charge—that of forging a man's name for $91.50. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence, and did not plead nor elect. The case was enlarged until Saturday. It appears that a Government cheque for $91.50, drawn on a local bank, was enclosed in an envelope and sent through the Post Office to Mr. John Kane, Fisheries Inspector. It is alleged that the prisoner, by some means, learned that the letter was in the Post Office, and called there presenting himself as brother of the man to whom the cheque was addressed, signing his name, and in this means coming in possession of the cheque. At the bank, it is said, he told the same story, and succeeded in getting the cheque cashed. The offense is alleged to have been committed on the 15th of July last. The case had to be enlarged for the purpose of securing the necessary witnesses.

Mr. R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney, prosecuted. Bail was granted. Cash $1,000.00 and two sureties.

EXAMINER'S NEW SERIAL TO COMMENCE ON SATURDAY

The Examiner has great pleasure in announcing that a new serial story will commence in Saturday's issue of this paper and has every confidence that the long series of serial hits will be continued with this yarn, "The Gun Runner" from the pen of Arthur Stringer, who is well known to readers of contemporaneous fiction through his other novels, "The Wire-Tappers," "The Silver Poppy," 'etc. "The Gun Runner" is vividly exciting from the opening chapter to the last word, and is one of those stories that keep the interest keyed up to the highest pitch. Mr. Stringer, the author, is one of those adventurous beings, who has knocked about all the seven seas of the earth, smoked over camp fires in four continents, adventured up and down the length of the two Americas and always loved war and danger and the open road. He has embodied in "The Gun Runner" this spirit of adventure, the action quick and exciting with a love interest running throughout. By all means do not miss "The Gun Runner." The opening instalment will appear on Saturday next, Oct. 7th.

Capt. C. Haines Pardoned To-day

Special to The Examiner

OSSINGTON, N. Y., OCT. 3.—Capt. Peter C. Haines, who shot William Annis dead in an unwritten law episode at the New York Yacht Club in August, 1908, was pardoned to-day, and left Sing Sing prison to-day with his father, General Hains.

A Failure Financially

Examiner Special:

LONDON, OCT. 3.—Dr. Harris says the Sheffield Choir's world tour cost 6,000 pounds, and resulted in a loss of 5,000 pounds. The choristers unanimously agree that they were most impressed with Canada, which is the most enterprising of the Dominions. Next comes South Africa, but Australia and New Zealand are voted slow, their people being too self satisfied. One chorister remarked that Australia is waiting for population before extending railways, while Canada establishes railways first.

HON. L. P. BRODEUR TAKES SEAT ON BENCH TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner

MONTREAL, OCT. 3.—Hon. L. P. Brodeur, formerly Minister of Marine took his seat this morning for the first time as Justice of the Supreme Court. The Court gave judgment today in the famous literary cause celebre of William Dawson Lesueur, against the Morang Co., publishers. Lesueur wrote the "Life of Count Frontenac" for the makers of the Canadian series," but the Morangs refused to publish it or to return the manuscripts. Now, after going through three courts, the Supreme Court orders that the manuscript be immediately returned.

ONE FIREMAN KILLED AND OTHERS BADLY INJURED

Special to The Examiner:

QUEBEC, OCT. 3—One fireman was killed, two other firemen fatally injured, and several other people more or less seriously wounded as the result of a disastrous fire which occurred to-day at No. 5 Fire Station, corner of Dalhousie and St. Paul Sts., in Quebec. The top flat collapsed, bringing down five firemen, two of whom succeeded in getting out safely. The three others remained in the debris. J. D. Dompierre is surely dead, because there is twenty feet of wood upon him. Labarre is not dead yet, at the moment when this despatch is sent. He is still alive and his voice can be heard from the outside of the building. He is supposed to be mortally wounded.

HE WANTS MARRIAGE OF HIS YOUNG DAUGHTER ANNULLED

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, OCT. 3.—A marriage performed in Stratford last July by Rev. Mr. Green is being contested at Osgoode Hall, where John Denan, on behalf of his daughter, Grace C. Denman, has issued a writ to annul her marriage to Otto Frederick Werner of Ogdensburg, New York, on the ground that she was only seventeen and did not get her father's consent. Werner is nineteen.

CORONATION MUSICAL PROGRAMME A PERFORMANCE QUITE UNIQUE

A performance quite unique in the annals of Canada's musical history will be given in St. Paul's church on Thursday, Oct. 12, by the great English organist, Gatty Sellars, and the King's Trumpeter, direct from the Coronation. These gentlemen recently arrived by the Oceanic at New York, en route to Halifax, N. S., where their Canadian tour commenced September 28th. Their booking list is almost a record one for they are to appear in different cities practically every night, with the exception of Saturdays and Sundays. They play in the thirty-four leading cities of Canada before entering the United States, where they are engaged for the largest auditoriums (seating ten thousand people). From reports received from local Managers, immense audiences are expected right through the tour. Mr. Sellars crowded such buildings as St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, Michigan, on his last tour of the States, whilst in the meatime at the Town Hall, Melbourne, Australia, over 1,000 people were turned away unable to get admittance at the King's Trumpeters last appearance in that country, before sailing to England to play for the Coronation. Therefore, we predict with such a combination hitherto unheard in Canada, there will be no vacant seats at the performance in this city.

Tickets are now on sale by members of St. Paul's Choir, or at the Dominion Bank, and an early application is necessary.

HON. ADAM BECK TO GIVE ADDRESS ON TUBERCULOSIS

Questions have been asked from time to time through the press why the Health Association did not make its existence known. This was a reasonable request and we will now try to answer it. The Peterborough Health Association was formed last spring and we were sorry to note the indifferent spirit that was evinced towards the work by the public. However, the work was progressed with, and an Association was formed, and we think we may say an organization fairly representative of the city was launched.

The following gentlemen consented to act as officers: W. H. Moore, Esq., K.C., J. W. Bennet, Esq., E. A. Peck, Esq., Rev. W. J. McColl, Dr. E. P. Boucher, Dr. G. Stewart Cameron, Dr. A. W. McPherson, Dr. F. P. McNulty, Dr. J. T. I. Halliday, Dr. Frank Neal, T. F. Matthews, Esq., E. C. McLeod, Esq., R. C. Braund, Esq., His Honour E. C. S. Huyeke and William G. Morrow, Esq.

At the last public meeting held it was decided to incorporate the Association under the name of the Peterborough Health Association. This, after some delay, was accomplished. We were then prepared to go ahead with the work but the long summer vacation was just coming on, and as a number of our people would be away, it was thought better to delay active operations until the autumn. The month of September would have seen some public work begun, but as everyone knows, it was practically impossible to attract the attention of either men or women, unless you were prepared to discuss some phases of the political issues then before the country. However, the executive met and decided to first of all begin a campaign by advertising and education, and with this end in view set about arranging a series of public lectures on health subjects during the present winter by gentlemen well qualified to speak in their various departments. The first of these lectures will be held on Oct. 20th and will be addressed by the Hon. Adam Beck, and his subject will be "The Cure of Tuberculosis." The public generally are invited, in fact we ask, to remember this date and show their interest by turning out in large numbers.

The meeting will be held in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute.

SUCCESSION DUTIES.

The increase in the yearly provincial revenue from succession duties indicates the increasing wealth of our citizens and emphasizes the certainty of the fact that, struggle as we may, to gather wealth, we must leave it for others to scatter. The amount paid in succession duties for the month of September, 1911, was $58,705.80, which brought the total sum for the year, so far expired, to $950,000.17. The provincial financial year ends on October 31st, so that this month will have only $50,000 to add, to bring the total of succession dues to the million dollar mark, some $300,000 in excess of the Provincial Treasurer's estimate. Hon. Mr. Mathon, with the greatest complacency, accepts this contribution to his surplus, and without a qualm of conscience or compunction, although he opposed the adoption of this fair measure of making the rich pay a fair share of the expense of the Government protection under which their wealth was amassed.

THE STORY OF THE ASSESSMENT

The story o fthe municipal assessment is generally a matter of mournful and morbid interest—the prelude to the taxes that have to be paid next year. But the figures, as published in another column, have also a bright side. They show a very large gain in population, remarkably large, especially when contrasted with the population gain of last year, which was under a hundred, and compared with other cities of our approximate size. The gain in population the past year amounted to 2,397, which brings our population to a total of 19,300. The increase by wards shows South Ward to be the highest gainer in population, 995. The North Ward comes next, with 562; then follows the West Ward, with 441; the East Ward with 397. The smallest increase is in the Centre Ward, the increase being only 32. The advance in total assessment value is a little under half a million, the exact figures being $466,396. Our total assessment is $11,886,290. Contrasted with other cities, Peterborough's assessment figures in the matter of population are excellent. Brantford's population of 24,064 means an increase of 2,102, which is 275 less than Peterborough's increase. St. Catharines, with a total population of 13,413, shows a gain of 700. Peterborough is moving forward, but its advance would be made more rapid if we could succeed in securing more manufacturing industries.

IN THE INTEREST OF THE HOME.

It would be difficult in a brief space to compare the merits of Ontario schools and the schools of England and Wales. It might, however be pointed out, that in these two countries, England and Wales, there are 7,837 ordinary public schools, or council schools, with 3,935,000 pupils and 12,000 voluntary schools, providing education for 3,101,174 pupils. One special feature of interest in connection with these elementary schools, is the increasing attention given to special subjects, such as cooking, laundry work, general domestic work, gardening and handicrafts. In these subjects 709,426 pupils are enrolled. Happy is the nation where the equipment of the real home makers, the makers of home happiness is adequately and liberally provided for. Take the matter of cooking. No other accomplishment can contribute more to the happiness of home than good cooking. A housewife that is a good cook will, in a thousand cases out of a thousand and one, have all the other domestic arts at her finger ends. No matter how generously the bread winner stocks the larder, if the supply is spoiled by bad cooking, bad temper, recrimination, quarrels and unhappiness are sure to follow. "Feed the brute" 'is a coarse expression of the thing needful to make a husband a good husband, but it has a foundation of truth. A home, to be happy, must be comfortable, and it cannot be comfortable, no matter how much fine linen and glittering silver adorn the board, if the food is ill cooked, unsavoury and only eatable by the overpowering forces of hunger, and the necessity of sustaining life. They do well in giving special attention to the teaching of good cooking in the schools of the old land, and the attention we are giving to domestic science in our own schools is a present and promising outlook for future happy homes in Ontario, in proportion to its generality of effective adoption.

SET A HOT PACE.

Reference has been made in these columns to the fact that the Conservatives are succeeding to power with the country in a condition of the greatest prosperity, with the machinery of national government running swiftly and smoothly. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has left Mr. Borden no rescue work to be done, as had to be done by him when he took over a stagnant country with almost every interest languishing and natural prosperity only a word in the dictionary. Now, we have prosperity that can be felt, that is in live and palpitating energy of existence in every department of national life.

Eve the throes of an election campaign that tend to retard business enterprise and trade activity has not operated to suppress our trade prosperity and our energy. During the month of August the trade of Canada increased by the large sum of $18,303,133, or, as compared with August of last year, by nearly thirty per cent. Canada's total trade for the first five months of the current fiscal year, amounted to $330,522,496, or an increase of $33,705,646. If this rate of increase is maintained throughout the year Canada's total trade at the end of the present fiscal year will amount to the large figure of 831 millions of daollars, a growth of nearly 600 illion dollars in the past sixteen years, under Liberal administration. The Customs returns for the year, so far, show a corresponding increase, testifying to the improving purchasing power of the people, due to increase of prosperous conditions. The new government takes office with everything in its favour, with trade and revenue increasing at the most rapid rate in the history of the country. If the Conservative Government does anywise nearly as well as its Liberal predecessors, the judgment of the people in making a change will be somewhat more approximately vindicated. The new Government should do better; for it is claimed that its policy of administration is much superior to that of the Liberals. We shall see. If the Conservatives will be in power fifteen years and can keep up the pace the Liberals have set—increase of total trade and revenue over three-fold—in 1926, the total trade of Canada will be 2,500 million dollars, and the annual revenue 500 million dollars. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has set Hon. Mr. Borden a hot pace.

FOREST CONSERVATION.

The progress of the Conservation policy of Canada, as applied to forest resources, depends ore upon the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior than upon any other organization. Upon the technical knowledge and executive ability of the officers of the Forestry Branch depends the future of the forest on 16,000,000 acres of the Dominion Forest Reserves, as well as upon the large area of non-agricultural forest land in Western Canada, which, for the good of the country, may yet be set aside as permanent forest reserves. In addition to looking after Doinion lands the Forestry Branch is now being asked by Eastern land owners to furnish advice as to the best means of securing at the earliest date a profitable crop of timber on waste land or wood-lots. The proper administration of forest lands requires a special knowledge of the trees best adapted to each region, of their uses, and of the markets. Further there is needed knowledge of the habits of all trees, especially of the merchantable species, so that it may be known how rapidly they grow, how they produce their seed, when and under what conditions the seed germinates, and in what way the seedlings and young trees are affected by their surroundings. Such knowledge is gained only by long study and experience. In order that the new Rocky Mountain Forest Reserves may be administered according to the latest scientific knowledge and the best experience, the Forestry Branch is now making detailed studies of the habits of the orchantable species of trees on the Eastern slope of the Rockies in Alberta and has sent one of the men in charge of the work to study the systems of forest management practised during the past few years by the highly developed United States Forest Service in the National Forests of Montana. The United States foresters have spent large sums of money and availed themselves of the experience of many men in developing plans of lumbering which do not inconvenience the lumbermen, but which ensure the protection and reproduction of the forest and the Canadian Forestry Branch intends to benefit largely by their experience.

A VAIN HOPE.

(London Advertiser.)

Professor Ashley, one of the few economists of reputation who lend their names to the Chamberlain movement, has published a book, entitled "Tariff Reform," in which he pleads with Canada to restrict her manufacturing development for the benefit of the mother country, in return for a preference on Canadian foodstuffs in the British market. Mr. Chamberlain, when he launched his propaganda, made a similar appeal to the British overseas dominions.

The British Tariff Reformers, who continue to hold out the prospect of an enlarged market for British manufactures in Canada and the other dominions ,under a scheme of imperial preferential trade, had more to expect from the outgoing Government of Canada than it can hope to get from the incoming one. The Laurier administration made a free gift of the preference to the mother country, and pledged itself to go further in the same direction if the favour were returned, although it properly refused to ask for compensation ,which would involve a reversal of the fiscal policy of Great Britain. The British preference in this country might be increased in many lines with much advantage to Canadian consumers. But no such reductions of the tariff are to be expected from the new administration, either with or without a preference in Great Britain. If the British Tariff Reformers ever gain power, with a food-tax as part of their policy, they will soon discover how illogical was their rejoicing over the defeat of the Laurier Government. If a victory for reciprocity would have destroyed imperial preferential trade, the United States can bring about its destruction by simply removing the duty on foodstuffs without waiting for similar actions by this country. A Tariff Reform Government would, therefore, find itself at the mercy of the United States on the one hand and it would get no mercy from a Conservative Government in Canada. The manufacturing interests which exerted themselves to put the Conservative party in power, will permit no encroachment on their market from Great Britan or any other country.

USUALLY ONE DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas and all Stomach Distress Vanishes

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas, which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.

About The Theatre Of The War And What They'll Kill Each Other For

In the present struggle between Italy and Turkey if the conflict is left between the two countries it will be of short duration; but if, as is likely, Germany takes a hand in the game, then, indeed, the long expected European conflagration is fairly in sight. Italy is, it must be remembered, a member of the Triple Alliance, and it would not be surprising if it were to be ascertained later on that the present trouble has been engineered from Berlin, with the object of playing the Kaiser's game in Morocco.

The desire of Italy to secure a foothold on the northern coast of Africa is the final step in the desire of the Christian powers of Europe to secure either ownership, protection, or control of a portion of the north African littoral. Egypt belongs to Great Britain. France has Tunis and Algeria, and is marching on to Morocco. Spain has Ceuta, and a strip of country south of Morocco, and there remain only the Turkish vilayets of Tripoli, Fessan and Barca to complete the chain of appropriations from the once great domain of Islam.

History tells us, however, that Italy's previous attempts in Africa have not been highly successful. She hopped years ago to add Abyssinia to Italian Somaliland, but the conquest failed utterly. Three thousand Italians fell in battle, and hundreds were taken prisoners and an Italian ministry was wrecked. But now the fortunes of war would seem to favour the invaders. Turkey is completely occupied with the task of national regeneration. Her navy is not worthy of the name, and it would look as if Italy would have a walk over. If she is permitted to reap the fruits of her victory, the addition of Tripoli to the domain of Italy would mean the annexation of 400,000 square miles of territory, but much of it is desert. It would add about a million people to Italy's kingdom, they being a mixture of Berber, Arabic and negro blood. Barca and Fezzan, which are really part of Tripoli, would also become Italian, and the authority of the Sultan of Turkey in north Africa would come near the vanishing point.

The theatre of the new war is one of the most ancient in history. Enterprising Phoenicians seeking commerce for Tyre, coasted the Mediterranean shores as well as those of the Atlantic. They gradually built up a chain of forts and colonies which inspired the envy of the Romans, who recognizing that it was a case of being either absorbed themselves or taking the game into their own hands decided upon the destruction of Carthage, the chief commercial centre of Phoenician power. And they made a very thorough job of it. So completely did they make their work of conquest that they destroyed all the records, or practically all, which told the story of the Phoenician progress. Thus they did as the Mahommedans did at Alexandria when they destroyed the greatest library of the world up to that time.

Tripoli is a comparatively modern name. It is derived from the fact that the country had three ports (tripoli). At the same time, the country of Gyrenaca became known as Pentapolis, because it had five port cities. To-day explorers find ancient ruins which indicate that the coast must have been inhabited by a highly intelligent and progressive people, who developed trade and manufactures and fortified themselves against the disadvantages of a desert environment, by the construction of great water reservoirs and granaries to ensure that neither food nor water should fail in time of famine.

In the early part of the last century, Great Britain, France and the United States made war in turn upon the pirates of he Barbary states, for that descendants of the once great Phoenicians had fallen. Finally in 1835, Turkey asserted her authority, and brought the barbarians under her complete subjection.

Now, however, the waning power of Islam has reached that point where she finds no allies to assist her in the defence of her colonies, and Europe has turned the tables. Instead of Turkey invading Europe, as she thought from each end of this coast, she now finds herself attacked. Europe has, in very truth, carried the war into Africa.

No one can, of course, foresee how far this "little war" will hasten the dismemberment of the Turkish Empire for which Europe has been waiting for years and years. That it will undoubtedly have that effect seems certain. Then will come the real struggle to which statesmen and soldiers have been looking forward for a hundred years or more, and then will Europe be turned indeed into a veritable shambles. Germany and Austria and Russia will all demand their share of the spoils, and it is assured that Britain and France will have to stand together in demanding a fair deal in the partition. The war which began on Saturday may not be important in itself, but it will undoubtedly have important effects, and no man can predict what they will be.

THE BLIGHT OF PESSIMISM

Considering how unprofitable such efforts are, it is surprising how many make a business of looking for trouble, of cultivating and coaxing it, and running to meet it. They find the thing for which they look. No one ever looked for trouble without finding plenty of it. This is because one can make trouble of anything if the mind is set that way. It is said that, during the development of the West, in the days of rough frontier life, the men who always went around with pistols, revolvers and bowie knives always got into difficulties, while the men who never carried arms, but trusted to their own good sense, self-control, tact and humour, rarely had trouble. The incident that meant a shooting affray to the armed man was merely a joke to the more sensible unarmed man. It is just so with the seekers for ordinary trouble. By constantly holding discouraged, dejected, melancholy, gloomy thoughts, they make themselves receptive to all that depresses and destroys. What to a cherful person would be a trifling incident, to be laughed at and dismissed from the mind, becomes, in the minds of the croakers, a thing of dire portent; an occasion for unutterable gloom and foreboding.

Most unhappy people have become so by gradually forming a habit of unhappiness, complaining about the weather, finding fault with their food, with crowded cars and with disagreeable companions or work. A habit of complaining, of criticising, of fault-finding, or grumbling over trifles, a habit of looking for shadows, is a most unfortunate habit to contract, especially in early life, for, after a while, the victim becomes a slave. All of the impulses become perverted, until the tendency to pessimism, to cynicism, is chronic.—Success.

LOCAL RUGBY CLUB IS GROUPED WITH CENTRAL Y.M.C.A. TEAM OF TORONTO

The West End Rugby Club has received word that they will be grouped with the Central Y.M.C.A. team in the division of the junior O.R.F. U., home and home games to be played, the team scoring the most points in the two games, winning the group. It is likely that the West End Club will go to Toronto on Saturday, Oct. 14 and that the return game will be played here on Thanksgiving Day.

The team had a grand practice at Central Park last night with twenty-one out in uniform. Dr. MacPherson was on hand to coach the squad and the time was taken up with some of the simpler plays. The boys are showing the keenest interest in the game, and if the practises from now on are as well attended as last night's workout, there is every reason to expect a team that will give Peterborough some real rugby. Among those out were Denison, Johnston, Corkery, Kirn, Davidson, Langley, Thompson, Mahoney, Canniff, Elliott, Turner, Hogan, Wallis, Mills, Ecclestone, Lenhy, Craig and others. It is possible the team will go to Port Hope on Saturday for a game with the Trinity College School team and with that prospect in view it is important the remainder of the practises this week should be well attended. There will be a signal practice to-night in front of the armouries at 7.30 o'clock sharp and a full attendance is expected.

NEW RECORD ESTABLISHED BY COLLEGIATE STUDENTS

Three records went by the boards in the junior jumping contests held under the auspices of the Collegiate Institute Athletic Society at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, preparatory to the annual field day, which takes place on Thursday afternoon. Harold Hill, last year's senior champion was responsible for smashing two of the marks, setting up a new figure for the senior broad jump and for the senior running hop, step and jump. Both of these records were held hitherto by Mike O'Brien, now of St. Michael's College. Little Arthur Lipsett made a new record for the junior running broad jump. Following were the results for the afternoon.

Standing Broad Jump, Senior.
1 Hill.
2 M. Huycke.
3 A. Gilbert.

In an extra jump for the record, Hill jumped 8 ft. 7 1-2 in. Former record, 8 ft. 7 1-4 in.

Standing Broad Jump, Junior.
1 L. Anderson.
2 A. Huycke.
3 C. Stewart.

Running Broad Jump, Senior.
1 C. Read.
2 H. Hill.
3 M. Huycke.

Running Broad Jump, Junior.
1 A. Lipsett.
2 A. Huycke.
3 C. Stewart.

In an extra trial, Lipsett set up a new record, making a mark of 14 ft. 7 in. Former record, 14 ft. 6 in.

Running Hop Step and Jump, Senior.
1 H. Hill.
2 G. Read.
3 M. Huycke.

Hill broke the record in this event with a mark of 37 ft. 7 1-2 in. The former record was 37 ft. 2 in.

Running Hop, Step and Jump, Jr.
1 A. Lipsett.
2 A. Huycke.
3 May.

Running High Jump, Senior.
1 H Hill.
2 Read.
3 Huycke.

The junior running high jump, owing to the lateness of the hour, had to be postponed until this afternoon.

A splendid programme of sports has been arranged for the field day on Thursday afternoon and there will undoubtedly be a big crowd on hand to see the events. The public is cordially invited to be present and there is no admission charge.

Lindsay To Victoria Harbour Section Of C.P.R. Is Completed

The work in connection with the construction of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected that by Wednesday the track laying will be completed between Victoria Harbour and Lindsay. The line has been connected across the river at the Distillery Creek, so that by the middle of the week construction trains will be passing over the route whole system from Victoria Harbour Work on the section between Lindsay and the main line is proceeding satisfactorily. The track laying has been finished from the main line of the C. P. R. to a point five miles this side of Bethany and the Post was informed this morning by a prominent C. P. R. official that in about ten days 'time, the track laying on the whole system from Victoria Harbour to the main line at a point a few miles from Peterborough would be completed.

After this is completed, there remains very little work to be done out side of erecting the stations, sidings, etc. The line will positively be ready for traffic in two months' time.

The advent of this line into Lindsay means much for the town, as we will be on the line of the short route from St. Paul, Chicago, etc., to Montreal and Boston. This will tend to bring Lindsay's importance as a leading railway centre prominently before the world and should result in increased prosperity for the town.—Lindsay Post.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF GIRL IN SMITH TOWNSHIP

Considerable mystery enshrouds the disappearance of Mary Weaver from the home of Mr. William Mathews, first line of Smith. The girl, who is about 15 years of age, was employed as a domestic. About 10 o'clock on the morning of the 22nd of September the girl left the house, apparently to a hat or coat and when last seen was go for a walk. She was without either wending her way towards the creek, and the efforts of the search party to locate her whereabouts have proved fruitless. Various theories have been advanced, that have tended to clear up the mystery, but are all to no avail. Some are inclined to associate the girl's disappearance with the presence of tramps in the vicinity; others venture to assert that the girl has been kidnapped. It is difficult at th present time, however, to say whether there is any foundation for these rumours.

The missing girl, who has been employed by Mr. Mathews for about a year, was considered to be a good, conscientious girl, and her disappearance is causing her employers no small amount of concern.

Case Resumed

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, OCT. 3.—Judge Archer's court was crowded this morning when the famous case of the millionaire, David Russell against Pinkerton Detective Agency and others, was resumed. Sir Donald Mann, expected as a witness, was still too ill to attend and a commission was appointed to take his evidence in his room. Russell has sworn that Pinkertons manager told him Sir Donald would settle the action Russel had against Greenshields, if Russell would drop proceedings against Patterson of Pittsburg and Mrs. Allan of New York for plotting against him. Lieutenant Governor Tweedle, of New Brunswick, a witness this morning, said that Russell was quite sane when he had business with him last October.

How to Stop Drinking

We are in earnest when we ask you to try ORRINE at our expense. We will give your money back, if after a trial you fail to get results from ORRINE. This is a very generous offer. It gives the wives and mothers of those who drink to excess an opportunity to try the ORRINE Treatment. It also shows our confidence in the merits of ORRINE. ORRINE is recognized as the best and most successful remedy the world has ever known for Drunkenness or the so-called Liquor Habit. It is a very simple treatment, can be given in the home without publicity or loss of time from business, and at a small price.

ORRINE is prepared in two forms, No. 1, secret treatment, a powder, absolutely tasteless and odourless, given secretly in food or drink. ORRINE No. 2, in pill form, is for those who desire to take voluntary treatment. ORRINE costs only $1.00 a box. Write for Free ORRINE Booklet (mailed in plain sealed envelope) to ORRINE CO., Orrine Building, Washington, D. C. ORRINE is recommended and is for sale in this city by Wm. Madill.

OBITUARY

ELIZABETH DINEEN.

Peterborough lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens this morning in the person of Mrs. Elizabeth Dineen, who passed peacefully away at St. Joseph's Hospital, aged 98 years.

The deceased, who, prior to her removal to the Hospital, resided with her daughter, Mrs. Lane, of Downie street, was a life-long resident of the city. While her nature was quiet and unassuming, she was possessed of many highly estimable qualities, which endeared her to all those who were fortunate enough to have been associated with her. Her demise, though not wholly unexpected, owing to her advanced age, will be lamented by many.

Mrs. Dineen is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Hayes of Rochester, and Mrs. Lane above mentioned while four sons also mourn her loss, in the persons of William, of Havelock, Maurice of British Columbia, James of Seattle, and Richard of Peterborough. Her surviving brothers are Tom Cavanagh of Douro, and Timothy of Peterborough. Mr. Lane of Munter street, is a grandson.

The funeral will take place at 9 a.m. Thursday from the residence of daughter, Mrs. Lane, Downie St., to St. Peter's Cathedral, and from thence to St. Peter's cemetery, for interment.

NEW SELECTIONS

The 57th Regimental Band had one of the best rehearsals for many months in the band-room last night, with nearly every member of the organization present, and a profitable evening was spent. The Band has added a number of important new selections to its repertoire and last night's rehearsal was largely devoted to working on these. Among the numbers is a new medley of song hits by Ted Snyder, which include some of the most popular numbers of to-day, and the medley is altogether the brightest and best in the band's repertoire. Another is the selection from "The Chocolate Soldier," that phenomenally successfully Strauss comic opera, featuring the most popular "My Hero" waltz. Still another is a new Indian intermezzo "Hobomoko," a sparkling number that was feature I by the Grenadier Guards Band, in their recent engagement at the Toronto Exhibition. Along a different line is John Phillip Sousa's big descriptive number "Dwellers in the Western World," which music lovers will remember as one of the best numbers played by Sousa and his band in their Peterborough appearance last year. The 57th Band will likely give a concert in the near future, at which they will present some of these new numbers.

SEAT SALE FOR ALL-ENGLISH PRODUCTION

Fearful Headaches

Stomach Bad, No Appetite, Was Losing Weight and Strength

Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble. By reading Mr. Donneral's letter you will be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.

Mr. Charles Donneral, Kleinburg, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach bad. I took medicines from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was rarely free from them.

"Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefitted. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and feel like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, y appetite is good and digestion excellent. I write this letter in hope that other sufferers from headache may use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and be cured."

Sunday School Centennial To Be Held In Brockville

Forty-Sixth Annual Convention Will Take Place at the End of the Present Month---Many Notable Speakers Will Take Part in the Programme.

There are more than five thousand Sunday schools in Ontario, almost fifty per cent. of the entire number throughout the Dominion of Canada.

One hundred years ago the first Sunday school in Ontario was organized (Oct. 1811) in the village of Elizabethtown, now Brockville City. The school was organized by Rev. William Swatt, who came to this country in response to a call from a Missionary committee instead of going to India as he had originally planned.

The outgrowth of this first Sunday school is the strong and vigorous congregation of the First Presbyterian Church, Brockville. They are housed in a splendid church edifice on the corner of the City Central Square.

In view of the local celebration in October which will climax in the holding of the forty-sixth annual convention of the Ontario Sunday School Association, the building has been thoroughly renovated and the organ rebuilt.

A year ago in convention at Oshawa, Ont., the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Brockville, Rev. Norman McLeod, backed by the "Brockville and Vicinity" Pastors' Association, urged the claims of Brockville as the next meeting place, and Hamilton City, which has waited one year already, generously yielded to Brockville's claim.

The Provincial Sunday School Convention at Brockville promises the completest programme ever offered to an Ontario audience. It has several features never before introduced. Hardly a phase of Sunday School interest but finds a place of consideration. Among those taking prominent part in the programme are: Rev. E. T. Capel of Montreal, Que., General Secretary of the S. S. Union of the Province of Quebec; Rev. J. C. Robertson, B.A., B.D.; Rev. F. L. Farewell, B.A.; Rev. P. G. Dayfoot, B.A., well known workers in the field work of our Ontario Sunday school denominational efforts, and many other local leadres.

In addition to home talent the programme contains: Rev. A. H. McKinney, D.D., of New York, assistant-to Rev. A. F. Schauffler, D.D., of international and world fame; Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner of Chicago, Ill., one of the staff of the International Sunday School Association, and Mr. Alfred Day, Syracuse, N.Y., who was General Secretary of the Ontario S. S. Association for thirteen years.

The music leader will be Mr. J. Ritchie Bell, Superintendent of the Montreal Sailors' Institute.

A special souvenir programme and music booklet of 32 pages is being prepared. The demand for space and entertainment promises to tax the capacity of Brockville, and is, therefore, being controlled by issuing credentials to delegates, direct from the office of the Ontario Sunday School Association, Confederation Life Building, Toronto. These credentials will be issued in order of application on the principle of "first come first served."

Mr. T. F. Harrison, Kingston, is President; Mr. Wm. Hamilton, Toronto, is Chairman of the Executive Committee; Mr. H. E. Irwin, K.C., Toronto, Treasurer. The General Secretary is Rev. E. W. Halpenny, B.D.

ROWED ACROSS CHANNEL

ROWED ACROSS THE CHANNEL.

Following hard on the great swim across the Channel by Burgess, comes the feat of Rev. Sidney Swann, who sculled from Dover to Sangatte on Sept. 12, in the record time of 3 hours 50 minutes. Mr. Swann is the vicar of Crosby Ravensworth, Westmoreland and rowed in the Cambridge boat from 1883 to 1885. He is now fifty years of age, and the feat is a most remarkable one for a man at that age. The previous record for the feat was made on Aug. 1 this year by Charles Oriom, a Frenchman, and his time was 7 hours 16 minutes. Leaving Dover at 5 in the morning Mr. Swann was on the shores of the continent before 9 o'clock. The sea was very lumpy all the way, and quite a number of large steamers had to be passed, on one occasion the swell nearly overturning the light boat. He rowed a twenty-foot racing skiff which weighed only 100 poiinds, and it had to be most skilfully manœuvred to avoid capsizing. On his arrival Mr. Swann wished his son to take the skiff back to the English coast, but he was not to be tempted, though a member of the Cambridge boat this year. The previous best time for rowing across the Channel was in 1885, when Lord Desborough, who was recently in the city, stroked an eight across in 4 hours 22 minutes.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

EXPRESSION "O. K"

. K.—The expression, "O. K." is a colloquialism. To say "An invoice is O. K." is a common expression. It is as correct to use "O. K." as a noun as it is a verb. The past tense would be written "O. K'd." Webster gives this definition of "O. K.": "All correct: all right; in mercantile affairs, a mark of indorsement, as on an invoice, signifying that items quantities, etc., are correct or are approved: in colloquial language, applied to persons and things in approval; as, Johnson is O. K.; his costume is O. K.; the auditors found his books O. K. The origin of the term is in doubt; it is sometimes ascribed to President Jackson, as his humourous abbreviation of all korrect (all correct); sometimes to an Indian chief, Old Keokuk, as his signature by initials." A new origin of the expression was brought to light Aug 21st this year, at the time of the death of Cornelius Kendall in Chicago. Mr Kendall was the youngest son of Orrin Kendall, and from his initials the use of "O. K." as meaning "all right" is said to have sprung. Orrin Kendall, so the story goes, was a member of the Chicago Board of Trade Battery in the Civil War. He was also a member of the firm of O. Kendall & Sons, whose bakery was in Chicago. The firm furnished bread and crackers for the army, and on the crackers were the initials "O.K." These crackers are said to have been the only ones the soldiers relished and their expression, "These are all right," later developed into "These are O. K."

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR SEASON'S WORK

Everything looks bright for an encouraging and prosperous season's work by the Epworth League of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church. Last night their meeting took the form of a consecration service and the renewing of pledges by the members. Several persons present were received into the League, announcing their willingness to work as much as possible for the success of the organization.

Mr. James McBain acted as chairman, and after the usual opening devotional exercises, a splendid and thoughtful paper was read by Miss L. Thomas. She also quoted two or three bits of verse, which fitted in with the theme of her paper most appropriately.

Several important matters of business were discussed after the meeting. The most important related to the providing of a reception to the Normal students, and the Executive planned to extend the hand of fellowship to the visitors on the night of Oct. 16th. A first-class programme is being arranged for, and an enjoyable evening is anticipated.

Makes Hair Grow

Warne's Drug Store has an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and sets so quickly that people are amazed. A large bottle for 50c.

CRIPPEN MURDER RECALLED

LONDON, SEPT. 30.—The Crippen murder case was recalled recently by the sale of a number of Belle Elmore's possessions by Messrs Debenham, Storr and Sons at their premises in King Street.

The personal belongings of the variety actress were bequeathed by Crippen to Ethel Le Neve, who was acquitted of a share in the murder. The sister of the deceased Belle Elmore contested the will of the murderer, with the result that the goods passed into her possession, and it was on her instructions that they were offered at auction.

The jewellery put up yesterday included three single-stone brilliant rings, a freestone ruby and brilliant ring, a 18-stone brilliant "flaming sun" brooch, a paste butterfly brooch, and a fancy paste bow brooch and watch in case.

The "flaming sun" brooch is the same which witnesses at Crippen's trial declared was worn by Miss Le Neve at a theatrical ball shortly after the death of its former owner.

The prices realised exceeded expectation, and amounted in all to £150. One of the single-stone brilliant rings fetched £65, the purchaser, curiously enough, being Mr. H. Harris, of Houndsditch, the burglary of whose shop last December resulted in the Houndsditch murders and the Sidney Street battle. The notorious "flaming sun" brooch was disposed of for £20 to a Liverpool dealer. Other prices were: Brilliant rings, £25 and £23; brilliant and ruby ring, £13; paste butterfly brooch, £1 7s.; and bow brooch and watch, £2 8s.

Next day about 70 lots were offered —described in the catalogue as "expensive dresses, furs, etc., the wardrobe of lady (deceased) by order of the administratrix." They included an ermine and lace jacket, and an ermine muff and stole, and a profusion of other feminine garments and gaudy adornments. Bric-a-brac from the Crippen domicile and Belle Elmore's photographs were plentiful. Pathetic in the light of her tragic end were two prized certificates of thanks in large frames, testifying to the assistance afforded by Belle Elmore to the Mansion House Committee on the occasion of King Edward's dinner to the poor in 1902.

RELIEF IS QUICK; BUT CURE IS SURE

Napoleon Vaillancourt Speaks of Dodd's Kidney Pills

They soon cured his Kidney troubles, and in six months there is no sign of their coming back.

St. Anne des Monts, Gaspe Co., Que., Oct. 2. (Special).—"It is six months since I was cured, and I have had no return of my trouble," in these words, Napoleon Vaillancourt, a well known resident of this place, gives evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills not only give quick relief to sufferers from Kidney Disease, but clean that disease out, root and branch, and cure it permanently.

That Mr. Vaillancourt had Kidney Disease everyone here knows. That he is cured is also established beyond a doubt. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it.

"My back bothered me, also my heart and my kidneys, and my limbs would cramp," Mr. Vaillancourt states in giving his experience. Now all that is gone and he is a sound healthy man. Do you wonder that he recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills?

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure quickly and permanently because they go right to the root of the trouble. They act directly on the Kidneys. They never fail to cure.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY PILLARS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Complaint has been made in respect to the tapering of the brick pillars or columns, in front of the Public Library building. In the Public Library is a fine new edition of the works of John Ruskin. In the "Stones of Venice," Vol. I, Mr. Ruskin shows that the classical form of the shaft of a column is a curve or taper from end to end. He says—

"The shaft is not to bulge in the centre, but taper from the root in a curved line * * * and we may note generally that while throughout the whole range of Northern work, the perpendicular shape appears in continually clearer development, throughout every Southern group that has inherited the spirit of the Greek, the shaft retains its curved or tapered form."

According to Ruskin, therefore, the Public Library pillars partake of the true classical form, though the taper is too abrupt—begins too near the capital.

THE MAN WITH A TOUPEE

Might Have Had a Good Head of Hair

The man who wears a toupee does not like it, but has the courage of his convictions.

Nature never intended that the top of the head should be left entirely without protection. A bald head is very susceptible to contraction of colds and neuralgia. Wearing an artificial top piece counteracts this tendency, and, aside from the improvement in the personal appearance, is amply justified.

How much better it would have been had the man, now chronically bald and wearing a toupee, but realised earlier in life the approaching danger and devoted a little regular attention to his hair, which would have saved it.

There is a remedy which will absolutely prevent baldness. Loss of hair in nine cases out of ten is unnecessary, being due to dandruff and the germ that causes it. This germ must be destroyed and the accumulations of dandruff checked. Then the hair will not fall out, but instead will grow naturally and luxuriantly.

Newbro's Herpicide is the remedy; regular applications of which will do this. It has long been known as the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ and is absolutely dependable.

So reliable is this preparation that all druggists now sell the one dollar size bottles of Herpicide with a binding guarantee to refund money if unsatisfactory.

Herpicide applications may always be obtained at the better barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

Anyone desiring to try Newbro's Herpicide before purchasing a large bottle will receive a nice sample and booklet by sending 10c. in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

"THE HOTTEST COON IN DIXIE"

The great novelty attraction of the season at the Grand Opera House will be "The Hottest Coon in Dixie," a musical comedy played by all coloured artists, to-morrow (Wednesday) evening, Oct. 4. The Company comprises some of the very best coloured dancers and singers from the Sunny South. A continuous performance is given, something doing all of the time. No waits.

An olio of character specialties is introduced during the action of the piece that cannot be equalled for excellence. Billy Nicholls, America's greatest coloured comedian and entertainer, being the headliner.

Nothing of an objectionable character is introduced, said or done throughout the entire performance.

The Company travel in their own Pullman Palace car, carry a full band and orchestra. A street parade will be given by the male members of the company at noon to-morrow.

THE DUTY ON CLOTHES

One-Third as High in Canada as in the United States.

A good suit of clothes by any London tailor of repute costs about seven guineas, which is $36.25 in Canadian money. The duty on such a suit would be $10.19 additional. Such a suit can be reproduced in Canada by the Semi-ready shop for $30 to $35.

There are suits of shoddy sold in England at as low as 20 shillings, and there are mills in England which can finish shoddy so that none but cloth experts can detect its weakness. Such suits can be imported at $1.50 extra for duty. In the United States the duty on shoddy cloth is prohibitive, but in Canada they make no difference in the duties on shoddy, and real cloth, though they do protect the farmer by prohibiting the manufacture of oleomargarine or imitation butter.

A good suit of clothes costs as much in England as it does in Canada, when one compares costs with the plain marked and fixed prices of the big wholesale tailoring houses like the Semi-ready Company. Real Tweeds, Vicunas, Cheviots, Serges and Worsteds such as are sold in Canada at $15, $20 and $25, cost as much in London shops of equal reputation.

But in the United States, where a duty of 100 per cent. prevails, the cost of clothes is about 25 per cent. higher than in Canada or in England. Canada could export clothing to the United States were it not for the fact that the high tariff has also to be paid on the labour cost. But England could not, because the English styles are different and are not acceptable in America without drastic alterations. The English tailor does not give the "finish" to a garment which is demanded on this side.

There are some men who are willing to stand the "guying" which comes with a suit made in England, but the normal man believes that he should not only conform to the customs, but to the style of the community in which he lives.—Adv.

Death Of Mr. Jas. Chambers

After an illness, which only was apparent since Christmas, on Sunday morning, Sept. 30th, at 5 o'clock, death claimed Mr. James Chambers in the 75th year of his age, at the family residence, 2nd Con., Manvers, Lot 7, near Pontypool, where he has lived 46 out of the 47 years of his married life. Mrs. Chambers, whose maiden name was Ann Jane Byers, still survives her husband, together with their 12 children, all being present in his last hours. The children are Mrs. J. J. McCree, near Jackson Park; Mrs. Thos. Hart of Toronto, Mrs. J. H. Jakeman, near Pontypool; Miss Lulu, Toronto, and Misses Margaret and Sadie of Peterborough; James H., residing on the adjoining farm; W. John, of Toronto, Robert Samuel of Blackstock; Albert Lewis of Milton, Norton David of Muskoka station and Percy Wilmot, the youngest and only unmarried son, residing on the homestead.

The late Mr. Chambers was beloved by all who knew him. It is safe to say he never made an enemy, his bright and happy disposition made him a favourite with all who knew him, and his loss will be mourned by a host of friends. He was a faithful member of the Church of England in his boyhood, but in the absence of this church he attended the Presbyterian church. Service will be conducted at the house on Tuesday at 1.30 and interment will take place in Pontypool. Orono and Bowmanville papers please copy.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I have been making inquiries, and I am told that the citizens of Peterborough pay nine thousand dollars each year for the lighting of our streets.

This is called "The Electric City" and from the name one would naturally suppose that we were blessed with a plentiful supply of electricity, but to judge by the manner in which the streets are being lighted, the name is certainly a misnomer.

Under the contract with The Peterborough Light and Power Company there is a clause which is largely responsible for our streets being left in darkness several nights each month. This occurs at such times as a new moon, or a half moon, or any old moon, is supposed to be on the job.

It matters not what the weather is, or whether the moon is hidden by masses of clouds, or not, as long as there should be moonlight by the calendar, the electric light is not turned on.

Last Thursday evening was a fair sample of the light we get under this contract, nor did Friday and Saturday show any improvement.

Again on Sunday night people coming from church were groping their way in the semi-darkness. Surely our Aldermanic board should wake up to their responsibility in this matter, and deal with it in such a way as to give the citizens a better service for the money it costs every year to light our streets. If the contract is at fault let it be amended so as to give light when light is needed, irrespective of moonshine, or any other consideration, and if the Company is at fault, let them be required to do the right thing. Any way "Let there be light."

WANT PROPER OBSERVANCE OF THANKSGIVING DAY

A plan for the proper observance of Thanksgiving Day in Peterborough was laid before the City Council at its meeting last night by Rev. Canon Davidson and Rev. Jas. Rollins representing the Ministerial Association. As a result steps will be taken to arrange a programme suitable for the occasion by committees representative of the Council and the Association.

Rev. Canon Davidson in bringing up the matter said that it had been suggested to the Ministerial Association at their meeting yesterday morning. They were not present to request anything of or urge anything upon the council, but they merely wished to discuss the plan with the aldermen in order that something might be done. The plan as suggested was to have a large mass meeting in the armouries on the morning of Thanksgiving Day in which the Council, the clergy, the military, the fraternal societies and other bodies might participate, and to be addressed by some prominent speaker from outside. The bands of the 57th and of the Salvation Army had kindly volunteered to do their part. The speaker suggested that the Council might see their way clear to appointing a committee to co-operate with a similar committee from the Ministerial Association.

Rev. Jas. Rollins pointed out that Thanksgiving Day was a day set apart to rejoice and give evidence of gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts. This could be recognized partially by services in the churches, but they felt that a more fitting recognition of the significance of the day could be given by a great meeting in the armouries, in which the people of all creeds might take part.

Wage Cases In Police Court

The case of Tighe vs. Gray, was brought up in the Police Court this morning again. Edward Tighe charged Joseph Gray with the non-payment of wages amounting to $7.00, and Gray alleged that he owed Tighe only $6.15, with the result that judgment was given in favour of Gray, the $6.15 to be paid within eight days. The difference between the men, was only 85 cents, but they were not satisfied to settle it out of court, so will pay several dollars costs for the fun.

James Tierney, a labourer, of 213 Dublin street, got drunk on the 25th of September and was lodged in the cells, where he remained for a week and appeared in Court this morning. Hefi was fined $2.00 with ten days to pay it.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY PILLARS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Complaint has been made in respect to the tapering of the brick pillars or columns, in front of the Public Library building. In the Public Library is a fine new edition of the works of John Ruskin. In the "Stones of Venice," Vol. I, Mr. Ruskin shows that the classical form of the shaft of a column is a curve or taper from end to end. He says—

"The shaft is not to bulge in the centre, but taper from the root in a curved line * * * and we may note generally that while throughout the whole range of Northern work, the perpendicular shape appears in continually clearer development, throughout every Southern group that has inherited the spirit of the Greek, the shaft retains its curved or tapered form."

According to Ruskin, therefore, the Public Library pillars partake of the true classical form, though the taper is too abrupt—begins too near the capital.

THE MAN WITH A TOUPEE
Might Have Had a Good Head of Hair

The man who wears a toupee does not like it, but has the courage of his convictions.

Nature never intended that the top of the head should be left entirely without protection. A bald head is very susceptible to contraction of colds and neuralgia. Wearing an artificial top piece counteracts this tendency, and, aside from the improvement in the personal appearance, is amply justified.

How much better it would have been had the man, now chronically bald and wearing a toupee, but realized earlier in life the approaching danger and devoted a little regular attention to his hair, which would have saved it.

There is a remedy which will absolutely prevent baldness. Loss of hair in nine cases out of ten is unnecessary, being due to dandruff and the germ that causes it. This germ must be destroyed and the accumulations of dandruff checked. Then the hair will not fall out, but instead will grow naturally and luxuriantly.

Newbro's Herpicide is the remedy, regular applications of which will do this. It has long been known as the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ and is absolutely dependable.

So reliable is this preparation that all druggists now sell the one dollar size bottles of Herpicide with a binding guarantee to refund money if unsatisfactory.

Herpicide applications may always be obtained at the better barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

Anyone desiring to try Newbro's Herpicide before purchasing a large bottle will receive a nice sample and booklet by sending 10c. in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

"THE HOTTEST COON IN DIXIE"

The great novelty attraction of the season at the Grand Opera House will be "The Hottest Coon in Dixie," a musical comedy played by all coloured artists, to-morrow (Wednesday) evening, Oct. 4. The Company comprises some of the very best coloured dancers and singers from the Sunny South. A continuous performance is given, something doing all of the time. No waits.

An olio of character specialties is introduced during the action of the piece that cannot be equalled for excellence. Billy Nicholls, America's greatest coloured comedian and entertainer, being the headliner.

Nothing of an objectionable character is introduced, said or done throughout the entire performance.

The Company travel in their own Pullman Palace car, carry a full band and orchestra. A street parade will be given by the male members of the company at noon to-morrow.

THE DUTY ON CLOTHES
One-Third as High in Canada as in the United States.

A good suit of clothes by any London tailor of repute costs about seven guineas, which is $36.25 in Canadian money. The duty on such a suit would be $10.49 additional. Such a suit can be reproduced in Canada by the Semi-ready shop for $20 to $35.

There are suits of shoddy sold in England at as low as 20 shillings, and there are mills in England which can finish shoddy so that none but cloth experts can detect its weakness. Such suits can be imported at $1.50 extra for duty. In the United States the duty on shoddy cloth is prohibitive, but in Canada they make no difference in the duties on shoddy, and real cloth, though they do protect the farmer by prohibiting the manufacture of oleomargarine or imitation butter.

A good suit of clothes costs as much in England as it does in Canada, when one compares costs with the plain marked and fixed prices of the big wholesale tailoring houses like the Semi-ready Company. Real Tweeds, Vicunas, Cheviots, Serges and Worsteds such as are sold in Canada at $15, $20 and $25, cost as much in London shops of equal reputation.

But in the United States, where a duty of 100 per cent. prevails, the cost of clothes is about 25 per cent. higher than in Canada or in England. Canada could export clothing to the United States were it not for the fact that the high tariff has also to be paid on the labour cost. But England could not, because the English styles are different and are not acceptable in America without drastic alterations. The English tailor does not give the "finish" to a garment which is demanded on this side.

There are some men who are willing to stand the "guying" which comes with a suit made in England, but the normal man believes that he should not only conform to the customs, but to the style of the community in which he lives.—Adv.

Death Of Mr. Jas. Chambers

After an illness, which only was apparent since Christmas, on Sunday morning, Sept. 39th, at 5 o'clock, death claimed Mr. James Chambers in the 75th year of his age, at the family residence, 2nd Con., Manvers. Lot 7, near Pontypool, where he has lived 46 out of the 47 years of his married life. Mrs. Chambers, whose maiden name was Ann Jane Byers, still survives her husband, together with their 12 children, all being present in his last hours. The children are Mrs. J. J. McCree, near Jackson Park; Mrs. Thos. Hart of Toronto, Mrs. J. H. Jakeman, near Pontypool; Miss Lulu, Toronto, and Misses Margaret and Sadie of Peterborough; James H., residing on the adjoining farm; W. John, of Toronto, Robert Samuel of Blackstock; Albert Lewis of Milton, Norton David of Muskoka station and Percy Wilmot, the youngest and only unmarried son, residing on the homestead.

The late Mr. Chambers was beloved by all who knew him. It is safe to say he never made an enemy, his bright and happy disposition made him a favourite with all who knew him, and his loss will be mourned by a host of friends. He was a faithful member of the Church of England in his boyhood, but in the absence of this church he attended the Presbyterian church. Service will be conducted at the house on Tuesday at 1.30 and interment will take place in Pontypool. Orono and Bowmanville papers please copy.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I have been making inquiries, and I am told that the citizens of Peterborough pay nine thousand dollars each year for the lighting of our streets.

This is called "The Electric City" and from the name one would naturally suppose that we were blessed with a plentiful supply of electricity, but to judge by the manner in which the streets are being lighted, the name is certainly a misnomer.

Under the contract with The Peterborough Light and Power Company there is a clause which is largely responsible for our streets being left in darkness several nights each month. This occurs at such times as a new moon, or a half moon, or any old moon, is supposed to be on the job.

It matters not what the weather is, or whether the moon is hidden by masses of clouds, or not, as long as there should be moonlight by the calendar, the electric light is not turned on.

Last Thursday evening was a fair example of the light we get under this contract, nor did Friday and Saturday show any improvement.

Again on Sunday night people coming from church were groping their way in the semi-darkness. Surely our Aldermanic board should wake up to their responsibility in this matter, and deal with it in such a way as to give the citizens a better service for the money it costs every year to light our streets. If the contract is at fault let it be amended so as to give light when light is needed, irrespective of moonshine, or any other consideration, and if the Company is at fault, let them be required to do the right thing. Any way "Let there be light."

WANT PROPER OBSERVANCE OF THANKSGIVING DAY

A plan for the proper observance of Thanksgiving Day in Peterborough was laid before the City Council at its meeting last night by Rev. Canon Davidson and Rev. Jas. Rollins representing the Ministerial Association. As a result steps will be taken to arrange a programme suitable for the occasion by committees representative of the Council and the Association.

Rev. Canon Davidson in bringing up the matter said that it had been suggested to the Ministerial Association at their meeting yesterday morning. They were not present to request anything of or urge anything upon the council, but they merely wished to discuss the plan with the aldermen in order that something might be done. The plan as suggested was to have a large mass meeting in the armouries on the morning of Thanksgiving Day in which the Council, the clergy, the military, the fraternal societies and other bodies might participate, and to be addressed by some prominent speaker from outside. The bands of the 57th and of the Salvation Army had kindly volunteered to do their part. The speaker suggested that the Council might see their way clear to appointing a committee to co-operate with a similar committee from the Ministerial Association.

Rev. Jas. Rollins pointed out that Thanksgiving Day was a day set apart to rejoice and give evidence of gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts. This could be recognized partially by services in the churches, but they felt that a more fitting recognition of the significance of the day could be given by a great meeting in the armouries, in which the people of all creeds might take part.

Wage Cases In Police Court

The case of Tighe vs. Gray, was brought up in the Police Court this morning again. Edward Tighe charged Joseph Gray with the non-payment of wages amounting to $7.00, and Gray alleged that he owed Tighe only $6.15, with the result that judgment was given in favour of Gray, the $6.15 to be paid within eight days. The difference between the men, was only 85 cents, but they were not satisfied to settle it out of court, so will pay several dollars costs for the fun.

James Tierney, a labourer, of 213 Dublin street, got drunk on the 25th of September and was lodged in the cells, where he remained for a week and appeared in Court this morning. Heft was fined $2.00 with ten days to pay it.

Cabinet Cannot Possibly Resign Until Thursday

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 3.—The resignation of the Laurier cabinet and summoning of R. L. Borden by Governor-General will not take place before Thursday at the earliest. His Excellency leaves this afternoon for Montreal to attend the farewell dinner, to be given in his honour at Mount Royal Club this evening. He will return to Ottawa on Wednesday night and will be available for change of Government on Thursday if Sir Wilfrid is ready by that time. This disposes of the story that the new cabinet would be sworn in Montreal.

CHANGE OF TRAIN SERVICE

Commencing on October 2nd the Lakefield train service will be changed as follows: The train which has been leaving here at 8.30 a.m. will now leave at 7.00 a.m. and returning will arrive in Peterboro 8.15 a.m. The noon train for Lakefield will leave at 12.20 and returning will arrive Peterboro 5.15 p.m. The evening train is discontinued. The public will be glad to learn that the new service inaugurated this Summer to Port Hope will be maintained throughout the Winter and will thus enable all passengers to leave Toronto at 9.00 a.m. and arrive in Peterboro at mid-day. This train also affords good connection for all Eastern points to Montreal and Boston. 12d-77

Could Have Averted The Disaster

Special to The Examiner.

AUSTIN, PENN, OCT. 3.— Bodies have been found twenty-four miles away from the scene of the disaster. There has been a suggestion that the authorities burn up the debris in the streets with the bodies within, but public opinion is against that. Perhaps the most pathetic figure of the whole disaster to-day is Margaret Ducker, the stenographer at the mill, who first received the message that the dam had gone. She then had a chance to alarm all in the mill and most people in town but she simply laughed and hung up the receiver. Again she got a similar message through the telephone, but she would not believe it and the waters overwhelmed mills and town to-day. She is mad and hysterical, laughing continuously, except when she takes to sobbing and crying. "I've killed the whole town and my own mother, too."

THEY INJURE CHILDREN

Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physics May Cause Distressing Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given. Ordinary pills, cathartics, and purgatives are too apt to do more harm than good. They sometimes cause griping, nausea, and distressing after-effects, and may actually injure the health, thus establishing a life-lasting annoyance.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as a safe and dependable remedy for constipation and associatae bowel disorders. We have such faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies not only relieve constipation, but help to remove the cause of this ailment. They also frequently overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition.

There is really, in our opinion, no similar medicine so good as Rexall Orderlies for the purpose to which it is directed, especially for children, aged and delicate persons. They are prepared in tablet form and in two sizes of packages; 12 tablets, 10c., 36 tablets, 25c., and 80 tablets, 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

At the Right End of Time are the men and women who never wait till coal is in hand when a new wardrobe is needed. Try their habit of using our method of Suspense Clothing on credit and you'll be, like them, at the head of life's procession. Call and we'll explain. Millinery, all kinds trimmed and untrimmed, positively the latest styles and at very lowest prices. Men's suits and overcoats and pants all at reduced prices. FIRE HALL BURNS

One Man is Killed and Several Hurt at Quebec

STATION A MASS OF RUINS

Quebec, Oct. 4.—Buried in the debris, the body of Fireman Labarre of No. 4 station was taken out by his companies last night at 10:30 from the ruins of No. 5 fire station, which was utterly wrecked by fire which broke out shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The blaze was attended with a number of sensational incidents, the fire spreading so rapidly that the whole station was a mass of flames within a few minutes, and the occupants in the upper stories were cut off by the blaze. Mrs. Savard, the widow of Fireman Savard, who was buried Monday, had to jump from the third storey to save herself, and sustained injuries which may prove fatal, and Mrs. Lemelin and Messrs. Louis Lanouette and Telespore Savard, who also jumped, were more or less seriously injured.

While the firemen were at work the floors suddenly collapsed and four men were hurled into the cellar. All managed to escape except Labarre, who was pinned under a heavy beam, and covered with the falling debris.

The occupants of the upper stories of the building had narrow escapes from death. The two women who jumped in an endeavor to catch the ladder, which was a storey below them, were badly injured, but at latest accounts from the hospital were doing well. Mrs. Savard was caught in the rungs of the ladder and remained suspended head downward struggling for some time in the midst of the flames which were bursting out of the windows.

The fire is supposed to have started in the stables.

Resists Arrest to Death.

Jonesville, Va., Oct. 4.—In a fight between a sheriff's posse and kinsmen of a young woman wanted as a murder trial witness at Gibson's Station, Va., yesterday, a deputy sheriff was killed and two other officers wounded, one fatally.

The posse was beaten off, and another has been organized here to regain the bodies of the victims and arrest the men who did the shooting.

The posse, headed by James Collins, went to the house of George Smith, near Gibson's Station, Va., to arrest Mrs. Zirakla Denny Barnett, as a material witness against her brother, Charles Denny, accused of murder.

Mrs. Barnett was willing to go with the officers, but her kinsmen, the Smiths, fired on them.

Flagg's Tangled Skein.

New York, Oct. 4.—The bail of E. Tennyson Neeley, the publisher, who was one of eight men arrested at the recent "52 per cent. brokerage" raid, was yesterday reduced from $10,000 to $2,500, and Neeley was released from the Tombs. It is reported that Madeline Russe, Flagg's telephone girl, who is said to know much about his methods, is gravely ill at her home in White Plains.

Crew Safely Landed.

Tripoli Reported to Have Been Invaded by the Italians

PREVESA THREATENED

London, Oct. 4.—The last official word from Tripoli comes from Vice-Admiral Faravelli, who notified the Italian Government that he had given the Turkish commander until noon Tuesday to surrender.

A special edition of The Rome Tribuna publishes the statement that the Italian cruisers entered the harbor of Tripoli Tuesday afternoon, bombarded the forts and the governor's castle, made a landing and hoisted the Italian flag.

The most important naval capture of the war so far is that of the Turkish transport Sabah, with a Turkish general, a large contingent of troops and much ammunition aboard.

Corfu reports that the Duke of Abruzzi, in command of a torpedo flotilla off Prevesa, threatens a bombardment of that place.

The Porte's appeal to the powers has been answered by the powers to the effect that they cannot offer mediation until a basis of settlement is suggested on the lines of the Italian demands.

Late reports from Constantinople say that the new Cabinet has been nominated and that it will continue the policy looking to mediation.

The Turkish battleships and a cruiser have been sent to reinforce the squadron in the Dardanelles. Turkey, it is stated, has troops aboard two Russian steamers now held up at Suez. This tends to confirm the Vienna report that Turkey has ordered the Yemon expeditionary force to occupy the coast of the Italian colony of Eitrirea, with the support of a squadron of warships.

No Further Development.

London, Oct. 4.—The lapse of another day leaves the Turco-Italian war without further development. There is no confirmation of the alleged bombardment of Tripoli, which appears unlikely to have happened, as it will yet be several days before the expeditionary force is ready to leave Italian shores.

Apparently the Italian Government is apprehensive that the Turkish fleet may be able to hamper the passage of transports, and great precautions are being taken. The expedition will be started from ports in two seas, rather than from South Italy and Sicily, in order to minimize that danger, and evidently Italy is in no hurry to get the expedition on the way.

Another reason for the delay of warlike operations is the continuence of the Turkish Cabinet crisis. Clearly, the old Ministers are remaining in office against their will and are unable to formulate or agree upon any definite line of action. It is even reported that the Minister of Marine has resigned on account of flagrant disobedience of his orders to the fleet.

Meanwhile the pour parleurs of the Powers continue without intermission. It is said that Russia is now supporting Germany in her efforts to bring about peace.

A report comes from Agosta that the Turkish transport Derna changed her name to "Eitel Frederich" and flew the German flag while running the blockade at Tripoli, and that her officers were proud of eluding pursuit.

But, it is pointed out in the report she must have been captured two hundred miles from Tripoli, and not the Italians wanted her arrival at Tripoli and the landing of arms as a pretext to declare war.

Duke Turns Fierce.

Corfu, Oct. 4.—Vice-Admiral the Duke of Abruzzi has sent an ultimatum to the vali of Prevesa threatening a bombardment unless he surrenders the Turkish warships which have taken refuge in the harbor.

Turkey's Other Cheek Slapped.

Constantinople, Oct. 4.—Replies to the Porte's appeal have been received from most of the powers, but, as was expected, they afford little satisfaction. In effect the powers say they will be unable to offer mediation until the Porte offers a basis of settlement along the lines of the Italian demands set forth in the ultimatum.

The Austrian ambassador had a long interview with the grand vizier yesterday afternoon, and it is announced that the Russian ambassador will visit him to-day, but it is questionable whether Said Pasha will be able to remain in office another day.

Halil Pasha, the Minister of the Interior, insists upon the acceptance of his resignation, but the grand vizier wishes him to accept another portfolio. French efforts have been made to prevail upon Hilmi Pasha to take the Ministry of the Interior.

Turkish telegrams report that an Italian warship has sunk two motor boats near Hadeida, a seaport on the Red Sea, and pursued the Turkish destroyer Peikisnevket.

Really Rather Premature.

Providence, R.I., Oct. 4.—Having gaised $1,000 for the purpose of celebrating Columbus Day by an exhibition of fireworks, the Italian Professional and Business Men's Association decided yesterday to donate the money to the Red Cross Fund to be used in the care of Italian soldiers in the present war.

Big Tank Falls.

Hamilton, Oct. 4.—A big tank containing about 15,000 gallons of water fell from the roof of George E. Bristol & Co.'s warehouse on Macnab street, north, yesterday afternoon, and crashed through three floors into the cellar of the John E. Brown building, immediately north. The falling of the tank was accompanied with a deafening report and the keenest apprehension as to the results of the accident existed until it was discovered that no one had been injured.

Best in the World.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—The Senators and members of Parliament for the Island of Montreal and representatives of the councils of the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were taken for a tour of the harbor on the harbor commission's tug, Sir Hugh Allan, at noon yesterday.

About seventy business men of the city accepted the invitation of the commissioners.

The tour was in conformity to the plan of the harbor board to enable the business leaders of the city to understand what is being done to develop the harbor and river.

Chairman George W. Stephens said the commissioners' ambition was to make the harbor the best in the world.

Killed His Own Son.

New York, Oct. 4.—"Stop! You have killed your boy," was the cry which yesterday informed Percy Greeley, a truck driver, that he had crushed his three-year-old son to death.

Greeley rushed back, and, picking up his son's body, wept over it until a patrolman arrived and took him to the nearest police station.

Greeley, employed by a blacksmith firm, was starting out at noon with a load of iron when a hoop which was rolling along the sidewalk dropped into the street. His boy reached between the wheels for it and his head was crushed by the rear wheel.

Crushed Between Cars.

Niagara Falls, Oct. 4.—On his fourth trip since entering railroad's service, Harry Webb, brakeman, Buffalo, was killed while leaving the Falls for Buffalo yesterday. He was crushed between two cars.

For the second time since being rebuilt, the Clifton Hotel closed for the winter season yesterday. Keeping the hotel open during the winter proved unsuccessful.

Mrs. R. O'Neill, mother of Father B. J. O'Neill, rector of Church of Our Lady of Peace, died at the family home here yesterday. She was one of the city's oldest residents.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

There is a widespread feeling in India that a famine is impending in various parts of the country.

His Excellency Earl Grey, Countess Grey and the Ladies Sybil and Evelyn Grey will sail for England on October 13.

The recount in Shefford County yesterday reduced the majority of the successful candidate, G. H. Boivin from 30 to 24.

Walter Oakes, section man, was instantly killed at Bedford, N.S., Monday afternoon. He was on a hand car when a freight struck it.

The latest news from the steamer Empress of China, which went ashore in Oriental waters July 26, is that the vessel is likely to be a total loss.

Sentence of death was meted out by Judge Lamont at Saskatoon to Jas Alak, the murderer of Vanscoy. Execution will take place at Prince Albert, Nov. 28.

Incoming steamers report having encountered in the North Sea the worst storm they have experienced in several decades. A number of wrecked vessels were passed.

The damage to the Canadian navy has been put into figures. The Niobe cannot be repaired under an expenditure of $400,000, or forty per cent. of her total original cost to the Canadian Government.

For his bravery Daniel Bond, aged 24, may lose his life. He attacked and choked to death a dog suffering with hydrophobia just as the animal was making its way toward a group of children at Atlantic City.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Left two days in a room without food, an infant six weeks old died yesterday morning at St. Justin Hospital from the effects of starvation.

The circumstances show a man and woman, who were probably the parents of the child, went to a house on Sanquinet street two or three days ago and hired a room for a month. The occupant of the house did not notice that they had a baby with them. They occupied the room for an hour or so and then went out.

At the end of two days, as they had not returned, the landlord went to the door of the room to see if it was locked, when he was astounded to hear a faint cry inside. He entered and found the baby, dying from hunger. It was taken at once to the hospital, but its life could not be saved.

Fighting In Mexico.

Mexico City, Oct. 4.—While the Mexican civil authorities are trying to solve the problem of the vice-presidential election held last Sunday, federal troops, under Romulo Figueroa, are making a vigorous campaign to wipe out the rebels, headed by Gen. Zapata, in accordance with the Government's decision to give them no quarter.

A battle occurred on Monday near Santa Barbara, at the junction of the States of Puebla, Guerrero and Oaxaca. Zapata's force of 800 men was routed, with considerable loss. The federals captured six chiefs, and many rebels were made prisoners. Zapata escaped.

A clash between the federal troops and the people of Tehuantepec, in the State of Oaxaca, resulted in a number of persons being killed.

Assassin a Shop Clerk.

Helsingfors, Finland, Oct. 4.—The self-slain assassin Monday of M. Von Hellen, president of the High Court of Justice at Abo, was identified yesterday as a shop clerk named Loefdahls, who was 24 years of age. The authorities state that the motive for the crime was undoubtedly political.

The victim for a short time in 1905 was procurator general. He was leaving his home late Monday night when Loefdahls, who had hidden behind the outer door, fired two shots. The fatal wound was in the heart. The second bullet entered the left arm.

Liberal Seat Protested.

Ste. Scholastique, Que., Oct. 4.—G. Andre Fauteaux, Conservative-Nationalist candidate in the division of Two Mountains, has contested the election of J. A. C. Ethier, Liberal, who was declared elected by acclamation, owing to certain technical irregularities in Mr. Fauteaux's nomination papers. The protest was formally entered in court here yesterday, Mr. Fauteaux stating that as both candidates were present with their deposits on nomination day and as his papers were accepted at the time, a poll should have been held.

METHODISTS MEET

Fourth Great Ecumenical Congress Begins in Toronto

800 DELEGATES

Toronto, Oct. 4.—With the drop of the gavel this morning at 10 o'clock, in the hands of the president, Rev. A. Carman, D.D., in the Metropolitan Methodist Church in Toronto, the Ecumenical Conference of Methodism for the fourth time, was in full swing, and will go down in history as one of the greatest and most important religious gatherings ever brought together in the world's history, representing 30,000,000 adherents and with delegates present from every part of the inhabited world. The word "ecumenical" derived from the Greek, means "from all the earth," and is well chosen for this representative body.

At the opening of the conference this morning, the official sermon was preached by Rev. Henry Haigh of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, president of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference. The morning session concluded with the administering of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, by Bishop J. M. Walden, D.D., Bishop A. W. Wilson, D.D., Bishop B. F. Lee, D.D., Rev. Henry Haigh, Rev. Edwin Dalton and Rev. George Packer, Bishop A. W. Wilson, D.D., of Baltimore, Bishop of M. E. Church South, for thirty years, will preach at the afternoon session, beginning at 2.30. After devotional services by Rev. J. E. Dickey, D.D., will follow the election of officers on nomination of business committee.

Addresses of welcome were delivered by Rev. Wm. Briggs, D.D., Bishop J. W. Hamilton, D.D., Bishop H. B. Parks, D.D., and Bishop E. E. Hass, D.D., and will be responded to by Rev. Henry Haigh, Rev. S. S. Henshaw, Sir Robert W. Perks, Bart., and Mr. R. W. Essex, M.P.

The ecumenical conference meets once in every ten years, and this meeting is the second one to be held on this side of the Atlantic, the first, which was the second ever held, was in Washington, D.C.

Two hundred of the five hundred delegates present represent the eastern section, which includes all who cross the ocean, while the other three hundred represent the western section, comprising the whole of the American continent.

There is installed for the convenience of the delegates a branch of the postoffice in the church, where mail will be delivered and despatched to all parts of the world.

Among the many social events which will take place during the conference, which lasts from Oct. 4 to 17, will be a reception at the City Hall to-morrow at 4.30 p.m, and on Saturday afternoon his honor the Lieutenant-Governor will give a garden party on the grounds of the Government House. Covers will be laid for 800 at a banquet to be given the delegates in Massey Hall by the Methodist Social Union, on Friday evening.

A party of 35 or 40 English delegates who have been enjoying the scenery of the mountains, arrived last night on a special train, in charge of Rev. Blackburn Fitzgerald of Leeds, and are enthusiastic in their praise for Canada and her wonderful resources. Fifty-one colored delegates will be in attendance, representing the African Methodist Episcopal Church, African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Many addresses will be made during the conference, covering every feature of religious work and new departments proposed by some of the brightest minds of Methodism, and much valuable information will be derived by those in attendance.

Church Union In New York.

New York, Oct. 4.—Steps toward a federation of the Presbyterian Reformed, Congregational, United Presbyterian, and the Reformed Episcopal churches in New York city and vicinity are being taken here under the direction of the Presbytery of New York.

The plan as outlined provides that the denominations, "while maintaining their present position as integral elements of their respective communions, shall unite loyally and pray, plan and work together as one church in the city."

Taft Is Bold.

Denver, Oct. 4.—In a speech to the Public Lands Convention here yesterday, President Taft flatly disagreed with the sentiment of that convention in regard to the leasing of public lands by the Federal Government expressed in resolutions adopted Monday. The President declared that the west needed capital to develop its public lands and said that only through a federal leasing system could such capital be induced to come west.

Earl Grey In Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Their Excellencies Earl and Countess Grey and the Ladies Sybil and Evelyn Grey arrived in Montreal last evening. Last night they attended a reception at the Mount Royal Club.

This morning His Excellency officially unveiled the statue in memory of the late John Young, who did so much for the development of the port, and will then take a trip around the harbor in one of the harbor commissioner's tugs.

In the evening a banquet will be tendered His Excellency at the Windsor Hotel.

IS NOW IDENTIFIED.

Six Hundred Laborers Are at Work In Austin.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 4.—With six bodies recovered from the flood wreckage here yesterday, the face of another, and a skull so badly charred that neither the sex nor the approximate age of the victim could be determined, the total number of known dead in the catastrophe that almost obliterated this community last Saturday, now stands at 38. All but one of the bodies were identified.

Although the expected number of laborers have not come in, there were approximately 600 at work clearing up the wreckage yesterday, and the chaotic appearance of the village is fast being changed. Several families were enabled, with official permission, to take out what was of use of their household goods.

With the almost hourly revision of the list of missing it is impossible to make an accurate statement of the dead. The feeling is expressed that a number of the dead will never be found. Those not having been consumed in the fire, it is believed, will have lost any semblance to a human body before being discovered, so deeply have they been buried in the wreckage, which frightfully tore and mangled the bodies that have been recovered.

The body of Arthur Ainsworth, one of those recovered yesterday, was found pinned down to what was the sidewalk by a heavy sign that marked his legal office. Ainsworth was a former district attorney of Potter County. The position of the body and conditions surrounding indicate that he had been buried in the avalanche of debris while leaving his office.

The body of Mrs. A. C. Brown, recovered last Monday, was found by Capt. Schell and Sergt. Simmons of the State Constabulary, who had gone out to select a site for a tent in which to house some of the laborers. The men stepped on some loose planks, which yielded, and upon lifting them they found the body.

Favored Nations Again.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The question of admitting wood, pulp and paper into the United States from all countries free of duty, as a result of the only operative section of the Canadian reciprocity agreement, was officially raised in the Treasury Department yesterday.

No More Men Needed.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—No more men will be hired at present to fill the places of strikers on the Illinois Central Railroad, according to a statement issued last night from the office of Vice-President Park.

Woman's World

MISS MADGE CLAIBORNE.

Miss Madge Claiborne, a pretty Texas girl, has hit upon an odd and unusual way of earning a livelihood. She paints street signs. Any fair day she may be seen gowned in a neat shirt waist, tailored skirt and sailor hat on the streets of New York city painting signs for a large advertising firm that advertises everything from straight front corsets to plug cut tobacco.

Miss Claiborne comes from a noted southern family. A great-grandfather of hers, though a Virginian by birth, was a governor of Louisiana. This sign painting work was taken up by Miss Claiborne as a means to an artistic end. Being convinced that she could paint big billboards as well as a man, she applied for the job and got it.

This plucky young woman has done some very creditable miniature studies and is ambitious of making this branch of art her life work.

Speaking of sign painting, Miss Claiborne says it is no more tiresome than standing all day behind a counter waiting on customers, and, besides, it has the advantage of being an outdoor occupation and much more healthful than shut-in work.

When asked if her work subjected her to annoying notoriety, she replied: "Once in awhile some 'smarty' comes along and says something that makes me want to jump down and wring his neck, and maybe I'll do it some day, but I try to curb myself and keep my mind on my work. There is one advantage—I can turn my back on the crowds while I paint."

Apropos of the suffrage question, Miss Claiborne thinks that it has raised the intellectual status of women, but she is not sure they need the ballot.

Kuehne Beveridge in Munich.

Miss Kuehne Beveridge, the talented American sculptress who created a sensation at Leipzig not long ago with some passionate groups, has completed at Munich the bust of Prince Ludwig Ferdinand of Bavaria, for which the prince has been sitting to her.

In addition she has finished a statue of Amfortas, the keeper of the Holy Grail, which Munich critics declare to be her best work. The model for the statue was Clarence Whitehill of the Metropolitan Opera, New York, who created the role of Amfortas in Wagner's "Parsifal" in America and has also sung the part in Baireuth.

Writing of the statue, a Munich critic says:

"The conception is simple and yet powerful; it is dramatic and yet elegiac—the hands alone would make this work remarkable. They are the hands of a strong man and a gentle man; they are wasted by suffering almost to emaciation, but their beauty of line and character remains."

Mrs. Taft's Favorite Books.

Mrs. Taft's favorite book is "Pride and Prejudice," by Jane Austen, and this fine old novel is the gift which she invariably makes to the daughters of her friends who are about to make their debut in society. She considers that a careful reading of this book will give breadth to a young girl's mind. Mrs. Taft is partial to all the books of Jane Austen and she prefers the old novels to the new. Her table in the pretty nook at the west end of the second floor corridor is always filled with books. Some of them are new ones recommended by friends, but always there are one or more well worn volumes which she loved as a girl and which she delights to reread at odd moments. Among these are "Our Village," by Miss Mitford, and Mrs. Gaskell's charming stories.

A Wig and a Tragedy.

It is just as well that our enthusiasm for oriental curiosities should be tempered by discretion. Eastern antiquities may be picturesque and with all the charm of mystery, but at the same time they may have a history that, if known, would consign them to the stove without benefit of clergy. Here is a story bearing upon the point and with its obvious moral. A young and extremely pretty girl went to a fancy dress ball in Chinese costume. The triumph of her makeup was a real oriental wig, and she wore it proudly. Some time after a strange mark appeared on her forehead, and this was treated as a trifling skin affection. But it refused to disappear; in fact, it grew larger, and then the specialist was consulted. It was leprosy.—Argonaut.

Color of Lightning.

The color of lightning is almost entirely due to the nature of the substance in its track that is made incandescent. The blue, red, purple or silver tints, which are ordinarily much more brilliantly marked in tropical countries than they ever are in this latitude, are due to the same circumstance as that which produces the color designedly communicated to the light of different kinds of fireworks. Each different foreign ingredient that floats in the air has its own proper hue, which it can communicate to the lightning. The vapor of iron has one kind of shine and the vapor of sulphur another.—Harper's Weekly.

Stolen Eloquence.

"It is better to be silent," said a prominent clergyman, "than to be eloquent by unfair means.

"There was once a divine whose good wife said to him:

"'James, dear, the Rev. Dr. Tenthly has made over $200 by the publication of a volume of sermons. You preach much better than Dr. Tenthly, dear. Why not print a few of your sermons?'

"'My love,' the man whispered hoarsely, 'they were all printed long ago.'"

A National Mistake.

"I wonder why the English people have taken the rose as their national flower?

"Why not?"

"Judging by the way their peerage hunt American fortunes, I should think a more appropriate floral emblem would be marygold."—Baltimore American.

"Pa, what did Herodotus do?"

"Oh, I think he won a purse that was offered for three-year-olds once. Say, can't you quit bothering me when I'm trying to read what is going on in the world?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Too Great a Sacrifice.

She (weary of waiting)—If you sell t' dog, John, we could get married. He—An' wouldn't O! look silly to sell a dog like that to be married!—London Opinion.

HEART DISEASE CURED

Kingston Girl Saved by "Fruit-a-tives"

Heart Weakness and Heart Irritation are the common outgrowth of Indigestion. Gas is formed in the stomach and this accumulation of gas bulges out the walls of the stomach and presses against the heart. Palpitation, pain over the heart, and sometimes a feeling of smothering and dizziness, all are caused by the stomach and not because of any organic heart disease.

91 CLERGY ST., KINGSTON, ONT.

"I suffered for some years with a dangerous form of Heart Trouble. My heart beat violently, and I had pain over the heart and down the arms. I also suffered with Constipation and Indigestion. I was treated by physicians and took many remedies, but nothing did me any good. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives", and this medicine completely cured me of all the heart trouble, constipation and indigestion, and gave me back perfect health."

Cookery Points

A Queen's Pantry.

Queen Mary's pantry at Windsor is said to contain the most valuable collection of tableware in the world. Every reign since Queen Elizabeth's has contributed to the collection, which is stored in two rooms. The walls are lined with cases made of glass and mahogany, with similar cases occupying the center of each room. The most imposing thing in these two rooms is the dinner service of solid gold used only for dinners of the highest state. There is a table of solid silver three feet in length. A rose water fountain of silver has a dome supported on columns around which are grouped horses and hounds. A silver gilt flagon almost a yard high is said to have been saved from the armada. A pair of bellows mounted in silver and gold was once the property of Nell Gwyn. There is a massive pair of firedogs in solid silver made for Charles II., and a huge punchbowl was contributed by George IV.

Properties of Buttermilk.

Some doctors go so far as to say that there is no case of indigestion that cannot be cured by plain buttermilk. Perhaps this accounts for the present fad for it.

At any rate, it is a hearty food, and two glasses a day are enough for any one. It is said to take over an hour for it to digest thoroughly, and if more food is put into the stomach before it has disposed of what is already there, with a little time besides for rest, more harm is done than good.

So the best time to drink buttermilk is with the meals, and its mild acid acts beneficially on all the juices of the stomach. It is this acid which has such an excellent effect upon tanned, freckled and sunburned skins, and it bleaches as well as cools and heals.

Nut Bread Sandwiches.

These are always popular and decidedly "filling." To make the bread scald a half cupful of milk, add a half cupful of boiling water and when cooled to lukewarm stir into it three-fourth cake compressed yeast dissolved in three tablespoonfuls lukewarm water. Add a half teaspoonful each butter and lard, two tablespoonfuls molasses, a cupful chopped pecans or English walnut meats, a half cupful white flour, a half teaspoonful salt and enough whole wheat flour to make a dough that can be kneaded. Knead, raise and bake like ordinary bread. Butter and currant jelly make a delectable filling for nut bread.

Chicken Mold.

Boil a large chicken till all the bones can be easily removed; separate the dark meat from the light and chop each separately—not too fine; season each part with pepper, salt, sage and chopped celery; add some browning to the liquor that the chicken was boiled in; beat one egg well and add half to the dark meat and half to the light meat; mix well, then arrange in mold, first a layer of dark, then a layer of light meat, and so on till all is used. Pour the liquor over the whole, cover with a plate with a weight on top. When cold serve cut in slices garnished with celery tops and slices of lemon.

A Fresh Egg Dish.

For eggs as a French chef prepares them fry half a small onion sliced in butter until it is golden brown. Then turn in a cupful of tomatoes, seasoned with butter, salt and pepper, and cook for ten minutes. Turn the mixture into a wide bottom saucepan and drop into it eggs that have not had the yolks broken. Cook them slowly, lifting them from the bottom of the dish with a fork, not stirring them as in scrambling.

Peach Meringue.

Peel a half dozen ripe peaches, stew and press through a colander. Line a deep pie dish with pie paste, sweeten the peaches, pour the dish even full and bake in a hot oven a scant half hour. Heat the whites of three eggs to a froth, add three teaspoonfuls of sugar and a half teaspoonful of vanilla. Heap the beaten white over the pie after the latter has cooled slightly, replace in the oven and brown.

Green Corn Pudding.

Take one quart of corn, either canned or green, though fresh cut from the cob is preferred; beat four eggs, the whites and yolks separately. To the beaten yolks add a tablespoonful of sugar, two of butter and one quart of milk. Season to taste with salt and white pepper, stir in the corn and, lastly, the stiffly beaten whites. Pour the mixture in a buttered pudding dish, bake an hour in a moderate oven and serve with roast meat or fowl.

Eggplant With Onions.

Run a good sized onion through the food chopper and fry it a delicate brown in one tablespoonful of butter. Then add the mashed eggplant pulp, stir the two thoroughly so that the ingredients are well mixed, season with cayenne pepper, black pepper and salt, to suit the taste. Cook until the mass sticks to the bottom of the pan.

New Waltz Popular in Resorts.

"The Sleepy Love" waltz is the newest thing in the fashionable seashore resorts. It was originated recently by the National Academy of Dancing in Paris and imported quickly for the entertainment of the young persons who crowd the seashore hotels. It is danced to waltz time, but the music is slow—a sort of lullaby. It was tried in Atlantic City and became popular immediately. In Long Branch, Seabright and on Long Beach it has been taken up, and the young folk are having much fun trying to learn the odd steps. The orchestras find it difficult to get the time accurate, but once the dancers get the spirit of the music they are able to dance the new step without difficulty.

Duchess of Roxburghe's Emeralds.

The Duchess of Roxburghe has added another great emerald to her wonderful collection. The emerald, which is mounted in a circle of diamonds, was carried to London by an oriental potentate who went there for the coronation.

The duchess has the finest collection of emeralds known with the exception of that of the German empress. Included in her collection are two necklaces of cut emeralds and two ropes of cabochon emeralds of great size, a tiara of diamonds and emeralds and a stomacher of diamonds and emeralds.

Laughed Too Soon.

Shoes.

Shoes, as at present, were known as "rights" and "lefts" in Shakespeare's day. He described a smith as "standing on slippers which his nimble haste had falsely thrust upon contrary feet."

Morphine.

Morphine, which was named after Morpheus on account of its effect as a narcotic, was first mentioned by Ludwig in 1688.

Crab Shells as Barometers.

A curious barometer is said to be used by the remnant of the Araucanian race which inhabits the southernmost province of Chile. It consists of the cast off shell of a crab. The dead shell is white in dry, fair weather, but the approach of a moist atmosphere is indicated by the appearance of small red spots. As the moisture in the air increases the shell becomes entirely red and remains so throughout the rainy season.

Cannon in Warfare.

Earl of Salisbury was the original user of the cannon in warfare, and he was the first Englishman killed by a cannon ball.

Fate of a Poet.

Thomas Otway, English poet, in a starving condition was given a guinea, with which he bought a loaf of bread, and died as he swallowed the first mouthful.

The Timid Greeks.

If an ancient Greek met an ugly old woman at the door he would not go out, fearing that misfortune would befall him if he left his home that day.

ALBERT PLANS MERCHANT MARINE

King of Belgium Is Spending Considerable Time Discussing the Subject

It is understood that King Albert has been studying with the most competent authorities the means of creating a Belgian mercantile marine, so that the national flag may carry all the national freight at present conveyed to distant lands by French, British, German, or other foreign ships. This was the unrealized aim of King Leopold II., and his nephew and heir, King Albert, supported it in his first speech in the Senate as Crown Prince, and now he has set his heart upon carrying it out. The difficulty is that the King does not believe in the success of a purely State organisation of merchant shipping, and that private capital in Belgium is reluctant to invest in large maritime undertakings, especially as Belgian exporters have so far appeared content with smaller profits by exporting through foreign middlemen and ships, rather than selling their goods direct to distant customers, and incurring the risks of long credit. It may be stated that the King is now studying a middle course, thanks to which a national mercantile marine may be created, partly by private effort and partly by State aid.

His Majesty, after holding several conferences on the subject, is now planning a tour to the principal seaports of Europe, and possibly America, as he wishes to become acquainted with the organisation of over-sea traffic in the great carrying countries. Meanwhile, he is encouraging as far as possible fishing enterprise abroad, and Belgian missions are to be shortly sent to Brazil and other parts of America, as well as to Mossamedes and the Morocco seaboard, to study the possibilities and resources open to the enterprise of the Belgian fishing fleets.

DRAMA IN VILLAGES

How Germany Will Satisfy the Cravings for the Dramatic

The constantly-growing craving for dramatic entertainment among the inhabitants of small country towns and villages in Germany is now to be appeased in a way worthy of imitation in other countries—namely by co-operation. Under the auspices of the Ministry of the Interior groups of small municipalities are being formed in the various provinces, each group engaging to support financially, if necessary, a stock company of actors who will proceed from village to village during the winter and perform popular plays.

The idea originated with the travelling theatre of the Mark of Brandenburg, which was founded by a private society interested in popular education. The expenses of inauguration were provided by several wealthy patrons of dramatic art, who also guaranteed financial support; but the venture has proved so successful that these persons now enjoy some small interest on their capital. The high-class nature of the performances given may be gathered from the names of the authors whose pieces are included in the programme. Lessing, Gerhard Hauptmann, Bjornson, Moliere, Schiller, Goethe, Kleist, and Hebbel, are all constantly in the repertoire, which is performed by an excellent company, in which there are no "stars."

The Government is so impressed by the value of this kind of entertainment that it has organised similar companies in the provinces of Posen and Silesia, subsidies being provided by the provincial authorities and all the towns of the provinces being visited in rotation. In other districts the municipalities are following the example.

A ROYAL WEDDING

Princess Zitha, of Parma, Will Marry Archduke Charles Francis Joseph

As a wedding gift for Princess Zitha of Parma, who is to marry Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, his grand-nephew, Emperor Francis Joseph, has bought the ancient castle at Brandeis. The huge pile, with its extensive grounds, is a picturesque ruin, once the headquarters of the Bohemian brethren, and stands in a conspicuous position in the ancient historic Bohemian town of Brandeis, thirteen miles north-east of Prague, on the banks of the River Elbe. The castle will be restored, architecturally modernized in the interior, and handsomely furnished. It is to be the country residence of the young people. Princess Zitha was a member of a small family party which gathered recently at Schönbrunn Castle, the Emperor's residence on the outskirts of Vienna, to celebrate Archduke Charles' twenty-fourth birthday. The Princess's gift to her fiance was a gold cigarette case, suitably inscribed.

Eczema 25 Years Cured by "Cuticura"

Mme. J. B. Renaud Montreal

Leg Like Raw Flesh from Knee Down

"I have been treated by doctors for twenty-five years for a bad case of eczema on my leg. They did their best, but failed to cure it. My own doctor had advised me to have my leg cut off, but I said I would try the Cuticura Remedies first. He said, 'try them if you like but I do not think they will do any good.' At this time my leg was peeled from the knee down, my foot was like a piece of raw flesh and I had to walk on crutches.

"I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. After the first two treatments the swelling went down and in two months' use of the Cuticura Remedies my leg was cured and the new skin grown on. The doctor could not believe his own eyes when he saw that Cuticura had cured me and said that he would use Cuticura for his own patients. But for the Cuticura Remedies I might have lost my life. I am truly grateful for the wonderful cure that Cuticura wrought and I always recommend it most highly as a sure and economical cure for skin troubles." (Signed) Mme. J. B. Renaud, 277 Mentana St., Montreal.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the speediest and most economical treatment for skin and scalp humors. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book, send to Potter D. & C. Corp., 49 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM

Preparations are under way for the departure of King Albert for the United States. He will travel under an incognito, leaving as soon as he can arrange the affairs of his kingdom. The object of his visit will be a study of American industrial methods with a view of providing for Belgium's increasing foreign trade. The trip has long been a cherished dream of the young King, and is one of the few projects of his father that he is in harmony with. The King will probably assume one of his famous titles for the visit and will devote most of his time to commercial investigation.

Where Nature is Unadorned

The Provincial Commissioner of the North-Western Province of the Gold Coast reports that although there is a demand for cloth for men it is not noticeable among the women. "It is now exceptional to see a naked man in the district of Grunshi, whereas all the women, excepting Mahommedans, are naked."

51 Years' Police Service

Deputy-Chief Constable John Reynolds retired on a pension from the Hertfordshire force after fifty-one years' service. He worked as a farm lad until nineteen years of age, when he joined the constabulary. Colonel Daniell, the Chief Constable of Hertfordshire, is also retiring.

PRESSING THE BUTTON

Nephew (who takes his uncle from the country into a restaurant):—"Look, uncle! I press this button and order supper!"

Uncle:—"Well, what then?"

Nephew:—"Then you press that button and you pay the bill."

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

LEADS IN ELECTRICITY

Canada Should Follow the Electrical Development of Norway

J. W. Richards, professor of metallurgy at Lehigh University, has been studying electrical conditions in Norway, and on his return home through Canada made the following statement: "From the electrical point of view Norway and Canada are very similar; each has abundant water power to generate the fluid, but Norway is several years ahead of Canada in its application of electricity to the commercial problems of the present day. The people of the Scandinavian peninsula, however, have realized that if they are to continue amongst the producing nations of the world they must hasten to develop their resources to the fullest extent, and to do so are spending unlimited money experimenting. Canada will be able to benefit from the mistakes of the elder nation and model her plants on those which have proved successful instead of having to break the first sod in the virgin field of electro-chemical research."

He stated that Norway has at the present time the cheapest electricity in the world. Over half a million horsepower has been developed, and there is every prospect for a fifty per cent. increase in the near future. Consumers can obtain high tension power for $6.50 per horsepower per annum. The scene of the greatest activity is Notingen, where 240,000 horsepower are developed from the near-by Ruken Falls, and an enormous plant is now in operation extracting nitrogen from the air and forming nitrates, which are used as fertilisers and are rapidly rendering Europe independent of the Chilian nitrate fields. The Ironmasters of Norway have recently united into an association for the purpose of experimenting with electric smelting furnaces, and have developed power at Trolhatten, where an experimental furnace was opened last November. The association was formed because the iron men realised that the charcoal resources of the country were being eliminated, partly by use and partially through the pulpwood trade, which is more profitable. Therefore, unless they could discover some new means of smelting, the industry was doomed. In the electrical furnace it has been discovered that only a third as much charcoal is needed as in the open hearth furnace, and ore can be smelted at a cost said to be $2.50 per ton less than by the old method. During the present year Mr. Richards said that big electrical development companies had been formed, and by the beginning of next year a plant would be in operation for the reconversion of old scrap into good iron and steel. For this purpose Norwegian buyers are at work in Europe obtaining old ships which would otherwise be scrapped, and bringing them to Norway, where they will be broken up carefully and their component parts separated and reduced to good iron and steel again. Mr. Richards looks forward to the day when Canada will be as flourishing from the electro-chemical point of view as Scandinavia is to-day.

BILL MINER'S PAL DEAD

Did Not Live to Complete His Twenty-One Year Sentence

Lewis Colquhon, bandit, who figured in the public eye in 1905 in holding up a westbound express on the Canadian Pacific Railway near Ducks, B.C., died in New Westminster Penitentiary Hospital. Colquhon was a pal of Bill Miner and Shorty Dust in this hold-up. The trio were captured later by mounted police after a hard fight in the foothills near Kamloops. Miner and Dust were sentenced to life imprisonment, and Colquhon was given 25 years. A few months ago Colquhon's health became impaired, and tuberculosis hastened his end. He was 34 years of age and unmarried. He was a school teacher and later bookkeeper before he went wrong.

THE DUCHESS IS SHY

Says English Knight, Regarding Coming Queen of Rideau Hall

Sir Charles and Lady Craufurd, who have come direct from Aanbank House, Ayershire, are in Montreal. Sir Charles said that Canadians had every reason to feel glad that the Duke of Connaught is coming to Canada. "He is such a charming man," he said, "and without any side whatever. He is sure to be popular. The Duchess is very shy. Sometimes people have thought that she meant to be standoffish and haughty, but that is not the case; it is simply because of her shyness that people have got that impression."

Canadian Colony in Palestine

That the Canadian flag would soon be flying in Palestine was the statement made by Dr. John Shayne in an address delivered before the Zionists of Toronto. "The Canadian Jews have decided," he said, "to establish a Canadian colony in Palestine. Relatives of Canadian Jews who are in Russia will be assisted there, and they will be given the protection of the Canadian flag."

C. P. R. IRRIGATION

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy says that the C.P.R. in constructing their irrigation ditches and works at the Horseshoe dam on the Bow River "moved every day half as much earth as if moved on the Panama Canal."

When completed the irrigation works will reclaim 1,000,000 acres of land. Of this amount over 400,000 acres will be throughly irrigated and 600,000 acres affected to a greater or lesser extent.

"To fully irrigate the land costs us $20 per acre, but the average cost of the million acres will run between $8 and $9 per acre."

MAIL SERVICE TO CANADA

The New Zealand Parliament has empowered the Government to establish, in conjunction with Canada a mail service between Auckland, New South Wales, and Vancouver, B.C., providing for the receipt and despatch of mails once in every four weeks.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts, a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

EXPLORERS RETURN

Englishmen Who Spent Two Months Near Mount Robson in the Rockies

Messrs. Dr. N. Collie and A. L. Mumm, of London, England, have returned to Edmonton after two months spent in the Canadian Rockies on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway. These gentlemen have been exploring a hitherto unknown region in the vicinity of Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, and were accompanied by a train of twenty pack horses, and they state that in some places the forests were so impenetrable that they had to cut their way through. Several discoveries were made. In one locality they came across two great glaciers larger than any known in the Rockies, and sighted a towering peak that had the appearance of being even larger than Mount Robson, which is 13,700 feet above the level of the sea. One of the glaciers was 40 to 50 miles in length, and 7 to 8 miles in length, and of striking formation.

In a letter received by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Arthur O. Wheeler, the well-known mountain climber and topographer, who is at present in the Canadian Rockies making observations for the purpose of mapping out the district, says: "We have a great amount of splendid material for publication and a collection of photographs that cannot be surpassed. We have just completed what is very nearly a hundred-mile circuit around Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. The peaks and valleys, lakes and waterfalls, on all sides of it, and the glaciers, are very fine. The region is immense, and their is work for years to come, exploring, mapping and depicting. There is a fine bunch of high peaks and large snowfields and glaciers south-west of Tete Jeane Cache. There are also great peaks up the Athabaska and Fraser headwaters, tributary to your line. The most showy part of Mount Robson is the Robson Pass and glacier, and Berg Lake."

In addition to the above Mr. Wheeler reports that his party have collected over 600 specimens of animal and bird life, and a good botanical collection as well. This expedition, which was organized by the Grand Trunk Pacific, has been a most successful one, and when its results are published, will be of great value. The facts now known bear out the general impression that the territory contiguous to the mountain division of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will surpass in scenic beauty that which can be seen on any other of the North American transcontinental lines.

Canadian Oddfellows Wen First Prize at Indianapolis

The champion drilled canton in the world of Oddfellowship is now Canton Toronto, No. 7, which attended the meeting of the Sovereign Grand Lodge at Indianapolis. After having won lesser prizes for the last two years the Toronto Canton this year succeeded in winning the $1,000 prize offered for the best drilled company. Something of what this achievment means will be learned from the fact that on the grand parade of the patriarchs militants there were 32,000 men in line. The Toronto team consisted of three officers, Major G. M. Hermiston, Captain A. P. Nielsen and Lieutenant George Shackleton, and 24 chevaliers.

Intercolonial Railway

BADDECK BRANCH LINE.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alba-Baddeck Branch," will be received at this office until sixteen o'clock on Thursday, October 12th, 1911, for the construction of a branch line of railway from a point on the Intercolonial Railway near Alba to the town of Baddeck, a distance of 22.7 miles.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into may be seen and full information obtained on and after the 15th inst, 1911, at the office of the Chief Engineer, of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Intercolonial Railway at Moncton, N.B.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $30,000 00, made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

NEW KNOX COLLEGE

It Will be Built of Reddish Credit Valley Stone

In style of architecture the new Knox College will follow the lines of the University College building, the general type being the same; only instead of the Norman tower and square arch Knox will adopt the Collegiate Gothic variety. In material, as well as in architectural form, the new building will harmonize, being constructed throughout of the same Credit Valley stone, a sort of sandstone, the same as that used in the new Library building, and somewhat different in color from the reddish Credit Valley stone being used in the new portions of the Parliament buildings. Arranged in the form of a quadrangle, the academic part of the group of buildings will face the University lawn, while the dormitories will occupy the part to the west of the interior court, and will have their front outlook on St. George Street. There will thus be main entrances both on the eastern side, from the campus, and on St. George Street.

Six class rooms and six rooms for professors will be located in the eastern portion of the building, besides the library, with its stock room, which will hold 75,000 volumes, and reading room to accommodate seventy-five to a hundred men, also a chapel and congregational hall to seat five hundred persons. Below the chapel will be an examination hall and a gymnasium, these extending under the whole area of the chapel.

The residential portion of the building will accommodate in the dormitories one hundred and twenty, while there will be a dining-room in which a hundred and fifty can be seated.

FOUND DEAD IN BED

Gas Had Been Turned On and Mother and Child Were Dead

Despondent because of an illness which had necessitated the constant attention of a physician, Mrs. George G. Egles, Toronto, committed suicide, and at the same time her year-old boy lost his life. Both mother and child were found asphyxiated. Mrs. Egles had been ill for some time past, and had threatened a number of times to do away with herself, but her people did not think that she would carry out her threats.

RELICS OF WORTHIES

Antiquities of Wesley and Asbury Coming to Toronto

Among the antiquities of Methodism which have been brought by Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll to Toronto for exhibition are the watch carried by Bishop Asbury, his spectacles, jackknife and comb. The bishop's saddlebags are also coming, and reports of probably the oldest church on the continent, the old John Street church, New York. Rev. James Chapman has also arranged for a number of interesting relics to follow him, including letters of John Wesley, manuscripts of a number of Charles Wesley's hymns, records of the "Holy Club" and its list of officers in John Wesley's handwriting, and other articles of historic interest.

HONORS FOR CANADIANS

His Majesty King George, Sovereign head and Patron of the Grand Priory of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, in England, has approved of the following honors to be conferred upon the officers of the Canadian branch of the St. John Ambulance Association: Knights of Grace, Dr. F. Montizambert, I.S.C., President of the Canadian branch, Ottawa; Col. G. Carleton Jones, D.C.M.S., Ottawa; Col. the Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Sir Edward Clouston, Montreal.

MOTOR CAR HEARSE

Owned by Berlin, Germany, Replacing the Slow-Moving "Blue-Box"

The enterprising authorities of Berlin, ever ready to adopt improvements, have now, by the introduction of a municipal motor car hearse, shown their willingness to meet the wishes of those persons who desire a rapid exit from the world. Hitherto these impatient citizens for whom life did not pass rapidly enough in the ordinary way and was ended abruptly by their own hands have been conveyed to the mortuary in a slow-moving horse-drawn hearse, whose appearance is known to every citizen in Berlin and which has for generations been called the "blue box." As there is only one of these vehicles and self-inflicted deaths are numerous, totaling nearly a thousand annually in Berlin, it has happened that bodies have had to wait an inordinate time for conveyance to the mortuary. With the motor car hearse this difficulty will be overcome, for it has accommodation for several occupants and can travel at a fast rate. It is mounted on three pneumatic-tired wheels like a delivery tricycle. It is painted blue like its predecessor, and is adorned with the Prussian eagle.

NORWEGIAN SOLDIERS MUTINY

Think the Officers in Charge are Too Severe

Serious tumults are reported among the Norwegian soldiers at different drill grounds in Norway. Several soldiers prevented a change of guards at Oerstadmon, and made a demonstration against a major, and later there were demonstrations at the Stenkjaer drill-ground, where 1,800 soldiers were on drill. They considered that two soldiers were too severely punished, and some of the Young Socialist party prepared a flag with the following inscription: "In the name of justice we demand the liberation of the prisoners."

About 500 soldiers gathered round this banner and stormed the cells. The guards fixed bayonets, but the mutineers finally succeeded in liberating the prisoners by force. Colonel Aavatsmark, who is the President of the Military Committee of Parliament, tried to calm the mutineers, but was received with laughter. Several tumults took place at the largest drill-ground of Norway—Gardemon. The soldiers considered a conscript too severely punished. The dragoons marched to the cells and threw stones at the guards, who had to withdraw. The prisoners were liberated.

DO PLAYS TEACH RELIGION

He Attributes People's Ignorance of the Bible to Stamping Out of Simple Plays

Is the Anglican Church for the revival of the miracle play? Father Adderley discusses the question in the parish magazine, just issued. "Modern drama," he says, "owes its origin to the service of the Church," and he pleads for their reunion. He attributes the people's ignorance of the Bible to "the stamping out of these simple plays, which taught people the Catholic faith in the best possible way." While he hopes for a revival of the miracle plays, he confesses that it will be a difficult thing to do.

"They cannot be acted with their old fervor," he says sadly, "except by devout Christian people. The cinematograph might be a great power in these days if we would get Christian actors. Meantime we must wait till a new generation of Church people arise who are not afraid to combine an intelligent use of the drama with religion."

HYDROPHOBIA IN POLAND

An epidemic of hydrophobia has broken out in the industrial districts of Russian Poland. In the town of Sielce alone fifty-two persons have been bitten by mad dogs. Recently fifty persons, bitten by infected animals, were brought from the town of Bosnowice for treatment at the Warsaw Pasteur Institute. At Salogovie a girl, bitten by a dog, died of hydrophobia, and in her death agonies bit her mother and several other persons who approached her.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Wallaceburg, Ontario," will be received at this office until 4 P.M., on Tuesday, October 10, 1911, for the construction of a Public Building at Wallaceburg, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

EXPLORERS RETURN

Englishmen Who Spent Two Months Near Mount Robson in the Rockies

Messrs. Dr. N. Collie and A. L. Mumm, of London, England, have returned to Edmonton after two months spent in the Canadian Rockies on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway. These gentlemen have been exploring a hitherto unknown region in the vicinity of Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, and were accompanied by a train of twenty pack horses, and they state that in some places the forests were so impenetrable that they had to cut their way through. Several discoveries were made. In one locality they came across two great glaciers larger than any known in the Rockies, and sighted a towering peak that had the appearance of being even larger than Mount Robson, which is 13,700 feet above the level of the sea. One of the glaciers was 40 to 50 miles in length, and 7 to 8 miles in length, and of striking formation.

In a letter received by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Arthur O. Wheeler, the well-known mountain climber and topographer, who is at present in the Canadian Rockies making observations for the purpose of mapping out the district, says: "We have a great amount of splendid material for publication and a collection of photographs that cannot be surpassed. We have just completed what is very nearly a hundred-mile circuit around Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. The peaks and valleys, lakes and waterfalls, on all sides of it, and the glaciers, are very fine. The region is immense, and their is work for years to come, exploring, mapping and depicting. There is a fine bunch of high peaks and large snowfields and glaciers south-west of Tete Jeane Cache. There are also great peaks up the Athabaska and Fraser headwaters, tributary to your line. The most showy part of Mount Robson is the Robson Pass and glacier, and Berg Lake."

In addition to the above Mr. Wheeler reports that his party have collected over 600 specimens of animal and bird life, and a good botanical collection as well. This expedition, which was organized by the Grand Trunk Pacific, has been a most successful one, and when its results are published, will be of great value. The facts now known bear out the general impression that the territory contiguous to the mountain division of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will surpass in scenic beauty that which can be seen on any other of the North American transcontinental lines.

Canadian Oddfellows Won First Prize at Indianapolis

The champion drilled canton in the world of Oddfellowship is now Canton Toronto, No. 7, which attended the meeting of the Sovereign Grand Lodge at Indianapolis. After having won lesser prizes for the last two years the Toronto Canton this year succeeded in winning the $1,000 prize offered for the best drilled company. Something of what this achievment means will be learned from the fact that on the grand parade of the patriarchs militants there were 32,000 men in line. The Toronto team consisted of three officers, Major G. M. Hermiston, Captain A. P. Nielsen and Lieutenant George Shackleton, and 24 chevaliers.

FIFTY YEARS AN OFFICIAL

The Veteran Freight Traffic Manager of the G.T.R. Retires

DEPARTMENT OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS.
Intercolonial Railway
BADDECK BRANCH LINE.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alba-Baddeck Branch," will be received at this office until sixteen o'clock on Thursday, October 12th, 1911, for the construction of a branch line of railway from a point on the Intercolonial Railway near Alba to the town of Baddeck, a distance of 22.7 miles.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into may be seen and full information obtained on and after the 15th inst, 1911, at the office of the Chief Engineer, of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Intercolonial Railway at Moncton, N.B.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $30,000.00, made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

NEW KNOX COLLEGE

It Will be Built of Reddish Credit Valley Stone

In style of architecture the new Knox College will follow the lines of the University College building, the general type being the same; only instead of the Norman tower and square arch Knox will adopt the Collegiate Gothic variety. In material, as well as in architectural form, the new building will harmonize, being constructed throughout of the same Credit Valley stone, a sort of sandstone, the same as that used in the new Library building, and somewhat different in color from the reddish Credit Valley stone being used in the new portions of the Parliament buildings. Arranged in the form of a quadrangle, the academic part of the group of buildings will face the University lawn, while the dormitories will occupy the part to the west of the interior court, and will have their front outlook on St. George Street. There will thus be main entrances both on the eastern side, from the campus, and on St. George Street.

Six class rooms and six rooms for professors will be located in the eastern portion of the building, besides the library, with its stock room, which will hold 75,000 volumes, and reading room to accommodate seventy-five to a hundred men, also a chapel and congregational hall to seat five hundred persons. Below the chapel will be an examination hall and a gymnasium, these extending under the whole area of the chapel.

The residential portion of the building will accommodate in the dormitories one hundred and twenty, while there will be a dining-room in which a hundred and fifty can be seated.

FOUND DEAD IN BED

Gas Had Been Turned On and Mother and Child Were Dead

Despondent because of an illness which had necessitated the constant attention of a physician, Mrs. George G. Egles, Toronto, committed suicide, and at the same time her year-old boy lost his life. Both mother and child were found asphyxiated. Mrs. Egles had been ill for some time past, and had threatened a number of times to do away with herself, but her people did not think that she would carry out her threats.

RELICS OF WORTHIES

Among the antiquities of Methodism which have been brought by Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll to Toronto for exhibition are the watch carried by Bishop Asbury, his spectacles, jackknife and comb. The bishop's saddlebags are also coming, and reports of probably the oldest church on the continent, the old John Street church, New York. Rev. James Chapman has also arranged for a number of interesting relics to follow him, including letters of John Wesley, manuscripts of a number of Charles Wesley's hymns, records of the "Holy Club" and its list of officers in John Wesley's handwriting, and other articles of historic interest.

HONORS FOR CANADIANS

His Majesty King George, Sovereign head and Patron of the Grand Priory of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, in England, has approved of the following honors to be conferred upon the officers of the Canadian branch of the St. John Ambulance Association: Knights of Grace, Dr. F. Montizambert, I.S.C., President of the Canadian branch, Ottawa; Col. G. Carleton Jones, D.C. M.S., Ottawa; Col. the Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Sir Edward Clouston, Montreal.

MOTOR CAR HEARSE

Owned by Berlin, Germany, Replacing the Slow-Moving "Blue-Box"

The enterprising authorities of Berlin, ever ready to adopt improvements, have now, by the introduction of a municipal motor car hearse, shown their willingness to meet the wishes of those persons who desire a rapid exit from the world. Hitherto these impatient citizens for whom life did not pass rapidly enough in the ordinary way and was ended abruptly by their own hands have been conveyed to the mortuary in a slow-moving horse-drawn hearse, whose appearance is known to every citizen in Berlin and which has for generations been called the "blue box." As there is only one of these vehicles and self-inflicted deaths are numerous, totaling nearly a thousand annually in Berlin, it has happened that bodies have had to wait an inordinate time for conveyance to the mortuary. With the motor car hearse this difficulty will be overcome, for it has accommodation for several occupants and can travel at a fast rate. It is mounted on three pneumatic-tired wheels like a delivery tricycle. It is painted blue like its predecessor, and is adorned with the Prussian eagle.

Think the Officers in Charge are Too Severe

Serious tumults are reported among the Norwegian soldiers at different drill grounds in Norway. Several soldiers prevented a change of guards at Oerstadmon, and made a demonstration against a major, and later there were demonstrations at the Stenkjaer drill-ground, where 1,800 soldiers were on drill. They considered that two soldiers were too severely punished, and some of the Young Socialist party prepared a flag with the following inscription: "In the name of justice we demand the liberation of the prisoners."

About 500 soldiers gathered round this banner and stormed the cells. The guards fixed bayonets, but the mutineers finally succeeded in liberating the prisoners by force. Colonel Aavatsmark, who is the President of the Military Committee of Parliament, tried to calm the mutineers, but was received with laughter. Several tumults took place at the largest drill-ground of Norway—Gardemon. The soldiers considered a conscript too severely punished. The dragoons marched to the cells and threw stones at the guards, who had to withdraw. The prisoners were liberated.

DO PLAYS TEACH RELIGION

He Attributes People's Ignorance of the Bible to Stamping Out of Simple Plays

Is the Anglican Church for the revival of the miracle play? Father Adderley discusses the question in the parish magazine, just issued. "Modern drama," he says, "owes its origin to the service of the Church," and he pleads for their reunion. He attributes the people's ignorance of the Bible to "the stamping out of these simple plays, which taught people the Catholic faith in the best possible way." While he hopes for a revival of the miracle plays, he confesses that it will be a difficult thing to do.

"They cannot be acted with their old fervor," he says sadly, "except by devout Christian people. The cinematograph might be a great power in these days if we would get Christian actors. Meantime we must wait till a new generation of Church people arise who are not afraid to combine an intelligent use of the drama with religion."

HYDROPHOBIA IN POLAND

An epidemic of hydrophobia has broken out in the industrial districts of Russian Poland. In the town of Sielce alone fifty-two persons have been bitten by mad dogs. Recently fifty persons, bitten by infected animals, were brought from the town of Sosnowice for treatment at the Warsaw Pasteur Institute. At Salogovie a girl, bitten by a dog, died of hydrophobia, and in her death agonies bit her mother and several other persons who approached her.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Wallaceburg, Ontario," will be received at this office until 4 P.M., on Tuesday, October 10, 1911, for the construction of a Public Building at Wallaceburg, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Tailor Nearly Smothered.

Toronto, Oct. 4.—Fire caused by gas tailor's irons imprisoned Philip Cohen, in the cellar of his tailor shop at 304 West Queen street, yesterday morning. The blaze did $1,200 damage to the premises.

Cohen lit the irons at 7 o'clock in the morning and then went into the cellar. When he went to go up he found his way blocked with smoke and flames. So much smoke found its way into the cellar that he was unconscious when a window which he had been unable to break had been driven in and he was carried out.

Buhland Monday delivered an impressive funeral oration, in which she recounted the story of the married life of herself and husband, his request that the obsequies be as simple as they could be made, and that she herself deliver the funeral sermon.

Mrs. Buhland was dressed in white, there was a generous display of flowers, and she sang two of the dead man's favorite hymns.

Sixteen Hurt In Wreck.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 4.—Through the derailing of the Gettysburg Express on the western Maryland Railroad, near Maryland-Pennsylvania line yesterday, sixteen persons were badly injured.

The smoking-car turned over and rolled down an embankment. The injured were in this car. Conductor Maurath of Baltimore, sustained a broken shoulder.

Incendiary Burns Town.

Scottdale, Pa., Oct. 4.—Fire of incendiary origin swept through the business section early yesterday, causing a loss of $125,000. Fifty guests were routed from the Central Hotel before the structure went down. Fifteen buildings were burned.

It is the fourth attempt to burn the town within the past three months.

A CRUSHING RETORT.

Mme. Songbird Paid Her Haughty Society Patron In Full.

Last year a prominent Boston society leader, in arranging a musical surprise at an elaborate dinner given to the town's elite, called on a singer of renown to engage her services for that event. It chanced that the singer was naturally independent. On the other hand, the caller was notoriously haughty. As a result this was what transpired between them:

After the visitor had announced the import of her coming, the singer succinctly said she would sing one number for $200, and that it would be a Wagnerian selection.

"The price we will not haggle over," said the visitor, "but instead of that grand opera selection I want you to render one of the light end popular ditties of the day!"

"For the Wagnerian song, $200; for the popular ditty, $300," was the firm reply.

"But, madame," expostulated the society leader, "your classical song is much more exacting on your powers, so why should you charge more for the lighter and easier song?"

"Ah," replied the independent one, "the harder song is all fun to me; the easier one all work!"

So the price was fixed at $300.

Just as the haughty visitor was about to depart, she turned to the artist and said:

"Of course, I shall not expect you to mingle with my guests."

"Ah," was the biting retort, "I shall throw off $50."—Life.

Extremely Polite.

The forms of Mexican politeness to the stranger are sometimes embarrassing. Miss Mary Barton, who visited the country to paint landscapes and tells her experience in "Impressions of Mexico," says that "people seemed anxious to help me in all possible ways, from the railway conductor, who invited me to dine with him, to the very smart young man that I met in the postoffice when I had a number of invitations in my hand and who offered to lick the stamps for me."

Shutting Him Off.

The Dad—My son, I want to tell you that the secret of my success, as it must be of any man's, is hard work.

Tasty Poison.

Customer—The poison may be excellent, but the rats won't take it. You'll have to make it more tasty. Druggist—I've tried that already, but the apprentice boys eat it.—Fliegende Blatter.

Plurals.

There is considerably less reason why the plural of mouse should be mice than why the plural of spouse should be spice. Any bigamist will admit as much.—Puck.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Promise of bright weather northwest had much to do with making the wheat market to-day swing to a lower level. The change from continued storms would mean a removal of delay to threshing and forwarding a large part of the spring crop. In consequence, the close showed a decline of 1-4c to 3-8c from last night. The end of trade left corn 3-8c and 1-2d down; oats off 1-4c to 1-4c and 3-8c, and hog products either unaltered or varying to 15c lower.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d higher to ¼d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ¾d higher on corn. Paris wheat closed ⅛c to ¾c lower; Berlin unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable continues very quiet, and the prices bid for feed grades were 2d to 4½d lower. There continues to be a good enquiry for oats, and bids from Manchester were 1½d higher at 28s, but owing to the sharp advance in prices at Winnipeg no further sales were made. The local market is strong with a fair passing. A good business continues to be done in flour for both export and local account. Demand for cheese and butter is fairly good, and the undertone to the market is strong. Eggs are active and provisions steady.

McGuigan Lands Another.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Three tenders for the prefilter of the filtration plant, varying in amounts from $485,000 to $584,000, were opened yesterday by the Board of Control. The tenderers were: F. H. McGuigan, Toronto, $485,000; Haney, Quinlan & Robertson, $554,000, and Laurin & Leach, $584,000.

A letter was read from Mr. Janin, chief engineer, recommending that no more than $500,000 be paid for this contract, saying that the city could construct the plant for that sum.

This is taken to indicate that the Torono firm will secure the contract.

Wiley In Full Charge.

Washington, Oct. 4.—In a sudden succession of orders, an initial move in the expected reorganization of the Department of Agriculture, Solicitor G. P. McCabe, yesterday was retired from the pura food and drug board, Associated Chemist F. L. Dunlap, closely identified with McCabe, was allowed leave of absence until the President's return, and Chemist Harvey W. Wiley left apparently in supreme command of the board. Dr. R. E. Doolittle of New York, was temporarily appointed to the board to succeed Mr. McCabe.

Two Minute Talks About
for Coal or Wood

YOUR convenience was given the deepest thought by our brainy stove experts when they were designing the Pandora Range. Among the many handy features that they originated, the Nickelled Towel Bar (patented) is one of the most popular.

One-third of the Towel Bar consists of high grade Emery. A few passes across its surface will put a keen edge on your knife blade. Unlike the easily misplaced steel, you cannot lose the Pandora Emery. It is always on the range ready for instant use.

Go to our agent in your locality and see the many other Pandora conveniences.

Cheese Brought Top-notch Price of 14 3-8c. at Sale of Peterborough Cheese Board This Morning —2206 Boxes Boarded

A GOVERNMENT EXPERT

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held this morning in the Board room. A full complement of buyers were present, and the bidding was brisk. Mr. Riddell suggested that the question of securing the services of a Government expert to address the Board be considered. It would be of material benefit to the factory owners and patrons. After a brief discussion it was decided to secure the services of an expert to address the annual meeting, which will take place during the coming month.

The bidding opened at 14 5-16 by Mr. Watkins, at which price he purchased Warminster, Shearer, Central Smith, Warsaw, and Myrtle.

At 14⅜c Mr. Thompson purchased Selwyn, Westwood, Villiers, Oakdale, Daisy D., Maple Leaf, Ormonde, Young's Point, Norwood.

Mr. Thompson secured the balance of the Board at 14 5-16. Killarney remained unsold.

The following factories were boarded:

Public Lecture By A Noted Scholar

The teachers of the city have, for several years, joined with those of the county, for the purpose of bringing some well known scholar to deliver a public lecture in connection with their annual convention. This year they have been fortunate enough to secure the services of Mr. J. L. Morison, M.A., Prof. of History, Queen's University, who will give an illustrated lecture on "The Romance of Geography a Study of Great Discoveries." The musical part of the programme will be furnished by Miss Chalmers and Mr. W. Wilson. The people of Peterborough should show their appreciation of the efforts of the teachers by filling the Collegiate Assembly Hall Thursday evening, Oct. 5. There will be no admission fee.

A LIBERAL OFFER

We Guarantee to Relieve Dyspepsia. If We Fail the Medicine Costs Nothing

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in their manufacture, whereby the well-known properties of Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is carefully prepared so as to develop its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid. Without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

The Carminatives possess properties which aid in relieving the disturbances and pain caused by undigested food. This combination of these ingredients makes a remedy invaluable for the complete relief of indigestion and dyspepsia.

We are so certain of this that we urge you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets on our own personal guarantee. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

BOARD OF EDUCATION DECIDES TO BUILD TWO NEW SCHOOLS IN PETERBOROUGH

Plans Call for Twelve Room School in East and West Wards at a Total Estimated Cost of Between $80,000 and $85,000—Deputation Will Wait on City Council and Ask for an Appropriation so That the Work May be Commenced in the Spring.

Dr. Morrison last night submitted to the School Board, plans of the proposed new school buildings, which were approved of, subject to any amendments that may be found necessary, prior to the preparing of the specifications.

The Board will wait upon the Council at an early date and ask for $80,000 or $85,000, for the erection of the buildings. The plans call for two new school buildings, one in the East Ward and one in the West Ward, costing about $40,000 each. They will be up-to-date and modern in every respect.

It is thought that sufficient revenue will be forthcoming from the sale of the old school properties to pay for the new sites.

Following is the report of the Building committee, which was unanimously adopted:

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education—

Gentlemen,—Your Building committee for the East and West Wards beg to report, that they have plans completed for new schools in the East and West Wards, and have instructed the solicitor to proceed to expropriate a site in East City. We have an option on a site for the West Ward.

Our plans are for twelve room schools in each case, the buildings to be two stories. The estimated cost will be in the neighbourhood of from $80,000.00 to $85,000.00 for the two buildings complete. We would recommend that the Board wait on the City Council as soon as possible and ask for an appropriation, so that the contracts can be let and the buildings proceeded with on the opening of spring.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. A. MORRISON,
Chairman.

Mr. W. Short, State Trumpeter of England, who plays at St. Paul's Church, Thursday, Oct. 12th.

"PORTRAIT" PAYS TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN PHOTOGRAPHERS

"Portrait," the widely circulated magazine, devoted to art-in-portraiture, has paid a tribute to the importance of the Photographers' Association of Canada by publishing the following reference:

Although the Photographers' Association of Canada has been in existence for many years, yet the support it received, at times, was most discouraging, but with persevering energy the executive stuck to the ship, believing that the photographers must sooner or later realize the educating influences of conventions.

That their premise was correct is evidenced by the fact that the convention held in Toronto on July 5-6, was not only the best ever held, but was attended by the largest number of photographers in the history of the Association.

The officers deserve much credit for the increased enthusiasm that they have instilled into the members and it is earnestly hoped that even greater support will be given to their next convention.

The programme included many good things, chief of which was the very pithy talk by J. W. Beatty, A.R.C.A. on art, as applied to photography. Interesting and instructive talks and demonstrations were given by Fred L. Roy, Walt Dickson and Peter Rutherford.

The newly elected officers of the Association are:

T. J. Leatherdale, Toronto, president.

Fred L. Roy, Peterborough, 1st Vice President.

J. A. Homier, Montreal, 2nd Vice-President.

U. A. Couse, Sarnia, 3rd Vice-President.

Walt Dickson, Toronto, Treasurer.

C. B. Willson, Welland, Secretary.

"WITH EDGED TOOLS" AN INSTANT SUCCESS IN OTTAWA

Read what the Ottawa Citizen has to say of "With Edged Tools," which appears at the Grand for matinee and evening performance on Saturday:

The audience at the Russell Theatre last evening enjoyed a brilliant presentation of "With Edged Tools," by the original English company, a company that for excellence in every role does not yield the palm to a Willard or any other English company which has been seen in Ottawa. Ottawans will have another opportunity to-night to see this sterling attraction.

"If children play with edged tools, they are bound to cut themselves sooner or later," is the old adage upon which the famous novel by Henry Seton Merriman, and the play taken from that novel are founded. With Edged Tools comes to us with a reputation as a fine play, it comes with a record of one thousand and seventy-nine performances to its credit, and it has come to stay. Henry Seton Merriman's works are always strong, distinguished, and brilliantly witty, and the play With Edged Tools retains all the sparkle of the Merriman style. It adheres closely to the book, and is a fine, moving tale of love and adventure. Two scenes are so dramatically strong as to lift the audience right out of themselves, and the Mayfair boudoir scenes, in which the delicate intrigues unfold themselves conversationally, are masterpieces of style and epigrammatic brilliance. With Edged Tools is safe for a niche in the affections of Canadian playgoers.

Of the whole rare company which has been brought over from England fresh from its success there, it is impossible to speak in words of too great praise, as it would be invidious to particularize. Campbell Goldsmid as the treacherous half-caste Durnovo stands out as one of the strongest characters. His enactment of the sleeping sickness scene, beautifully done, and artistically accomplished, stamps him as an artist of great individuality. The Jack Meredith of Hamilton Deane, in which he uses his fine presence and beautiful voice to great advantage, was in the true spirit of Merriman, and was what one would expect of a cultured English gentleman. Stanley Bedwell's was a fine, manly performance of the great hearted, big-game hunting Oscard, and Charles Hartopp gave a good rendering of the weak, vacillating hard as Joycelyn Gordon, was a beautiful picture at all times, and her performance was marked by great restraint and sweetness, while the rendering of Millicent Chyne by Miss Marguerite Collier shows her to be an actress of great ability and power. An exceedingly good character study was the pathetic figure of Marie, the native girl, played by Miss Dulhunty, and the chatterbox Lady Herries was well given by Miss Craigie. Special mention should be given to Mr. Richard Hicks for a consummate study of old Sir John Meredith, the sardonically humorous, witty diplomat of the old school, who emerges from his retirement to fight the battles of his son. Every action and tone of voice showed a perfect command, and a profound knowledge of the character as drawn so exquisitely by Merriman. Indeed, the whole combination was in every way perfect, and bte mounting of the play was in every sense of the word beautiful.

We have all heard of Lawrance D'Orsay, the distinguished English Comedian, and now We have an opportunity of seeing him at his best in "The Earl of Pawtucket." "Grand," Friday Evening. Don't miss it.

A BANQUET

Mr. R. M. Glover Was the Guest of Members of the Eko Club

The members of Eko Camp held an enjoyable little informal banquet at Hooper's Palm Parlours last night in honour of Mr. R. M. Glover, the occasion being the eve of his marriage. The present members were in attendance as well as a number of the older members and the evening was a most pleasant one, terminating with an enjoyable toast list.

GREENSHIELDS DENIES CHARGE

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, QUE., OCT. 4.—Mr. J. N. Greenshields, K.C., defendant in a slander suit, brought by D. Russell for $250,000, was called by the defence in the Russell case against the Pinkerton Detective Agency this morning and denied absolutely that he had endeavoured to injure Mr. Russell in any way, or that he had conspired with others to do so.

Chief Detective Carpenter, who was called as a witness, said he had investigated Russell's complaint that he had been badgered and that his life was in danger, but ascertained that his fears were unnecessary.

SMUGGLED WHEAT

To the Editor of The Examiner.

MINOT, N.D., OCT. 4.—Smuggling of wheat across the border from Canada to the United States mills has been carried on extensively recently, according to a story told by Federal detectives, following the arrest of two local men alleged to have done smuggling.

THE NEW SERIAL

"The Gun Runner," the Examiner's new serial story, will commence in Saturday's issue. The Examiner is enthusiastic over the merits of this story and feels confident that it will be pronounced the most entrancing serial ever offered to Peterborough readers by a local newspaper. Brisk and snappy in style, vivid in its description, strong in its love interests, intensely exciting in its adventure, "The Gun Runner" is a magnificent story—one that you will read from beginning to end with a relish.

Great Ecumenical Methodist Conference Began To-day Whole World Represented

Delegates Present From Many Different Parts of the Globe —A Broad and Tolerant Note Struck by Rev. Henry Haight This Morning in Preaching Opening Sermon

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, ONT., OCT. 4.—A broad, tolerant and optimistic note was struck this morning at the opening of the fourth great ecumenical Methodist Conference by Rev. Henry Haight, president of the British Wesleyan Conference, who delivered the opening sermon, which is the greatest pulpit honour that can come to a Methodist minister. He does not share in the fear of those who think that the criticism and social unrest of the times are enough to make men despair. Criticism, he said, is scientific and will tend only to put religion on a truer and firmer basis. The social disturbances also are only a sign of growing spirit of brotherhood. Rev. Wm. Haight also made an appeal for less denunciation and greater union among all the churches, including the Methodist body itself.

The Metropolitan church was filled with delegates from all parts of the world, and the galleries were crowded with visitors and the general public. It is evident that from the beginning, people are going to take a keen interest in the sessions of the conference. Rev. Dr. Carman was president of this morning's session.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Bishops Walden, Wilson and Lee, and Rev. Henry Haight, Rev. Edwin Dalton, and Rev. Geo. Packer. Referring to the present tendency to higher criticism, Rev. Mr. Haight said "when men have finished their investigations they will find themselves nearer than ever to the religion of God. If there is any body of men which should not fear the results of criticism it is the Christian church. Do you think religion can destroy Jesus Christ? Take also the present social revolt, multitudes of good people sit aside and sigh: "Oh, these are evil days, when shall we see this coming?" At the bottom, however, the movement is an external manifestation of the worth of man. It is a cry for justice. It is a crude demand for brotherhood. This, however, is the very essence of Christianity.

Some negro delegates to the Ecumenical Conference are complaining that the colour line is drawn strongly in Toronto. They find few Methodist homes and none of the best hotels willing to take them in. Bishop Derrick, coloured, of New York, said bitterly, to-day that the motto that God is no respector of persons is not lived up to in Toronto, apparently. At the Ecumenical Conference in London ten years ago the coloured delegates found no difficulty. "That is a civilized country," said Bishop Derrick.

RIDINGS WON BY APPEALS TO PROTESTANT PREJUDICE

OTTAWA, OCT. 3.—Liberal members and ex-members who have reached Ottawa during the past few days, all report that the appeals to Protestant prejudices against Sir Wilfrid Laurier, because he is a Roman Catholic, were by no means confined to Ontario. Men like E. M. MacDonald, of Pictou, N.S., F. B. Carvell of Carleton, N.B., and J. W. Richards, of Prince Edward Island, ascribe the reduction of the Liberal majority in some cases and the wiping out of the Liberal majority in others, to the active and unprincipled use which was made of the fact that Sir Wilfrid was a Roman Catholic, and "therefore under the power of the Pope."

The proceedings of the Eucharistic Congress and the Ne Temere decree were used with deadly effect in many counties where otherwise reciprocity would have been a winning issue. This was notable in a county like Westmoreland, N.B., where Hon. Mr. Emmerson's majority was brought down to almost the vanishing point. It was so in King's and Albert, and it was the case in several of the Nova Scotia counties. Where the Conservative was a Roman Catholic as password was, "Vote for the little Catholic rather than for the big Catholic," and where two Protestants were running the cha Renge was "Kill the Pope's influence in Canada."

The same game was played in some of the Western constituencies, but there it failed of effect, the reciprocity sentiment in the two Central Provinces being strong enough to kill the appeals to prejudice, though even there in certain sections it did some damage.

ARMY CORPS IS READY TO SAIL AT ONCE

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, OCT. 4.— After mobilization in a manner which the foreign military attaches term masterly, the first army corps of twenty thousand men, for the occupation of Tripoli, was ready to embark yesterday, but the embarkation was delayed because the authorities heard of several Turkish torpedo boats cruising round the proposed route of transports. It is belived now these have been chased away and the army may sail to-night or to-morrow morning.

Splendid Lecture Given On The Passion Play

The lecture given by Miss Henry, a former Peterborough resident, and a well known Buffalo journalist, in the Crystal Theatre last night on the famous Passion Play, was a treat such as Peterborough people unfortunately have few opportunities of hearing. Miss Henry is a most fascinating speaker, her explanations being scholarly and eloquent and her remarks were followed eagerly and attentively by last night's audience. She adds to her ability as a lecturer an intimate knowledge of her subject, her travels abroad having acquainted her thoroughly with the Passion Play and the peasant folk who take part in the remarkable performance. Her lecture is illustrated by some of the most splendid stereopticon views ever seen here. Miss Henry chose these photographs herself and they are authentic and life-like representations of the Passion Play and other scenes in connection therewith. The beauty of the illustrations and the graphic descriptions given by the talented lecturer make the programme one of unmitigated enjoyment as well as of profit. The lecture will be repeated this evening in the Crystal and no doubt a large number of Peterborough people will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear Miss Henry.

WILL RESIGN ON FRIDAY

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, OCT. 3.—At 1 o'clock it was stated semi-officially that the Laurier Cabinet's resignation would not take place until Friday, at Mr. Borden's own request. This would make the period of winding up just exactly as in the case of Sir Charles Tupper, in 1896.

WEDDING BELLS

DAVIS—CRAPP.

A very pleasant event took place at the residence of Mr. James Crapp, Smith Township, when his eldest daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Davis, also of Smith. The Rev. Mr. Coons of Lakefield, performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a cream dress, trimmed with tucked net and satin; her sister, Miss Phoebe Crapp, who was bridesmaid, was dressed in pale blue null, trimmed with lace and insertion. Mr. Albert Nichols of Bridgenorth, supported the groom. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents.

After the wedding supper Mr. and Mrs. Davis drove to their new home in Smith, where they will reside.

A STRIKER KILLED

Illinois Central Employee Doing Picket Duty is Fatally Shot, Presumably by a Detective

FEELING IS HIGH

Special Wire to The Examiner.

McCOMB, MISS., OCT. 4.—Lee Haley, aged 45, an Illinois Central striker, was shot and killed presumably by private detectives, near the shops, early to-day, where he was doing picket duty. He leaves a wife and several children. The feeling runs high against the detectives and company's policemen. Threats of lynching were heard. The arrival of reinforcements of police dispersed the crowd which hung around the shops.

Died On His Honeymoon

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, OCT. 4.—George Hoyles, Instructor of the Grand Trunk firemen and well known all over the Ontario divisions of the system, died in Liverpool, Eng., while on his honeymoon. He was married here on Aug. 20th, and was taken ill with typhoid fever while on the steamer, bound for England, arriving at the home of friends at Liverpool, unconscious, dying four days later. The bride is in a critical condition from grief and constant attention on her husband.

COLLIDED WITH TROLLEY

Special to The Examiner.

JAMAICA, N.Y., OCT. 4.—James Cotton, owner and driver of a $6,000 automobile, was instantly killed and two friends probably fatally injured when their car collided head on with a trolley car last night.

TRAIN WAS HELD UP

Special Wire to the Examiner.

KANSAS CITY, MO., OCT. 4.—Three masked men held up a train on the Missouri and Texas Railroad in Oklahoma early to-day rifled the mail and baggage cars, securing some ten thousand dollars worth of jewelers' samples and other odds and ends. They did not molest the passengers.

IMPROVED APPEARANCE

Those who have occasion to pass the Public Library must have noticed the vastly improved appearance to the grounds, owing to the planting of the cedar hedge, along the southern side. When the lawn is in good shape this will certainly enhance the beauty of the surroundings. A great deal of quiet unostentatious work has been done around this splendid adjunct to Peterborough institutions, and putting aside altogether the excellent work done by the Board, a very large meed of praise is due to Alderman Duncan and his associates in the Property Committee for their efforts to forward its usefulness, and extend its resources. Ald. Duncan, especially, has since the inception of the Library, been indefatigable in his efforts to make the institution one worthy of Peterborough, and has been, perhaps, the one mainly instrumental in making it the splendid public utility that under the administration of the Board, it has become.

It is one big roar of laughter from first to last, "The Earl of Pawtucket." At "The Grand" Friday Evening. Book your Seats To-night.

A PRESENTATION

An interesting event took place at the meeting of Golden Link Rebekah Lodge last night, when the members took advantage of the opportunity to say farewell to one of their most valued members, in the person of Mrs. Louis Jackson, who is leaving the city to take up residence in Auburn, N.Y. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Jackson was presented with a Past Grand's jewel, the presentation being made by Miss Alma Jones, while an appreciative address was read by Mrs. Sills. Mrs. Jackson was taken by surprise, but made an adequate reply.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Muswell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

MONEY FOR NEW SCHOOLS.

According to the report of the Building committee of the Board of Education, application will be made to the City Council for from $80,000 to $85,000 for the erection of two schools, one in the East and the other in the West Ward. The Board will wait on the City Council at an early date.

FOR FARMERS.

A despatch from London, Ont., under date of Oct. 1, states that reciprocity may be temporarily buried, but there are some western Ontario farmers who helped to bury it and who are now having misgivings. Certainly those who have hogs to sell at the present time have been given something to think about. A week ago they were astounded by the sudden drop in the price from that of Monday before the elections, of forty cents. Now another drop of twenty-five cents is arranged for to-morrow, the price set by the packers being $6.35—and the farmers can take it or leave it. That part of the consuming public that voted against reciprocity will of course expect their economic theories to work out by a drop in the price of meats retail. Further evidence of the misgivings of the farmers comes from East Lambton. The Liberal candidate in the elections, Dr. C. O. Fairbank, was in London yesterday, and he states emphatically that the reaction has already set in. As a result an organization meeting held this week was largely attended with the defeated party in fighting spirit. Dr. Fairbank reduced the majority of Mr. Joseph Armstrong, M.P., in eight of the ten rural divisions, it being the town vote that went so strongly against him. Mr. Armstrong, the anti-reciprocity member, he says, is still shipping cream to the United States and paying the duty.

THE QUEBEC TERMINALS.

Some Conservative journals have been criticising the Laurier government, for awarding the contract for the Quebec terminals of the Transcontinental railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific. The facts show that the government only did its duty in cleaning the slate of routine administration matters. The circumstances are as follows:

Some four years ago the National Transcontinental Commission and the officers of the Grand Trunk Pacific were approached by the representatives of the city of Quebec in regard to the terminals in that city. Various sites were suggested and carefully inspected. Finally they dwindled down to two, one on the waterfront under the Chateau Frontenac and including the Champlain market and the other on the St Charles river about three miles to the eastward. In the first place there was a depth of water of fifty-five feet where the largest vessels could come right up to the wharf and deliver their passengers and freight alongside; in the other the greatest depth of water is fifteen feet and an enormous amount of dredging would have to be done.

Thus the advantage being in favour of the Canadian marker site, and it being approved of by the Grand Trunk Pacific, which will have to administer the terminals, and will have to pay interest on the cost, the city of Quebec was asked what it was prepared to do. It offered to sell the Champlain market for a sum of $100,000 upon condition that the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Transcontinental Commission expended $2,000,000 in terminals and car-shops, etc.

The plans were prepared and submitted for approval to the Grand Trunk Pacific last year, long before there was any indication of a general election. The G. T. P. approved the plans and specifications were prepared in accordance therewith. These were approved by both the N.T.R. Commission and the G.T.P. in May last and a call for tenders was issued on July 29 last. The tenders were opened on August 31 and referred to the Chief Engineer for examination and report. Six tenders were received for the whole work, four for the structural steel, one for the plumbing, three for the painting and glazing and one for the electrical work.

The chief engineer reported to the board on September 9, 1911, that he recommended the acceptance of Joseph Gosselin, the lowest tenderer, for the sum of $745,015. This was twelve days before the election.

On September 11 the tenders were transmitted to the Law Clerk for the preparation of the contract and the law clerk returned the contract in quadri-duplicate with Joseph Gosselin to the secretary on September 23.

A report was made to the Governor-in-Council advising the acceptance of the Gosselin tender on the 23rd and an order-in-council awarding the contract was passed on September 27.

It is claimed by the Commissioners that the whole transaction was absolutely above board. It was inaugurated long before there was any indication of an election or a change of government, and it was carried through in the ordinary business way.

No action whatever has been taken in in regard to the St. John harbour contracts.

The retiring government gained no party or political advantage, and by awarding the tenders in the most matter of fact and regular manner, deprived the incoming government of no legitimate political or party advantage.

CATARRH STAMPED OUT!

LOATHSOME DISEASE CURABLE

Chronic Cases Cannot Exist with Morriscy's No. 26 for Internal and External Use

ROGERSVILLE, N.B., April 6, 1910.

"A few words as to the merit of your Catarrh Cure. For the last 10 years I was troubled with Catarrh of the head and stomach, and during that time tried all kinds of remedies with no results. I was, however, determined to find a cure, and hearing of your No. 26 decided to give it a trial, and I am glad to say it has cured me, and I highly recommend it to all Catarrh sufferers."

A. C. Thibodeau,
General Merchant.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

Great Political Leaders Have Not Always Been Good Losers

(From the Toronto Star Weekly.)

There is always a certain pathos attaching to the figure of a great political leader in his hour of defeat. The contrast between the puissant yesterday and the almost impotent to-day is too patent not to be painful to any generous mind. The serene courage with which Sir Wilfrid Laurier has faced electoral disaster does but confirm his right to the title of the greatest living Canadian and one of the greatest living citizens of the British Empire. He is not the first, nor the last, great party leader who, having enjoyed for a lengthened period the smiles of fortune, has been called on to face her frowns, and it is interesting to recall the manner in which some British statesmen have comported themselves in that dark and dread hour when victory has forsaken their banners.

It has been said of Disraeli that his fortitude in the time of defeat was only equalled by his moderation in the hour of victory. And certainly, despite the justice of his title to be considered moderate as men may, none can deny that he was always the bravest of the brave. For long years he was the victim of hope deferred, and when at last he had just clasped the cup of power, lo, it turned to ashes in his grasp, and for six long years from 1868 to 1874, he was again condemned to the cold shades of Opposition. However, in the latter year his great chance came, and until 1880 he ruled the destinies of Great Britain. But in 1880 he was badly beaten on his appeal to the country, although it was notorious that he fully expected to be sustained by the electorate. He bore his defeat with philosophic calm, and never a word of unmanly repining escaped those eloquent, sardonic lips. He was old and in bad health, and he saw the party which had been his pride, which he had educated and, indeed, created, broken in spirit and under the leadership of incompetent men. And he died in his enemies' day!

GLADSTONE AS A LOSER.

In the year 1874, Mr. Gladstone certainly showed that he was not always "a good loser." His great government, formed in 1868, and, perhaps, in actual achievement, the greatest of all his four administrations, was badly beaten at the general election, and he threw up the Liberal leadership in disgust. He was caricatured at that time, it is interesting to remember, as Achilles sulking in his tent. And, although he was again called to the Premiership on his party's return to power in 1880, for the six years preceding it was his colleagues who bore in Parliament the burden and heat of the day in Opposition, with but scanty assistance from him. Oddly enough, when he again encountered a severe reverse, in 1886, he never dreamed of retiring, although then a very old man, but continued at his post, exhibiting the most dauntless courage and most endless resource, until the fortune of war, in 1892, once more rested on the Liberal side. Mr. Gladstone, of course, lived to see the Liberals swept from office three years later, and he died at the very moment when, as it seemed, every cause which he most loathed was triumphant.

SALISBURY'S SUCCESS.

Lord Salisbury's career as a party leader was one of almost unbroken success. From 1886, he was continuously in power—except for the short term of office enjoyed by the Liberal Government of 1892—until his resignation some sixteen years later. And when he died, full of years and honour, his party was still in office, and his nephew at the head of it. Lord Rosebery, when overwhelmed in the Liberal debacle of 1895, sufficiently showed that he was only a "fair-weather" leader at best. After a brief period he resigned his leadership, and since then has chiefly concerned himself with drawing away from the former party. Mr. Balfour, subsequent to his monumental defeat in 1906, has consistently shown great powers as a debater, but he has achieved a record in leading the Tory party three times in succession to defeat. And for five years that party has been chafing under a regime of tactics, finesse, and fine-spun calculations which it cannot follow, and of which it only knows that it always comes to nothing. Under his leadership during these years, his party has always lost, and the other party has always gained, and with these things going against him he does not seem to fight very hard.

It is noteworthy that both Gladstone and Disraeli died while defeated, and, as leaders, almost discredited—for political sagacity must always justify itself by electoral success. But, though this is a fact which can never fail to add poignancy to regret, it would be both untrue and unwise to exaggerate the sombre side of the picture. Giants such as these, and such as our own Canadian statesmen have made their abiding contribution, whatever may betide, to human history. Their fame rests safe and secure—safe from the waters of oblivion, safe from the tide of time.

OMEMEE ITEMS

Special to The Examiner:

OMEMEE, OCT. 3rd.—Mr. and Mrs. W. Thompson, of St. Paul, Minn., were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Thompson last week.

Miss Johnson was in Lindsay on Friday.

Mrs. H. Shield spent several days last week with friends in Bethany.

The Misses Curry attended the Sunday School Convention of the Anglican Church held in Lindsay last week.

Miss Annie Ivory left on Thursday to visit her aunt, Miss Barrass, of Toronto.

Mrs. J. M. McCrea was the guest of Mrs. Rose, Lindsay, during the W.M.S. Board meetings.

Mr. Jack Veals has resumed his studies at McMaster University. Miss Veal, who has been teaching for the past year, is also attending the University.

Mr. McCutcheon, of Toronto, is visiting friends in town.

Mr. S. Skuse, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his family here.

Mrs. R. J. Mulligan attended the Missionary Board meeting in Lindsay last week.

Mr. H. Shield was in Peterborough on Thursday.

Mrs. Kennedy spent Thursday with friends in Lindsay.

The many friends of Rev. J. Line will regret to hear that he is ill in the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough.

Miss Elva Thompson left on Saturday for Lindsay, where she has entered as nurse in training in the Ross Memorial Hospital. Miss Thompson was one of our most popular young ladies, and will be greatly missed, both in social and church circles.

Mr. Fred Cunningham, who has been in the North-West for some time past, returned home on Saturday.

Mr. McCutcheon, of Victoria College, Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church on Sunday evening and gave an excellent discourse.

In the absence of Mr. Line on Sunday last, Rev. R. Burns conducted the funeral of the late John McConell, of Emily Township. The deceased was 96 years of age, and had spent the greater part of his life in Emily. The funeral was largely attended, and took place on Sunday at 2 o'clock. Sympathy is extended to the aged widow and bereaved family.

Miss Annie Stephenson visited in Lindsay last week.

Mr. Wm Smith, who was in town past two weeks, renewing old acquaintances, left on Thursday for Gooderham, where he takes charge of the Methodist Church during the coming year.

Mr. W. P. Woodger, after spending a week or so with friends here, left on Monday last for Victoria College, Toronto, where he will enter as a "Freshie."

Mr. Jos. Shield has purchased the farm and residence lately owned by Mr. Geo. Balfour.

The annual W.M.S. Convention of the Methodist Church of the Lindsay district was held in Omemee on Wednesday, October 4th, afternoon and evening. A large attendance of delegates and visitors were present at both sessions. In the afternoon, in addition to the usual business discussions, two interesting and helpful papers were given — "Mission Band Work," by Miss Edith Flavelle, of Lindsay, and "How to increase our membership," by Mrs. Feir, of Cambray. Miss Irvine, of Lindsay, also contributed a solo, which was much enjoyed. At the conclusion of the afternoon session the ladies of the Omemee Society served tea in the school-room. The evening session was presided over by Rev. R. Burns. The chief features of the evening was an address by Miss Chace, who is home on furlough from Wahstao, Alta. Miss Chace was dressed in an Austrian costume, which gave her audience a better idea of the class of people among whom she works. Miss Chace is a very forceful, interesting speaker, and her address was much appreciated. Mrs. Widdess, of Lindsay, together with the choir of the church, furnished the musical part of the meeting. Mrs. R. J. Mulligan, of Omemee, gave, in a clear, concise manner, "Echoes from the Board Meeting."

WHAT DOES BALD MEAN

When you see a man with a bald head you know he has had a scalp disease and that he neglected caring for his hair or he would not have been bald. So many people have a scalp disease and neglect it, because it don't pain them at the time. The disease is commonly called dandruff, it is a certain hair destroyer and means baldness sooner or later. No man or woman should have dandruff. Sageine is a sure dandruff germ killer and W. J. Kent sells it with his personal guarantee to give entire satisfaction or money back. Only 50c. a large bottle from W. J. Kent, or direct, all charges prepaid from B. V. Marion, Bridgeburg, Ont.

CLYDESDALE

Special to The Examiner:

Several people from this vicinity attended the Coe Hill Fair on Tuesday and report it to be the best event held in that village. The grounds have been greatly improved, and the directors deserve much credit for their good management. The entries were better and more numerous than usual. An excursion was run from Trenton, which brought many strangers, including Drs. Driscoll and Gardener. Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Clark, and Mr. T. L. Nicol, who acted as judges.

Mrs. F. J. Bullied shipped a car of lambs to Toronto this week.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Soules, who has been with us for the past two summers, returned to Toronto on Monday, where he will resume his studies at the College.

The annual business meeting of the Presbyterian Church was held on Friday afternoon, after which the Ladies' Aid served lunch.

Mr. Henri Eastland, who has been camping at Loon Lake, spent Sunday at Mr. F. J. Bullied's before leaving for Collingwood, where he intends spending the winter.

The death occurred on Thursday of Mrs. Sexsmith, aunt of J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., after an illness of only a few days. On Tuesday morning the deceased went to Coe Hill fair apparently in good health and after partaking of a hearty dinner complained of a numbness. Medical attendance was at once summoned and she was removed to the Wheeler House, where the doctors on examination found she had received a paralytic stroke. From that time she remained unconscious until Thursday, when she quietly passed away. She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Miss Eliza of Rochester, N.Y., and Mrs. Gerrard, Tobiat and Simon of this vicinity.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place from the home of her son, with whom she resided, on Sunday.

The women's institute will hold their next meeting at the home of Mrs. Hilcox on Thursday next. All are invited to attend.

OUR GROWING POPULATION

Canada's inflow of population keeps proportionate pace with her expanding trade and growing revenue. Our gain in population has risen nearly a quarter of a million by immigration alone for the past five expired months of the current fiscal year. Two hundred and twelve thousand eight hundred and fifty-four immigrant settlers arrived in Canada during the first five months of the current fiscal year—April 1 to Sept. 1, 141,201 of them arrived at ocean ports and 71,853 were from the United States. These figures show an increase of 18 per cent. as compared with the figures for the corresponding months of the last fiscal year, which were 115,158 at ocean ports and 65,180 from the United States, making a total for the five months, April 1 to Sept. 1, 1910, of 180,348. During the month of August this year there were 30,115 arrivals, 13,096 of them being at ocean ports and 17,019 from the States, as against 24,777 for August last year, 14,287 of whom were at ocean ports and 10,490 from the States. It will be seen that there was a slight falling off in arrivals at ocean ports as compared with August last year, this in part owing to the strike in the Old Country. This loss is much more than made up, however, by the remarkable increase in arrivals from the States, which was 62 per cent. in advance of that for August last year.

CAPTAIN TO BE CHOSEN BY RUGBY CLUB TO-NIGHT BIG PRACTICE CALLED

Arrangements have been definitely completed by which the West End Rugby Club will journey to Port Hope on Saturday for a game with the team representing Trinity College School. It is therefore important that the remaining practises this week should be well attended as a captain will have to be elected and a line-up chosen for Saturday's game. The captain will be elected by the players at to-night's practice and the personnel of the team for Saturday will also largely depend upon the men who are in line to-night. The players will therefore see the necessity of being on hand sharp at 7.30 o'clock. There was a big squad out last night and under Dr. McPherson's coaching good progress was made. To-night's practice is called for 7.30 o'clock at Central Park.

LINDSAY HOCKEY TEAM READY FOR THE SEASON

The Lindsay Warder says:

One of the most enthusiastic hockey meetings ever held in Lindsay took place last ight in the Butler House parlours, whe a junior O. H. A. hockey team was organized for the coming season. Between fifty and sixty followers of the game were present and the greatest enthusiasm was shown.

Mr. R. Butler acted in the capacity of chairman, afterw hcih the following officers were elected:

Patrons—Col. Sam Hughes, M.P., J. D. Flavelle, John Carew, Fred Martin and J. Boxall.
Hon.-Pres.—C. M. Squires.
Pres.—A. L. Campbell.
Vice-Pres.—Dr. Brown.
Secretary—R. Butler.
Treasurer—L. R. Knight.
Manager and Trainer—A. Gamble.

All of last year's players are available as well as a large umber of youngsters who are anxious to catch a place on the team and with such a large field to pick from Manager Gamble should have no trouble in putting a good fast team on the ice. Road running will commence on Monday night and will continue till the ice comes. The rink has also been secured and will be used in bad weather and also for dubbing down purposes. A collection was taken up at the meeting which was largely responded to by those present.

The players have also been supplied with a number of tags that sell for 25 cents each which they will dispose of to the public for the purpose of defraying their early season expenses.

It was also decided to purchase new suits, the colours to be blue and white. With the experience of last winter's playing Lindsay should be represented with a first class junior team. Manager Gamble has had considerable experience as a player and trainer and will no doubt make a success of this year's team.

RIDPATH TO TRAVEL

Bruce Ridpath, the crack hockeyist and canoeist, has secured at big expense a reel of moving picture films showing his remarkable stunts in the water with a canoe and will exhibit them throughout Ontario during the fall and winter. The pictures will be put on at the Strand Theatre next week. This will be their first public exhibition.—Toronto Star.

RUGBY

Under Coach Marty Walsh Rough Riders will be in grand shape for their game with Montreal at Ottawa Saturday. Gordon Johnston, Eddie Gerald, Tomdy Robertson, and Dave McCann comprise a back division that has a bundle of speed and nerve while Charlie Selling is rounding in nicely as quarter. The scrimmage will likely be Kilmartin, Kuhn and Wilkinson, while on the wings Ryan, Kilt, Vaughan, Elliott, Phillips, and Disney will present a great front.

Smith, the R. M. C. half-back, was worked out on the wing by Argos last night, while the back division consisted of Mallett, Lockhart, Binkley and Murphy.

The Central Y.M.C.A. rugby team will hold a signal practice in the gymnasium to-night at six o'clock. All members and prospective players are requested to turn out, as the team is scheduled to play Peterborough on Saturday, Oct. 14.—Toronto Star.

CHANGE OF TRAIN SERVICE

Commencing on October 2nd the Lakefield train service will be changed as follows: The train which has been leaving here at 8.30 a.m. will now leave at 7.00 a.m. and returning will arrive in Peterboro 8.15 a.m. The noon train for Lakefield will leave at 12.20 and returning will arrive Peterboro 5.15 p.m. The evening train is discontinued. The public will be glad to learn that the new service inaugurated this Summer to Port Hope will be maintained throughout the Winter and will thus enable all passengers to leave Toronto at 9.00 a.m. and arrive in Peterboro at mid-day. This train also affords good connection for all Eastern points to Montreal and Boston. 12d-77

THE MAN WHO STOPS TO GOSSIP

If the public has views on the box office man, he also develops distinct impressions of the public. Just as theatre goers study and criticise the people on the stage, he has rare opportunities for studying people in the audience. In the mass he doesn't consider them a bad lot. They are pleasure seekers and bent on amusement. They have money in their pockets else they wouldn't apply to him. Consequently the majority of them are tolerably good humoured, though the crank and the grouch are ever present like black patches in the gay crazy quilt. The man who asks for the best seats in the house and then slaps down a pass to pay for them brings no particular joy to the ticket seller. Neither does the lady who always forgets her money and asks if she can't owe for the seats. Neither does the reminiscent old gentleman who stands at the window and chats pleasantly of all the past appearances of the star from the time she first showed forty years ago at Maguire's Op'ry House, and then, when he is pushed along by the impatient crowd, calmly takes his place at the end of the line to finish his history when he reaches the wicket again.

These, however, are special pests. But there are general irritating traits which, from the viewpoint of the ticket seller, seem to afflict all humanity. Blessed is he who says, "Two for to-night!" for scarcely anyone ever does. And of course everyone demands aisle seats and despite the laws of architecture, insists upon having them directly in the centre of the theatre. A ticket man's idea of heaven, they say, is one vast auditorum composed entirely of aisle seats. The fourth dimension may exist in the hereafter; it doesn't here, so the aisle seat craving is never killed by satiety.

MID-WEEK SERVICE

There will be no mid-week service in Knox Church to-night. Preparatory service will be held on Friday evening at 8 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Cruse of Norwood. Session will meet at 7.30. Teachers training class will be held at 9 p. m. on Friday.

Distress From Indigestion

Tried in Vain to Get a Cure—All Medicines Failed

Old Trouble Disappeared When the Liver and Bowels Were Set Right by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You cannot make a greater mistake than to think that indigestion is confined to the stomach. It is a disease of the liver and bowels, and it is only by getting these organs healthy and active that you can ever hope to cure chronic indigestion.

Here are two cases reported by Mr. Skinner, which tell of continued failure to cure indigestion by dosing the stomach. Both were cured thoroughly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. A. C. Skinner, Atlantic St., Hardwoodhill, Sydney, B.C., writes: "My wife was troubled with indigestion and tried all sorts of medicines in vain. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I got her to try them, and to our great delight she was cured. We would not think of being without them in the house for use when the liver and bowels became sluggish.

I told a friend about them and gave him a box. He had suffered from indigestion for years and tried most everything he could get. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were also successful in his case, and he says they beat any medicine he ever came across."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Peerless Peninsular

A CAST IRON RANGE WITH MODERN OVEN AND EQUIPMENT

A wealthy mustard manufacturer once said that he made his profit not out of what people ate, but what they left on their plates.

The coal dealer might say about the same thing.

It's not the coal you use that buys his six-cylinder car, but the coal that goes up the chimney.

You might as well save some of that coal.

Building ranges to cook well and to save coal has kept us thinking and working over in Preston for upwards of 50 years. Every year improvements in range construction have been made. The flues have been widened here; a wall made thicker there; weight reduced in one spot and added to another. But every change has made the oven heat with less fuel and the construction of the range strong and durable.

Nickel ornaments, special features or size do not affect the internal construction or honest materials and workmanship that go into the "Peninsular." So that when buying one, a housewife may feel free to consult her own tastes as regards finish and appearance. If the range is "Peninsular" she will know that it will give her good bakings for the least amount of coal.

The PEERLESS is a modern cast-iron range—it has a quick oven—an oven that heats evenly on every side, top and bottom—a square oven big enough to cook four pies at once; and it has a drop-oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

The PEERLESS Peninsular may be had with a steel warming closet and hot water reservoir and with a low closet under the oven for pots, pans and irons.

The PEERLESS Peninsular is a perfect beauty and has many a convenience not found on other ranges.

Take the top of the Peerless Peninsular.

It is made in three separate sections which slide along or lift off whenever you want to "clean" the flues.

In most ranges the oven is either "on" or "off." That is, it is getting full heat or none at all. The Peerless Peninsular oven is regulated by means of a sliding damper so as to get just as much heat as you need. This is another way you save fuel.

Get "The Cost"

"THE COST of a Range" tells more about these Peninsular Ranges—not a list of pictures and prices, but a book showing that the after-cost is the big cost and how the "Peninsular" cuts it down.

—Yours, for the asking.

A Special Importation of Beautiful Seamless

Axminster Rugs

....Now On View....

From one of the most famous makers in Scotland. It's the best assortment we have ever shown, and has no equal in Peterborough.

The housekeeper in search of a high-grade, artistic rug at a moderate price who has found the limited assortments and commonplace designs shown elsewhere, disappointing, is invited to look over this importation of seamless Axminster Rugs.

They come from a maker in Scotland who is Internationally famous for the high-quality and artistic designs of his productions. The great success these rugs met with in previous years has inspired us to greater efforts and the stock this year is the finest we have ever shown. It has no equal in this town, for it is sold in Peterboro only to R. Hall & Son Ltd. The rugs are absolutely seam less and are guaranteed by us to be satisfactory in every particular.

No more artistic designs can be found anywhere---the large variety comprising many new and beautiful effects. The colouring is exquisite. In a word these rugs meet the most discriminating taste, and yet are priced within reachable distance of the ordinary purse.

An English Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair

In England the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing rats, which is due entirely to this new discovery.

It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

The Americans are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA, and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair dressing. McDermid and Jury, your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into Peterborough, and a large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50c. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IF a carpenter should work for years with a dull tool, and offer as his only explanation that he could not afford to have it sharpened, you would answer him: "But, surely you lose more money by having it dull so that you cannot do as much work."

Wouldn't you?

And yet, maybe you are doing the very same thing.

I know hundreds of people who are.

The dull tool is some foolish little habit, which daily hampers and hinders them in their work.

The effort it would cost them to overcome it cannot possibly be equal to the effort they have to make every day to overcome the difficulties and hindrances it causes them.

A newspaper man showed me his notebook the other day. It was a very neat affair, filled with carefully written, thoroughly legible notes. Having seen his notes on previous occasions, when they consisted of impossible scrawls on stray scraps of paper, I expressed my astonishment at the change and inquired how it came about.

"Well, you see, Miss Cameron," he explained, "I got tired of hauling out those scraps of paper and spending a lot of time trying to make out what I'd written and then throwing them away and writing my story from memory and aking a dozen mistakes. I decided it didn't pay, and I've been keeping my notes, so I can read them the last few months, and you don't know how much time and trouble it saves."

There was a man who realised how much more it cost to use a dull tool than to have it sharpened.

What's your dull tool?

Perhaps it's a cluttered desk that costs you as much time every day hunting for something as it would take to clean up the whole desk.

Perhaps it's a slovenly habit of dress or a carelessness about your finger nails that prejudices more people against you than you can win back by all your sterling worth of brain and character.

Perhaps it's an ill-arranged pantry and closets, that make you lose more time every day hunting and reaching for things than it would take you to set the whole place in logical and helpful order.

Perhaps it's a carelessness about your health—a habit of eating too rapidly, or not walking enough, or not drinking sufficient water that costs you very disproportionately in efficiency and ability.

Perhaps you have none.

But if you are my old friend, the "average man or woman," I very much doubt it.

BOARD OF EDUCATION HOLDS BUSY SESSION

Central School Will be Subjected to a Coat of Paint---Field Day Sports of Collegiate Institute Will be Held on October 5th.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held last night in the Board room. Those present were Chairman John Crane, W. H. Hill, Dr. Morrison, T. H. Adams, R. Fair, V. Eastwood, B. F. Ackerman and Dr. Burnham. A considerable amount of business was on hand, but it was quickly and effectively disposed of by the Board.

Communications

The following communications were received and adopted:

A letter from Mr. H. R. H. Kenner calling attention to the fact that it will be necessary to make some provision for the boys' physical culture classes for the five months from November to April.

The classes can be arranged as follows. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning, 10.45 to 12 o'clock; on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, 11.30 to 12 o'clock, and each afternoon from 3.30 to 4 o'clock.

A. H. A. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education, wrote inquiring as to whether the Board had taken any action regarding proper gymnasium accommodation.

It was moved by Mr. Hill, seconded by Mr. Adams, that the matter be left in the hands of the Supervision Committee.

The Canadian Casualty and Boiler Insurance Co. reported examining the boiler in Queen Alexandra School and finding it in a satisfactory working condition. An inspection of boilers 1 and 2, in the Collegiate Institute was made and they were also found to be in good condition.—Received.

Mr. J. H. Burnham wrote offering a gold watch to the student taking the highest marks in the next entrance examinations. After a brief discussion it was decided to leave the matter in the hads of the Supervision Committee.

A letter was read asking for a grant of $30 for the aid of the Collegiate Institute field day sports, which will be held on Oct. 5. This was granted.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner wrote notifying the Board that Mr. Walker of the Collegiate teaching staff, had presented $10 worth of selected books to the Library of the Collegiate Institute. The tendering of the thanks and appreciation of the Board for the donation was left in the hands of the Supervision Committee.

The Peterborough Teachers Association wrote asking for the use of the Collegiate Institute Assembly hall for their annual meeting to be held Thursday evening, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 5, 6, and 7.—Granted.

The Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company reported on the Central School boiler and suggested some improvements.

The Collegiate Institute Cadet report was submitted and found to be satisfactory.

Mr. Hill stated that difficulty was being experienced in the filling of Mr. Hodgson's position on the Collegiate teachig staff. However, better results were looked forward to in the future.

Mr. Fair reported that the improvements on the Central School were nearly completed, but there was one thing that had been overlooked in the contract, that was the painting. It would cost between two and three hundred dollars to do this work, but he believed that there still remained enough of the appropriation to do the work. A discussion was raised as to the best time to paint the building, whether this fall or in the spring. On motion of Dr. Morrison it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the Property Committee with power to act.

The meeting then adjourned.

A RUNAWAY

Charlotte street, east of Park, was the scene of a lively runaway this afternoon when a horse, scared at something on the street, broke its halter and ran away with the grocery delivery wagon to which it was tied. The horse was later caught near Wm. Hamilton's foundry. The horse was uninjured, but the wagon was somewhat wrecked. When caught, the horse had almost freed itself of the wagon.

During its mad race up Reid street, it nearly ran over a couple of little youngsters on the top of the hill. However, fortunate as it has turned out, the vehicle and harness suffered the worst in the occurrence.

UNIFORMS FOR THE CADETS

A Cadet Band is Also Mentioned in Letter From Inspecting Officers

The following letter, which speaks for itself, was received by the Peterborough Board of Education, from Captain Clark, D.A.A., Q.M.G., Third Division, Kingston, relative to the annual inspection of the Cadets. It is evident from the tone of the letter that the boys succeeded in creating a favourable impression in the eyes of the inspecting officers. The letter reads as follows:

"With reference to the last annual inspection of the Cadet Corps, I beg to inform you that it is noted that the Corps, as a whole, is reported as good. Please compliment the school authorities and the Instructor upon the progress made.

"The attention given this year to musketry and the progress made in the organization of a cadet band are observed with satisfaction. It is hoped in another year some provision may be made towards obtaining uniforms."

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES DEWART.

WARSAW, OCT. 4.—In the passing away on Thursday, Sept. 21 of Celestia Payne, wife of Mr. James Dewart, this community lost an esteemed resident. The late Mrs. Dewart was born fifty-five years ago and has always resided here, where she enjoyed the best of health until her last illness, which was of short duration.

The deceased was the possessor of a high and noble character, combined with a kindly and generous disposition, which made friends for her at first acquaintance and the more intimate the acquaintance the more fast the friendship. Being of a generous disposition she was ever ready to assist in any worthy cause. She was a member of the Methodist church, the service of which was always attractive to her.

Those in the family left to mourn her loss are Mr. Dewart, two daughters, Celestia and Charlotte and one son, Wallace. Two sisters and two brothers survive. These are William of Peterborough, Uriah and Lavina, who reside here and Mrs. R. H. Kidd of Calallam Bay, Wash, U.S.A.

The funeral took place on Saturday, Sept. 23 to St. Mark's cemetery, where the body was interred.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In this morning's Times it is stated J. H. Burnham will give a gold watch to the Entrance pupil obtaining the highest number of marks at the entrance examinations. Is this an annual prize, or only as long as "J. H." is looking for votes? Is it the same kind that the Times formerly advertised to give away

Thanking you in anticipation, I remain,

Yours truly,
STUDENT.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Under this milk by-law soon to be enforced in our city, those who keep cows and sell their milk to their neighbours, will be prevented from doing so any more. It will leave them liable to be fined for selling milk unless they furnish sterilized bottles, with air tight corks, etc. And if they cannot pay the fine, they are liable to imprisonment.

It is plain to be seen that the manufacturers of milk bottles and milkmen's supplies are back of this whole business. There must be a demand created for their wares even if it costs the people double the price for their milk. The people are getting suspicious, Mr. Editor, that it is not the health of the people the promoters of these schemes are after. It is their hard-earned dollars they want.

JOHN CARLISLE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Would you allow me a small space in your valuable paper to let my friends know (they are my friends indeed and have shown it by their visiting me while I was in the hospital) that I have left the hospital and am back at my home again at Chemong. I am sure I thank those nurses that attended to me while I was at the hospital. They worked hard, day and night, to bring me back to my health again, which they did. One thing they failed in, however, was that they tried to make a white man out of me. Too late for that. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours truly,
Dan Whetung, Sr.

WEDDING BELLS

McCARTHY—KAVANAGH.

On Tuesday morning, Oct. 3rd, a very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Joseph's church, Douro, when Margaret A. Kavanagh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Cavanagh, became the bride of Francis S. McCarthy, of Peterborough.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McGuire, in the presence of a large number of friends and relations. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous dinner was served, after which the afternoon was pleasantly spent.

The bride was prettily attired in pearl grey satin with black plume trimmed hat and wore white bridal roses. Her sister, Miss Kathleen, was bridesmaid and wore mauve silk with black picture hat and wore pink roses.

The groom was attended by Mr. Geo. Whibbs.

The bridal party left at 7 o'clock, amid showers of confetti and best wishes and drove to Peterborough, where they left on the 9.15 train for Gravenhurst, and points north. The bride travelled in a navy blue, tailored suit with hat to match.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy will reside at 295 Lake street, Peterborough.

SUSPECTED OF HOLDING OUT

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Consider the Box Office Man; he boils not, neither does he chin. Yet Solomon in all his glory was never flayed like one of these.

Indeed, the smiling individual from whom you buy your theatre tickets is the most patient man in the world. If you have ever stood in line and listened to a colloquy up ahead at the grating, you may have suspected it. If you had sat behind the window with him, as I have, and listened to the steady stream of foolish questions, silly complaints and absurd requests he is called upon to assimilate, you would know it. Incidentally, you might not have as much respect for the sovereign "pee-pul," of which you are a unit as you have at present.

To the public at large the box office man represents the policy of the theatre with which he is connected. He is the only part of "the front of the house," which, in theatrical parlance, means management, that they ever see or have any dealings with. Judging from the interminable cross-examination to which he is subjected, they believe he's the man who wrote the show business. Yet they do not trust him.

The ticket purchaser almost invariably thinks the box office man is holding out on him. When a merchant selling any other article tells the purchaser he hasn't got what's wanted he is believed. When the ticket seller makes the same declaration he is suspected of equivocation, prevarication and something conveyed by a "shorteranduglier." There is apparently some physical inhibition against understanding the meaning of the term "Sold Out!" This simple and apparently pithy announcement never sent any human being away from the box office yet. It always has to be supplemented by a long and detailed explanation. And even when the would-be purchaser departs he leaves with the firm conviction that the "ticket fellow" is either a confirmed liar or a professional confidence man.

Unfortunately for the fretful porcupines among the public, no way has yet been invented to replace the box office man with an automaton. He has to be bright, quick, polite, full of tact and of a temper infinitely enduring. A good man in the box office is a pearl beyond price. For no matter what his salary may be, he can earn it three times over for the management merely by selling patrons better seats than they think they want. Sometimes he does it by implication—"Yes, this balcony seat is very good, madam, but——" Sometimes it is by direct persuasion, though seldom, and sometimes hypnotic suggestion turns the trick.

OUR METHOD

From Farm and Dairy.

Fred Smith, Brant Co., Ont.

The method we have followed for over 30 years in harvesting our onions has been to pull them by hand or run a knife attached to the cultivator under them. The latter is the quicker and easier way, but the ground has to be clean from weeds.

After loosening the onions from the ground they are pulled together in windrows, usually six rows in one. They are allowed to dry down thoroughly before topping operations begin, which is generally within about 10 days. The number of days depends upon the condition of the crop when it is pulled. If the tops went down naturally without being rolled, they will be ready to top within that time.

Some use shears to top with, but I prefer an old case knife with a blade four inches long with a rounded, blunt end to prevent hacking of the fingers. Onions topped in the forenoon are better sacked up in the afternoon when they are dry and then removed to shelter.

Onions should never be picked up wet under any circumstances as it makes them dirty and is apt to discolor them. Years ago it was the practice to allow the onions to remain on the ground for several days after topping to cure in the sun. This is a great mistake. The sun not only makes them strong but badly discolors them. The side exposed most will turn green which is undesirable from a market standpoint.

ANOTHER METHOD

In 1909 I followed a different method and in my judgment a far better one. In the winter of 1909 I made 1,000 bushel crates with slotted sides, ends, and bottoms. The measurement of the crates was 12 inches high, 13 wide, and 18 long. The slats were nailed to three-cornered posts, leaving an inch space between each slat. The slats were two and a quarter inches wide by three-eighths of an inch thick.

The onions were cut loose with a half round knife attached to the cultivator and allowed to dry for a few days. They were then raked into windrows of 12 rows each, a wooden rake being used. They were then crated with the tops on and removed to shelter and allowed to cure for two weeks or more if necessary before being topped.

I find that onions handled in this way are a better color and splendid keepers. An advantage gained by using the crates is that if bad weather comes and you cannot work outside your help loses no time.

This year my crop will be topped with a topping machine run by a gasoline engine. We have a topper here, made by a local man, that with a few improvements will be a complete success. It is made with two inch steel rollers six feet long and has six rollers. The rollers run in pairs and are set on a slant. The onions are poured in one end and as they run over the rollers the tops are pulled off and the onions run out into a bag.

I always sell my onions in carlots. Until last year they were put up in 80 pound sacks. Now the buyers want the 75 pound sack, which is the standard sack. I run all my onions over a wooden screen with slats an inch and a half apart which removes all the dirt and pickling onions. Grown or spoiled ones are picked out. I never ship out a car of onions without sorting them over the screen even if they have only been sacked up for a few days.

LOSS TO PATRONS

From Farm and Dairy.

The total cuts on cheese and butter last fall, due to turnipy flavor, represented a large loss to patrons. We know of one cheese factory in Eastern Ontario where all of the cheese made for two months in the fall was cut one-half cent a pound because, as it turned out, a very small percentage of the patrons had been allowing their cows to run in the turnip fields. These cheese after they had been in the curing room only a short time had developed such a strong turnipy flavor that their selling value was almost ruined.

Certain sections particularly in the East have now a reputation for producing turnipy flavored cheese and butter in the fall of the year, and buyers avoid them. A cut in price is now taken as a matter of course. There is no need of us farmers delivering a can of turnipy flavored milk. In corn ensilage and mangels we have feeds that are just as economical as turnips and they produce a fine flavored cheese or butter. Cheese makers will do well to reject all turnipy milk.

INTERESTING BULLETIN

From Farm and Dairy.

A bulletin entitled "Fattening Poultry," describing successful methods of fattening poultry on a large commercial scale and giving complete data on the feeding of over 100,000 birds, has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. It gives information of operations on an extensive scale and so far as known is the first publication showing the cost of producing a pound of gain in poultry.

"The successful feeding of poultry depends largely on the ability of the feeder to notice the condition of the chickens on feed," is one of the fundamentals laid down by the bulletin. "The common practice in poultry packing houses is to feed each lot 17 days or less. Most of the milk-fed chickens are fed 14 days. Practically all of the special feeding in this country involves the use of milk, which produces the 'milk-fed chickens' of the market. Milk, while the least expensive, seems to be the most essential constituent of the ration, and when a feeder cannot get milk in some form he generally does not attempt to fatten poultry commercially.

"Crate feeding from troughs is the method employed in this country by most of the large fattening establishments, with six to 10 fowls in a crate. Birds fed only for a short time may be forced on highly concentrated feeds, whereas if fed longer they may need a ration containing a greater variety and less concentrated.

MILK HAS IMPORTANT INFLUENCE

"Milk seems to have a very important influence on the digestive process, keeping the fowls in good condition under forced feeding. Beef broth is used to some extent, but it is not as good as milk. At the beginning fowls should be fed lightly for two or three feeds, gradually increasing the amount until they do not clean up all that is given to them. The main object should be to keep their appetites keen and at the same time have them consume as much feed as they can assimilate. By feeding a small amount often they will eat a greater quantity and their appetites will remain keener."

The conclusions reached by the investigation show that general purpose fowls make more economical gains in fattening than the Mediterranean class. The average person will get better results in fattening by feeding three times rather than twice daily. It was found that the average gain for a large lot of poultry was 9.09 cents and the cost of the feed alone was 7.10 cents. It was also observed that hens made less gain than chickens, in crate fattening, and that low grade wheat flour was a more economical feed than oat flour at the present prices of grain.

CROSS, SICK, FEVERISH CHILDREN NEED GENTLE BUT EFFECTIVE CASCARETS AT ONCE

Most of the ills of childhood are caused by a sour, disordered stomach, sluggish liver and constipated bowels. They catch cold easily, become cross, listless, irritable, feverish, restless, tongue coated, don't eat or sleep well and need a gentle, though thorough, physic—but don't try to force a nauseating dose of oil into the little one's already sick stomach — it is cruel, needless and old-fashioned.

Any child will gladly take Cascarets which act gently—never gripe or produce the slightest uneasiness—though cleanses the little one's system, sweetens the stomach and puts the liver and bowels in a pure, healthy condition.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this gentle, thorough laxative which costs only 10 cents per box.

CONFLICTING REPORTS FROM THE WAR
A RUMOUR THAT TRIPOLI HAS FALLEN

Still Another Message Says One of the Finest Battleships of the Italian Fleet Has Been Destroyed

TO-DAY'S DESPATCHES

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, OCT. 5.—Firms in England and Scotland have received despatches from their agents in Tripoli this morning to the effect that the Italian marines have landed, and that the Italian flag floats over the town. The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Constantinople cables that a newspaper there, publishes a report that heavy fighting has taken place between the Italian and Turkish fleets near Mytelino. Another report in Constantinople is that the Italian battleship, "Count Cavour," was blown up by a Turkish mine near Tripoli Coast, and all on board killed. This warship was one of Italy's best and carried thirteen 12-inch guns. The newly-formed cabinet is considered, in Constantinople, to be very weak. They have sat for sixty-eight hours in continuous conference, but have not decided anything. In the meantime Italy has established herself mistress of the Mediterranean, blocking all the Turkish coasts except a portion well protected by submarine mines.

ROME, OCT. 5.—After the bombardment of the forts of Tripoli, yesterday, officers and marines landed, and found that the Turks had evacuated, one battery taking the mechanism of the guns with them, leaving them useless. There were three dead bodies in the parapets.

ROME, OCT. 5.—It is stated here that the Turkish fleet issued from Dardenelles into Bosphorus and a sharp engagement with a portion of the Italian fleet is hourly expected. Further advices from the Italian fleet off Tripoli indicate that the Turkish casualities were heavy in some of the forts during the bombardment. If surrender is not made to-day there will be further shelling.

Developments In Russell Case

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, OCT. 5.—In the Russell case this morning, former Secretary Bush, who warked for Russell during the latter's alleged erratic proceedings, said he obtained a sleeping draught for his employer for nervousness, not because he was insane.

Denies Rumour

Special to The Examiner

OTTAWA, OCT. 5.—The arrival here this morning of Hon. Frank Cochrane and Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture of Canada, led to the rumour that the latter was a candidate for a similar position in the Borden Cabinet. Mr. Duff denied this, saying he was on his way to the fall fair at Carp.

CHRISTIAN UNION DISCUSSED AT ECUMENICAL METHODIST CONFERENCE

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT. 5.—The outstanding feature of this morning's session of the World's Encumenical Methodist Conference, was the interest aroused on the question of Christian union, particularly in regard to proposed organized union of three denominations in Canada. Methodistism in England is still divided in several units and Methodistism in the United States is not all united like Canada. Rev. Dr. Howard Sprague, of New Brunswick, introduced a subject, telling of the progress made in church union. Rev. Dr. Ogata, from Japan, touched on the subject, saying Japanese people couldn't understand the great division among Christian people. English delegates followed the discussion keenly and said that Canada had set a good example in this particular question and was asked wouldn't this be the last encumenical conference in Canada if the union was carried out, as Methodistism would have lost its identity. When speaking on church growth during the last decade, Rev. Dr. Carroll, general statistican, made the statement that an increase of one million members during the last ten years had been recorded. The reasons were discussed and delegates resolved to work organization powers to the utmost. All receptions and preliminary speeches are now concluded and the Ecumenical is down hard at work.

Official Programme For The Reception Of New Governor-General

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, OCT. 5. — An official programme for the arrival of the Governor-General, the Duke of Connaught and family, has been arranged. On Friday, the 13th, at 11, they will land at Quebec, proceeding to the Legislative Buildings, where the oath will be administered by Sir Louis Davies, Senior Puisne Judge of Canada. Luncheon at the Chateau Frontenac, and dinner at Spencer Wood's residence. Lieutenant-Governor Langlier will give a reception at the Legislative Buildings at night. Leaving a midnight the party will arrive at Ottawa at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, where another big reception is to be held. Great preparations are being made for decoration and illuminations, music and military display in both cities.

W. T. White To Be Minister Of Finance

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, OCT. 5.—A despatch from Ottawa says it is almost certain that W. T. White, of Toronto, late manager of the National Trust Co., and protege of J. W. Flavelle, millionaire Conservative packer, will be Minister of Finance in Borden's Cabinet. It is said that potent silent influence of Whitney Conservatives in Toronto is behind him. He has never been in Parliament or the Legislature, or even a school board, but has proven himself a great financier and in the late campaign blossomed out as a powerful speaker. The gossip here says Hon. George E. Foster will be Minister of Marine.

WILL BE BIG SCRAP.

NEW YORK, OCT. 4.—New York sports are anticipating a hearty slugfest on Friday night, when Tony Caponi meets Sam Langford, the Boston Tar Baby, at the Twentieth Century A. C. The two fought at Winnipeg recently, but the bout was stopped by the police.

TWO BIG STEAMERS REPORTED ON ROCKS

Special to The Examiner

TORONTO, OCT. 5.—It is reported here this morning that the Str. Rosedale, of the Inland Navigation Co., and the Str. Plummer, of the Merchants Line, have run aground on the rocks near Iroquois Point, near Sault Ste. Marie. No confirmation has been received here as yet, but great anxiety prevails in marine circles. The storm which swept over Ontario and the Great Lakes last night was one of the worst this year, and vessels out in it had a hard test. Considerable damage is reported along the water fronts of ports on Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and Georgian Bay.

Attempted Assasination

Special to The Examiner:

VIENNA, OCT. 5.—Five shots were fired by a supposed anarchist from the gallery in the direction of the Minister of Justice and Minister of Education during a session of the Reichsrath this afternoon, but the bullets lodged in the floor at their feet. No one was hurt, but there was great excitement. The man was arrested.

ARRANGING FOR WORLD'S SERIES

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, OCT. 5.—The big league ball magnates meet here this afternoon to decide on the details for the world's series baseball games between New York Nationals and Philadelphia Americans, champions and pennant winners of their respective leagues. The series will probably begin on Oct. 14th, at New York.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

Special to The Examiner.

ODESSA, RUSSIA, OCT. 5.—Two men who participated in the robbery of the International Harvester Co., of stealing sixteen hundred dollars and shooting a policeman and the manager, have been sentenced to death.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 5.—The Standard's Dublin correspondent wires that a rough draft of the home rule bill has been prepared by Redmond's committee for submission to Asquith's Cabinet, which will likely give it consideration immediately. It provides for a grant of fifty million dollars to start the new parliament. The Nationalists asked for 75 million dollars, originally, but may have been urged to accept the smaller amount.

AN EXPERT OPINION ABOUT GATTY SELLARS

With a full remembrance of visits paid by organists of national repute, we have no hesitation in saying we have never listened locally to a greater executant than Gatty Sellars. One mire the phenomenal facility of his renderings—for movements whose technical subtleties would have appalled the ordinary executant were rendered with varying smoothness and beauty of phrase—or the consummately artistic spirit with which he imbued them. Bach's D Major Fugue was finely executed, demonstrating his splendid pedalling, but there was something narrowly approximating diablerie in his "Variations and Fugeto Finale on an Old English Air." With elaborate variations played absolutely allegro furioso, it was indeed wonderful that such perfect phrasing should have been produced. St. Paul's church, Thursday, Oct. 12th.

FUNERAL TO-DAY

The funeral of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Dineen, who died at St. Joseph's Hospital on Tuesday, took place this morning from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Lane, of Downie street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, where requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father McColl. At the graveside the Rev. Father John O'Brien officiated.

A large number of friends were present, and the beautiful floral tributes denoted the esteem in which she was held by her many friends.

The pall bearers were Messrs. William and Richard Dineen (sons), William Moher, Patrick Sullivan, Patrick McAvelia and John McCauley.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

THURSDAY, OCT. 5, 1911

MR. BORDEN NEEDS TIME.

For the sake, merely, of having something to find fault with, some Conservative journals are complaining that Sir Wilfrid is holding on to office too long. While there is no ground for complaint in this regard, it is pretty certain that Sir Wilfrid will be ready to vacate before Mr. Borden is ready to take possession. His Cabinet making is proceeding very slowly and it will be probably Tuesday of next week before he will be able to present a Cabinet list to Earl Grey. Even then Mr. Borden will have to make a compromise selection of Quebec representatives in his Cabinet, Mr. Monk, the Nationalist, being one of the number and the representative of Mr. Bourassa, in the Imperial true-blue Conservative Cabinet.

THE TEACHER FAMINE.

The Examiner is informed that there are three rural schools—in the townships of Harvey and Cavendish, that are not in operation owing to lack of teachers, and this is due to lack of supply. The responsibility for this condition rests solely upon the Ontari government. By its abolition of Model schools and the concentration of their work into three or four Normal schools, large numbers of persons of limited means are deprived of the privilege of technically qualifying for teachers. This has reduced the supply of teachers to such an extent that many schools cannot possibly get teachers, and many have to be satisfied with only partially qualified—"permit"—teachers. Hon. Dr. Pyne is not a flaming success as Minister of Education.

MEAT INSPECTION.

Dr. Rutherford, Veterinary Director-General and Live Stock Commissioner, insists that all our slaughter houses should be inspected. He says that wherever meat is killed for sale, the government or local authorities should take measures to see that none of our meat supply is troubled with disease, that makes them unwholesome food, dangerous to health. It is the duty of the government or other authorities that act for busy people who have not the time or the ability to make examination for themselves, to provide the conditions that would give the public confidence that the meats they purchase from the shops are above reproach. To provide for inspection of meats in a simple and practical way would be to provide municipla abattoirs where all animals killed to supply meat should be slaughtered, and the resulting meat carefully subjected to competent inspection. The government has placed inspectors for this purpose in all our pork packing establishments. If it is necessary that the meats intended very largely for export and foreign consumption should be inspected, it seems only fair that the meats intended for public consumption in the cities and towns of Canada, should be similarly inspected. The new Conservative government, in defeating reciprocity, prevented the adoption of a reciprocal trade agreement, which would provide the competition that would tend to decrease the price of food products. If the government makes the consumer continue to pay high prices for meats, it should, in fairness, provide that what we pay fancy figures for, should be subjected to inspection, so that only good, healthy meats should represent the high prices we have to pay.

WOODLOT INSPECTION BY GOVERNMENT.

Increasing difficulty is being found in obtaining an adequate supply of hardwood lumber for the industries of Canada. The hardwood tracts of the eastern provinces for a long time have not been able to meet the demand, and in 1910, 60 per cent. of the hardwood used in Canada was imported from the United States. The United States, although with a much larger supply of hardwood on hand, is also seeing that the annual consumption far exceeds the annual growth, and that the virgin supply is being rapidly reduced. By practical demonstration it has been proven, that waste land, if planted in young hardwoods, will prove a profitable investment at the end of twenty-five years or more, and will improve the productiveness of the surrounding farm land. In the eastern provinces of Canada and in Ontario, particularly, are large tracts of such land, covered at present with an unprofitable tree growth, which, through being sandy, rocky or low lying, cannot be treated as agricultural lands. The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, is taking a practical interest in the farmer's woodlots of Ontario, in an effort to make otherwise useless land supply hardwood lumber to an eager market, with profitable returns to the wood lot owner. Parties interested in this matter should correspond with the Department at Ottawa, which is already giving practical assistance on important tracts. Foresters will be supplied by the Department to look over tracts of timbered land, estimate the quantity of timber, advise as to what species to encourage or plant according to the locality and generally conditions and suggest a general working plan. Such scientific knowledge, the result of former investigations, will be of great benefit to private owners and should be sought after at once.

AN ULTIMATUM TO MR. BORDEN

(London Advertiser)

Hon. L. P. Pelletier, the Conservative member-elect for Quebec County, uses this threatening language toward Mr. Borden:

"We shall have a referendum on the marine question. I am sure that Mr. Borden will carry out this promise that he has made.

"We have been elected on the ground that the Canadian people would have a navy only if the majority were willing to have it, and if the men now in possession of the power neglect to carry this article of our programme we shall take means to have it carried."

Mr. Pelletier declared himself in the same speech a follower of Bourassa and Lavergne. He has been hitherto classified as a straight Conservative, eligible for cabinet honours. A distinguished lawyer, he has been president of the National Conservative Association of his native province, and provincial secretary and attorney-general in Quebec Conservative administration, sitting continuously in the Legislature from 1898 to 1904. His ultimatum to Mr. Borden is another proof, if more proof were needed to convince Ontario electors, that there was no real dividing line between French-Canadian Conservatives and Nationalists in the general election, and that they fought entirely on the one issue of the navy. They opposed any form of naval expenditure, denounced the Canadian navy project as a burden imposed on Canada by the Mother Country, and as the thin edge of the wedge of conscription, held up Laurier to obloquy as a tool of British militarism and imperialism, and represented Borden as favouring their own demand for a referendum. For the last statement they had some warrant in Mr. Borden's manifesto and in his speeches in this city and elsewhere. They do not intend to allow him to take refuge in the ambiguity of his language. He angled for their vote with success, and they now demand the price. A referendum would be a cowardly evasion of responsibility, as Mr. Borden's friends in Ontario do not hesitate to remind him. He should never have even toyed with such a proposal. The fact is that Mr. Borden's advisers assured him that the only hope of overthrowing the Laurier regime lay in Quebec, and induced him to trim his sails accordingly. They had no premonition of a landslide in Ontario that would make him almost independent of Quebec. Now he finds himself fettered at a time when a political leader in his position, taking office after a long period of Opposition, ought to have, and usually has, a free hand.

NO MEN WITH PREJUDICE IN NATIONAL CITIZENSHIP

(Toronto Star)

Mr. Berthiaume, proprietor of La Presse, says that Canada cannot expect to see another French-Canadian at the head of its Government. There has been a good deal of talk to the effect that the sweeping Conservative victory in Ontario was due to anti-French and anti-Catholic prejudice. The Star does not pretend to be able to analyse the motives of those who voted against the Government in Ontario. But it does know that neither Liberals nor broad-minded Canadians of any party can surrender to the demand that a French-Canadian, or a Roman Catholic or a man of any other race or creed is to be excluded from the position of Prime Minister of Canada, or of any other position in the gift of the Canadian people. So far as the Liberal party is concerned, it would be better that it should remain in Opposition for ever than that it should lower its colours to prejudice, racial or religious, anti-French, anti-Catholic, or anti-American.

But the question is too broad and too vital to be confirmed within party lines. It is a question of Canadian unity and of the quality of Canadian citizenship. To give racial or religious prejudice the slightest hold in this country is to imperil unity and to lower the standard of citizenship. In a country where prejudice is allowed to rule, all citizenship is weakened. The man who yields to prejudice injures himself, and the man against whom prejudice is entertained may be embittered, may be at least discouraged, by the feeling that no matter how ardently and sincerely he may love his country and work for his country, he will be regarded with suspicion and will not receive fair play.

In the United Kingdom, because Scotland, Wales, and Ireland will not support Conservatism, there has been a determined and mischevious attempt to arouse prejudice against what is called the "Celtic fringe." It is an invitation to lower the standards of civilization, and to go back to tribal barbarism; and we may be sure, therefore, that it will not succeed in England. It is also in flat opposition to the true spirit of Imperialism. The British Empire is a world in itself, a combination of men of varied races and religious faiths. It has room for all these diversities, but no room for prejudices. It governs India by scrupulously respecting the Hindu and the Mohammedan. It must eventually admit them—it has in fact already done so—to share in the government of the Empire.

Canada is essentially a cosmopolitan country. Its people trace their descent from the United Kingdom, from France, from the United States, from the continent of Europe. It cannot ignore or ostracize any of these people. It should not say to Quebec, with its two millions of people, that no French-Canadian shall ever be Prime Minister of Canada. It should not say to Roman Catholics, who comprise one-third of the population of Canada, that no Roman Catholic shall ever be Prime Minister of Canada. It should not place that unjust and illiberal ban upon any man of any race or any faith, no matter how weak in numbers.

Twenty-four years ago the liberal party of Canada chose as its leader a great French Canadian, not because of his race, but because of his greatness. He led the party to victory after eighteen years' adversity. He gave Canada fifteen years of enlightened and progressive government; and upon that period of marvelous expansion not only Liberals, but all patriotic Canadians, will always look back with pride. He accepts a temporary reverse with a courage and serenity which enhance his fame and inspire his followers with pride. "And even the ranks of Tuscany could scarce forbear to cheer." He has always stood for unity, for equality, for justice to men of all races and all faiths; and upon no other foundation can the national edifice be reared.

PERHAPS SOMEBODY LET FALL A SUGGESTION

Citizens living on Hunter street, in the neighbourhood of George street, were startled from their peaceful slumbers last night about midnight, by a crash, described by those who heard it, as being something like a heavy charge of dynamite. A lively investigation followed, and inquiries were made around the city to-day, but neither the cause of the supposed explosion, nor the result of such have as yet been brought to light. It was rumoured that it was at the Gas Plant, but the watch at the plant reports everything O.K. So the "big noise" is a dense mystery, despite the fact that several ideas have been set forth to solve it. It was suggested by an uninterested citizen that five dollars had been dropped or some person fell asleep. Had it been a little later, it could have been suggested that it was the breaking of the day, but it is all shrouded in mystery

Of the concluding number on the programme, an exchange says:

In this piece the organ is heard, interspersed with cathedral chimes, and followed by a chorale, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," the Coronation Marches, and the exact trumpet calls played by the King's Trumpeter at Westminster Abbey. The climax is reached in the performance of the English National Anthem, in which the trumpet, carillon of bells, and the full resources of the grand organ are employed, producing an effect which makes a magnificent ending to a programme full of such historical interest.

KAUFFMAN TO BOX BASS.

NEW YORK, OCT. 4.—Al. Kauf-Kaufman, the California heavyweight who was offered a sum of money by Hugh McIntosh to go on to Australia and engage in five battles in that country this coming winter, but turned it down so that he could get on bouts with the big fellows at one of the local clubs, has finally been matched up for a fight. He was signed up by Jack McGuigan to-day to meet Bill Bass, the heavyweight of Norfolk, Va., for six rounds at a show of the National Athletic Club of Philadelphia, on Saturday evening, October 7. Bass recently won the white hope tournament held in Philadelphia. He is 22 years of age, six feet tall, and weighs 240 pounds. Philadelphia Jack O'Brien is boxing with Bass and getting him into condition for the contest.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl." —Mrs. DELIA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

"The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Undoubtedly, she has some strange notion that she is showing her superiority.

That is the only way I can account for her.

I mean the woman who is always finding fault with public servitors.

She complains of the telephone operator.

When she dines in public, she makes it a point to announce in tones that can be heard half way across the room that she never saw such "perfectly wretched service."

It is she who telephones to the postoffice to complain that the postman loiters at people's doors too much, and her mail is delayed.

It is she who complains to headquarters that the poor shop girl who had lifted down twenty-nine heavy boxes of lace that she might "look them over," was rude to her.

And instead of being ashamed of her complaints, she appears to be proud of them.

She tells about them with a haughty air which seems to say, "This is what happens to anyone who does not yield me the perfect obedience to which I am accustomed."

If one does not know her, one gets the idea that she is a woman of power and position, accustomed to being waited on within an inch of her life.

But, whisper, while I tell you a secret. Nine times out of ten it is just the other way around. She abuses "the little brief authority," belonging to her by virtue of her position as one of the public, which these folks are bound over to serve uncomplainingly, because she is not used to power.

If she were really a woman accustomed to being served she would know that ceaseless complaints are as much an indictment of the mistress' inability to command good service, as the servitor's failure to give it.

If she were really a woman of position she would long ago have learned the forbearance, the patience, the gentleness that comes to all really worth-while people, who deal much with their inferiors.

And it's the same way, I think, with people who are always complaining of food, conditions or accommodations when traveling. They want to impress upon you that they are accustomed to luxury, but nine times out of ten, what they are getting is really superior to what they are used to.

I remember a girl at college, who was always complaining of what seemed to the rest of us, very decent fare. We fancied she must have been used to a very elaborate cuisine at home. We found out later that quite the opposite was true, and that our table at college must have seemed luxurious compared to that to which she was accustomed.

The person who has been accustomed.

The person who has been accustomed to real luxury usually also has enough real refinement not to attempt to tell about it in this way."

The men or women who try to show their power or superiority by abuse and complaints, would only be amusing if they were not so disgusting, and did not sometimes cause so much unhappiness and trouble.

OTONABEE SOCIETY'S ANNUAL EXHIBITION HELD AT KEENE

An Excellent Exhibition But Not Quite Up to the Standard of Previous Years---Special Features---Evening Concert

The thirty-fifth annual Exhibition of the Otonabee Agricultural Society was held at the beautiful Village of Keene on the Society's grounds, on Wednesday. The grounds, by the way, have been subjected to considerable improvements, making them one of the most commodious and convenient exhibition grounds for the purposes of the smaller agricultural societies in the district. The attendance fell short of what it was last year, owing to the copious downpour of rain of the night before, and of the early morning. The deceptive brightness of the morning did not last, and the threatening appearances of rain no doubt deterred many who would otherwise have been present in the afternoon.

The popularity of the Keene Exhibition with the people of the district to the south and southeast of the Village was again evidenced by the large numbers that came up the Indian River by steamer. The steamer "Rainbow" of the Burnett line, and the "Geneva" of the Peterborough Navigation Company's line, arrived at noon, with about 500 exhibition passengers. With them came the Alderville Indian brass band which rendered, during the afternoon, a programme of music, in their characteristic manner, not fortissimoly belligerent, but soft and sweet.

The inside exhibit was hardly up to the mark of previous years. The roof of the skating rink where the fine arts and other exhibits were housed and displayed, is not quite water proof; at least it was not proof against the water that came in showers the night before, and the floor work and some other exhibits were not any the better from being dilated with roof leakage. The display of grains was light in quantity, though what was shown was of good quality. The roots on exhibition were not up to the usual high standard of Otonabee, and the showing in this department suffered from lack of rain to a greater extent than the ladies' department did from excess of rain. The show of fruit was not quite up to the measure either, the whole generally giving evidence that the past season had not been favourable to a generally good crop of either grain roots, or fruits.

In addition to the usual commercial enterprise, in which Grafton & Co. were well represented, that add to the variety of exhibition attractions was the special tent exhibit made by the Ontario Agricultural Department, in charge of Mr. E. S. Hopkins and Mr. J. P. Sackville, of Norwood. A striking demonstration of the value of spraying and pruning apple trees was presented by boxes of apples grown on pruned and sprayed trees, contrasted with boxes of the same variety by fruit grown in trees unpruned and unsprayed. One could hardly believe without the proof of ocular and physical demonstration, that there was a difference of a hundred percent. in quality, appearance and bulk, in favour of the produce of well sprayed and carefully pruned apple trees and against the produce—comparative arboreal abortions—of trees neglected in these respects. The rest of the demonstration exhibit consisted of artificial fertilizers, farm drainage plans, oats from farms successful in this country's field crop, etc.

THE LIVE STOCK.

The live stock exhibit was not perhaps as large as usual. The meat Department was that of horses. There were some magnificent specimens of heavy draught and agricultural horses. The exhibit of carriage and roadster horses was excellent; the lady drivers were five in number, and the driving of skill displayed by the fair Jehus added an unwonted interest to the horse ring. There was a good exhibit—more in quality than number—of cattle, sheep and swine, and a fairly creditable show of poultry.

In agricultural horses, light, the principal exhibitors were: Edgar Wood, brood mare and foal; David Edwards, brood mare and foal; Adam Humphries, brood mare and foal;; Robert Shaw, brood mare and foal, one year old colt; F. Birdsall & Son, brood mare and foal, two year and one year colt; Fred Eson, brood mare and foal, two year colt and one year old; Stephen Thorn, brood mare and foal; H. McKay, brood mare and foal; Robt. Weir, two year colt; Peter Drummond, two year colt, one year old colt and foal of 1911; Geo H. Taylor two year colt; Erastus Wood, two year colt; Duncan Neish, one year colt; Edgar Wood, foal of 1911; pair farm horses, Adam Humphries, foal of 1911. W. W. Shearer, pair farm horses (Grafton's special). B. Y. Crowley, pair farm horses (Grafton's special.)

In Agricultural horses, heavy, the principal exhibitors were: Alexander Wood, brood mare and foal, and foal 1911 (two entries); Robert Shaw, brood mare and foal, two year old colt and foal 1911; F. Birdsall & Son, brood mare and and foal (two entries), two year old colt (two entries), one year old colt and foal of 1911; Robert Weir, two year old colt, two year old colt; Wm. Nelson, two year old colt; Joseph H. Taylor, two year old colt; Thomas Hazlitt, two year old colt; Fred Eason, two year old colt; Duncan Neish, one year old colt; Stephen Thorne, one year old colt; Adam Humphries, foal of 1911; E. Wood, pair horses and wagon, (Peter Hamilton Co. special).

In the Heavy Draught horses the principal exhibitors were: F. Birdsall & Son, brood mare and foal, (two entries); two year old colt, (two entries); one year old colt; foal of 1911, two entries); (H. LeBrun special); F. Eason, brood mare and foal; foal of 1911, (H. LeBrun special); Alexander Wood, two year old colt; Robert Shaw, two year old colt, foal of 1911, (H. LeBrun special.); J. R. Stewart, pair of heavy draught horses, (Bank of Toronto special.)

The main exhibitors in Carriage horses were: Peter Drummond, brood mare and foal; foal of 1911 (Godfrey special); A. and J. Kent, two year old colt; A. E. Kent, two year old colt, one year old colt; H. McKay, two year old colt..

The entries for Hall & Son special, (single driver), were John C. Hope, W. W. Shearer, Adam Humphries and Peter Drummond.

For J. T. C. Lang & Co. special, (single driver), the entries were: Fred Eason, W. U. Hanbridge, Robert Knox and W. J. Rome.

In Roadster horses, the entries were: Gilbert Howson, brood mare and foal; E. A. Nelson, G. Howson, T. Walsh and R. McKay showed two year old colts. One year old colts were shown by G. Howson and Fred Spiers. Gilbert Howson also showed a foal of 1911 and E. Wood a pair of roadsters. And single horses in that class were shown by A. Humphries, P. Drummond and Fred Spiers and G. Elmhirst.

For the Peterborough Hardware Co. special, W. Nelson, W. J. Rome, Richard Elmhirst, T. Walsh, D. Garvey, W. J. Hanbridge, D. McFarlane, R. Knox, E. Wood and D. Garvey competed.

W. J. Hanbridge was the only competitor for the Gunsolus special.

The entries for single horse and buggy (with lady driver) were E. Wood, R. Shaw, D. Garvey, W. J. Rome, W. W. Shearer.

CATTLE.

In the thoroughbred Durhams class, Wm. Kemp, bull, two year and over. Birdsall & Sons exhibited yearling bull (Kingan Hardware Co. special; bull calf, two cows, two year heifer and one year heifer. Gilbert Howson showed bull calf, cow and heifer calf. S. F. Redmond also showed bull calf, two cows, two year and one year heifer.

In Ayrshires the only exhibitor was John Starke, with two year old bull, cow and calf.

For (J. A. Sexsmith, M.P. special) Edgar Wood exhibited a Holstein cow and W. A. Anderson also had a Holstein cow.

The principal exhibitors of Holsteins were: David Edwards, bull two years old, three cows and a heifer calf. Robert Adamson, yearling bull. Edgar Wood, bull calf, two cows, two year heifer, one year heifer and heifer calf. W. Fife, bull calf and heifer calf; W. A. Anderson three two-year old heifers. Joseph Taylor, Jr., one-year heifer and heifer calf. Robert Shaw, heifer calf.

Grade cattle were shown by Edgar Wood, David Edwards, Wm. Chapman, W. A. Anderson, Wm. Kemp, Jr., Wm. Kent, H. Fletcher, S. F. Redmond, D. McArthur, Duncan Neish and T. McIntyre.

For J. J. Thompson, M.P.P. special prize for herd of cows, the competitors were: E. Wood, W. A. Anderson, Wm. Kemp and S. F. Redmond.

SHEEP.

Leicester sheep were shown by W. J. Westington, and Thos Beattie, and Cotswolds by W. J. Stillman, who had the field to himself, with a flock of thirteen.

Shropshire Downs were shown by R. A. Nelson and S. F. Redmond. The only exhibitor in Oxford Downs was F. Birdsall & Son.

PIGS.

R. Weir, E. Wood and T. Beattie were the competitors in Tamworth class.

Yorkshires were exhibited by Wm. Kemp, T. Walsh, E. Wood, F. Eason, G. Howson, R. Weir and Wm. Chapman.

The few exhibitors in poultry were: Peter Drummond, J. H. Taylor, Wm. Kemp, Wm. Chapman, Adam Humphries, P. Drummond and Thos. McIntyre.

The sporting department of the Exhibition was hardly exciting to the point of thrill. The three events were not closely contested enough to induce speculation or make them interesting difficult to forget.

The first event was the foot race—free for all—in which the contestants were William Smoke of Bloomfield, cousin of Albert Smoke, who won the Examiner road race last year; John Flecher, William Moore and D. Wedlock. The two latter were defeated with little difficulty by Smoke, who was a fairly easy first, and John Fletcher, second.

The judges in the horse-speeding events were Mr. R. J. Munro and Mr. Harry Winch of Peterborough, who satisfactorily discharged their duties, which were, however, not very onerous. The two scheduled races were too processional—straight heats—to be of exciting interest, as the subjoined summaries will indicate:

Green Race.

"Jim Hall" (F. Speers)	1	1	1
"Silver Dick" (A. E. Elmhirst)	2	2	2

Open Trot.

"Orillia Belle" (H. E. Elmhirst	1	1	1
"Tom Tariff" (C. Fife)	2	2	2

THE EVENING ENTERTAINMENT.

The Village hall, with a seating capacity of about 300, was crowded to the doors, for the concert given in the evening, under the auspices of the Keene Improvement Society. An interesting programme was rendered to a highly pleased audience, by Miss Gibbs, high class entertainer, Toronto, Miss Ada Davies, Toronto, soprano, and Miss Margaret Bryce, Keene, pianiste. The net proceeds go to the funds of the excellent Improvement Society, whose enterprise and public spirit have made Keene one of the prettiest and trimmest villages in the Province.

So Dreadful Was the Suffering From Itching Piles

After Twenty Years of Pile Torture Relief and Cure Came with

Dr. Chase's Ointment

You take no risk and you make no experiment when you use Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles. Many doctors still cling to the idea that nothing but an operation will effect a cure. But operations are expensive and dangerous and often fail in their results. Some have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment after operations had failed.

Dr. Chase's Ointment truly has a wonderful record as a cure. Here is a case which was reported recently: Mr. John P. Marshall, 14 Barnes road, St. John's, Nfld., writes: "For upwards of twenty years I was troubled terribly with itching piles; at times so bad that I was obliged to lay up, unable to attend to business.

"I tried many treatments, without benefit, until II accidentally read of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found at last a cure by using this ointment. I only used one box and part of a second one when I was completely cured, and have had no return of the piles. That was eighteen months ago, and, needless to say, I attribute this cure to Dr. Chase's Invaluable Ointment."

Many sufferers from piles have tried so many scores of treatments that they cannot believe that cure is possible. In order to convince the skeptical we are always willing to send a sample box free to anyone who encloses a two cent stamp to pay postage.

This Good English Porcelain is for YOU—

WE could not think of a more useful souvenir to present to the steady patrons of Tillson's Rolled Oats than the good English porcelain dishes we pack in every 25c package.

By the way, there are only two points of difference between the 25-cent and 10c packages of Tillson's Oats—the quantity and the souvenir. Both packages contain the same identical Tillson's Rolled Oats, the kind that has all the natural flavor and aroma and makes the most delicious porridge.

The 10-cent size is a convenience that enables you to try Tillson's at small cost.

But after a trial, when you decide to have Tillson's every morning, you will save money by buying the 25-cent size.

In the first place you get more Rolled Oats for the money, and in the second place you receive a useful porcelain souvenir.

It is simply a case of profit sharing with our customers.

Be sure to get Tillson's.

WYETH'S SAGE SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

All healthy hair contains sulphur. When the hair does not contain a sufficient amount of sulphur, it loses its color, dies and falls out. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly corrects this condition.

A Wonderful Cure

My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly, and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff. I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair I got a bottle and used it and almost at once was benefited by it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Marguerite Cellier who appears at "The Grand" Next Saturday Matinee and Evening in "With Edged Tools." Seats Now on Sale.

This production, which has played 1079 performances in Great Britain, will be presented here with the entire English company and equipment, which arrved in Montreal last Friday via "The Empress of Ireland," of the C.P.R. steamship line. They opened their Canadian and American tour at the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, on Monday evening, and from the splendid reception given them by two capacity audiences, and the flattering notices given them by all the Ottawa papers, it is safe to say that Peterborough theatre-goers have a big treat in store for them when this sterling company appears at "The Grand" on Saturday for 2 performances. Every member of the company has been specially selected for their various roles and are artists who are "top-notchers" in their profession. The scenic investiture is said to be lavish, being specially constructed for the American tour. The seat sale opened this morning, and judging from the advance sale, the company will be greeted by capacity audiences in Peterborough, like they have been in Ottawa, Kingston, etc. In order to give patrons an opportunity of seeing this splendid production, the local management have arranged a very attractive scale of prices for the matinee, as follows: Lower floor, 75c. and 50c.; few at $1.00. Balcony, 35c., 50c., 75c.; children 25c. any seat. Evening prices, 50c. to $1.50. Gallery 25c.

BURN Occo SCRANTON COAL

ANNUAL MEETING OF NICHOLLS' HOSPITAL ALUMNI

The annual meeting of the Nicholls Hospital Alumni was held yesterday afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. parlours, when the election of officers for the ensuing year took place.

Miss F. Dixon and Miss Brown gave most interesting reports of the meeting of the Ontario Graduate Nurses' Association, held at Niagara Falls. After the business had been transacted refreshments were served and a social half hour spent. The officers elected were as follows:

President—Miss F. Dixon.

First Vice-President—Miss M. A. Brown.

Second Vice-President—Miss M. Dockrill.

Treasurer—Miss Ethel Davidson.

Secretary—Miss B. Mowry.

Member of Editorial Board Canadian Nurses—Miss Margaret Ferguson.

"The Hottest Coon" Was Before Magistrate To-day

Wm. Nicholls, a six and a half foot negro from sunny Alabama, was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a charge of being under the influence of liquor in a public place. He was discharged. Nicholls pleaded his cause as a negro only can plead. He put up a very pitiful story, to the effect that he had been connected with the coloured troupe, "The Hottest Coon in Dixie," for several years, in fact he was the organizer of the Company, and was former manager. He drew a pathetic picture of how the other "coons" had conspired against him after the entrance of the Company to Canada, and stated that they did it simply to get him out, as there was another "brown eyes" who wanted the job.

The owner of the show telephoned the Police Station last evening that the accused was drunk and kicking up a racket around the private car at the G. T. R. station. When arrested, he was found sleeping in the troupe's car, but he claimed that he had a perfect right to be there, and his claim was not disputed in the Police Court this morning. He said that if they did not want him with the show, they should not have brought him so far away from home and then drop him. He, however, was willing that if they would pay his passage home he would go. The Magistrate considered that a private matter, however, and as he was not drunk in a public place and was not doing any harm when arrested, he was let go. The show troupe left early this morning for Campbellford.

Stops a Deep-Seated Cough in a Hurry

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of granulated sugar, with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed in a 16-oz. bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There's a clear saving of $2.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Takes hold at once, gives almost instant relief—and usually stops the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, and other throat troubles, and unequaled for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Imported Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or strained honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

A COLLISION

What might have proved a very serious accident was narrowly averted at the Charlotte street crossing yesterday afternoon when a street car passing west encountered at the crossing a team of horses and express wagon, the property of Mr. Noble, which was proceeding south on Bethune street.

The driver of the team turned his horses ,but could not prevent the car from catching the vehicle, forcing it alon gfor some yards and with it the horses. The horses, however, managed to keep to their feet and the driver of the car, with great presence of mind, applied the emergency brake and reversed the car, while the vehicle passed on without damage.

MONEY BACK

If "Mecca" Ointment fails to heal cuts, burns, scalds, boils, ulcers, or sores of any kind, the druggist from whom you bought it is authorized by Foster Dack, Limited, Toronto, to hand you back your money.

DOCTOR CONFESSES TO THE MURDER OF HIS WIFE

Remarkable Statement Made to Chicago Police by Dr. Harry Elgin Webster

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 1.—Dr. Harry Elgin Webster, a Rush Medical College graduate, student and interne at a Chicago hospital, in a remarkable confession to the police late today, admitted that he murdered one of his two young wives, Bessie Kent Webster of Chicago, in the woods of Ogle country, ten miles from Dixon, Ill., on Sept. 16th. The police declare that the motive for the crime was Webster's desire to hide from his first wife, Zoe Varney Webster of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the fact that he was sa bigamist. He had married the two women within one week last January.

The accidental discovery of Bessie Kent's body Friday, almost two weeks after she had been killed, was followed by identification Saturday, and the arrest at 3 o'clock this morning of Webster.

The young medical student was arrested at the hospital shortly after he had left Zoe Varney Webster, wife No. 1, at a downtown hotel, where he had spent a troublous night attempting to explain his duplicity to his first wife.

Webster declared that he was married first to Zoe Varney of Cedar Rapids. He also said he was greatly in love with his bride and expected to return to Cedar Rapids to practice medicine. Then he returned to Chicago to continue his hospital work and found complications arising from a love affair of his college days. He stated that he was forced into a marriage with Bessie Kent, Jan. 11th, under threats tha his alleged relations with her would be exposed and he would lose his hospital position.

"I married Bessie Kent under her promise that she would divorce me immediately after the wedding took place," said Webster. "She then refused to get a divorce and that was the beginning of all the trouble."

Webster stated that he told his second wife of the marriage in Cedar Rapids, but she still refused to agree to a divorce. In August he brought suit for divorce in the Chicago courts. The case was thrown out because of insufficient evidence.

Following this unsuccessful attempt to end the affairs related by Webster, he met his second wife on Sept. 14th at the hospital as he was preparing to go to the home of his parents at Dixon, for his vacation. He aid thate she begged to go with him, but that he did not want her to meet his parents.

STORY OF MURDER

The prisoner then said that he spent the night of Sept. 14th with wife No. 2 at a north side hotel. The next afternoon he started for Dixon. Webster insisted that he believed until he reached Dixon that he was making the trip alone. Then his confession relates, he discovered that Bessie had made the trip on the train. He declared she refused to return to Chicago and the two went on the Dixon inn. The next morning he hired a horse and buggy and, with Mrs. Webster No. 2, drove north of Dixon. He said when he started his only object was to have an uninterrupted talk with her and attempt to secure from her an agreement to get a divorce.

On his dive the two quarrelled, and the physician alleged that his wife struck him and then jumped from the buggy, crying that she would see his parents and expose his life with her.

"When my wife jumped from the buggy," said Webster, "I threw a suitcase at her and then myself jumped from the buggy and gave chase. I ran after her for a distance of about four blocks when she stumbled near a ravine and fell.

"I pulled out my pocket knife and stabbed her four or five times in the back of the neck as she lay on the ground.

"She died immediately after I had severed the jugular vein. I then rolled her body several yards into the ravine and covered it with leaves.

"I don't remember whether I disrobed her or not. I was so excited that I almost lost my mind. But I knew that I covered the body so carefully that no one passing would see it, and then I returned to the buggy and drove back to Dixon."

CONFIDENCE

We Back Up Our Statements With Our Personal Reputation and Money

We are so positive that we can relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine free of all cost if we fail.

We think that it is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Cathartics may do much harm. They may cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels, and make constipation more chronic.

Constipation is often accompanied and may be caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or colon. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those parts and restore them to healthier activity.

The discovery of the active principle of our remedy involved the labour of skilful research chemists. This remedy produces results such as are expected from the best of the best-known intestinal tonics, and it is particularly prompt in its results.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are exceedingly pleasant to take and are ideal for children. They apparently act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels, having, it would seem, a neutral action on other organs or glands. They do not purge or cause inconvenience. If they do not positively cure chronic or habitual constipation and thus relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, your money will be refunded. Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes of packages, 10c., 25c. and 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

Faculty Entrance, Part II—Leonora Park, $20.
Honour Matriculation — Wilmot Browett, $20.
Normal Entrance—Lizzie Grady $15.
Pass Junior Matriculation—Meredith Hayeke $15.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE HOTTEST COON IN DIXIE.

The Hottest Coon in Dixie, presented at the Opera House last evening, was well received by a well filled house. In it some good singing and dancing was rendered, with that inimitable style known only to the dusky performer. There was little plot to the comedy, the main object being the introduction of musical numbers, many of which found popularity with the audience. The "ensemble" in the third act, however, was more wierd than beautiful. It appeared as if the success of each performer depended upon the noise emitted.

During the performance, Lem Spencer rendered some very clever trombone solos, while the singing of Mr. Irwin Richardson, the coloured tenor from the South, was the predominating feature in the play. He possesses a voice of remarkable range and purity of tone, and his contribution was received with loud applause.

GUY BROS' MINSTRELS

Every person enjoys seeing a good minstrel show and this season Mr. George R. Guy has certainly got a first class one which he will present to the theatregoers of the Grand next Monday evening, Oct. 9th. No expense has been spared to secure the very best people of which there are thirty-five in the company and every one a singer, dancer, acrobat, comedian and musician, nothing has been overlooked. The scenery and electrical effects are all new and really wonderful, something which no other show on the road carries. The Olio consists of ten big acts that will please both the old and the young, nothing said or acted in this show to offend any person. The augmented orchestra was very carefully selected and without a doubt is the best on the road to-day. Don't miss seeing the only real minstrel show to play here this season. Watch for the grand street parade on the main street at noon Monday and hear the celebrated silver band give their open air concert in front of the theatre at 7.30 p.m. Reserved seats on sale Friday morning. Prices 25c., 35c. 50c. and 75c.

A NARROW ESCAPE

(Port Hope Guide)

Mr. Clarke Greenaway, butcher, Walton street, had a narrow escape from serious injury Wednesday morning. Mr. Greenaway noticed that an electric light wire at the corner of Baldwin and Church streets, was down, and fearing that the school children might come in contact with it, he went over to remove it. As soon as he picked it up he was given a severe shock and was unable to drop it. He was thrown to the ground and before help arrived, became unconscious.

Mrs. Greenaway was the first to render assistance, but she, too, received a bad shock and was unable to remove the wire from Mr. Greenaway's hand. Mr. William Kirkland happened along and he fastened Mrs. Greenaway's apron about the wire, and by a sudden, sharp pull, freed Mr. Greenaway. Mr. Greenaway's hand was badly burned and Mrs. Greenaway is suffering slightly from shock.

The Seymour Power Co. were notified of the accident and Mr. Tuer made the necessary repairs this afternoon.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner:

I see by the issue of yesterday that it is the intention of the Board of Education to apply to the city for the erection of two Ward schools. As a struggling ratepayer, endeavouring to pay for my home, I most decidedly object to this increased burden upon the ratepayers. If the ratepayers have to pay for the exemptions that are being allowed, the manufacturers for the purpose of enabling them to become rich at our expense, do you not think that it is unfair to increase the burden of taxation upon the small ratepayer in both directions—to educate the families of those who are coming to the city to fill positions in the manufacturing establishments and to relieve the manufacturer from the exemption as well? Perhaps there is where our money is going instead of being applied to the ordinary expenditure of the city. I for one protest against this exemption from taxation that brings manufacturers to the city to place extra burdens upon those of us who are here, to give the increased school accommodation necessary for the families of the newcomers. This is rather burning the candle at both ends—giving exemptions and adding taxes. Another eighty to hundred thousand dollars to be added to our debt besides the extra cost of maintenance.

Yours truly,
RATEPAYER.

"THE EARL OF PAWTUCKET"

Lawrance D'Orsay says aviation is a cure for insomnia. We know nothing about the merits of the remedy, never having tried it. We always found the ground quite good enough for us, insomnia or no insomnia. But we have seen D'Orsay in "The Earl of Pawtucket" and we know that comedy is a cure for the blues, so if you need cheering up, and we all do a bit at times, go and see "The Earl of Pawtucket" when it comes to the "Grand" to-morrow (Friday) evening. We guarantee you won't cry and promise you will laugh and come home after the play in good humour and have a refreshing night's rest. So our cure for insomnia is "The Earl of Pawtucket."

PUBLIC LIBRARY PILLARS

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In reply to "Reader's" letter in last night's Examiner, re "Public Library pillars," Reader does not state what order of architecture Ruskin was referring to. The capitals on the Public Library columns are of the Ionic order, but the columns themselves are of no order whatever. No amount of imagination can make them into any. Their design is bad and their construction is worse.

If Reader will refer another of Ruskin's works, "The Seven Camps of Architecture" and study the chapter, "The Camp of Truth" he will find many objectionable things about the architecture of the Public Library, for instance, the "tin" or "iron" entablature painted to imitate stone.

I would like to state here that the only piece of architecture worthy of the name in this city is that finely proportioned Bysantine structure. The Church of the Sacred Heart which is a credit both to the city and its architect.

FACADE.

Peterborough, Oct. 3.

IMPRESSED WITH CITY.

Mr. Xavier Denno of Boston, who has been visiting his brother, Mr. Louis Denno of this city for the past couple of weeks, returned home yesterday. He was very favourably impressed with what he saw here. During his visit he had the pleasure of meeting a couple of the aldermen. He also visited the fire hall and many other public buildings. To the Examiner he expressed himself in an optimistic manner concerning the future welfare of what he was pleased to term a coming city. "Peterborough" he said, "has all the ear marks of prosperity and another ten years should see an unprecedented growth in the industrial sphere."

Mr. Denno is a prominent business man of Boston and is about to enter upon his 40th year of service with the firm he is associated with.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN ARCHER.

The death occurred in Dorset this morning of Mrs. John Archer of that town.

The deceased was born in Fenelon Falls and later resided in Haliburton, removing to Dorset some years ago.

She is survived by a sorrowing husband, four daughters who reside in the Northwest, and one son. Three sisters also mourn her demise, and one brother, in the person of Mr. J. A. Redner of 443 George street, Peterborough.

The funeral will take place at Dorset on Saturday.

Meeting Of Men

A meeting will be held in St. John's school house tonight at 8 p.m. of the men of the congregation, in connection with the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Mr. Rose, of Toronto, secretary of the movement, will be present to confer with the assembly this evening.

EARL GREY BANQUETTED

Retiring Governor-General Feted in Montreal—Pays Compliment to the French-Canadian People in a Notable Speech

FIVE HUNDRED GUESTS

Montreal, Oct. 5.—His Excellency Earl Grey was tendered a banquet at the Windsor Hotel last night by the leading citizens of Montreal. Some 500 business and professional men attended. The most notable speech of the evening was made by the guest of honor, who on rising to respond to the toast to himself was received with rounds of applause.

He paid a compliment to the Canadians of French descent, so largely in the majority in this province.

"It will be vain for the minority of French descent, should they even desire to do so, to dream of ever establishing a racial ascendancy on this side of the Atlantic; but it is equally obvious that the right they possess to regulate their own development, unchecked by any outside interference, a right which will be enjoyed by the Province of Quebec and by every self-governing portion of the British Empire, so long as the British Empire endures, will always be respected," he said.

"As Governor-General I have no politics. I am the constitutional mouthpiece of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and of Mr. R. L. Borden the next. But as Governor-General I have a standing quarrel with anyone whose policy it is to stir up racial differences."

The speaker added that he regarded the inhabitants of the Province of Quebec as the most loyal subjects of the crown.

Farewell Address to Lady Grey.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—On behalf of the Women's Canadian Club, at the luncheon given yesterday at the Royal Victoria College, Mme. Boyer and Miss Hurlbutt presented addresses of farewell to Lady Grey, who replied, thanking the club on behalf of herself and her daughters.

Makes the Hair Beautiful

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person. Dandruff is the root of hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back. 50c. a bottle, at the Warne Drug Store.

Coming of Connaughts.

London, Oct. 5.—Elaborate preparations have been made for the sailing of Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, to take up their residence in Canada, on Friday of this week.

Special arrangements to ensure their comfort and convenience while on board the Empress of Ireland have been made. The entire alley on the chief deck has been reserved for the exclusive use of the royal party and suite. The royal party will, however, dine in the general dining saloon.

King George has ordered that the royal standard shall be flown from the Empress of Ireland at the moment of the duke's arrival on the ship.

Enormous quantities of luggage have already been moved forward to Liverpool, including the duke's own horses and equipment and his motor cars.

H. R. H. the Princess Patricia is leaving London almost immediately for Sweden to visit her sister, the Crown Princess of Sweden. She is arranging to arrive in Ottawa some time before Christmas.

Woman Was Pardoned.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Responding to a woman's appeal for immediate release or the privilege of remaining in jail several months after her sentence expires in order to escape the hardships which surely would follow the termination of her imprisonment in the dead of winter in Alaska, President Taft has pardoned Lottie Burns, convicted at Nome of selling liquor without a license. Her sentence of one year would have expired in February, but she will be released at once with the opportunity to gather food and fuel for the winter.

SHELLING COMMENCES

Tripoli Suffers Heavily From the Assault of Italian Ships—Fortifications Were Levelled

A WEAK REPLY

Djerba, Tunis, Oct. 5.—Tripoli has been bombarded twice by the Italian fleet. The first shot was fired shortly after three o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Shelling was resumed early yesterday morning after a quiet night.

There was a steady but slow fire from the warships until dusk Tuesday evening, and shots also came from the forts in the town.

The French steamer Tafana took a delegation from Djerba out to the scene of hostilities. Among the party was the French consul-general, M. Leon, who made several unsuccessful attempts to land. The Tafana was stopped by the cruiser Varese when about two miles from shore. She was ordered to return, but she remained for more than an hour, even creeping in closer to the blockaded town.

From the distance the white buildings of Tripoli could be plainly seen and the whole field of operations was unfolded before the eyes of the watchers. The officers of the Varese kindly explained that the battle had been delayed because Admiral Augrey, commander of the Italian fleet, had received a request from the Tripoli garrison for another day of grace after the expiration of the three days' notice to surrender. The admiral gave the garrison a few extra hours.

The battleship Benedetto Brin and the armored cruisers Giuseppe Garibaldi and Francesco Ferrucio drew up in line opposite the harbor. There were no small craft in the battle line and the Varese stood off to keep back intruders.

There was no sign of life in the city, which appeared as though deserted, but the Turkish flag flew from the castle and forts. The first shots were directed toward Charchatti fort, and later Kerkereche fort was shelled.

No sooner did the first shells burst over Tripoli than the garrison seemed to awake. It returned the fire with vigor and energy. A heavy cannonade was kept up on both sides for a few minutes, and then firing became desultory. So far as could be seen no warship was hit.

Vice-Admiral Faravelli, at 4 o'clock, ordered his ships to cease firing to permit the town to surrender, but no sign of surrender was given, and after the lapse of a few minutes, the ships began again. This time great havoc was wrought.

Fortifications were razed to the ground, the forts suffered severely, the lighthouse to the northwest was destroyed by shells from the Garibaldi. There was no means of knowing what the loss of life was in Tripoli. But ample opportunity was given to the defenders to escape.

When the Tafana left the scene of operations, no landing had been attempted on the part of the Italians and it was feared that during the night the town would be pillaged by nomad Arabs, who had been hovering in the vicinity for some days. The admiral knew of the hasty removal of arms and ammunition into the interior.

Again, at an early hour yesterday morning, the first division of the Italian fleet under Admiral Faravelli, resumed the bombardment. The Turkish garrison still occupied a position behind the forts and responded with a few shells, which fell short.

Rome, Oct. 5.—The bombardment of Tripoli was resumed yesterday morning with the object of completing the destruction of the batteries. Up to six o'clock last evening no official confirmation of the surrender of Tripoli could be obtained.

London, Oct. 5.—A Rome despatch from Tripoli says that it is believed that the garrison has suffered very heavy losses and that the governor is wounded. It appears that even after the demolition of the forts the Turkish gunners continued to serve such guns as were available.

It became necessary for the war ships to train their guns upon the ruins. Several private houses were destroyed by fire, but none were struck by shells. The town has been entirely deserted by the inhabitants.

Deadlock at Sublime Porte.

Constantinople, Oct. 5.—Political difficulties within the capital are multiplying and it seems impossible to form a Cabinet. Members of the committee of union and progress are unwilling to take office, as they do not wish to assume responsibility for recent events, while the elder statesmen refuse to undertake the task of Government unless the committee retires from the field and dissolves.

A deadlock practically has been reached, and the only solution to serve the best interests of the country is held to be dissolution of the committee and the ending of the war without delay on the best terms that can be obtained.

Chicago Police Officer Dismissed.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Lieut. William W. Walsh of the Chicago police department, on trial before the civil service commission, charged with failure to stop gambling in his precinct, was found guilty last night and was ordered dismissed.

Liberal in Three Rivers.

Three Rivers, Que., Oct. 5.—The judicial recount yesterday gave Hon. Jacques Bureau a majority of 16 over Mayor Normand. Twenty-six ballots were left to be taken en delibre today. The election will be contested.

Government Dredge Adrift.

Halifax, Oct. 5.—The Government dredge New Brunswick is adrift in the Bay of Fundy, if not sunk to the bottom or piled upon the coast. She was abandoned yesterday afternoon while being towed from Digby, N.S., to this port. Three tugs left Digby with her early yesterday and ran into a very heavy southwester. In the afternoon they found it impossible in the great seas to make port and the crew of the dredge was taken off. The tugs came here. The dredge is said to be worth $30,000.

Still Favors Reciprocity.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—An interesting visitor to Montreal this week is Rev. J. J. McCaskill, the Presbyterian clergyman of St. John, N.B., whose action in taking the stump for reciprocity during the recent campaign brought strong criticism from his presbytery and a request for his resignation from the trustees of his church.

Rev. Mr. McCaskill is not taking his church difficulties seriously, and despite the trouble which his position caused, continues to discuss politics as freely as ever. He still believes in reciprocity.

"What was it moved you to this breach with your church and associates?" Mr McCaskill was asked.

"Simply," he said, "because the importance to the country of the issue of free trade in natural products dwarfs any question of the personal relation of a clergyman to the ecclesiastic organisation or of a pastor to his congregation.

"The Presbytery has criticised me for my action in the matter. Their criticism might be just if the issue were not so serious."

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

McGill Freshmen Lectured.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—When the McGill freshmen, charged with obstructing the police and interfering with traffic Tuesday night, pleaded guilty yesterday morning, Recorder Weir advised them to stick to the plow and the snow shovel and not to delve into the higher arts.

Sentence was postponed till to-day to see whether the students' council will impose sufficient punishment without a court sentence.

Conan Doyle's Hero Dead.

London, Oct. 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Joseph Bell, the eminent Scottish surgeon, who was the original character of "Sherlock Holmes," died yesterday at his home, Mauricewood, Milton Bridge, Midlothian. He was born in Edinburgh in 1837, and was an instructor of Conan Doyle in Edinburgh. His hobby was the study of mysterious crimes.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison? Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Women's Hospital Aid of Brantford has secured over $14,000 for the new nurses' home.

William Hall was killed near Midland by an explosion of dynamite, and two other men were injured.

There is a growing antagonism in Turkey against the tyrannical sway of the Committee of Union and Progress.

The president of the Colonial Bank, at the meeting yesterday, denied the rumored amalgamation with the Royal Bank of Canada.

The Government has let the contracts for the extensions to the Intercolonial in Nova Scotia to M. P. Davis and the Nova Scotia Construction Co.

Missouri, Kansas and Texas passenger train No. 29, from Kansas City to Oklahoma City, was held up by three masked men early yesterday near Okesa.

Ward M. Bowlby, K.C., County Crown Attorney, celebrated his 77th birthday yesterday. He has been crown attorney of Waterloo county for 43 years.

Walter Wallace, a Toronto craneman, was killed in Spadina road by electrocution yesterday, when his swing crane struck electric wires and broke two of them loose.

The Bayless Paper & Pulp Co. of Austin, Pa., whose dam broke the other day, decided yesterday to remove their entire plant to the Province of Quebec, Canada.

Hundreds of heavily armed railway strikers are pouring into McComb City, Miss. Governor Noel has ordered more state militia to the scene to aid troops already on the ground.

It is understood that the Duke of Sutherland obtained options on nearly thirty square miles of agricultural lands on both sides of the South Thompson River, extending eastward from near Kamloops, B.C.

The Dominion Wreck Commissioner, Capt. Demers, has suspended the certificate of Capt. Phelix of the steamer Chieftain III. for two years in connection with the collision between his boat and the steamer Hero.

Edward M. Schuster of Cleveland Ohio, a traveling salesman, was killed, and two men and two ladies were hurt at Birmingham, Ala., when the body of their auto left the chassis while going at high speed on a country road.

Storm on Lake Ontario.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—All day yesterday Lake Ontario was agitated by one of the heaviest gales of the year, which paralysed all navigation. A strong westerly wind was in evidence early in the morning and as the day progressed it steadily increased in velocity, till late in the afternoon the wind was blowing at the rate of 58 miles an hour and showed no signs of abating.

None of the possenger boats with the exception of the Macassa made a regular trip, and very few tugs or other boats attempted to weather the storm.

Paid For Smashed Motor.

Brantford, Oct. 5.—Pop Williams, owner of the Berlin Ball Club, in the high court here yesterday was awarded $1,500 damages for loss of his motor car smashed by a Grand Trunk train on Gilkinson street last August. Evidence showed a lack of proper protection on the rear of the train which was being backed down the street.

Red tag day here netted the Woman's Hospital Auxiliary $2,300, augmenting the fund for the proposed nurses' home to over $14,000. Work on the new building, which will cost $25,000, will be started this fall.

Big Stick For Coalers.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Attorney-General Wickersham yesterday by filing a brief in the Supreme Court of the United States began his fight before that tribunal to have the principal coal carrying railroads and coal owning companies in the anthracite coal region adjudicated to be in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. An entirely different attack was made on the corporations from that in Pennsylvania, where the Government lost on nearly every point.

Mrs. Pankhurst Coming Back.

Southampton, Oct. 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Miss Mary Patrick sailed on the steamer Oceanic yesterday for New York, to make a suffragist tour. The train that brought them here was decorated with the suffragist colors. They were given a demonstrative send-off on leaving London yesterday morning.

Earthquakes In Ecuador.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Oct. 5.—A slight earth shock was felt here on Tuesday. The movement was more pronounced at Garanda and Rio Bamba where panics were caused. At Rio Bamba the people organized religious processions, imploring protection.

Danderine

Grows hair and we can prove it

Hair Becomes Soft, Fluffy, Lustrous and Beautiful Immediately After a Danderine Hair Cleanse

Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair—No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Try as you will after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlson's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it, if you will just try a little Danderine. Real surprise awaits you.

RUGBY PLAYERS MUST GET OUT TO PSACTICE IF TEAM IS TO WIN

With the opening of the O.R.F.U. season only a few days away, the West End Rugby Club players will have to turn out better than they have been doing, and practise more consistently, if there is to be any chance to have a winning team in Peterborough this year. The practises this week have been practically worthless as far as getting the men in condition was concerned, and a rugby team that is not in the best of trim physically woul dhave its work cut out to beat a team from the Old Ladies' Home. Just because it rained last night only half of the squad turned out for practice and those who were there called the workout off after a few minutes, because a shower came along. The players should remember that the vagaries of our glorious Canadian autumn are such that a team may be called upon at any time to play a game in the pouring rain, and there is no sense in shirking a practice because the elements are unkind. A little work in handling a wet ball in practice may have important effects farther on in the season. The boys will have to get the idea into their heads that rugby can only be made a success by consistently hard work in practice. Twenty minutes' dilly-dallying with signals may be all that is needed after a team has gotten into shape, but it simply will not do for the Peterborough squad at the present time.

Unless every member of the team turns out in uniform at every practice and puts an hour and one half's work under his belt, followed by a run, the fans can expect no better success than attended the past few years' efforts of Peterborough O.R.F.U. teams.

The sooner that players realize that conditionis a prime factor in the success of any team, the sooner will Peterborough's chances of accomplishing something, come to the front.

This article is not written in a carping spirit, but in a sincere desire to bel palong the great autumn game, and by the way, there is a practice to-night at 7.30, when the team to go to Port Hope on Saturday will be picked, and every player should be out on time in uniform.

Central Y.M.C.A. Team To Play First Game Here On Saturday, October 14th

Central Y.M.C.A. of Toronto vs. Peterborough here on Saturday, Oct. 14.

Peterborough at Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. on Saturday, Oct. 21.

This is the schedule that has been finally adopted for this district of the junior O.R.F.U. Points will count on the two games. The locals have, therefore, only a few days left to get into shape for the opening of the season, which means that every practice from now on will have to be a good one, no matter what the weather conditions are. Little is known here of the Central Y.M.C.A. team, but with George Barber, the former Parkdale wing man managing the team, they will undoubtedly be dangerous adversaries, and the West End team will have to be in the best of shape to take the measure of the Triangle men.

More Dope On The World's Championship Series The Athletics Or Giants?

NEW YORK, OCT. 5.—Christy Mathewson, the "Big Gun" of the Giants is supposed to favour two pastimes in the realm of sport. The first of these is baseball, the next checkers, in which Christy is a champion.

But, on the other hand, neither baseball nor the game of checkers holds the highest spot in Christy's esteem. Despite the fact that he has achieved the highest niche in all pitching halls of fame, the Giant star picks football as the greatest game he ever played.

"I'd rather play one good game of football," Matty replied to a query along this line, "than a dozen games of baseball, checkers, or anything else. I'm not knocking baseball. It's a great old game, and has done more than its share for me. But for all that I've never drawn the thrill nor the pleasure from it I used to get in a moleskin suit while hitting a line or taking a shot at the goal in a tight pinch."

A Careful Student.

"Matty was the same careful student and hard worker in football that he has always been in baseball," said an old college chum of Matty's, who furnished a few interesting sidelines upon his work on the gridiron. "He was always the first man on the field and the last man to leave.

"Long after the others had quit off around dusk Matty was still ut there practising drop kicks and punting up and down the field. He would work from different angles and different distances to be prepared for any sort of emergency.

"He not only played the game, but studied it all the time; studied it just as he studied baseball. It has always been a Mathewson characteristic that no matter what he went to, he went to it with everything he had, studied it closely and overlooked nothing.

In recounting the best play he ever gave vent to in football, Big Six lays the scene of it at West Point.

"We were playing the army that day," reminisced Christy, "and the game was a tight one. Finally we got the ball on their 47-yard line, over near the left side of the field, upon the third down.

"I dropped back for a punt, but noticed before the ball was passed that the army back field, in place of staying in and attempting to block the kick, had all drilled back to handle the boot. I decided then to try for a field goal, and with plenty of time was lucky enough to shoot the ball over the bar."

Matty still has a warm spot in his system for Sammy Strang, the ex-Giant.

RUGBY CHAMPIONSHIP SEASON OPENS ON SATURDAY NEXT

TORONTO, OCT. 5.—The championship Rugby season will open on Saturday with the following senior games:

Inter-Provincial—
Hamilton at Argonauts.
Montreal at Ottawa.
Inter-Collegiate—
Varsity at Queens.
Ottawa at McGill.
Ontario—
St. Michaels at T. A. A. C.
Dundas at Hamilton Tigers.

All the home teams expect to win, and if they don't the public will be very much surprised.

The Tigers are not considered so formidable as in the old days, while the Argonauts have the material for a great team. Captain Boss Bingley says that the back division did not make a single error in the exhibition game at Kingston, and if they can repeat against Hamilton it will not be a question of "Who'll win?" but by "How much?" With Binkley, Mallett and Ken. Williams playing the Argos will have three of the best punters in the game. This boy Mallett is worth looking over. Lockhart Smith and Murphy are running halves, and may be used on the line against Hamilton for their speed and tackling ability.

The Rough Riders expect an easy task with Montreal, but the latter may surprise them if their back division turns out to be nearly as good as the dope.

Varsity may upset the dope by defeating Queens, but the Presbyterians will be in good shape by Saturday, and will make the blue and white step to beat them. McGill should beat College handily.

Little is known of the O. R. F. U. teams, and they will have to show their strength on Saturday.

THE BIG LEAGUE GAMES

CHICAGO, OCT. 4.—"Fans" by the score in the middle west have already besieged the attaches of the American League office with requests for tickets to witness the championship games.

Secretary Robert B. McRoy yesterday reported a bulky stack of queries indicating the early interest being manifested in the battles to be waged in New York and Philadelphia. That the games will result in the establishment of new records for gate receipts is the opinion of McRoy, who predicts each member of the winning club will receive in the neighbourhood of $5,000 for his "bit."

Last season, when the Cubs and Athletics broke all previous records, the amount received fro the players totalled over $79,000. Secretary McRoy expressed the opinion that the players' share this year would be close to $150,000.

NELSON BEATEN

BOSTON, OCT. 4.—Bat. Nelson, that come-back, is reflecting on the uses of adversity to-day, following the decision against him here last night in his bout with Young Saylor of Indianapolis. The scrap went 12 rounds, and the opinion was to-day that Young Saylor showed real championship class. At any rate he batted the Dane all over the ring and clearly beat him.

RUGBY

Ben Simpson, the old Tiger captain, has been honoured by being elected honourary president of a newly-organized Rugby team in Winnipeg. Ben received his membership card Monday, which is indeed a novel one. It is printed in yellow and black, and the design is a football surrounded by a big tiger. The Club is known as the Tigers, although it is not a Hamilton old boys' affair, or anything like that.

(Lindsay Post)

This afternoon a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Lunney, Adelaide St., when their daughter, Olivas Lavinia, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Percy Harold Skitch, of Toronto, formerly of Lindsay. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. S. J. Shorey, pastor of the Cambridge Street Methodist church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in a dress of cream duchess silk with lace and pearl trimmings, and carrying a shower of cream roses and lily of the valley. Her travelling dress was a tailored navy blue serge, black beaver hat with touches of green.

Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Miss Joy Richardson. Miss Marie Bryden was the flower girl, and was dressed in white with blue trimmings. During the signing of the register solos were rendered by Mr. W. F. Skitch of Peterborough, and Miss Joy Richardson.

There were about forty guests, among those from a distance being Mr. J. W. Lunney, Winnipeg, brother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cowan, and Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Bell of Cannington; Mrs. James Bryden, of Lloydtown.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl pendant, to the pianist a gold bar pin set with pearls. The bride received a silver tea service from the Epworth League of the Cambridge St. Methodist Church. A couple of weeks ago the bride's friends held a shower at which she received many useful and beautiful presents. Besides these there were numerous other presents.

The table decorations were smilax and carnations, with touches of red.

The happy couple left on the evening train for Garden Hill and Trenton, and upon their return will reside in Toronto. Their many friends join in wishing them many years of happiness.

REV. J. M. GLASSFORD TO PREACH HERE

The 39th anniversary of the Mark street Methodist church will be held next Sunday, October 8th. The Rev. J. M. Glassford, B.D., of Toronto, Field Secretary of the Provincial S. S. Association, will preach at 11 a.m., and 7 p.m., and address a mass meeting of Sunday school workers at 3 p.m. Mr. Glassford was for years pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Guelph, and is generally recognized as one of the first platform speakers in the province.

WOMAN IS KILLED

Mrs. Elizabeth Salter of Oshawa In City To Do a Little Shopping, Is Run Down and Fatally Injured by Car Driven by Roy Britnell—He Blames the Disaster on Mechanism—Boy Is Injured.

Toronto Oct. 6.—Owing to the sudden and unaccountable shearing through of a tiny pin which controls the feed of gasoline and, therefore, the speed of the car, a motor car driven by Roy F. Brintnell, ran amuck on Yonge street at 5.40 last night, striking Mrs. Elizabeth Salter of Oshawa, who had come to Toronto with her husband for a day's shopping, and was walking in the street with him. Mrs. Salter died a few minutes later in the hospital. John Skerrett, a passerby, was severely shaken.

The account of the accident given by Mr. Britnell and by several witnesses who told of it to the police differ.

Mr. Britnell says that he was driving south and was running at a safe and sane rate, when suddenly the pin controlling this sheared through and his heavy touring car leaped forward almost upon a wagon which was being driven directly in front of him. He says that he immediately applied the emergency brakes and that this swerved his car to the curb, where it struck a post and came to a stop.

Mrs. Salter, he says, was struck as she stepped into the roadway and the boy whose wheel was destroyed was riding close to the curb.

The motor car drove away almost immediately after the accident, but both Mr. Britnell and the young man who was with him in the car turned up at the General Hospital shortly after the woman's arrival there. There Britnell was taken into custody and a charge of manslaughter was laid. He was later baled out by his father upon a $2,000 bond.

Acting County Crown Attorney Monahan was notified and the matter was referred to Coroner J. M. Cotton, who will open an inquest at the morgue this afternoon, where the body was removed last night.

The boy who was struck was not severely injured, but his bicycle was demolished.

Heirs to $35,000,000?

New York, Oct. 6—The missing heirs of the co-called Churchill estate in Newfoundland, said to be worth $35,000,000 are believed to have been found, according to a New York attorney. For almost a hundred years these heirs, known as the Halfyards, have been sought for. Mrs. Elizabeth Halfyard was the daughter of John Churchill, whose descendants, it is contended, own all the City of St. John's and other properties on the Island.

A woman of sixty years of age, and of evident refinement, has just arrived in New York with the announcement that she is Mrs. R. B. Stevens, nee Halfyard. With her is a niece, Edith Halfyard, the daughter of Samuel Halfyard. They come from Montreal.

Sovereign Bank Objected.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Failure of conflicting interest in the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Road controversy to agree on a draft of a decree in the U. S. Circuit Court delayed until Saturday the resignation of Judge Grosscup yesterday. The Sovereign Bank of Toronto, holder of $400,000 interest upons of the $10,000,000 mortgage bonds, objected to a decree at this time.

AWAKENING NEEDED

Rev. C. Ensor Walters Discusses the Social Unrest In England and Sees Hope In Sunday Mass Meetings In Methodist Halls—Church Does Not Lack For Organization, Declares Rev. Mr. Simpson.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—After the spiritual uplift and fraternizing of the opening day the sessions of the fourth Ecumenical Methodist Conference yesterday were devoted strictly to business. It was a time of stock-taking, and the progress of Methodism in the world in the last ten years was compiled and reviewed, along with the place of Methodism in the Church Universal.

Speaking for the western section in the morning, Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, and for the eastern section in the afternoon, Rev. Simpson Johnson, London, pointed to a decline in the growth of the church. For the first five years of the last decade there had been a splendid gain in numbers, but at the end in America the progress had fallen below that of the previous decade; in Great Britain the net result was a loss. This was not due, as Mr. Johnson pointed out, to a lack of equipment or organization, and the church was on its mettle to find the real cause. There was a call for a great spiritual awakening, a return to the old principles of Methodism with an application to new conditions.

The serious nature of the discussion developed in the afternoon, when objection was made to a disposal of the subject when a motion to adjourn was made on account of the civic reception. "This is too important to let go," was the invariable comment. Before the discussion was closed Rev. C. Ensors Walters pointed out the significance of the social unrest in England. The great mass meetings of workingmen on Sundays called for attention. This affected the life of the church. While these meetings are not held in the name of Jesus Christ, they reflect His spirit. This has demonstrated that the mass of the artisans may be gathered in Methodist halls in the interests of the Master. "I know of no more hopeful view in Great Britain to-day than this," he said, "that on Sunday afternoons you can find hard-headed, intelligent workingmen meeting together who are interested in the Kingdom of God."

Another feature of equal importance was the statement of Rev. Dr. Mason, who pointed to the control which the negro had exercised in the face of injustice. He voiced a loud protest against industrial or higher education. "What the negro wants, what the negro must have," he declared, "is ethical and moral training. To be given fair play as a man."

Russell and the Pinkertons.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—Pinkerton detectives were much in evidence at yesterday's session of the Russell conspiracy case trial. The entire afternoon was taken up with the testimony of Allan Pinkerton himself, Supt. Dougherty, head of the Pinkerton New York office during the time in which the alleged conspiracy against Mr. Russell was being planned, and Mr. McNamara, Montreal manager.

Most of the evidence consisted in straight denials of the charges of conspiracy. All the Pinkerton men denied any knowledge of any conspiracy and the only other feature was Mr. Dougherty's description of the Plaza conference, to which frequent reference has been made during the trial.

MURDER TRIAL NEXT WEEK.

Arthur Sheridan, Who Stabbed a Man, Comes Up at Barrie Assizes.

Orillia, Oct. 6.—The trial of Arthur Sheridan, charged with the murder of Ross Ford, will take place at Barrie next week at the Fall Assizes, before Chancellor Boyd. The assizes open on Tuesday.

The trial will occupy two or three days. The crown will present over 25 new witnesses, in addition to those who testified at the preliminary trial here, and will endeavor to disprove that Sheridan killed Ford in self-defence, as Sheridan claims. Sheridan will be defended by J. T. Mulcahy of Orillia, while Crown Attorney Cotter will prosecute.

The tragedy occurred on the night of August 9, at a country dance held at George Duff's, about four miles north of this town. They had been on bad terms, but left Duff's together, coming down the road towards Orillia. About 100 yards from Duff's gate Sheridan stabbed Ford several times with a knife. Sheridan walked up the road, and meeting others coming down, said, "Come quick, I have killed Ford." They found Ford lying on his face in a pool of blood, still alive. When asked if he was dying, Ford replied, "No. Sheridan stabbed me. Send for a doctor." He expired in less than five minutes.

Sheridan made an effort to escape, but was captured after a chase lasting 36 hours. He claims Ford attacked him first, hitting him in the eye and knocking him down.

Wants Husband Declared Insane.

Kingston, Oct. 6.—Johanna Goodfriend, Gananoque, has entered action against her husband, John P. Goodfriend, Howe Island, in which she is suing for restoration of conjugal rights, also an interim alimony of $8 per week, and, in addition, have him declared insane.

David Pottinger, chairman of the Intercolonial Railway Commission is in the city in connection with contracts awarded to the locomotive works for several new engines.

Hens in this district are on strike, and as a result, eggs are scarce, some dealers finding it very difficult to get a supply to meet demand.

Sloop Almost Foundered.

Kingston, Oct. 6.—The sloop Ariadne owned by Capt. Burnside this city, who was in charge, was struck by a heavy gale at the gap and almost went down. She was stripped of her masts when a passing steamer towed her to shelter. She was grain-laden on the way to Belleville.

The steamer Bellatt, ashore near Iroquois for two weeks was released after two bargeloads of freight were taken off.

GOING OVER WRECKAGE.

Army of Laborers Have Herculean Task at Austin, Pa.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 6.—In a day's work of overhauling the wreckage here, due to the breaking of the dam last Saturday, and the resultant flood, five additional bodies were accounted for yesterday. Four complete bodies and the nether limbs of an adult female, supposed to have weighed about 200 pounds, are in the morgue, in such condition that their immediate disposition has been ordered. The dead recovered to date number 50, with about 25 more to be accounted for, according to the more or less accurate census by which the casualties are checked off.

Of the bodies recovered yesterday three were children, one a two-year-old boy with white hair, and Clarence Barnes, aged 5, and Herbert Reese, aged 3 years. The only adult found was Mrs. Ann Fitzgerald. All had been washed some distance below the village, down the valley toward Costello.

Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon last night received notification from Philadelphia that the Pennsylvania Railroad has sent out a circular to all its representatives and agents to accept and forward without charge all goods directed or consigned to the relief committee at Austin.

All day long yesterday the crush of falling buildings resounded over the debris-strewn plain where Austin stood before it was swept by the disastrous flood of Saturday. As fast as the buildings fell or were torn apart sledges or drays were piled to their capacity and the wreckage drawn away. One of the worst obstacles is the thousands of cords of hemlock slabs or pulpwood that were swept down from the Bayless Pulp & Paper Mill, where the dam that gave way and caused the flood, was located.

Elections Nov. 20?

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 6.—The Daily Record last night stated on what is declared to be excellent authority that it learned yesterday provincial elections would be held this fall, possibly Nov. 21.

Evan Fraser, M.P.P., in an interview last night said he did not think the elections would be on the day The Record stated, but might be the day before. He said they would be held some Monday this fall.

Big Freighters Grounded.

Winnipeg, Oct. 6.—A despatch from Fort William, Ont., says the steamer Rosedale, of the Inland Line, and the Plummer, of the Merchants Mutual Line, are on the rocks at Iroquois Point, near the Soo.

URGES COMPROMISE

Italians Occupy the Ruined Fortifications of Tripoli and Are Reported to Have Made Attacks on Benghazi and Derna, But the Latter Rumors Are Not Confirmed—Mobilizing the Reserves.

London, Oct. 6.—The Italian flag floats over Sultana fort at Tripoli, which is occupied by landing parties. Part of the fleet is anchored in the harbor and the other warships lie a short distance from the dismantled fortifications. Few bodies of Turks have been found among the ruins of the forts, and apparently no great number of Turks were killed by the bombardment.

According to a Constantinople report, not yet confirmed, the Italian warships yesterday bombarded Benghazi and Derna. Various rumors concerning a naval engagement in Turkish waters, an attack against Mytilene and the blowing up of the Italian battleship Conte di Cavour at Tripoli have not been confirmed from any quarter.

An interesting report is current from Constantinople that while Germany favors the adoption of the Italian ultimatum as the basis of peace negotiations, Great Britain proposes that Tripoli shall become a privileged tributary Turkish vilayet under joint Turco-Italian administration, thus retaining the suzerainty of the Sultan.

Volunteer For Service.

Rome, Oct. 6.—Five thousand soldiers, natives of Erythraea, the Italian protectorate in Africa, have offered themselves for service in Tripoli.

Senator the Duke Carafa d'Andio has re-entered the army as a captain of cavalry.

Prince Prospero Coloma, who was formerly mayor of Rome, and is now a senator, has returned to the service as a major of cavalry.

The Giornale d'Italia says that detachments of marines have been landed at Tripoli to protect the consulate, the Italian church and hospital.

Aviators To Be Sent.

Naples, Oct. 6.—Nine military aviators with eight monoplanes and two biplanes will be sent to Tripoli. The aviators will be commanded by Capt. Piazza, who won the air race from Bologne to Venice.

To Mobilize Reserves.

Athens, Oct. 6.—Besides calling out the reservists in Epirus on Oct. 3, the Government proposes to mobilize part of the reserves in Thessaly. The number will be limited to a few thousand—sufficient to protect the frontier against any attempted coup on the part of Turkey. A circular will be sent to the Powers.

Changes His Mind.

Corfu, Oct. 6.—The ultimatum of Vice-Admiral the Duke of Abruzzi, threatening to bombard Prevesa, has been withdrawn.

Italians Landing.

Malta, Oct. 6.—Fugitives from Tripoli who arrived last night, say that small parties of Italians are landing all along the coast from Tripoli to Benghazi. It is believed, however, that there will be no landing in force until the main expedition arrives. Small bodies of Arabs skirmished with the landing parties.

Called From Switzerland.

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 6.—Six thousand Italians living in Switzerland have been called to the reserves, but a large proportion of them have refused to go. Meetings of protest have been held, and some hundreds have declared that they will renounce their nationality and become Swiss subjects, rather than serve under the colors.

A Lucky Convict.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—Oswald Grosser, a man who is serving ten years' imprisonment for shooting the clerk of the Supreme Court at Leipsig, and wounding one of the judges in 1906, has become a multi-millionaire through the suicide of his brother, Dr. Grosser, of Bonn, who felt that he could not survive the death of his wife.

Oswald Grosser was the black sheep of the family, and was totally disinherited by his father, a Berlin millionaire. He went to America as a pauper, and many years afterwards disputed his father's will. When he finally lost the case he drew two revolvers and fired blindly at the judge's bench. Now he inherits the vast fortune and magnificent villa left by his brother.

Tesch Military Tactics.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—A committee meeting of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Defence League was held yesterday at the Military Institute, with President R. E. Kingsford in the chair. It was decided to offer a prize of $100 for competition in the course of military lectures to be held at the university of Toronto.

Mr. Fane D Sewell was appointed pro tem treasurer of the division, and Mr. Kingsford and Mr. Hudson were appointed with him to act as a finance committee.

Couldn't Stand Criticism.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—Owing to the criticism directed at him because of the fatal accident at Syracuse, Lee Oldfield announced last night that he had decided not to participate in the 200-mile Fairmount Park motor race on Saturday. Oldfield was engaged to pilot a 90-horsepower Fiat, owned by F. S. Hodson of this city. When he appeared for the first practice spin at the course yesterday he heard a number of criticisms and became so unnerved that he decided to withdraw.

GOES TO ASSIZES.

Miss Gladys Price's Abductor Before Mordon Magistrate.

Mordon, Man., Oct. 6.—The postponed preliminary hearing of the case against George Brown held at the provincial jail here, charged with attempted rape on the person of Mrs. Frank Patterson, formerly Miss Gladys Price, the Riverdale school teacher, and also the attempted murder of William Adams, the Snowflake hotel proprietor, came up before Police Magistrate Lake at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Patterson gave a clear and vivid description of her connection with the case, never faltering throughout her evidence.

Charles McMillan, who followed Mrs. Patterson on the stand, and to whom it was first reported the prisoner had confessed when arrested at Hannah, N.D., stated what the prisoner had told him, practically corroborating the evidence given by Miss Price and conclusively showing that the prisoner had had no improper connection with the former witness.

Magistrate Lake, after summing up the evidence of the abduction case, committed the prisoner to stand trial at the fall assizes, which are to be held here on the twenty-fourth of October. The case of attempted murder was then dealt with. William Adams, the first witness, in giving his evidence, stated that he could not identify the prisoner as the party who shot him during the time of the man-hunt in the Snowflake district, but he gave a description of what occurred during the night of the shooting.

The magistrate, after hearing the evidence in the shooting case, directed that the prisoner be sent upon the shooting case as well as that of attempted rape and that he be confined in the local jail until the assizes.

Shots In the Reichsrath.

Vienna, Oct. 6.—Four shots were fired from the gallery in the Lower House of the Reichsrath yesterday in the direction of the Ministerial benches, where the Ministers of Justice and Education were seated. No one was injured. The man who fired the shots was arrested.

Dr. Adler, a social Democrat, was attacking the Minister of Justice, Herr Hochenburger, because of the severity of the sentences imposed upon those arrested during the recent fatal rioting, at meetings held in protest against the high cost of food, when the shooting occurred.

Carrick Elected.

Port Arthur, Oct. 6.—J. J. Carrick was yesterday elected by acclamation as member of Parliament for Thunder Bay, succeeding James A. Conmee (Liberal), who resigned.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"YES, I got him to take it down. He made quite a fuss about it, but he did it finally. You can just better believe that I'm not going to have any other woman's picture in my husband's room."

The speaker, who is a pretty little newlywed preened herself triumphantly.

She had her way. She was happy.

I wonder how long she will be happy. I wonder how long it will be before the tendency she showed in that litlte incident will bring thunder clouds scudding into the cloudless sky of her bridal existence.

The picture she "got him to take down" was a little photograph of a boyhood sweetheart. Six years before he even met the woman who is now his wife, that sweetheart was married. But, in memory of his hapy childhood, he has always kept that little picture of his first love. It surely means no more—if as much—to him as the "D" he won at college and still wears so proudly on his sweater, or the baseball bat which he still cherishes because it was with it that he helped to win that great game of sixteen years ago.

Poor, foolish, little Newlywed.

She is one of those unfortunate women — unfortunate both for themselves and their husbands—whose ideal of marriage is that a wife should be not only the most beloved being on earth to her husband but the only person whom he cares anything about.

She is jealous of his dog, his mother, his men friends, his club, his business, his golf, his childhood, and even of his possible widowhood.

She is, above all, most unwilling that he should ever admire any quality, no matter how fine, in any other woman than herself.

Poor, short-sighted creature not to realize that narrowed interests make narrow men and that while she is trying to make what she considers an ideal husband, she is also trying to spoil a worthwhile man.

She may find unhappiness in failure.

She is just as apt to find it in success.

I know a woman whose husband is a great enthusiast on lawn tennis. One of his wife's friends is also very fond of this sport. When she comes to the house, or whenever they meet her elsewhere, the husband immediately devotes himself to her and talks of tennis. Sometimes he takes her to tournaments, and often they spend whole afternoons playing.

His wife is not strong enough to play tennis and is not really interested in the game, although for her husband's sake, she has learned to talk intelligently about it. People sometimes wonder if she is not jealous of the woman who can meet him on this ground. Once, someone was foolish enough to carry this suspicion to her.

She just laughed.

"My husband and I," she said, "have a hundred interests in common—our babies, our books, our music, our home, and so on. Am I to be afraid to let him share just one interest with another woman? I know my husband loves me and admires me more than any other woman on earth. Am I to be jealous because he enjoys and admires another woman's tennis playing? I think that would be simply childish."

If there were more women with this attitude toward married life, I feel sure there would be that many more happy marriages to confute the cynic.

Don't you?

CHORAL SOCIETY WILL BE FORMED IN WARSAW

Examiner Special.

WARSAW, OCT. 4.—A meeting will be held over Mr. Choate's store on Friday evening, Oct. 6, for the purpose of organizing a Choral Society for the study of music, during the winter months. This should prove attractive to the choir leaders of the Village and neighbouring churches, as a means of filling their choirs with trained singers. It is hoped they take the matter up with prospective vocalists and attend the meeting.

The managers of the Skating rink have been preparing for the coming season by having the steam-boiler overhauled and repaired.

Mr. F. F. Calder's new residence is being rapidly constructed. The building is splendidly located and will be a handsome residence.

Mrs. O. A. Kidd is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Snider.

Mrs. R. F. Choate and Master Gower are guests of Mrs. A. F. Choate.

The regular monthly meeting of Court Warsaw, C. O. F., was held on Tuesday evening.

SICK HEADACHE
A Symptom of Troubles Which are Removed by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are not merely afflictions to be borne as patiently as possible — they are danger signals. They never come unless the digestive system is out of order, and their regular recurrence is proof positive of serious trouble and a warning that should be heeded promptly.

Those terrible headaches permanently banished by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are caused by Indigestion, Biliousness or Constipation, and no amount of "headache powders" will do more than temporarily relieve them. The only way to get rid of them entirely is to cure the Constipation or Indigestion that is causing them, and nothing will do this quicker or more effectively than Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are purely vegetable in character, and are free from any harmful drug. For over fifty years they have been in constant use in Canada, and have proved most effective in regulating the bowels, aiding digestion, banishing sick headaches and restoring vigorous health.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have stood the test for over fifty years. 25c. at all dealers. W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont. 7

OLD ACE

Can any pleasure in life compare
With a charming drive in the balmy air?
A buggy light with shimmering wheel,
Springs whose resistance you bare feel,
A spirited horse of royal breed,
With just a little more style and speed
Than any you meet, and it matters not
If his gait be pace or swinging trot.

The tassel sways on the graceful whip;
You grasp the reins with a tighter grip;
Your horse is off for a splendid dash
And needs no touch of the urging lash.
You feel the puff of the startled air;
It floats his mane and it lifts your hair!
The hoof marks time in its measured beat,
For the swelling nostril that scorns defeat.

One glorious day in the balmy spring
John Derr was out with his new horse King.
Though both were rich, it was his design
To buy him a faster horse than mine.
By his side the sweetest girl in the town,
Of handsome features and eyes so brown
That, gazing in where the lashes curled,
Was like a view of another world
Where the angel lives and the angel sings;
And she was one that had dropped her wings
And come to earth just to let men see
How sweet the angels in heaven may be!
I envied the breeze its constant bliss
Of pasing her cheek to steal a kiss!

I loved the girl when we both were young,
But getting older I'd lost my tongue.
I learned in college Latin and Greek,
But Cupid's language I could not speak.
While Jack was perfect in Cupid's art,
The only language he knew by heart.
I envied John in his ride that day,
And jogged old Spot in a leisure way,
That two-mile drive to the sulphur spring,
To test the speed of his new horse King.

John took the lead and it touched his pride;
For the fastest horse and the fairest bride
Had been his boast! Did I pass him by?
My heart, I reckon, could answer why—
I'm almost certain I lost the race
By lagging behind to look at Grace!

Jack seemed more proud of his horse that day
Than he was of Grace, which made me say:
"Be sure of your game before you boast;
From dead defeat there may rise a ghost!
I'll race you back to the town," said I,
"For Grace's glove!" but he made reply:
"What use to you is the senseless glove,
From the soft white hand of the girl I love?
Suppose you win," he laughed in my face,
"You get the mitten and I get Grace!"
Said I: "No trophy I would so prise"
And I caught a look from her soft brown eyes
That drove the rest of it out of my head—
I don't remember just what I said!

John laughed away till his eyes were wet;
"Increase the wager; I'll take the bet!"
"My glove," said Grace, "and the hand within,
Shall be the prise of the one to win!"
I looked at John, but he didn't chaff,
He didn't smile and he didn't laugh.
"Must I, then, race you for such a bride,"
Said John, "and carry the load beside?"

"I'll carry," said I, "the precious load!"
Her bright eye flashed and her fair cheek glowed.
She took her seat with little ado;
I tucked the robe and my heart in, too!
Said I: "Old Spot," as I stroked his neck,
And rubbed his nose and loosed his check,
"She's Bob's own Grace if you do your best!"
He pricked his ears just as if he guessed
The time had come when his master's need
Had staked all happiness on his speed

When all was ready Grace shouted "Go!"
A word both horses seemed to know.
You heard the hoof with its measured sway
Pacing along the great highway.
You saw the swell of the panting side,
The pink that glows in the nostril wide.
I knew old Spot, if he kept that pace,
Would win my choice of the human race,
No word was spoken between us two;
The tongue is silent when hope is new.
A mile, a mile and a half we sped
And still old Spot was a neck ahead.

Jack touched his horse with the tasseled whip;
Then Gracie, pursing her rosy lip,
Uttered a sound like a lover's kiss—
pus-es! pus-es!
The world is ruled by a sound like this!
To urge a horse a capital plan,
And often urged to encourage a man;
But she never dreamed she had let me in
To her heart's fond wish that I should win.

The only time in the race she spoke
Was when, over-urged, Jack's trotter broke.
"He's running his horse and that's not fair!"
And blushing up to her auburn hair,
She grabbed the whip from my willing hand—
A move that John seemed to understand,
For she raised it high, as much as to say,
Well, running's a game that two can play—
So he brought him down to an honest trot,
But he couldn't keep up with dear old Spot,
Who forged ahead when he saw the whip
And passed the stake with never a skip.

On through the village he kept his speed,
For I was too happy to mind the steed;
He would not stop when the race was done,
But started home when the prize he'd won!
Nor stopped till he reached the farmhouse gate,
Where good old mother was sure to wait.

I know the horse is a trifle old,
But you can't buy him with all your gold!
My Gracie loves him and pats his neck
And says he's the best card in the deck;
And rubs his nose till he kisses her face,
She has changed his name to dear old Ace,
And smiling says: "It's the proper thing,
For it takes the Ace to beat the King!"
As she purses her lips for the well known smack,
"I'm glad the Queen didn't take the Jack!"

"Oh! Goody, Goody! It IS FRY'S"

"Do Let Us Have Some FRY'S Cocoa"

Is it any wonder the dear little kiddies slip out of their cot and steal downstairs when they "suspect" that father and mother are treating themselves to some "Fry's"? Will mother give them a drink too? Yes, indeed she will, for she knows that the best drink they could have, anytime, is

FRY'S, Since 1729

Throughout the world "FRY'S of Bristol" is known as the synonym for cocoa and chocolate in their purest and most delicious forms. The history of the cocoa trade is the history of the colossal business of J. S. FRY & SONS, Limited, of Bristol. It is the oldest firm of chocolate and cocoa manufacturers in the world, for letters patent were granted to the ancestor of the present generation of the family by King George in 1729.

The Bristol works of J. S. FRY & SONS, Ltd., comprise eight great buildings and employ more than 5,000 hands. The purity and excellence of their chocolate and cocoas have won more than 300 Grand Prix, Gold Medals and Diplomas in open and international competition, and in the course of the long history of nearly two centuries the firm has received many marks of Royal favor. Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, in the early part of her reign, appointed FRY & SONS by Special Warrant Manufacturers of Chocolate and Cocoa to the Royal House.

His late Majesty King Edward, whose warrant as Prince of Wales the firm held for nearly forty years, confirmed the appointment after he ascended the Throne.

Makers to H.M. George V

His Majesty King George V, whose warrant FRY'S held as Prince of Wales, has honored them with his Royal brief as King, as have also her Majesty the Queen, her Majesty Queen Alexandra, her Majesty Queen Marghuerita of Italy, their Majesties the King and Queen of Spain, and their Majesties the King and Queen of the Hellenes. A similar mark of Royal favor came long ago from France, when, in 1867, the late Emperor Napoleon, by a special brevet, appointed them Manufacturers of Chocolate and Cocoa to the Imperial House, and Messrs. FRY still have the honor—one that they prize very highly—of numbering her Imperial Majesty the Empress Eugenie among their illustrious patrons.

This record of honors is as magnificent as it is unique. It is a tribute how, after nearly two hundred years' competitive industry, the firm of FRY'S is still foremost, that while advancing with the times and adopting and initiating the most modern methods and machinery, it has maintained undeviatingly its standard of the highest purity and quality in its goods and the fullest value for money. Whatever bears the name of "FRY'S" is of the best. By no other means could the firm have so triumphantly stood the test of time.

PULLMAN CAR TRAVEL

A Britisher Writes His Impressions Concerning It

Yet I confess, writes an Englishman in Harper's Weekly, even bankruptcy seems welcome as an escape from the horrors of a Pullman, where you travel by day with two or three score of people, at least one of whom is certain to be a squalling infant and another a ubiquitous youngster with lungs and legs in an equal state of activity; where you have to rouse yourself every few minutes to resist the carboy's pestiferous attentions; and where the buzz of an incessant movement and conversation makes reading and dozing alike impossible. But even that pales before the trials that await one at bedtime.

A Pullman car at night is the most uncivilised thing on the American continent, and one of the most indecent. It quite fascinates my blushes. I sit enthralled as the darky porter strews my seat with other people's belongings, holds a pillow-case in his teeth and squeezes the pillow into it, and hurls sheets and mattresses about, and pulls at chains and sliding doors and levers and curtains. And what can be more enchanting than to hear husband and wife discussing how they shall dispose of themselves for the night, whether they shall share the lower berth or whether he shall be banished to the nest above?

And what pleasanter than to be made conscious by the writhings and heavings and vigorous protuberances of the curtains that just across the aisle some good lady is engaged in the fearsome struggle to undress. To walk the length of a Pullman car at about 10.30 p.m., when most of the berths are made up, and when the curtained contortions of those who are in the agony of "retiring" are at their worst, and when you butt into strange projections of humanity, and stumble over shoes and watch someone scaling the heights of an upper berth, is on the whole the most delirious experience I have ever encountered.

THE SULTAN OF TURKEY.

WHITE WOMEN, BLACK MEN

Lord Gladstone Defends His Policy in South Africa.

Viscount Gladstone was entertained at a public luncheon at Salisbury, Rhodesia. Replying to the toast of his health, the Governor-General of South Africa confessed, amid laughter, that he had come to Rhodesia with a certain amount of reasonable apprehension, but he knew that he might rely on their sense of British fair play. He declared that his confidence had not been misplaced.

Proceeding to deal with the "Black Peril," he said that it would be idle for him to ignore the serious effect of the Umtali decision (in which he reprieved a native sentenced to death for assault on a white woman) upon the relations between the High Commissioner and the people of Southern Rhodesia. Nobody regretted the difference more keenly than himself, but it was a difference over the merits of a particular case rather than a difference in principle—namely, "the tangible sanctity of our women as companied by strict justice and fair play for the subject races."

He had always conscientiously applied that principle.

"If people think I applied the principle wrongly let them say so, let them accuse me of ignorance, even stupidity, but not charge me with callousness and indifference of any foolish desire to assert authority in defiance of these high principles which are inseparable from British rule and upon the observance of which my fitness to hold my high office depends."

Lord Gladstone proceeded to point out the unpleasantly large number of criminal cases in which white and black had been involved during the past year, and he asked whether the machinery of the trial of such cases was all that could be desired. It was for their Legislature and their statesmen to consider whether the machinery required overhauling. He was confident that the sound common sense of the British people in Rhodesia would be guided to that conclusion which was best for the common good of the territory.

Referring to the future government of Rhodesia and the reference of the Mayor of Salisbury to the possibility of the incorporation of Rhodesia with the Union, Lord Gladstone said nothing would be done hastily. He prophesied that, if the Rhodesians continued to progress as they were doing, 1914 would mark a long step forward in the political development of Southern Rhodesia.

WOMEN FAILURES

Though 1910 was a year of good trade in England, and the number of failures was the lowest for twenty-six years, there was an increase in the number of failures among women, according to a return issued. The greatest increase, it is added, was among widows. Altogether 495 women failed, as compared with 436 in 1909. Of the total, 201 were married, 153 were widows, and 87 were single. Their total liabilities were $1,544,250.

Among the women who failed were 49 milliners, 42 drapers, 40 grocers, 33 lodging-house keepers, 23 confectioners, 17 publicans, 7 farmers, 7 butchers, 6 school-mistresses, 5 carriage-builders, 1 engineer.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glycerin compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the signature R. V. Pierce M.D.

THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

1—This Tiny Tad has asked this Marmalady if she'll go
To have a boat ride with him, and at first she answers "No."

2—"But if you find a chaperon," says she, "why, then I will."
And so we see him go to look for one upon the hill.

3—This is the Chaperonion that the Tiny Tad discovers,
A most convenient person for young couples or for lovers.

4—They call a Canoefoundland, and he barks and wags his tail,
And takes the little party for a very pleasant sail.

5—A kind Lilacrobat then takes the Tad back to his mates,
Who sit around and listen while his story he relates.

6—"You cannot go canoeing with a girl unless there's three,
It is the chaperonly way to do such things," says he.

GROOMS LEFT AT THE ALTAR

Strange Instances of Interuptions Which Cancelled the Marriage Ceremony

A recent society wedding sensation, where the bride failed to appear at the altar at the eleventh hour, is not without parallel. Only a short time ago a lady on arriving near the church to be married ordered her coachman to drive her home again. Although astonished at this extraordinary request for the bridegroom was actually waiting in the church, he complied with his mistress's orders. It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics, and it was not till some hours too late that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover in any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused twelve years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the widow of a wealthy man. The curious part about it was that the lady was the only one who believed in her lover. Everyone else knew that his reputation was far from spotless, but they could not, nevertheless, convince the charming widow. Everything was ready for the ceremony. The church had been profusely decorated with flowers, and many well-known and prominent people had taken their places.

The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable diamond tie-pin. Suddenly she cried out: "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all was stopped. So overcome was the bride that she fainted and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it transpired that this identical pin had been stolen some months before from the widow's rooms.—TIT BITS.

HORSES

Crushed oats are easier digested, and therefore more profitable than whole oats.

The driver's aim should be to manipulate the reins with a light but firm and steady hand.

A roll after a hard day's work is greatly appreciated by the horse. It takes the place of extra feed.

The value of salting the work horse regularly is often underestimated by horsemen. It is a good practice to keep the material before them at all times.

Quick Relief From Stomach Troubles

Mr. R. O. Hatfield, 73 years old and a sufferer for years, is an enthusiastic friend of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey because of what it has done for him.

He writes: "I have taken Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a medicine for over two years, and it has been a great help to me. I was a sufferer from stomach trouble for years, and Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done me more good than any medicine I ever used. I am never without it in the house and I cannot speak too highly of it and what it has done for me. I am now in my seventy-third year." R. O. Hatfield, 302 S. Stricker St., Baltimore, Md.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey
has to its credit more than fifty years of success without a question as to its merits as a curative agent. During this time it has brought the blessings of health to overworked men, delicate women and sickly children, who find in it the strength-giving properties that are so necessary to them. It quickens and strengthens the heart action, aids digestion, restores health and vigor, makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous. It is prescribed by doctors and is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

good may cause colic. New hay, new oats, green corn, etc., are often used. Make the change gradually, and no harm will result.

A horse that is extremely tired should not be given a heavy feed until he has had a little rest. Some feeders act on the supposition that a large amount of feed is what is needed to replace the lost energy. It must be remembered, however, that a horse so exhausted cannot digest feed as well as one that is fresh, and, therefore, should be fed accordingly.

FLYING MACHINES

The Question of Automatic Stability Was Under Discussion

The most striking feature of the discussion on flying, for which the mathematical and engineering sections of the British Association joined forces, was the attack made upon the notion of automatic stability. At the present time a great many designers of aeroplanes are working at this problem. It is generally regarded as the next great line of advance in the construction of flying machines. Yet both Professor Petavel and Sir William White derided the idea.

Dr. W. N. Shaw, the well-known meteorologist, discussed the difficulty of wind—a difficulty which he thought could only be overcome by greater speed. This, however, would not get over the trouble of "holes in the air," into which aeroplanes fall every now and then, with results greatly disconcerting to their pilots. Meteorology was trying to discover what these holes in the air were. They might be due to variations in the velocity of wind.

Professor Petavel threw doubt upon the possibility of obtaining automatic stability, and even said he did not think it was necessary or desirable. The tricycle was stable, and the bicycle unstable, but almost all riders preferred the latter. Any mechanism worked by gusts of wind for ensuring automatic stability would probably be dangerous in other ways. With this view Sir William White agreed. He said he felt an instinctive distrust of automatic appliances. In his opinion there was nothing like human power directed by a strong will and careful observations.

Professor Troughton looked forward to the day when aeroplanes would be as big as Atlantic liners, and could afford to disregard the small holes in the air that had been mentioned.

CHEAPER TELEGRAMS

Germany Has Now Introduced the Letter Telegram System

From now on the Germans in all the great cities and important towns will be able to send a telegram for about one twentieth of a cent a word, deliverable by the first post next morning. At present the telegraphic rate throughout the empire is a cent a word with a minimum of about 12 cents. This minimum will be retained, but otherwise the innovation represents a remarkable cheapening of the telegraphic service. Probably the new system will be most freely used by the business world, which will be in a position to write its business letters at a very cheap rate after ordinary postal hours, with the knowledge that the recipient will get them first thing in the morning. As matters now stand letters for distant places must be posted at an early hour in the afternoon if they are to reach their destination next morning. The hours for handing letter-telegrams to the telegraph office are between 7 p.m. and midnight.

COTTON REPLACING OPIUM

Chinese Farmers Exported the Latter to the Value of 28,141,234 taels

The opium traffic in China is now practically suppressed, and the opium growers have taken to the cultivation of cotton in order to recoup themselves for the losses sustained by the cessation of opium culture. The new agricultural venture has given splendid results, judging from the magnificent crops to be seen in the different provinces. According to official statistics to hand, China last year exported cotton to the value of about 28,141,234 taels to Russia and America. The year before, the export of Chinese cotton only amounted to a third of this sum. This extraordinary increase in quantity exported is more or less attributable to the bad American crops, which afforded the Chinese exporters a splendid chance to dispose of their merchandise at very advantageous prices. The Imperial Government is doing everything possible to encourage the growth of cotton throughout the Empire.

NAPOLEON'S GHOST

The "Ugliest Woman in Paris" Tells of a Strange Apparition

Mlle. Polaire, long known as "the ugliest woman in Paris" and "the actress with the smallest waist," now proudly declares that since she has become the owner of a famous old mansion in the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain, she has been honored by a visit of the spirit of the great Napoleon, who first met Josephine Beauharnais within the walls of the mansion. Mlle. Polaire relates that towards sunset, a few weeks ago, she was reclining on a couch in her drawing-room. "Suddenly I became aware," she says, "that a man was approaching me in the half light. I looked at him steadily, with emotion but without fear. He was dressed in a strange, old-fashioned, military uniform. As I scrutinised him I recognised the features of the great Napoleon, as they have been made familiar to me by David's portrait of the Emperor as a youth. As the Emperor appeared to me, he was as beautiful as a young Greek god, full of love and fire. It is thus that he must have appeared at the time of his courtship with Josephine, on the eve of the second glorious campaign in Italy. As I looked at him I was thrilled with joy. I felt that I was in the presence of the greatest man that ever lived. His face was thin, with the pure outline of a Greek. His great deep, dark eyes radiated love, passion, world-embracing ambition. His beautiful face seemed to be appealing for love. He pressed his hands together, and bent forward, as if imploring me, but without saying a word. Three times the same apparition presented itself to me at the same hour and place. Was he brought back by memories of Josephine, or did he come to see me? I can hardly tell."

LAURIER WIT

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is one of the wittiest of parliamentarians, and his ready wit on one occasion at least turned his physical slimness to account in political combat. One day a portly Conservative opponent arose in the chamber and accused Sir Wilfrid of "fattening on the toil and sweat of the people." Laurier smiled and said sweetly: "I leave this House to judge which of us two is more exposed to that charge."—London Daily Chronicle.

EATEN BY CANNIBALS

Members of the Mackie Party Were Cut Off by Natives

Reports from the Congo confirm the story that two members of the caravan of Mr. H. G. Mackie, the British Consul at Boma, have been killed and eaten by natives during a recent tour. It appears that while crossing from the main Congo to the Lopori River, one of Mr. Mackie's carriers became ill, and another man was instructed to assist him. The pair lagged behind, and were cut off from the main caravan by a party of cannibal hunters from the district through which the British Consul had passed. Two expeditions have been sent and some arrests made, but the real culprits are still in hiding.

It transpired afterwards that she had merely turned back because the crowd which had gathered to cheer her frightened her away.

In Bristol, some years ago, a marriage failed to take place at the last moment, in the most dramatic circumstances. The bride had been previously engaged. For some reason or other the engagement was broken off, and her fiance sailed for Canada. After some time she became engaged to a local insurance agent. All arrangements were made, and the happy couple were to be married on an Easter Sunday. A large number of people were assembled to witness the ceremony which was just about to begin when the first lover appeared on the scene. The bride fainted, and on regaining her senses she refused to be married to the insurance agent. Since then she has become the wife of her former lover, who has taken her to his homestead in Canada.

On the morning that another happy pair were to be married the bridegroom, who had a moustache and beard, determined to be clean shaven for the ceremony. Why he made up his mind to do such a curious thing on his wedding morn is not known. However, when he was shaved his friends all congratulated him upon his improved appearance. The ceremony was timed for eleven o'clock, and punctually to the moment he appeared at the church. When the bride saw him, however, she had a fit of hysterics, and it was not till some hours too late that she recovered her composure. She then announced that she would not marry her lover in any circumstances, declaring that he was betrayed by his mouth, previously hidden by his moustache and beard, and that he looked to her to be cruel!

Many will remember the sensation caused twelve years ago by the stopping of a fashionable wedding at the very last moment. The bridegroom was an exceedingly well-known figure in the world of sport, and the bride was the widow of a wealthy man. The curious part about it was that the lady was the only one who believed in her lover. Everyone else knew that his reputation was far from spotless, but they could not, nevertheless, convince the charming widow. Everything was ready for the ceremony. The church had been profusely decorated with flowers, and many well-known and prominent people had taken their places.

The dramatic moment came when the couple met at the altar. The bride noticed that her intended husband was wearing a particularly valuable diamond tie-pin. Suddenly she cried out: "Take me home! Take me home! I cannot say anything more now!" To the consternation of all was stopped. So overcome was the bride that she fainted and had to be carried to her carriage. Later it transpired that this identical pin had been stolen some months before from the widow's rooms.—TIT BITS.

HORSES

Crushed oats are easier digested, and therefore more profitable than whole oats.

The driver's aim should be to manipulate the reins with a light but firm and steady hand.

A roll after a hard day's work is greatly appreciated by the horse. It takes the place of extra feed.

The value of salting the work horse regularly is often underestimated by horsemen. It is a good practice to keep the material before them at all times.

Quick Relief From Stomach Troubles

Mr. R. O. Hatfield, 73 years old and a sufferer for years, is an enthusiastic friend of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey because of what it has done for him.

He writes: "I have taken Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a medicine for over two years, and it has been a great help to me. I was a sufferer from stomach trouble for years, and Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done me more good than any medicine I ever used. I am never without it in the house and I cannot speak too highly of it and what it has done for me. I am now in my seventy-third year." R. O. Hatfield, 302 S. Stricker St., Baltimore, Md.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey
has to its credit more than fifty years of success without a question as to its merits as a curative agent. During this time it has brought the blessings of health to overworked men, delicate women and sickly children, who find in it the strength-giving properties that are so necessary to them. It quickens and strengthens the heart action, aids digestion, restores health and vigor, makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous. It is prescribed by doctors and is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

good may cause colic. New hay, new oats, green corn, etc., are often used. Make the change gradually, and no harm will result.

A horse that is extremely tired should not be given a heavy feed until he has had a little rest. Some feeders act on the supposition that a large amount of feed is what is needed to replace the lost energy. It must be remembered, however, that a horse so exhausted cannot digest food as well as one that is fresh, and, therefore, should be fed accordingly.

FLYING MACHINES

The Question of Automatic Stability Was Under Discussion

The most striking feature of the discussion on flying, for which the mathematical and engineering sections of the British Association joined forces, was the attack made upon the notion of automatic stability. At the present time a great many designers of aeroplanes are working at this problem. It is generally regarded as the next great line of advance in the construction of flying machines. Yet both Professor Petavel and Sir William White derided the idea.

Dr. W. N. Shaw, the well-known meteorologist, discussed the difficulty of wind—a difficulty which he thought could only be overcome by greater speed. This, however, would not get over the trouble of "holes in the air," into which aeroplanes fall every now and then, with results greatly disconcerting to their pilots. Meteorology was trying to discover what these holes in the air were. They might be due to variations in the velocity of wind.

Professor Petavel threw doubt upon the possibility of obtaining automatic stability, and even said he did not think it was necessary or desirable. The tricycle was stable, and the bicycle unstable, but almost all riders preferred the latter. Any mechanism worked by gusts of wind for ensuring automatic stability would probably be dangerous in other ways. With this view Sir William White agreed. He said he felt an instinctive distrust of automatic appliances. In his opinion there was nothing like human power directed by a strong will and careful observations.

Professor Troughton looked forward to the day when aeroplanes would be as big as Atlantic liners, and could afford to disregard the small holes in the air that had been mentioned.

CHEAPER TELEGRAMS

Germany Has Now Introduced the Letter Telegram System

From now on the Germans in all the great cities and important towns will be able to send a telegram for about one twentieth of a cent a word, deliverable by the first post next morning. At present the telegraphic rate throughout the empire is a cent a word with a minimum of about 12 cents. This minimum will be retained, but otherwise the innovation represents a remarkable cheapening of the telegraphic service. Probably the new system will be most freely used by the business world, which will be in a position to write its business letters at a very cheap rate after ordinary postal hours, with the knowledge that the recipient will get them first thing in the morning. As matters now stand letters for distant places must be posted at an early hour in the afternoon if they are to reach their destination next morning. The hours for handing letter-telegrams to the telegraph office are between 7 p.m. and midnight.

COTTON REPLACING OPIUM

Chinese Farmers Exported the Latter to the Value of 28,141,234 taels

The opium traffic in China is now practically suppressed, and the opium growers have taken to the cultivation of cotton in order to recoup themselves for the losses sustained by the cessation of opium culture. The new agricultural venture has given splendid results, judging from the magnificent crops to be seen in the different provinces. According to official statistics to hand, China last year exported cotton to the value of about 28,141,234 taels to Russia and America. The year before, the export of Chinese cotton only amounted to a third of this sum. This extraordinary increase in quantity exported is more or less attributable to the bad American crops, which afforded the Chinese exporters a splendid chance to dispose of their merchandise at very advantageous prices. The Imperial Government is doing everything possible to encourage the growth of cotton throughout the Empire.

NAPOLEON'S GHOST

The "Ugliest Woman in Paris" Tells of a Strange Apparition

Mlle. Polaire, long known as "the ugliest woman in Paris" and "the actress with the smallest waist," now proudly declares that since she has become the owner of a famous old mansion in the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain, she has been honored by a visit of the spirit of the great Napoleon, who first met Josephine Beauharnais within the walls of the mansion. Mlle. Palaire relates that towards sunset, a few weeks ago, she was reclining on a couch in her drawing-room. "Suddenly I became aware," she says, "that a man was approaching me in the half light. I looked at him steadily, with emotion but without fear. He was dressed in a strange, old-fashioned, military uniform. As I scrutinised him I recognised the features of the great Napoleon, as they have been made familiar to me by David's portrait of the Emperor as a youth. As the Emperor appeared to me, he was as beautiful as a young Greek god, full of love and fire. It is thus that he must have appeared at the time of his courtship with Josephine, on the eve of the second glorious campaign in Italy. As I looked at him I was thrilled with joy. I felt that I was in the presence of the greatest man that ever lived. His face was thin, with the pure outline of a Greek. His great deep, dark eyes radiated love, passion, world-embracing ambition. His beautiful face seemed to be appealing for love. He pressed his hands together, and bent forward, as if imploring me, but without saying a word. Three times the same apparition presented itself to me at the same hour and place. Was he brought back by memories of Josephine, or did he come to see me? I can hardly tell."

A French paper suggests that Mlle. Polaire try the cure.

LAURIER WIT

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is one of the wittiest of parliamentarians, and his ready wit on one occasion at least turned his physical slimness to account in political combat. One day a portly Conservative opponent arose in the chamber and accused Sir Wilfrid of "fattening on the toil and sweat of the people." Laurier smiled and said sweetly: "I leave this House to judge which of us two is more exposed to that charge."—London Daily Chronicle.

EATEN BY CANNIBALS

Reports from the Congo confirm the story that two members of the caravan of Mr. H. G. Mackie, the British Consul at Boma, have been killed and eaten by natives during a recent tour. It appears that while crossing from the main Congo to the Lopori River, one of Mr. Mackie's carriers became ill, and another man was instructed to assist him. The pair lagged behind, and were cut off from the main caravan by a party of cannibal hunters from the district through which the British Consul had passed. Two expeditions have been sent and some arrests made, but the real culprits are still in hiding.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat, and as buyers and sellers continue considerably apart in their views as to prices, little or no business is doing. The local market for oats is firm under a fairly good demand for car lots.

A good business is passing to spring wheat flour for local account, but we hear that some large contracts have been made with bakers recently at a cut in prices of 20c per barrel, but this is by no means general. There is a good enquiry from foreign buyers, but the prices bid are little out of line. Demand for bran and shorts is good, which is still scarce and very firm.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct 5.—The railways reported 93 cars of live stock at the City Yards, comprising 935 cattle, 3312 hogs, 2100 sheep and lambs, and 84 calves.

Butchers.

Geo. Rowntree bought 630 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Co. as follows: Butchers' steers and heifers, $5 to $6.25; cows, $3 to $5; bulls, $2.65 to $5; canners, $1.75 to $2.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Steers, 950 to 1100 lbs., sold at $6.50 to $6 per cwt.; stockers, 500 to 800 lbs., at $3.40 to $4.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Trade in milkers and springers was about steady at $40 to $65, and a very few brought $70 each.

Veal Calves.

Trade in veal calves was slightly easier, as will be seen by sales quoted. Prices ranged from $4 to $7.50, or an average of $6.35 per cwt. A few choice quality calves brought $8 to $8.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Light ewes, $3.50 to $3.85; heavy ewes, $3 to $3.35; rams, $2.50 to $3; lambs, $4.85 to $5.35.

Hogs.

Receipts were heavy, 3312 being reported on sale, which caused the market to be easy at unchanged quotations of $7.75 per cwt. for hogs fed and watered, and $7.50 f.o.b.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 5.—Cattle—Receipts, 300 head; market, dull and steady; prime steers, $7.30 to $7.50; butcher grades, $6.50 to $6.75.

Socialists Released.

Helsinfors, Finland, Oct. 6.—Sixty-six members of the Armed Russian Socialist Society were released yesterday in the expiration of their sentences for participation in Sveaborg mutiny in 1906.

At the exits from the prison they were met by the leading townsmen, and triumphal processions were formed with bands.

Fell In With Thieves.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—George Bisson, 72 years of age, who told the police here that he came from Saranac, Clinton County N.Y., arrived in the city Tuesday night, coming here to look for his son, George Bisson. He went along Windsor street asking all the people he met if they knew the young man.

After having asked twenty or more persons, he met a couple of men who pretended to know his son, and took him to a house where they relieved him of his money and a gold watch. The police are looking for the thieves and will do all in their power to help the old gentleman find his son.

Hon. Frank Cochrane In Ottawa.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Hon. Frank Cochrane has returned to Ottawa, which practically makes the belief a certainty that he will enter Federal politics in Mr. Borden's Cabinet.

W. H. Hearst, M.P.P., who will in all probability be Mr. Cochrane's successor, is 47 years old. He was born in Arran Township, Bruce County, and educated in Collingwood.

Raid Veterans at Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—The Fenian Raid Veterans of 1866-70 are making arrangements for a meeting in this city on Saturday, at 8 p.m. Capt. Patterson, Ottawa, is coming down, and every veteran in the city is requested to be present in the armory, Craig street, as important matters, the nature of which has not yet been divulged, are to be discussed.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

J. Aumonier, the artist, died in London, Eng. He was a member of the Royal Institute of Painters in water colors.

South African warrants brought the highest price on record yesterday, when two sold at Winnipeg at $1,000 apiece.

George Barbey, the well-known French financier, has just completed Vancouver and Victira investments of $3,000,000.

James A. Roosevelt, a cousin of ex-President Roosevelt of the United States, has been appointed new manager of transportation of the British Columbia Electric Railway.

Arrangements are now under way for a monster convention of Manitoba churchmen, to be held during November, by those interested in the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

Piled up on the rocks near Mispec Cove, N.B., the Government dredge New Brunswick, which was abandoned during a gale Wednesday, was found with her hull a total wreck.

St. George's Church and three large hosiery factories were destroyed by fire at Leicester, Eng., last night. The loss is estimated at $1,250,000. The fire was the most disastrous in the history of Leicester.

Charles Johnston, a Finn, entered the office of the Finnish newspaper at Port Arthur, and in the presence of Editor Hehl, whipped out a revolver, sending the bullet into his stomach. He died in a few minutes.

Succeeds Sir William Whyte.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—It was definitely announced from Canadian Pacific Railway headquarters yesterday morning that Mr. George Bury, general manager of western lines, had been appointed vice-president and general manager of the western lines, in succession to Sir William Whyte, recently retired.

Mr. Bury, who has had 28 years in the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway, started his railway career as a clerk in the purchasing department of that company.

From February, 1904, to March, 1908, Mr. Bury was general superintendent of the central division at Winnipeg, and in March, 1908, was made general manager of the western lines.

Labor Wins West Australia.

Perth, West Australia, Oct. 6.—Hon. Frank Wilson's Ministry has been defeated in the state elections, present returns showing a labor majority of six.

This is another triumph for labor in Australia, the party having last year regained power in the Commonwealth Parliament by a majority over all of eleven.

The Legislative Assembly of Western Australia contains fifty members elected for three years, the Council or Upper House having thirty members, elected for six years.

Premier Wilson assumed that office last year, having previously been Minister of Agriculture.

Train Porter Stole Diamonds.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—Yesterday morning Judge Leet sentenced Willis P. Gamble, a Canadian Pacific Railway porter, to two years in the penitentiary on a charge of stealing a quantity of diamonds from the passengers on the train on which he was employed.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE PETERBORO' COUNTY GAOL

Some Interesting Statistics in Sheriff Hall's Annual Statement —Total Number of Prisoners Received in Year Was 232.

LESS THAN 1910

The statistics of the Peterborough county gaol have been filed by Sheriff Hall and are considered very satisfactory by the official in charge. With the growth and advancement of this city along industrial and commercial lines, and the attendant influx of people from other lands, the good moral aspect of Peterborough has not deteriorated, and the showing on the whole is very good.

The total number of prisoners received at the gaol during the year was two hundred and thirty-two, of which ten were females. This is nine less that there were last year. The year closes on September 30th. During the year twenty-nine were sent to the Central Prison, and one to the Mercer Reformatory. Ten were sent to the Penitentiary. The 'thirty days' and 'sixty days' and the 'six months'' terms were popular. Of the former there were thirty, of the second 14 and of the latter twenty-six.

One hundred and ninety-one were maintained by the county, the balance by the government.

The work of the prisoners consisted of cleaning the buildings, improving the grounds, etc.

BALD HEADS NOT WANTED

Baldness Is Too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age

A bald-headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employers.

Probably 60 p.c. of bald-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statements no one should scoff, doubt our word, or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want every one in Peterborough who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair, or baldness to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly — say until three bottles have been used—and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We are established right here in Peterborough, and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success entirely depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make the above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store.—The Rexall Store. McDermid and Jury.

AN APPEAL FOR FUNDS

PEKIN, OCT. 6.—The Canadian Methodist missionaries at Chentu, the capital of Schuen province, and recently besieged by the revolutionists, have telegraphed that ten thousand lost their lives in fighting and pillaging, including two thousand government troops. They say that many of the destitute are committing suicide and they appeal earnestly for funds from Canada and the United States.

HONOURED BY LADIES' AID

At a meeting of the Ladies' Aid, of St. James' church, held on Thursday afternoon, Mrs. L. Jackson, vice president, was remembered by the members in a very pleasing way. In behalf of the Aid, Mrs. A. Wilson presented her with an amethyst brooch, and Mrs. W. Robinson read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Jackson.—We, the members of St James' Ladies' Aid, have learned, with regret, of your departure from our midst, and feel we could not let you go without in some small way, conveying to you our appreciation of your work, not alone in the Aid, but in the Sunday School, and in all branches of the church, field you may be placed.

Our earnest prayer will be that you will long be spared to help on the good work of the Master in whatever filed you may be placed.

We would ask you to accept this brooch as a token of our esteemand when wearing it may you remember your old friends at St. James'.

Signed in behalf of the Aid, Mrs. A. Wilson, President; Mrs. J. Palmer, Sec.; Mrs. T. Brown, Treas.

Mrs. Jackson was quite taken by surpise and responded suitably, after which refreshments were served and a social half-hour spent.

Mrs. Jackson is leaving to join her husband in Auburn, N.Y.

FREIGHT WRECKED

ITALIAN FORCES WILL WAIT FOR REINFORCEMENTS BEFORE ATTACKING

Large Detachments Have Been Landed at Tripoli With Little Resistance Offered on Part of Turks---Rear-Admiral Has Assumed Charge as Provisional Governor---Italian Cruiser Fired on by Forts in Red Sea, Retaliates by Sinking Turkish Gun-Boat With the Loss of One Hundred Officers and Men.

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TRIPOLI, OCT. 6.—Large detachments of Italian sailors and marines have been landed here for the protection of private property. It is expected that an assault will not be made on the Turkish fortifications in the interior until the arrival of more Italian troops. Rear Admiral Bordelino has assumed charge as provincial governor of Tripoli. There has been no great resistance to the landing of troops.

ROME, OCT. 6.—While cruising for the protection of Italian commerce in the Red sea, where Italy promised to remain strictly on the defensive, the Italian cruiser Aretusa was fired on by the Turkish forts and the Aretusa immediately fired at and sank a Turkish gunboat, with the loss of one hundred officers and men.

BERLIN, OCT. 6.—According to a news agency despatch received here twelve soldiers and citizens were killed and six wounded during the bombardment of Tripoli by the Italians.

TRIPOLI, OCT. 6.—Shortly after the occupation of the city several Arab Chiefs from the interior came in and tendered their submission to the Italian Provincial Governor. The Turks have given an ultimatum that they will resist till the last drop of blood an Italian attack on the inner fortifications.

CABINET RESIGNED AT 3 TO-DAY

Sir Wilfred and His Colleagues Handed Resignations to Governor-General This Afternoon—Mr. Borden Called Upon

PROCEEDINGS SIMPLE

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, OCT. 6.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier placed the resignations of himself and colleagues in the hands of the Governor-General and His Excellency immediately sent for Mr. Borden, Premier-elect, and asked him to form a new Government. The proceedings were very simple. It was 1 o'clock before the Laurier Cabinet had concluded its business. Immediately afterwards the members filed their names and left the building, Sir Wilfrid staying just long enough to say good-bye to his departmental staff, with whom he has worked for fifteen years. After luncheon, Sir Wilfrid drove to the Government House. As soon as an apointment could be made Mr. Borden had been apprised of the situation and left for the Government House immediately the summons came. With just a few words from the King's representative in Canada the old Government stepped out, and the new one stepped in.

GOT A BAD SPRAIN

ZAM-BUK CURED

Don't limp about in pain when you slip on the sidewalk and get a sprain or get a bad twist at your recreation Rub in Zam-Buk. It eases pain.

Mr. Clarence D. Black, Legal Department, Transcontinental Railway, Ottawa, writes: "I have used Zam-Buk, with very satisfactory results, but I did not know its full value until recently, when I fell from a street car and badly sprained my ankle. I immediately applied Zam-Buk, and am pleased to say that it has proved invaluable to me. The sprain was soon cured."

Bear in mind that Zam-Buk is used by all the famous football teams, all the best trainers, and all the leading athletes. Men who are at sport all the time—whose living depends upon their keeping "fit," find Zam-Buk the surest way to fitness. They are the best judges. Mothers! use it when the children get hurt!

In addition to its use for sprains, stiffness, rheumatism and sciatica, Zam-Buk is eminently useful for skin injuries and diseases. Blood-poison, festering sores and ulcers, etc., it quickly cures. Also cures cuts, burns scalds, chapped hands, cold sores, varicose veins, bad leg, eczema, ringworm, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. "THE ROMANCE OF GEOGRAPHY" THE SUBJECT OF FINE LECTURE

The annual convention of the City Teachers' Institute, which commenced this morning in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute promises to be most successful. There was a large attendance this morning, and keen interest was taken in the remarks of the different speakers. A feature of this morning's session was the address by Mr. H. J. T. Coleman, Ph. D., of Toronto University, who delivered a splendid address upon the subject of "Interest and Effort in Education."

Professor Coleman, in his address, contrasted the theories, the attempt to make pupils do what they do not wish to do, and the theory of interest to make the children do what they wish to do and develop the greatest natural tendency. The former theory was based upon pernicious doctrine, which divorced effort from interest. He further divided the question of interest, showing the value of both mediate and immediate leading to effort, which, in turn, promotes interest.

Interesting reports on the summer session at Guelph were contributed by Miss Rainey and Miss Garbutt, their remarks being of much practical benefit.

This afternoon the programme includes "The Fourth Dimension," a study in human behaviour" by Professor Coleman, papers on Public School Geography by Miss D. Morley and Mr. F. E. Kerr and the appointment of the nominating committee and auditors.

The Convention will be brought to a close with a session at noon to-morrow.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION HAS ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

There was a large and enthusiastic attendance at the regular meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association last night and the meeting was one of the most profitable the Association has had. A considerable amount of routine business was transacted. The president had received from the Department at Guelph a number of bulletins giving valuable information in regard to poultry, the erection of proper houses, etc., and these were distributed to the members, much to the delight of those present. The Association is in a most flourishing condition at the present time, with new members continually coming in. Preparations are already being made for the annual exhibition in January and at last night's meeting plans were made for an energetic ticket-selling campaign. Inquiries and entries are already coming in from outside points and a record breaking poultry show may be looked forward to. The next regular meeting will be Wyandottes and Brahmas night, the birds being scored on points, and as there is a keen competition among the members, the owners of the prize-winning birds will have every reason to feel proud.

STRONG ADDRESSES AT ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE

TORONTO, OCT. 6.— The gloomy and depressing weather of this forenoon had no apparent effect upon the Ecumenical Conference, for the session was unusually interesting and enthusiastic. The address of Bishop Burt stirred the delegates as no other speech has as yet done, while Rev. Thomas Hocard of France, spoke eloquently and effectively. Both made strong arraignment of the Roman Catholic church in Italy and France, and their statements were supported by other residents of these countries. Dr. Butler, of Mexico, also declared himself in strom terms. So great was the desire for discussion at the close of addresses, that not one half of those desiring to speak obtained the President's eye. Further debates on church union this morning gave evidence that the overseas and United States Methodists are by no means unanimously in accordance with the Canadian Methodists on this principle

City Athletic Championships At Riverside Park To-morrow

The city athletic championship, which is to be held at Riverside Park Saturday after noon, promise some good contests, with some of the best athletes in the city entered.

The trophies, emblematic of the city championship in the four different classes are as follows: "Howden Cup" and medal for the senior contest; "Eastwood Cup" and medal for boys who have not yet reached their eighteenth birthday. The "Huyche Cup" and medal for boys under sixteen years of age and the "Peck Trophy" for boys who have not yet reached their fourteenth birthday.

The events will include 100 yards dash, running high and broad jumps, hurdle race, shot put and half mile walk for seniors.

Every contestant will receive points for each event he enters, and the contestant with the greatest number of points will be declared the winner in the different classes, and will receive a handsome silver medal as well as holding the cup till the next annual competition.

These events are open to every man and boy in the city, and are being conducted under the auspices of the Physical Department of the Y. M. C. A. who have conducted these events ever since the inauguration of this all round contest.

Those intending to enter are requested to telephone or hand in their name at the "Y."

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

NEW RAILWAY

A portion of the new Canadian Northern Railway, from Toronto to Trenton, will be opened on Monday next. Two passenger trains will be run each way. From Toronto to Port Hope the new line runs from one to 10 miles north of the Grand Trunk main line, but from Port Hope east almost parallel with the Grand Trunk. Trains going west leave Port Hope at 10.30 a.m. and 7 p.m. From Toronto they leave at 9.30 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. The time to Port Hope is 2 1-2 hours.

CITY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE CONVENTION IN SESSION

Splendid Address by Prof. Coleman of Toronto University Featured Opening Meeting This Morning.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME

Great was the enthusiasm evinced at the opening session of the convention of the county and city school teachers held at the Collegiate Institute last evening, when Prof. Morrison, of Queen's University, gave an interesting lecture on the Romance of Geography. Prof. Morrison carried the minds of his audience back to the time when the first maps of the world were formed, explaining how the lives of many heroes were sacrificed in order to develop those maps.

The evening was enlivened by the singing of Miss Chalmers, the popular soloist of St. Paul's church, while Mr. William Wilson rendered some truly magnificent violin selections. He, like many of our musicians, hails from the old country. He plays with remarkable technique and tastefulness of expression.

During his preliminary remarks the professor said:

I came here to speak to the teachers particularly. Our colleges and schools are to benefit Canada. We in Canada must do our best to keep the intellectual flag flying. Geography may be split up into three headings. The beginning—darkness, Mediaeval Myths and Discoveries. After the Romans lost their power over Europe, then ensued a period of intellectual darkness. On the invasion of the Barbarians the interesting subject of geography began to develop.

When Christopher Columbus crossed the ocean it was with the intention of discovering the land which had been explored some time previously by Marco Paslo, whose story of gold and crystal had been circulated. It is a peculiar fact that we, the greatest empire, was the last to begin, but England generally obtains the object she has in view. Robert Moore was the man who brought the Northwest message. He it was that caused men to cross the Atlantic. At first a few vessels pushed out to the Atlantic. Some sank, some returned, but at last one reached Newfoundland. Then Sir Francis Drake sailed with his great fleet at the end of the sixteenth century.

The sufferings of all those famous discoverics served as a training for England. Remember the words of Humphrey Gilbert, "I scorn to fear or be afraid."

The lecturer then proceeded to exhibit some maps by means of stereopticon views, delivering at the same time interesting and useful information. He pointed out that in 100 A.D. Ptolemy, the great Roman geographer detailed the map of Scotland even to a small river. He also averred that Arabs were at one time superior to the white race.

At the close of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was unanimously accorded him.

THE EXAMINER'S NEW STORY

Do not fail to read "The Gun Runner" the Examiner's new serial story, which opens to-morrow, and which should prove by long odds the most interesting and fascinating story the Examiner has yet given its readers. Arthur Stringer is responsible for this yarn, and it is told in his best vein, with the interest sustained throughout. It is easy to prophesy that The Gun Runner will be as popular as the other serials that have been so well received in the past.

GIRL HAD NOSE BROKEN ON TRAIN

Member of Troupe Billed for the Millbrook Exhibition Was Victim of an Accident at Belleville This Morning

HAD BAD FALL

Early this morning a sad accident befell one of the young ladies of the theatrical troupe performing to-day at Millbrook.

On the yard engine backing coaches on to the Campbellford train in the Belleville yard, the jar caused the unfortunate young lady to lose her equilibrium, and in falling she sustained a broken nose.

She was taken on to Millbrook via Peterborough.

Makes Hair Grow

McDermid & Jury has an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by McDermid & Jury under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle. Also sold at Payne's Drug Store.

HICKEY ON LINE-UP OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Peterborough will be well represented in to-morrow's rugby. Ross Craig is playing on the wing line of the Tigers against Argonauts, Frank Heffernan is on the half line of Ottawa College against McGill. Pete Campbell is playing quarter-back for Varsity against Queen's, and Frank Hickey is at inside wing for St. Michael's College against T.A.A.C. in the senior O.R.F.U. Dutch Gonter, who spent the summer here, and who will be remembered by the fall fans, is captain and centre half of the St. Michael's team.

JUST TRY A TEN CENT BOX OF CASCARETS

Insures you for months against a Sick Stomach, Lazy Liver, Constipation or a Bad Stomach.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong to every household. Children just love to take them.

AN APPEAL FOR FUNDS

PEKIN, OCT. 6.—The Canadian Methodist missionaries at Chentu, the capital of Schuen province, and recently besieged by the revolutionists, have telegraphed that ten thousand lost their lives in fighting and pillaging, including two thousand government troops. They say that many of the destitute are committing suicide and they appeal earnestly for funds from Canada and the United States.

TROUBLE IN MOROCCO ONCE MORE

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, OCT. 6.—More trouble in Morocco threatens as the result of Frenchment in Agadir raising the tri-colour of France over the fortifications of Agadir, Morocco, they having heard that France had proclaimed Morocco as its protectorate.

HONOURED BY LADIES' AID

At a meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. James' church, held on Thursday afternoon, Mrs. L. Jackson, vice president, was remembered by the members in a very pleasing way. In behalf of the Aid, Mrs. A. Wilson presented her with an amethyst brooch, and Mrs. W. Robinson read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Jackson.—We, the members of St James' Ladies' Aid, have learned, with regret, of your departure from our midst, and feel we could not let you go without in some small way, conveying to you our appreciation of your work, not alone in the Aid, but in the Sunday School, and in all branches of the church, field you may be placed.

Our earnest prayer will be that you will long be spared to help on the good work of the Master in whatever filed you may be placed.

We would ask you to accept this brooch as a token of our esteemand when wearing it may you remember your old friends at St. James'.

Signed in behalf of the Aid, Mrs. A. Wilson, President; Mrs. J. Palmer, Sec.; Mrs. T. Brown, Treas.

Mrs. Jackson was quite taken by surpise and responded suitably, after which refreshments were served and a social half-hour spent.

Mrs. Jackson is leaving to join her husband in Auburn, N.Y.

FREIGHT WRECKED

BRAMPTON, ONT., OCT. 6. — A Grand Trunk freight from Western Ontario was wrecked early this morning. The engine was derailed and a half dozen cars loaded with lime and cement piled in a heap and burned, delaying the traffic for some time. Nobody was seriously hurt.

ITALIAN FORCES WILL WAIT FOR REINFORCEMENTS BEFORE ATTACKING

Large Detachments Have Been Landed at Tripoli With Little Resistance Offered on Part of Turks---Rear-Admiral Has Assumed Charge as Provisional Governor---Italian Cruiser Fired on by Forts in Red Sea, Retaliates by Sinking Turkish Gun-Boat With the Loss of One Hundred Officers and Men.

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TRIPOLI, OCT. 6.—Large detachments of Italian sailors and marines have been landed here for the protection of private property. It is expected that an assault will not be made on the Turkish fortifications in the interior until the arrival of more Italian troops. Rear Admiral Bordelino has assumed charge as provincial governor of Tripoli. There has been no great resistance to the landing of troops.

ROME, OCT. 6.—While cruising for the protection of Italian commerce in the Red sea, where Italy promised to remain strictly on the defensive, the Italian cruiser Aretusa was fired on by the Turkish forts and the Aretusa immediately fired at and sank a Turkish gunboat, with the loss of one hundred officers and men.

BERLIN, OCT. 6.—According to a news agency despatch received here twelve soldiers and citizens were killed and six wounded during the bombardment of Tripoli by the Italians.

TRIPOLI, OCT. 6.—Shortly after the occupation of the city several Arab Chiefs from the interior came in and tendered their submission to the Italian Provincial Governor. The Turks have given an ultimatum that they will resist till the last drop of blood an Italian attack on the inner fortifications.

CABINET RESIGNED AT 3 TO-DAY

Sir Wilfred and His Colleagues Handed Resignations to Governor-General This Afternoon—Mr. Borden Called Upon

PROCEEDINGS SIMPLE

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, OCT. 6.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier placed the resignations of himself and colleagues in the hands of the Governor-General and His Excellency immediately sent for Mr. Borden, Premier-elect, and asked him to form a new Government. The proceedings were very simple. It was 1 o'clock before the Laurier Cabinet had concluded its business. Immediately afterwards the members filed their names and left the building, Sir Wilfrid staying just long enough to say good-bye to his departmental staff, with whom he has worked for fifteen years. After luncheon, Sir Wilfrid drove to the Government House. As soon as an apointment could be made Mr. Borden had been apprised of the situation and left for the Government House immediately the summons came. With just a few words from the King's representative in Canada the old Government stepped out, and the new one stepped in.

GOT A BAD SPRAIN

ZAM-BUK CURED

Don't limp about in pain when you slip on the sidewalk and get a sprain or get a bad twist at your recreation Rub in Zam-Buk. It eases pain.

Mr. Clarence D. Black, Legal Department, Transcontinental Railway, Ottawa, writes: "I have used Zam-Buk, with very satisfactory results, but I did not know its full value until recently, when I fell from a street car and badly sprained my ankle. I immediately applied Zam-Buk, and am pleased to say that it has proved invaluable to me. The sprain was soon cured."

Bear in mind that Zam-Buk is used by all the famous football teams, all the best trainers, and all the leading athletes. Men who are at sport all the time—whose living depends upon their keeping "fit," find Zam-Buk the surest way to fitness. They are the best judges. Mothers! use it when the children get hurt!

In addition to its use for sprains, stiffness, rheumatism and sciatica, Zam-Buk is eminently useful for skin injuries and diseases. Blood-poison, festering sores and ulcers, etc., it quickly cures. Also cures cuts, burns scalds, chapped hands, cold sores, varicose veins, bad leg, eczema, ringworm, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Refuse harmful substitutes.

Have you tried Zam-Buk Soap? 25c. tablet.

Dams Have Broken Away

LACROSSE, WIS., OCT. 6.— Two dams, containing many million tons of water have given away near here and relief parties have been sent up in automobiles, for it is feared there has been loss of life. The dams were of concrete and were supposed to be absolutely safe.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone rheumatic pains, and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and aches and make you well again.

"THE ROMANCE OF GEOGRAPHY" THE SUBJECT OF FINE LECTURE

The annual convention of the City Teachers' Institute, which commenced this morning in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute promises to be most successful. There was a large attendance this morning, and keen interest was taken in the remarks of the different speakers. A feature of this morning's session was the address by Mr. H. J. T. Coleman, Ph. D., of Toronto University, who delivered a splendid address upon the subject of "Interest and Effort in Education."

Professor Coleman, in his address, contrasted the theories, the attempt to make pupils do what they do not wish to do, and the theory of interest to make the children do what they wish to do and develop the greatest natural tendency. The former theory was based upon pernicious doctrine, which divorced effort from interest. He further divided the question of interest, showing the value of both mediate and immediate leading to effort, which, in turn, promotes interest.

Interesting reports on the summer session at Guelph were contributed by Miss Rainey and Miss Garbutt, their remarks being of much practical benefit.

This afternoon the programme includes "The Fourth Dimension," a study in human behaviour" by Professor Coleman; papers on Public School Georgraphy by Miss D. Morley and Mr. F. E. Kerr and the appointment of the nominating committee and auditors.

The Convention will be brought to a close with a session at noon to-morrow.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION HAS ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

There was a large and enthusiastic attendance at the regular meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association last night and the meeting was one of the most profitable the Association has had. A considerable amount of routine business was transacted. The president had received from the Department at Guelph a number of bulletins giving valuable information in regard to poultry, the erection of proper houses, etc., and these were distributed to the members, much to the delight of those present. The Association is in a most flourishing condition at the present time, with new members continually coming in. Preparations are already being made for the annual exhibition in January and at last night's meeting plans were made for an energetic ticket-selling campaign. Inquiries and entries are already coming in from outside points and a record breaking poultry show may be looked forward to. The next regular meeting will be Wyandottes and Brahmas night, the birds being scored on points, and as there is a keen competition among the members, the owners of the prize-winning birds will have every reason to feel proud.

STRONG ADDRESSES AT ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE

TORONTO, OCT. 6.— The glooiny and depressing weather of this forenoon had no apparent effect upon the Ecumenical Conference, for the session was unusually interesting and enthusiastic. The address of Bishop Burt stirred the delegates as no other speech has as yet done, while Rev. Thomas Hocard of France, spoke eloquently and effectively. Both made strong arraignment of the Roman Catholic church in Italy and France, and their statements were supported by other residents of these countries. Dr. Butler, of Mexico, also declared himself in strong terms. So great was the desire for discussion at the close of addresses, that not one half of those desiring to speak obtained the President's eye. Further debates on church union this morning gave evidence that the oversea and United States Methodists are by no means unanimously in accordance with the Canadian Methodists on this principle

City Athletic Championships At Riverside Park To-morrow

The city athletic championship, which is to be held at Riverside Park Saturday after noon, promise some good contests, with some of the best athletes in the city entered.

The trophies, emblematic of the city championship in the four different classes are as follows: "Howden Cup" and medal for the senior contest; "Eastwood Cup" and medal for boys who have not yet reached their eighteenth birthday. The "Huycke Cup" and medal for boys under sixteen years of age, and the "Peck Trophy" for boys who have not yet reached their fourteenth birthday.

The events will include 100 yards dash, running high and broad jumps, hurdle race, shot put and half mile walk for seniors.

Every contestant will receive points for each event he enters, and the contestant with the greatest number of points will be declared the winner in the different classes, and will receive a handsome silver medal as well as holding the cup till the next annual competition.

These events are open to every man and boy in the city, and are being conducted under the auspices of the Physical Department of the Y. M. C. A. who have conducted these events ever since the inauguration of this all round contest.

Those intending to enter are requested to telephone or hand in their name at the "Y."

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

NEW RAILWAY

A portion of the new Canadian Northern Railway, from Toronto to Trenton, will be opened on Monday next. Two passenger trains will be run each way. From Toronto to Port Hope the new line runs from one to 10 miles north of the Grand Trunk main line, but from Port Hope east almost parallel with the Grand Trunk. Trains going west leave Port Hope at 10.30 a.m. and 7 p.m. From Toronto they leave at 9.30 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. The time to Port Hope is 2 1-2 hours.

CITY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE CONVENTION IN SESSION

Splendid Address by Prof. Coleman of Toronto University Featured Opening Meeting This Morning.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME

Great was the enthusiasm evinced at the opening session of the convention of the county and city school teachers held at the Collegiate Institute last evening, when Prof. Morrison, of Queen's University, gave an interesting lecture on the Romance of Geography. Prof. Morrison carried the minds of his audience back to the time when the first maps of the world were formed, explaining how the lives of many heroes were sacrificed in order to develop those maps.

The evening was enlivened by the singing of Miss Chalmers, the popular soloist of St. Paul's church, while Mr. William Wilson rendered some truly magnificent violin selections. He, like many of our musicians, hails from the old country. He plays with remarkable technique and tastefulness of expression.

During his preliminary remarks the professor said:

I came here to speak to the teachers particularly. Our colleges and schools are to benefit Canada. We in Canada must do our best to keep the intellectual flag flying. Geography may be split up into three headings. The beginning—darkness, Mediaeval Myths and Discoveries. After the Romans lost their power over Europe, then ensued a period of intellectual darkness. On the invasion of the Barbarians the interesting subject of geography began to develop.

When Christopher Columbus crossed the ocean it was with the intention of discovering the land which had been explored some time previously by Marco Paulo, whose story of gold and crystal had been circulated. It is a peculiar fact that we, the greatest empire, was the last to begin, but England generally obtains the object she has in view. Robert Moore was the man who brought the Northwest message. He it was that caused men to cross the Atlantic. At first a few vessels pushed out to the Atlantic. Some sank, some returned, but at last one reached Newfoundland. Then Sir Francis Drake sailed with his great fleet at the end of the sixteenth century.

The sufferings of all those famous discoveries served as a training for England. Remember the words of Humphrey Gilbert, "I scorn to fear or be afraid."

The lecturer then proceeded to exhibit some maps by means of stereopticon views, delivering at the same time interesting and useful information. Hhe pointed out that in 100 A.D. Ptolemy, the great Roman geographer detailed the map of Scotland even to a small river. He also averred that Arabs were at one time superior to the whtie race.

At the close of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was unanimously accorded him.

THE EXAMINER'S NEW STORY

Do not fail to read "The Gun Runner" the Examiner's new serial story, which opens to-morrow, and which should prove by long odds the most interesting and fascinating story the Examiner has yet given its readers. Arthur Stringer is responsible for this yarn, and it is told in his best vein, with the interest sustained throughout. It is easy to prophesy that The Gun Runner will be as popular as the other serials that have been so well received in the past.

GIRL HAD NOSE BROKEN ON TRAIN

Member of Troupe Billed for the Millbrook Exhibition Was Victim of an Accident at Belleville This Morning

HAD BAD FALL

Early this morning a sad accident befell one of the young ladies of the theatrical troupe performing to-day at Millbrook.

On the yard engine backing coaches on to the Campbellford train in the Belleville yard, the jar caused the unfortunate young lady to lose her equilibrium, and in falling she sustained a broken nose.

She was taken on to Millbrook via Peterborough.

Makes Hair Grow

McDermid & Jury has an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by McDermid & Jury under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle. Also sold at Payne's Drug Store.

HICKEY ON LINE-UP OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Peterborough will be well represented in to-morrow's rugby. Ross Craig is playing on the wing line of the Tigers against Argonauts, Frank Heffernan is on the half line of Ottawa College against McGill. Pete Campbell is playing quarter-back for Varsity against Queen's, and Frank Hickey is at inside wing for St. Michael's College against T.A.A.C. in the senior O.R.F.U. Dutch Gonter, who spent the summer here, and who will be remembered by the fall fans, is captain and centre half of the St. Michael's team.

Fishing Tug Goes Down

Special to The Examiner:

SAULT STE. MARIE, OCT. 6.—It is stated this morning, but there is no confirmation, that a fishing tug on the south shore went down off White Fish Point with six men during Wednesday's gale.

WAS A WITNESS

MONTREAL, OCT. 6.—Charles R. Racine, formerly David Russell's bookkeeper, and accused by him of being in the Pinkerton's conspiracy against him, was a witness to-day, telling of Russell's alleged e xtortic actions, and threats made by Russell to put Racine in penitentiary for engaging in plots.

BETTING FAVOURS GIANTS

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., OCT. 6.— The early betting to-day is six to five in favour of the New York Nationals in the first game with the Philadelphia Americans on the fourteenth instant in the world's series.

JUST TRY A TEN CENT BOX OF CASCARETS

Insures you for months against a Sick Stomach, Lazy Liver, Constipation or a Bad Stomach.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong to every household. Children just love to take them.

SIR WILFRID RETIRES.

At three o'clock to-day, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, laid down, at once, the keys, and the cares of office, as Premier of Canada, by placing his resignation, and that of his cabinet, in the hands of the Governor-General. Sir Wilfrid goes out of office badly defeated, but with colours flying and with all the honours of war. He retires from office with, as his only valedictory, this terse, much-meaning epitome, of fifteen years' faithful and fruitful service—"Our record speaks for itself." He hands over the reins of government with nothing in its record to apologize for or condone. He has left Canada better and greater than he found it on entering upon the administration of its interests. He has honoured the title of premier of Canada more than that title has honoured him.

AS TO MEAT INSPECTION.

Yesterday, reference was made in these columns to the desirability of inspection of meats for immediate consumption, in order to guard against the danger of allowing the people to purchase meats from animals afflicted with disease. This contention is further emphasized by a statement of Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer of Toronto, who asserts that many cattle sold in Toronto—and if in Toronto, elsewhere—for slaughter, are affected with actinomycosis. This is a formidable name, and should excite the alarm which the disease itself justifies. It is another, the scientific, name for "lump jaw," in cattle. "Lump-jaw" is a disease of a cancerous and constitutional nature, which becomes localized in the neighbourhood of the jaw of the affected animal, hence its name. It may be claimed that the cancerous germs are rendered inert by cooking, but in the case of an underdone steak, there still might be danger. But at any rate nobody would relish eating boiled or roasted cancer. The meat of an animal troubled with "lump-jaw" is always rejected as unfit food by a government inspection, in the rare cases where beef for general consumption is inspected. We pay enough for our meats to have them perfectly healthy and sound. We can only secure this by effective inspection. Our new Government, which represents a party so extremely solicitous for the welfare of the people that they wouldn't even allow them to sell a steer to the United States free of duty, or buy one there on the same terms, should in consistency, provide for the protection of the consumer from diseased meats.

THE INVASION OF THE WEST.

While, during the recent election campaign, we heard a good deal of nonsense about the danger of the absorption of Canada by the neighbouring republic, a process was going on, having in effect the annexation of a generous share of the United States to Canada; and that too of the best and most enterprising elements of the population. Mr. V. Bruce Walker, Dominion Commissioner of Immigration at Winnipeg, has made a report on the recent inpour of settlers from the United States into Canada. Between April and August of 1910 the total number of United States immigrants entering the west was 65,200. This year in the corresponding period, the influx was even larger, namely, 66,974. Mr. Walker places the value of the effects, in cash goods and stock, brought in by the United States settlers, between the months of April and August last year, at the large figure of 66 million dollars. This year during the similar period, the total estimated wealth brought in by our new citizens amounted to 67 million, seven hundred dollars, an average of about $1,000 for each new comer. The practical tribute thus paid to the desirability of the Canadian west, as a place for profitable farming operations, is giving alarm to the United States' authorities. They cannot understand why people will persist in leaving what is considered the fertile fields of the United States west for the Canadian plains. They have found out; they sent several journalistic parties into our west to discover the cause of the alarming exodus. These have invariably gone back to their journals and magazines deeply impressed with the tremendous possibilities of Western Canada, and feeling the futility of trying in the face of the attractions it presents, to stem the outflowing tide. Though there is still much discussion of plans to check the flow of United States farmers into Canada, such plans will naturally fail, while the conditions exist. They cannot deprive Canada of the superiority of soil, climate and political institutions and social and moral conditions, and so long as these exist so long will they constitute an attraction that will not be resisted.

THE SPIRIT OF GROWTH.

Methodism, as a medium of religious influence, would never have accomplished what it has done if it had been content with the achievement of the hour; if it had not been uncompromisingly militant and aggressive. It has made such rapid growth in numbers and influence that it might, one would think, rest a little on its laurels. But that it will not be allowed to do; and Rev. Dr. Carrol of New York, is inclined to keep it up to the mark. In aiming to do this, in an address at the great ecumenical conference of Methodism, in Toronto, he took occasion to show that there existed an undesirable decline in the rate of growth of the Methodist church and suggested the causes. Rev. Dr. Carrol said, in part

"Two centuries ago there were no Methodists in any country in the world; to-day there is no country in the world in which there are no Methodists. Changes in policy and discipline are of little moment, comparatively, but the preaching of the Gospel in its purity, power, and fulness, is of supreme importance. Every sermon should be a witnessing sermon. Intellectual statements of the truth, though they be clear as polar ice, unless warmed by heart experience, do not wake the spirit from the dead.

"Now, if this is the spirit of Methodism, its very genius, it is the explanation of its power of growth, and it becomes important to ascertain whether that growth is still as remarkable as of old, or whether there is a decline in the rate of increase.

"In the first decade of this series of Ecumenical conferences, the increase in members (including all branches of the Western section), as reported in 1891, was 1,261,707; in the next ten years ending in 1901 it was 1,411,689, and in the last ten years, now under review, it was 947,040. Here is an absolute decline in decennial growth of 437,562, in the last decade. It is so large that it startles us, and the decline in percentages is even more marked. The percentages of increase in the first decade was nearly 33⅓; in the second decade it was 28; but in the last decade only 15. We must expect the rate of growth to vary, but the falling off in the last decade is too heavy ot be dismissed as an ordinary or insignificant variation.

"Admitting, as we must, that no more severe test could be applied than comparison of Methodist growth with Methodist growth, still, the fact that 10,000 more preachers, 14,000 more pulpits, and 2,500,000 more members produced a smaller increase by 400,000 in the last ten years than in the decade ending in 1891 is of momentous concern. It should be noted that we are not dealing with an absolute decline, but with declines in the rate of increase. We are not dwindling in numbers, but we are not adding to them as rapidly as we used to do, and it is that which should challenge our consideration, when we think that not half of the world is yet won to Christ, and everywhere there are multitudes of the unconverted.

"If I might venture to criticise the prevailing spirit of Methodism in the Western Section it would be to say that it is still Christianity in earnest, but with less emphasis on the 'earnest'. It seems to have lost in simplicity and directness as well as enthusiasm. Our pulpit is not less desirous of reaching the unconverted in heathen lands, but it seems to be less burdened with anxiety for the unconverted in Christian lands. The revival as it was known to our fathers is no longer known to us. There are still Moodys, but no Moody successes: there are still evangelists and evangelistic campaigns, but no mighty ingatherings. And it is significant that no regrets are uttered.

"What about the unconverted adult? He comes but seldom to church, and declares he is no worse than the average church member. He sees them taking Sunday for recreation and neglecting the prayer-meeting and means of grace.

"This not the voice of pessimism. It is not a railing accusation nor a lugubrious complaint; it is simply a statement of fact widely prevalent, and well known. There can be no growth where there is no life, and there can be no life where there is no growth. All of our cultivating machinery, however perfect, will be useless, and all our efforts vain, if there is no life.

"A league of churchgoers of all ages and all classes has yet to be formed. Something needs to be done to revive this old-fashioned habit, either through an organized movement, or through the deeper work of grace, so that interest and inclination will unite to run with duty.

"As we face the uncertain future, we are conscious of the great problems. Great opportunities indicate great needs. Old methods, old policies, which were honoured in the past seem no longer workable.

Does not the last sentence quoted above seem to contain the root of the causes of the decline in the ration of growth? As Doctor Carroll points out that, "Old methods and old policies may be no longer workable," and if this is true in this alone lies the cause of the decline. In all divisions and departments of the Christian church there has been a departure from the simple, direct, fiery spirit of early Christianity, and Methodism is not alone in departing, as Dr. Carroll suggests it has done, from the effective methods. Taking his view, not only Methodism but all denominations would benifit by a return to the simple life. All churches show a tendency to obliteration of the line that separates the church from the world. Oil and water will no more mix than spirituality and worldliness. The early Christian church, as well as the Methodist church, in its earlier days, was heated by fire, and the fire will only be rekindled in both cases by making the "old methods and old policies workable," and that can only be done by working them. Bring back the spirit to the churches, Methodist, and others, and the growth will return.

FARMING IMPROVEMENTS.

(Montreal Witness.)

It is said that Mr. Andrew Broder, a practical farmer, and a very capable man, is on the slate for Minister of Agriculture. Mr. Fisher made that portfolio much more important and practical than any of his predecessors had done and did an unspeakable amount for the bettering of production and for crop and produce transportation. But he only began a work that is capable of enormous development. It has been shown by actual demonstration that a good herd of six cows can produce more and better milk than an ordinary herd of twenty. It has been shown that a farm can, by knowledge and economy, be made to produce double what it produced under ordinary cultivation. Wherever there is such a farm or such a herd, it creates new and improved conditions for many miles around. A farming enthusiast wants the government to plant in every county an inspector who will take an ordinary farm in each township under his tutelage, supplying seed and one or two necessaries at the government expense, on the condition that the farmer will farm in strict accordance with the expert's directions. Our friend, himself, a successful farmer, is certain that such a series of capably farmed models would in five years show such results as would in five years more revolutionize the farming of the country and enormously increase its output. Here is certainly a way of getting a great deal more money for the farmer with great benefit to the consumer.

The Gathering Momentum Of Men's Missionary Movement

A Great Convention in Hamilton Nov. 8th, 9th and 10th

For a month past the Hamilton Laymen's Missionary Committee has been in co-operation with the Laymen's Missionary Association of Canada, laying plans for a great convention of men to be held in this city the second week in November — the 8th, 9th and 10th.

Eleven of these conventions are being held throughout the Dominion. Hamilton's district comprises Norfolk, Brant, Waterloo, Wellington, Grey, Dufferin, Peel, Halton, Wentworth, Haldimand, Welland, Lincoln, York, Simcoe, Ontario, Durham, Victoria, Peterborough, Northumberland, Haliburton, Muskoka District, Parry Sound District, and Algoma district. Already letters and cards, asking for lists of possible delegates have been sent out to some four hundred Anglican, four hundred Methodist, two hundred Baptist and twenty-five Congregational clergymen.

George C. Coppley is chairman of the Hamilton Committee that is responsible for the success of this gigantic undertaking. It is not settled as yet where the convention will be held in this city, but it brings home to the people the necessity of a great convention building, as it is expected five thousand people will want to hear Sir Andrew Fraser and some of the other prominent speakers, whose names will be mentioned later.

Sir Andrew Fraser's father, Rev. A. J. Fraser, D.D., was an eminent minister of the Scottish Presbyterian Church, while his mother was the daughter of another clergyman of the same denomination — Rev. J. Shaw. Such being his parentage, it is easy enough to understand his taking an active and intelligent interest in church work. He was educated at the Edinburgh Academy and Edinburgh University obtaining at the latter the degree of M. A., in course, and that of L. L. D. honorarily. In his 23rd year, in 1871, he entered the Indian service, and remained actively engaged therein until 1908, when he returned to Scotland, taking up his residence at Auchenleish, in Perthshire.

His activities in the Indian service covered a wide sphere. He was a member of the historical Hemp Drugs Commission, which investigated the grave evils resulting from the general use of vile drugs, and whose report resulted in the enactment of drastic remedial laws of the greatest importance. For two years he was land revenue officer, an appointment which brought him directly in touch with all the local governing bodies of the country, and also with those holding Government concessions. The Government revenues increased materially during his administration, and incidentally many injustices and petty hardships imposed on poorer classes of natives disappeared.

In recognition of these services he was created C. S. I. For some time he held the important office of president of the police commission, using his influence to keep down the illicit sale and use of opium and other harmful drugs, and making a determined effort to put a stop to child murder and kindred heathenish practices, which, in a few remote places, had contrived to survive, in spite of the law. From 1903 till 1908 he had the honour of holding one of the most dignified and influential appointments under the Government of India, that of Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and the year he received his commission to this office, he was created K. C. S. I.

Sir Andrew Fraser is the man that a fanatic in India tried to assassinate. One of the great Indian princes threw himself between the assassin's pistol and Sir Andrew. Fortunately the gun missed fire twice, and before he could pull the trigger the third time, one of the workers in connection with the Y. M. C. A. in India grabbed the fanatic and was able to wrest the pistol from his grasp.

Sir Andrew has a son who was a missionary in South Africa and took the sleeping sickness, and was ordered to discontinue his work, but would not give it up, so was sent to Ceylon, where he is actively engaged at the present time.

Could Do What Morriscy's Did, Says Blacksmith

BELLE COTE, C.B., DEC. 10, 1910 —"I was laid up for several days with a severe pain in the bone of my right arm, and was unable to perform my work. I procured a bottle of Father Morrisey's Liniment and after 5 applications was able to return to work and shoe 12 horses in one day. I cheerfully recommend it to all who suffer from sore muscles, stiff joints, backache, muscular rheumatism, etc., etc., because I know you will get relief and am sure you can find no other Liniment as good as Father Morrisey's."

Kenneth T. Phillips.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

Price, 25c. per bottle at your dealers, or Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Limited, Montreal.

FOUR RECORDS SHATTERED AT ANNUAL GAMES OF THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

Splendid Programme of Sports Held Yesterday Afternoon at Riverside Park---Clarence Fusee and Arthur Lipsett Are the Champions for the Year, Both Showing Sterling Ability---Girls Turned Out Splendidly for Their Contests.

MEET WAS IN EVERY WAY A GRAND SUCCESS

The breaking of four records and the equalling of another, featured the annual field day of sports under the auspices of the Collegiate Institute Athletic Society at Riverside Park yesterday, which returned as senior champion, Clarence Fusee, and as junior title holder, Arthur Lipsett. All things considered, yesterday's meet may be termed one of the most successful held under the auspices of the society. The competition was keen, the entries were numerous and the performance given by the contestants lived up to the best standards of the past as is shown by the shattering of so many records. Altogether this year seven records went by the boards, three having been beaten in the jumps held earlier in the week—conclusive evidence that the Collegiate students are holding their own in athletics.

It was proverbial Collegiate weather yesterday—bright and sun-shiny, with just enough chill in the air to quicken the blood of the contestants. In spite of the rain of the previous night the track and sward were in splendid shape, and the conditions could not have been improved upon. There was a splendid attendance of the pupils, staff and friends of the school, and they were given a splendid afternoon's sport with a long list of well-contested events run off in capable fashion, thanks to the good work of the officials.

A regrettable feature was the injury to Harold Hill, last year's senior champion, who strained the muscles of his hip in winning the hundred-yard dash, and was rendered hors de combat, after attempting to run the senior hurdles. Hill succeeded in clipping a fifth of a second off the 100-yards Collegiate record, in spite of the fact that the injury caused him to slow up a few yards from the tape. He was in grand shape prior to the accident, and the crowd would have seen some fine battles in the other sprints had he been able to continue. As it was Clarence Fusee had things all his own way in the track events and carried off the Senior Cup by a wide margin. Hill's retirement made him a gift of the 220 yards, and he followed this up by repeating his performance of last year and winning the quarter, half-mile and mile, in a row, showing a grand turn of speed. The lanky cup-winner is a most promising runner, with a long, easy stride, that carried him over the ground seemingly without effort, and he runs with judgment as well, timing his spurts cleverly. During the afternoon he was responsible for breaking two records, setting a new mark for the quarter and half-mile events, and made a gallant attempt to lower the mile mark, failing, partially because he was tired as a result of a strenuous afternoon, and partially because he had no opposition to extend him to his limit. Fusee had the road race and hurdles to his credit, as well, and with Hill out, won the senior trophy by a mile.

The Junior contests brought to light a remarkable youngster, in Arthur Lipsett, a diminutive junior, who showed really surprising ability. The little fellow had to fight harder for his title than had the senior winner, but he accomplished the task and won by a comfortable margin, his showing in the sprints giving him the Cup. The youngster won the 100 and 200 yards easily, and was a factor in every race in which he started. A. Huycke and Clare Stewart were his chief rivals for the title, both doing good work during the afternoon, the latter setting a new record for the junior half-mile.

Hill won the senior 100 yard dash handily from a field of five. He had the speed of his field and pulled away from the others at the half, and won by yards in 11 seconds. The victory was costly, however, as he injured his hip muscles during the race. Rollie Howden was second.

The 12 yards' hurdles was easy for Fusee. He captured his heat after a good battle with Roy Smith, while Howden won the other heat from Hill. In the finals the fight was between Fusee, Howden and Smith. Hill having been forced to drop out and Fusee won handily. Howden was a factor until a fall at the second last hurdle put him out of the race.

Fusee won the 220 yards, 440, half-mile and mile. In the first two events Roy Smith furnished the chief opposition, giving Fusee a battle in the early stages, but the new champion had always something left in reserve and his stretch-speed enabled him to win easily. In the half-mile and mile there was nothing to it but Fusee, who was in a class by himself at these distances. The only other starter in the mile was Brown, who was beaten by a little over a fifth of a mile.

Junior Events.

The feature of the junior events was the showing made by Arthur Lipsett. The little fellow won his heat and the final in the 100 yards, in clever fashion. Stewart gave him a good argument for three-quarters of the distance in the preliminary heat, but Lipsett pulled away from his bigger opponent in the last quarter. The 220 was a repetition of the shorter sprint with Lipsett coming strong at the finish. Huycke managed to take the measure of the pony express in the 440, however. He set up a lead from the pistol and, running splendidly, succeeded in holding his advantage to the finish.

The Junior half-mile event was probably the best race of the day. Stewart, Huycke, and Anderson furnished the chief contention, the three remaining together for the greater part of the distance, with Huycke acting as pace-maker. In the last quarter Stewart sprinted and swung up on even terms with Huycke, and the two battled the entire distance to the tape, running like a team; Huycke faltered a little before reaching the wire and Stewart won the event by six inches, in record time.

Events for Girls.

The number of entries for the girls' events was a feature. In the fifty yards' race there were twenty-five starters, and the potato race was so well filled that it had to be run in heats. Some clever performances were accomplished by the co-eds, especially in throwing the baseball, which was won by Miss McDonald, with a throw that opened the eyes of a large number of the boys in the crowd.

The obstacle race, in which the contestants had to crawl through barrels, wiggle through a ladder and squirm under a net, was an amusing feature, as were the sack race and the jockey race.

The inter-form relay race was captured by Form I-a, who had a handicap of 25 seconds. Form 2-b, with 17 seconds' handicap, were second. Five forms were represented and the event was one of the best of the day. Form I-c easily carried off the prize for the form making the most points in the day's events.

FRED DENISON CAPTAIN OF WEST END TEAM

At last night's practice of the West End Rugby Club, Fred Denison was elected Captain of the team for the season. The choice would seem to be a good one, "Dennie" has had the advantage of playing a year on the line-up of the Trinity College School team, champions of the Little Big Four last year, and knows the game well, while he is playing a fine game at quarter-back. The team had one of the best workouts of the season last night with all the regulars out in uniform. Dr. McPherson and Frank O'Connor coached the squad and the evening was one of the most profitable the team has had yet. They will journey to Port Hope tomorrow for a practice game with the Trinity College School team, leaving on the 11.45 G.T.R. train.

"With Edged Tools" will be one of the best this season. Be sure and see it at "The Grand" to-morrow (Saturday) Matinee and Evening 1d8t

PETERBORO TEAM CHOSEN FOR PORT HOPE GAME

Hayes—Full back.
Craig—Left back.
Johnson—Centre half.
Hogan—Right half.
Denison—Quarter.
Stewart, Leahy, Bearss, scrimmage.
Ecclestone, Turner, inside wings.
Kirn, Davidson, Canniff, middle wings.
Langley, Gilbert, outside wings.

The above will be the Peterborough W.E.A.C. rugby line-up for the game at Port Hope to-morrow. All those included in the line-up will play at some time during the game as the best material out is needed.

Corkery will be unable to play, but Craig will take his place at left half and Ecclestone will move from scrimmage to Craig's place at left inside. Stewart, the P.C.I. boy, who has shown good form, will be at right scrimmage.

Langley shapes up at outside wing like a Stronach and is certainly a good addition to the team. At the other end of the line the outside positions are hard to beat.

Bearss, the left scrimmage man, weighs close on to 200 and although he has never played the game before, he is eager to learn and should add strength to the line.

Kelly of hockey fame, will be out next week, as well as Elliott, who has been laid up with a bad cold this week.

From the showing put up by the boys last night it looks as if the Central Y.M.C.A. will have their work cut out if they have any kindly feelings toward a victory.

A final signal practise will be held to-night at the armouries at 7.30, and everyone is asked to be out, as instructions will be given regarding the trip to-morrow.

Rain or shine, every one should be out in sweaters.

REAL ESTATE CASE IN THE DIVISION COURT

In Division Court to-day, judgment was given in favour of the real estate firm of J. T. O'Connell and Company for $100 commission in regard to the sale of a farm belonging to Mr. Wm. Shearer of Otonabee. It was shown that Mr. Shearer had placed his farm for sale in the hands of the O'Connell firm and the latter secured a purchaser in the person of Mr. Percy Donaldson of Smith township, whom they drove out to inspect the farm and introduced to Mr. Shearer. Afterwards Mr. Blewett, another real estate man intervened to close the sale from Shearer to Donaldson. The court held that J. T. O'Connell and Company had brought the two together and after a long discussion, judgment was declared in favour of the plaintiff.

Chief Howard Returns From Annual Convention Of Fire Chiefs In Milwaukee

Fire Chief Howard has returned from attending the 39th annual convention of the International Association of Fire Engineers, held in Milwaukee. The Chief gives a very glowing account of his trip and says the meeting was exceptionally profitable from an educational standpoint, and he hopes to profit by the lessons learned. The papers read by prominent American Fire Chiefs drew out considerable discussion. Numerous questions were asked, and brought a variety of answers. There were a thousand chiefs at the meeting, who are in active service, and it was the largest meeting the Association ever had. This number was added to by many cities sending the Mayor, as well as a member of the Council, making the total number of delegates 2,312, and in addition, there were present in the neighbourhood of nine hundred ladies. About one hundred and fifty manufacturers reserved space in the exhibition building, and they, with their superintendents and master mechanics, were accompanied by their wives and daughters. The one unpleasant feature of the meeting was the lack of hotel accommodation, owing to the fact that the Illinois Postal employees held their convention the same week. Chief Howard says that in former years it has been customary for the delegates of each state or province to put up at one hotel, but this could not be arranged this year, owing to the immense crowd.

Ald. Morgan was especially interested in one paper that was read by the Chief from Newark, N.J. The paper was entitled "Prevention of Fire by Inspection," and the discussion which followed the reading of this paper, made it very clear that a great many fires can be averted by a thorough inspection of all buildings in the business district of every city and town. Our city recently passed a by-law, No. 1620, giving the Fire Chief authority to make these inspections regularly in Peterborough, and Ald. Morgan says he intends to have Chief Howard pay special attention to that work in the future. When it became known that Peterborough had recently passed a by-law of this kind, Ald. Morgan was requested by a number of aldermen from other cities to forward a copy of our by-law, so they may draft one similar to it.

One of the latest devices in fire-fighting appliances was a ladder truck motor, driven and operated and controlled by compressed air. Ald. Morgan and Chief Howard, with a number of other delegates, were given a ride around the city on this piece of fire-fighting apparatus, and practical tests were made.

There was a large number of automobile chemical fire engines and chemical and hose combination trucks. On the first evening of the convention a memorial service was held in one of the largest cathedrals, presided over by Rev. A. J. Rollings, pastor of the First Anglican church, with a mixed choir, picked from several congregations. Milwaukee's famous Socialist mayor and the Governor of Illinois, together with the President of the Association, Chief Thompson of Toronto, took part in what was one of the most impressive services. Fifteen fire chiefs of the Association lost their lives in the performance of their duties during the past year. Some of the departed were among the oldest and most respected ones of the Association. Chief Howard and Ald. Morgan have brought home several beautiful and valuable souvenirs and many pleasant memories of their visit to Milwaukee.

At the close of the convention the chief and alderman visited Chicago Indianapolis, Detroit and London, Ont., where in each city they were taken in hand by the Fire Chief and driven in automobiles to visit some of the modern fire stations, and inquired into the workings and doings of the different departments.

RUGBY

The Tigers have landed the man who promises to be just the man needed on the wing line. Ross Craig, the star wing man of the Dundas team, was out in uniform last evening, and, although it was his first practice this year, he showed exceptional good form and there is a chance that he will be used in the game against Argonauts on Saturday. If he does not play the entire game he will be used in part of it, and, judging by the way he was "hitting the line" last night he will prove somewhat of a surprise to the oarsmen. Most every local Rugby enthusiast has seen Craig in action at one time or other, and his ability is well known here. He has all kinds of experience, and was always recognized as one of the best wing men in the game.—Hamilton Herald.

Many Years an Invalid—Untold Agony From Headaches

Dizziness, Sinking Spells and Excessive Weakness Disappear With Use of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nearly every woman will read with interest the letter of Mrs. Geo. Bradshaw, quoted below. It tells of years of great suffering from nervous Headache and other symptoms arising from weak, watery blood and a starved and exhausted condition of the nervous system.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Cosy Nook, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I am glad to state that I received benefits from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food which I failed to get any place else. I was troubled for many years, in fact from my early womanhood, with weak, watery blood, and given to dropsy. I suffered untold agonies from nervous sick headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, in fact was a semi-invalid for many years. I tried many kinds of patent medicines and got no help, and tried every new doctor that came along, but all failed to help me. Doctors told me I had no blood, and that my heart and kidneys were diseased, and that I had so many complaints there was not much use in doctoring up one or two. Four years ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and was glad to see I felt better, and then got six more, and they have cured me of many of my complaints. When I began taking Nerve Food I weighed 110 pounds and to-day I weigh 139, and am 45 years old.

A GREAT COMBINATION

One of the most remarkable concerts ever heard in Canada, will undoubtedly be the one to be given on Thursday, Oct. 12, at St. Paul's church. The State Trumpeter of England, William Short, the King's Trumpeter, and the solo organist of Queen's Hall, London Concerts, Gatty Sellars, the well-known composer, have never previously visited Canada. The feature of the programme is the Coronation music in which the King's Trumpeter will include all the Coronation Trumpet calls he played at the Coronation, not only of King George, but previously, King Edward. A carillon of bells, brought over from England, will be introduced with the organ and trumpet. Mr. Short is known as the world's greatest trumpeter, whilst Mr. Sellars has appeared in the same series of concerts as Paderewski, Dr. Rans Richter, and also with Dusoni, Albani, Bantley, Marchesi, etc. At his first appearance in the United States the effects he produced on the organ were described by the American press as being unsurpassed on the continent, whilst his mastery over all technical difficulties was supreme. As a composer he was scholarly, and especially in the descriptive pieces, showed the most remarkable knowledge of his instrument. When appearing with Busoni, in Europe, the press stated that his effects were the most remarkable that one was ever likely to hear on an organ. Intending hearers are strongly advised to secure their tickets without delay, as it is expected the seating capacity of the church will be packed to its utmost.

LOST A FINGER

A somewhat painful accident befell Sydney Bettes, whilst working in the Quaker Oats factory yesterday afternoon. He was operating a press when in some manner his hand became jammed, with the result that he has lost a finger. He was sent to the Nicholls Hospital and attended to by Dr. Young.

RUNAWAY

A runaway, which might have been attended by more serious results, occurred this morning, when a southend citizen was driving out Lake St. The horse became frightened at some unseen object, and despite the efforts of the driver, ran for several blocks as fast as they could go. They were, however, gotten under control, and were finall ystopped, without any serious damage being done.

NEW C. P. R. SIDING UNDER CONSTRUCTION

The new C.P.R. siding running to the Peter borough Canoe Co's factory, is well under way, about seventy-five yards having been already laid. There is a large gang of men on the work, and a ballast train. The steam shovel is being used for unloading the cars and adds to the progress of the work. The siding, when completed, will be about two hundred and fifty yards long. It is being built on the east side of the site of the old pea factory, and on the west side of the boat house near the Quaker Oats siding bridge. Two houses will have to be moved, as they are in the direct line of the siding. One is a brick structure, the property of Mr. Caldwell, 372 Water street, and the other is a vacant frame structure. The C.P.R. Co. is moving the houses.

WEDDING BELLS

LIPHARDT—WALLER.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 3rd, at the residence of Mr. Thos. Waller, 635 Water street, when Mr. Oscar Liphardt and Miss Violet Waller were united in the bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church. The bridal couple left on the 4.28 train for Toronto and points West, after which Mr. and Mrs. Liphardt will reside in Waterloo, Ont.

Their many friends join in wishing them many years of happiness.

JONES—HUDSON.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at 3 o'clock to-day at the home of Mrs. James Tranter, of Chamberlain street (sister of the bride), when Miss Henrietta May Hudson, fifth daughter of Mrs. Amelia Hudson was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Nehemiah Jones, son of Mr. Daniel Jones, of Munvers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Riddiford, of Park street church before a few of the immediate relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones left on the 4.28 train for Toronto and other points and on their return will reside on Alfred street, Peterborough.

HICKSON—ENGLISH.

A pretty autumn marriage was solemnized at St. John's church, Norwood, the bride being one of the popular young ladies of that town, Miss Katherine English, and the groom, Mr. Robert Hickson of Ennismore. Rev. Father Kelly officiated. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Edward English, and was attended by her cousin, Miss Jessie O'Donnell of Peterborough. Mr. J. Killin of Ennismore, was groomsman. Among the out-of-town guests were Miss Julia O'Donnell of Toronto, Miss M. Fee and Miss Josie Fee, Winnipeg and Miss M. Crowley of Chicago.

Warne's South window is filled with extraordinary Saturday Specials. Have you seen them ? 2681

OBITUARY

CAPT. EDWARD BLEWETT.

The death occurred last night at the Ross Memorial Hospital of Capt. Edward Blewett, after an illness of three days. The deceased was born in Smith Township, Peterborough County, and was 57 years of age. He has been a resident of the town for 13 years. Thirty-four years ago he married Miss Mary Mann, also of Smith township, and before taking up residence in Lindsay, resided in Bobcaygeon, where he filled the position of lockmaster and village constable.

He leaves to mourn his loss his beloved wife and seven children, who are as follows: Mrs. William Millen, Chicago; Mrs. Percy Menzies, Detroit; Misses Minnie and Flora, Toronto; Coleman, Ernie and Allen, of town.—Lindsay Post.

MRS. MIRIAM CAMPBELL.

The death occurred at 238 Park street, this morning, of a very well known citizen in the person of Mrs. Miriam Campbell, aged seventy-four years.

The deceased was born in New York city and went to Colborne where she resided for some considerable period. She had been a resident of Peterborough for the space of six years.

Possessed of a naturally kindly and benevolent disposition, she was well beloved of all who knew her and her demise is lamented by many.

Mrs. Campbell was a widow and left no family. She is survived by one brother, Mr. William Carr, of Los Angeles and one sister, Mrs. Bailey, of 238 Park street. Senator Cox is a cousin of the deceased.

The remains will leave by the 8.30 G.T.R. train to-morrow morning for Colborne, where interment will take place.

CHAPTER I.
THE CITY OF PERIL.

The fog groped and felt its way along the water-front. Then it crept up to the throat of the city, like a grey hand, and strangled Broadway into an ominous quietness.

It tightened its grip, as the day grew older, leaving the cross-streets from Union Square to the Battery clotted with congested traffic. It brought on an untimely protest of blinking street-lamps, as uncannily bewildering as the midday cock-crowing of a solar eclipse. It caused the vague and shadowy walls of sky-scrapers to blossom into countless yellow window tiers, as close-packed as the scales of a snake. Bells sounded from gloom-wrapt shipping along the saw-tooth line of the river slips, tolling the watches and falling silent and tolling again, as they might have tolled in mid-ocean, or on some lonely waterway that led to the uttermost ends of the earth.

Now and then, out of the distance, a river-ferry or a car-float tug could be heard growling and whimpering for room, as it wrangled over its right-of-way. Everything moved slowly, through the muffled streets. Carriages crept across the sepulchral quietness with a strange and uncouth reverence, like tourists through a catacomb. Surface cars, crawling funereally forward, felt their way with gong-strokes, as blind men feel their way with stick-taps. An occasional taxicab, swinging tentatively out of a side-street, slewed and skidded in the greasy mud. Lonely drivers watched from their seats, watched like sea captains from bridge-ends when ice has invaded their sea lanes.

Under the gas-lamps, dulled to a reddish yellow, passed a thin scattering of pedestrians. A touch of desolation clung about each figure that groped its way through the short-vistaed street, as though the thoroughfare it trod were a lonely moraine and the figure itself the last man that walked a ruined world. It was the worst fog that New York had known for years; the city lay under it like a mummy swathed in grey.

Yet the gloom seemed to crown it with a new wonder, to endow it with a new dignity. That all too shallow tongue of land that is lipped by the East and North rivers took on strange and undreamt-of distances. It lay engulfed in twilight mysteries, enriched with unlooked-for possibilities. Its narrow acres of brick and stone and asphalt became something unbounded and infinite, as bewildering and wide as the open Atlantic. It seemed to harbour fantastic potentialities. It seemed to release the spirit of romance, as moonlight unfetters a lover's lips.

Yet Lingg, the wireless operator of the Lamanian, became more and more alarmed at the opacity of this fog. He felt, as he burrowed mole-like across the mist-blanketed city, that he had been a fool to leave the ship. He should have listened to reason. And now he had missed his way. He was lost in the very heart of that vast and undecipherable wilderness, which had always filled him with a vague fear, even in the open sunlight, where its serrated sky-line reminded him of a waiting trap-jaw. He was hopelessly at sea in the silence which surrounded him, overawed by the quietness which the turn of a street-corner might convert into some perilous ambuscade. Heilig, the engineer, had been right. He'd been a fool to come ashore.

He recalled, a little enviously, the figure of the engineer, the morose and lank and slatternly figure in ragged carpet slippers, leaning against the ship's rail and smoking the long-stemmed German pipe with its blue china bowl. He remembered the engineer's impassive stare and his almost placid grunt of protest as he wheeled slowly round towards the solid land that he always seemed to hate.

"Where yuh off to, son?" he asked, as Lingg dropped to the splintered stringpiece of the wharf. The Laminian was chafing and fretting against that stringpiece just as his own soul had been chafing and fretting against the desolation of her empty decks.

"Ashore," Lingg answered, resolutely enough, yet against all the voices of better judgment.

"Wimmin?" demanded the laconic figure against the rail.

"No!" exploded the impatient youth.

"Then what yuh after?" persisted his gloomy interlocutor.

"What am I after?" echoed the other, having no answer ready.

"What d'yuh want with all that?" demanded the engineer, with a contemptuous pipe-wave that embraced the entire island of Manhattan.

"I guess I want to mind my own business," was the reproving answer. It was followed by a contemplative eye-blink or two from the man in the carpet slippers. But the disgust did not go out of his face.

"No good comes o' knowin' hell-holes like this," he at last averred, with a slow and sagacious side-wag of his head. He spat into the slip water; it was a rite of his infinite contempt.

"I'm not going beyond Broadway," the half-repentant Lingg stopped to explain, marvelling at that strange and lonely seaman's fixed distrust of solid land. He did not think it worth while to enlarge on how sick he was of the ship stink and the quietness, of the fumes of rotting fruit, of the heavy musk-smell of harbour water, and the febrile rattle and clatter of donkey engines.

"Yuh'll find bad enough b'etween here and Broadway," avowed the placid misanthrope at the ship's rail, contemplating his pipe-smoke as though it were incense rising before the epitomised wisdom of all the ages.

But Lingg was not altogether looking for the bad. He had been remembering how one of the junior officers of the Pretoria, when in port, spent his two riotous days riding up and down in the Fifth Avenue 'buses, the delirious 'buses, which he described as "bee-hives of swarming beauty," where he was ignored and elbowed and walked over by "the finest women who ever wore feathers," to his hungering heart's content. And Lingg, too, was hungering for some glimpse of life beyond that of a dirty fore-deck; for a sight of faces less satyr-like than that of a brandy-steeped sea captain. He wanted to see light and colour and movement. The unpurged emotional tracts of youth ached for some undiscerned adventure. But above all he was swayed by a wordless, yet none the less compelling hunger to behold the faces of women and girls. Some subliminal sex-hunger, after so many empty days at sea, made him long for that vague upper world which seemed embodied in this very word—Girls. He wanted to see them, good or bad, with painted faces or pure. It scarcely mattered, so long as he could look at them. They would all be goddesses to him, Olympian beings who breathed some diviner air, trailing clouds of mystery after their most casual footstep. He did not ask to walk or speak with them. Their lowliest skirt-swish would seem only too like the ruffle of angel wings. He merely wanted to brush against them, indeterminately, in the city's crowded places, to watch their coming and going, to hear their occasional voices, to let his eyes dwell on their faces as a seaman looks at passing landlights. For Lingg was still young, clean-living and clean-thoughted beyond the ways of the sailor. Heilig's assistant, on the Laminian had more than once spoken of him as "Mealymouth."

And then, amazingly enough, came the girl herself, without sign or warning.

Where she fluttered or fell from he scarcely knew. It was somewhere in one of the quieter side-streets, and they were standing face to face, almost, when he looked up and saw her. Had he seen a mermaid over the ship's rail it could not have startled him more. There was no evading the situation; there was no chance of being mistaken. It was Adventure, in answer to his prayer. It was Romance, as he had asked. And he had never so much as clapped eyes on her before. Nor was her face a painted face. There was no betraying cupid-bow streak of carmine on the softly smiling lips. There was no barbaric black gum on the undrooping eyelashes, no tell-tale blue paint on the eyelids. There was no disquieting blandishments, no sidelong and predatory glances, no ensnaring simulation of tender levity. His startled eyes could detect no granite savagery under the velvet of her unconcern. She seemed merely Woman incarnate to him, the sort of woman he had sometimes dreamt about on tropic nights when the Southern Cross swung low to the skyline.

"You are Gustav Lingg," she said quietly, and as plain as day, while his wide eyes still studied every tint and shadow and line of her untroubled face. On that face he seemed to see nothing but a gentle yet determined abstraction.

"Y—yes," he stammered, vacuously, as though her statement had been a question. A faint tingle of something that was neither fear nor delight went needling up and down his backbone.

"I want to talk to you," the woman said, quite gravely. "I must talk to you—alone."

He knew that she had turned and joined him as he moved wonderingly forward, with his staring eyes still on her. Then the futility, the hopelessness, the impossibility of it all suddenly came home to him. He was conscious of a sinking feeling in the pit of his stomach. Courage sank away from him, confidence sucked out of him, like water out of an unplugged bath-bowl.

If she had only stood before him less alluring, less Olympian in her loveliness, he might have been less bewildered. If she had been the Other Kind, openly and unequivocally, he might have grown less afraid of her.

But he felt and knew it was a mistake, a foolish and colossal mistake. A vague and slowly mounting fear took the place of his earlier astonishment. The city itself had already intimidated him. He remembered the engineer's opprobrious summing-up of its perils. There was something amiss, terribly amiss.

He raised his hat from his head awkwardly, muttering he scarcely knew what, as he heard her voice again. He backed away from her as she essayed to draw nearer, and stumbled almost drunkenly, while she stood regarding him in open wonder. Then he turned and fled from her, fled from her, abashed and tingling, fled from her blindly, like a field-mouse from a coiled black-snake.

He did not stop until he had rounded a street corner. He felt, as he did so, that he was demeaning his manhood before some possible high adventure. He vaguely suspected that one of life's vast occasions had slipped away from him unrecognised. But he was still afraid, foolishly afraid. He was glad to dip deeper and deeper into the city, as though it were a cleansing bath that might wash away his lubberly awkwardness. He was glad when the fog crept into the streets and helped to obliterate him and his shame. He was glad to wander unknown and unrecognized about the grey-draped solitude that engulfed him.

He knew that the woman had not followed him. But all that afternoon he wandered and tarried and walked about with the feeling that he was not alone. He kept looking over his shoulder from time to time, pondering some wordless yet persistent sense of disquiet. He felt as though he were being shadowed. He could not shake off the impression that some vague figure or two was guardedly dogging his footsteps.

This sense of being shadowed grew stronger as night came on. It made him doubly anxious to get back to his ship, to know the security of his bald, little, white-painted cabin. It caused him to reiterate to himself the engineer's morose dictum that the city was not to be trusted. He had hungered for the Unexpected; he had been restless for his emprising hour or two on land. But this, he muttered to himself, was the kind of night that took all the curl out of Romance. He was not worthy of the venture. He was better suited to the quietness of a ship's cabin. He disliked the thought of the two pacing shadows that seemed to be following him through the fog. He wanted the Laminian's dirty fore-deck once more under his feet.

He designedly kept out of all danger zones, to make security doubly sure. A thick-voiced man with a black muffler about his throat had trailed after him to demand if he had no old clothes to dispose of. But he did not so much as stop to answer. A stranger in a Stetson hat, still later, caught companionably at his arm and implored him to drink with him. But he freed himself sharply and kept on his way. A figure or two blocked his path ominously, but he skirted them as a careful pilot skirts his channel buoys. He did not care to run risks. He felt that he was still in the land of the enemy. He kept to the open, blindly and doggedly. He knew but one goal, and that goal lay beyond the Laminian's odorous gangplank. He fought his devious way towards it, like a spawning sockeye fighting its way to a river source.

He hurried along the fog-wrapt canons, still haunted by the impression of some unknown figure dogging his steps. He felt, as night and the fog deepened together, that the city was nothing more than a many-channeled river-bed, and that he waded along its bottom, breathing a new element, too thick for air, too etherealised for water. He saw streets that were new to him, streets where the misted globes of electric lights became an undulating double row of white tulips. Then he stumbled into Broadway with the soft pedal on. Its roar of sound was so muffled he scarcely knew it. Then he came to a square where the scattered lamp-globes looked like bubbles of gold caught in tree-branches. Under these tree-branches he saw loungers on benches, mysterious and motionless figures, like broken rows of statuary, sleeping men in the final and casual attitudes of death. Above these figures he could see wet maple leaves, hanging as still and lifeless as though they had been stencilled from sheets of green copper. His eyes fell on floating street-signs, blurs of coloured electrics cut off from the invisible walls which backed them. He caught glimpses of the softened bulbs of automatic signs, like moving goldfish seen through frosted glass. Then he saw more lights, serried lights, subdued into balloons of misty pearl. They threaded the facade of some gigantic hotel, like jewel-strings about the throat of a barbaric woman. But he could not remember the place. And again he floundered on towards the water-front, disquieted with vague and foolish thoughts, as much oppressed by the orderly streets as though he were escaping from some sea-worn harbour slum of vice and outlawry. He still wanted his cabin, as a long-harried chipmunk wants its tree-hole.

He was well out of it, he told himself reassuringly, though he still kept wondering why the woman had stopped him. He remembered details of her dress, the sense of assurance and well-being in her mere figure poise, the open way in which her eyes had met his. He began to wonder why he had lacked the audacity to respond to that clear challenge of fate. He demanded of himself why he had run away from the very thing he had been seeking.

He knew, as the growl of the ferry-whistles grew louder, that he was nearing the river. He felt as ungainly as a tortoise scuffling back to its water-edge of escape, but his confidence began to return to him as he found himself nearer and nearer his brink of delivery. He could perceive the ridiculous figure he had cut. He could even realize that he had defeated his own ends. He was conscious of a growing overtone of discontent, a peevish resentment against his own white-livered irresolution. And he would go aboard, and the next day be out at sea, with the mystery of it all still unanswered.

He strode on through the fog. It was not until he came to a narrow street-crossing between two blank-windowed warehouses that he came to a sudden stop, that his path was barred by a cab with an oven door. It blocked the crossing, very much as a Neapolitan corricolo manœuvres for a fare by cutting across a pedestrian's path.

The youth drew up and peered in through that door, with a slightly quickened pulse, wondering why the impassive figure on the box should be thus blocking his way.

Then he saw that the cab was not empty.

Leaning quietly forward from the seat was an intent and waiting figure—a woman's figure. It was the woman from whom he had so ignominiously fled.

He felt, this time, no horripilating tingle of shock. His fund of wonder seemed to be exhausted. He stood staring at her, almost abstractedly, with the mild and resigned bewilderment of a man who has seen lightning strike twice in the same spot.

"Quick!" said the woman, with an almost imperious movement of her gloved hand.

"What?" asked Lingg, inadequately, irrelevantly.

"I wanted to warn you," the woman whispered, as she moved back on the cab seat, obviously to make room for him. "I must warn you—but not here."

"Of what?" asked Lingg. He saw that she was quite alone in the cab.

"Come!" she commanded, ignoring his question.

He stepped into the hooded gloom like a coerced schoolboy. He was not afraid, he assured himself. It was merely that he was unwilling to be made the blind tool of forces he could not comprehend.

"Of what?" he repeated, noticing that the cab moved forward the moment the door had slammed shut.

"Not to sail on the Laminian," said the woman at his side. He could detect a subtle perfume about her presence, a flowery and effeminizing perfume which made him think of New England village gardens. An older man would have thought of boudoirs.

"Why not?" he asked. The woman could see that he was not as impressed as he might be.

"It will not be safe."

"It never is on those third-class boats."

He insisted on being literal or nothing.

"But there are dangers ahead of you—dangers you don't and can't understand."

"I don't see how I can help that," said the youth of little imagination. "When the Company puts me on a ship or gives me a station anywheres, I've got to stick to it."

"Then you don't believe me?"

"It's not a matter of believing. It's more a matter of not understanding you."

A change seemed to creep over her, a lightening and relaxing change, such as would come to the New England garden he had thought of when it passed from shadow to sunlight.

IS THIS FOR YOU?

Do you want cheapest glasses with which you can read?

Do you consent to risk the well being of your eyes with second quality glasses merely because you can see with them? If so this message is not for you. But if you value the precious gift of sight, if you appreciate accuracy and quality this is for you, and we invite you to come where accuracy and quality are above every other consideration.

It is usual to secure appointment.

"Would you like to understand me?" she asked, turning her eyes full on his somewhat abashed young face. He blushed and tingled under the directness of her gaze.

"How could I?" he succeeded in stammering out.

"Won't you stay and try?" she murmured pregnantly.

The prospect did not exactly appal him. It merely puzzled him now as something beyond the reach of his delimited imagination. The curl hadn't been taken out of Romance, after all, he told himself. He could see the brooding spirit of her, incarnate before his very eyes, coifed and gowned like a goddess. But the very radiance of the vision made him doubly afraid of her.

"I'm afraid I'll have to get back," was his hesitating rejoinder.

"Back where?"

"To my ship," he faltered.

"But you mustn't!" she murmured, with a solicitous hand on his still tingling arm.

"I've got to get back," he persisted, reaching and fumbling for the door.

"But not yet—not here," she begged him.

"I must," he declared, trying to stand on his feet under the cramping cab-hood, and tugging at the door handle.

"Only listen to me for a moment," the woman was saying, almost pleadingly.

He allowed her to draw him gently back into the seat beside her. But disquiet had again taken possession of him.

"Am I so terrible?" she asked, with her hand still on his arm. Her voice was low and quiet; her half-smiling lips were parted a little, giving a touch of languid abandon to her otherwise intent and earnest face. And here was the very thing he had been so restlessly in search of; but now that it was before him, within his grasp, he was wordlessly afraid of it.

"N—no, you're not terrible," he jerkily reassured her, as though the words had to be paid out like links of a rusted cable.

"You're not afraid of me?", she inquired, with a disarming soft intimacy of tone that sent the blood once more rioting through her veins. He did not answer. He merely gazed at her in inarticulate and tingling wonder.

"You're not, are you?" she persisted, stooping forward and turning her body about in the cab seat so that her face was directly before him, within a foot of his own.

"No," he managed to say.

He noticed that she almost closed her eyes.

"Then kiss me," he heard her low voice murmuring, with her parted red lips lifting and creeping underviously up to his, her hand already on his shoulder.

He drew back, white and stunned. It was beyond reason. It was so beyond reason that it brought a hundred unkenneled suspicions yelping and snapping about him. Things that once seemed accidental and trivial took on a new significance. He could carpenter inconsequentialities into dim and towering structures of intrigue. He was afraid of himself and his surroundings.

THE GUN RUNNER

The woman must have seen this the very moment she locked her arms about his reluctant neck, for her face changed and hardened. Even before he saw that change, though, he was crowding and struggling and pulling away from her.

The entire situation was so unlooked-for, so startling, that no new turn of it could add to his sense of surprise. He was conscious of the fact that she was crying out, while she still clung to him, and that the cab had come to a sudden stop. He noticed a figure at the door and a man's huge hand dart in towards him as it swung open. And still again he heard her shriek of simulated fear. It might even have been anger—he was not sure; he could not fathom it all. But he felt dimly that he was being tricked into something beyond his understanding; that the whole thing was some sort of trap. He resented being clawed at; he resented the way in which the man at the cab door was dragging and pulling him to the street. There was no longer any doubt as to that intruder's immediate intention.

The wireless operator's one passion was to escape, to fight his way back to freedom. He remembered his ship and his waiting station, and how Heilig, the engineer, would have the laugh on him.

He was fighting like a terrier by this time, striking out blindly, in a frenzy of sheer panic. He was stung by the injustice of it all, and kept calling and shouting for help as he fought, fortified by the memory that his hands were clean, that he had done nothing amiss.

He was dazed and bruised, but he still fought and shouted, imagining it was his opponent's mad intention to kill him. He saw the shifting figures of men appear through the fog, and stand about in a circle, impassively watching his struggles. But still he fought and shouted.

His cries brought a patrolman with a night-stick in his hand. He could see the circle disrupted and scattered. He could hear the relieving sound of the falling club on the body of the brute above him, and sharp oaths and grunts, and then cries and counter-cries.

Then a fourth figure pushed peremptorily through the re-formed circle of onlookers, a figure not in uniform, but quick-acting and authoritative. This newcomer seemed to pull the entangled and struggling trio apart in one breath, as a child separates a puzzle-picture. He flung back the clubbing patrolman. He swept aside the still fighting second figure. He dragged the fallen operator to his feet, with a sharp question or two at the other man, who was blowing his nose on a handkerchief maculated with blood. Then he called out to the waiting cab-driver: "To the police station, straight!" and all but carried the dazed operator back into the waiting carriage.

He turned at the step, before following the operator into that cab, and spoke a crisp word or two to the still blinking patrolman. Then he lurched angrily and impatiently into the cab and slammed the door shut as they went clattering and awinging away through the heavy fog.

He left the patrolman gazing after him through the gloom, his idle night-stick dangling from his wrist like a bird's broken wing.

"Can you beat it!" gasped the astounded officer to the other man busy prodding and feeling his own body, very much as a housewife might explore a market-fowl.

"You'd beat it ,all right!" retorted the other, disgustedly, with seismic-like rumblings of the chest. "You hare-brained bulls'd beat anything!"

"But what's this all about, anyway?" demanded the bewildered officer, shouldering out through the crowd with the other man at his heels.

"God only knows," was that other man's retort, morosely brushing his battered hat with the palm of his hand.

"But who is he"

"Who's who?"

"The guy who flashed that Central Office shield."

"One o' Wilkie's men."

"Wilkie?"

"Chief Wilkie, of the Washington Bureau; and we've made a nice mess o' this little coup o' his between us!"

"Then where's the rib figurin' in it?" asked the still perplexed officer.

"The rib?"

"The woman with the Fifth Avenue make-up."

"Oh, that's Cherry Purcelle—she's the come-on for the Washington Bureau people."

"Bureau—what Bureau?" asked the officer, still in the dark.

"The Secret Service Bureau, you pin-head!" The man speaking had just discovered a rib abrasion that made him wince with pain.

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Waurika, Okla.—"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well."—Mrs. SALLIE STEVENS, R. F. D. No. 3, Box 31, Waurika, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman

London, Ont.—I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was so weak and tired that I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it.—Mrs. WM. A. BUFFY, 905 Dame St., London, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has surely cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

"Then why t'ell didn't you put me wise? I might've fanned the beanboxes off some o' you folks!"

"You make me sick!" said the disgusted one, still preoccupiedly feeling about a bruised shoulder. "What d'you suppose it's called Secret Service for, if you've got to advertise it on every street-corner?"

The officer was slow to comprehend the situation.

"But I though Wilkie only muckraked round after counterfeiters?"

"He does any old thing his Uncle Sam sets him at."

"Then what're they holdin' up that quiet-lookin' young feller for? What're they runnin' him in for, anyway?"

"Mebbe they don't want him to sail to-morrow."

"But why shouldn't he sail to-morrow? Has he done anything?"

"Oh, cut it out!—cut it out! and get me to the nearest drugstore. I hate dirty work like this!"

"Then why're you doin' it?"

The other man did not answer, and the question was repeated.

"War's war!" was all he said. And he emitted the laconism as though he had no love for the subject from which it sprang.

"You may as well put me wise," suggested the still waiting officer.

"I said this was Secret Service, didn't I?" grunted the other. "Where'd you say that drugstore was?"

CHAPTER II.

THE SPARK IN THE GAP

"Are you the operator?" asked a passenger in a black raincoat, blocking the doorway of the Laminian's wireless room.

The fog of the night before had given way to a driving rain, like a sulky woman who finally and openly surrenders to tears. New York lay behind the Laminian and her passengers, seeming, under the soft torrent of those tears, a many-towered city of loaf-sugar which dissolved lower and lower into the flat line of the horizon.

The stranger in the doorway repeated his question.

"I'm going to be," came the answer from the coatless figure bent over its mystic apparatus. He had not so much as turned to face his interlocutor.

"Mean it's your first run?" inquired the huge and genial spirit of the doorway. This question, like his first, remained unanswered. So he repeated it in a tone of mild and attained humility.

"I can't be an operator until I've got something to operate on," said the voice from the room. Its barbed curtness of tone no more reached the quick of the newcomer than water lould reach a duck's breast.

"Then you're not sending yet?" he amiably persisted, with his shoulder against the doorpost.

"Not till I've tuned up this pile of junk!" was the preoccupied answer of the operator, bent low over his work.

"You don't mean she's off her trolley, our first hour out?" asked the other. His patience seemed infinite. He still stood there, studying the shirt-sleeved figure in the centre of the room.

"I can't make her spark right. And I've got a damp helix and a motor running weak!"

The words were followed by a gasp of exasperation and the rattle of a tool flung to the floor.

The huge-shouldered man in the raincoat made no effort to conceal his disappointment. It was what one deserved, he conceded, for travelling in such a punk-riveted, slush-pitted, coal-eating second-rater!

But he remained up on the bridge-deck. He continued to lean nonchalantly against the dripping rail, peering out from under bushy iron-grey eyebrows drawn close to the flat-bridged nose, unmindful of the rain that beat in from the north-east as the Laminian plowed her way down through the Narrows and the Lower Bay. His red-rimmed, many-wrinkled eyes were still on the horizon, and his massive, russet hand was still clamped on the white awning-stanchion as Sandy Hook was passed and the Atlantic Highlands melted down into a vague monotone of rain-swept loneliness.

Beyond the ship's officers, who fretted uncertainly back and forth along the bridge, his figure was the only one on the deserted deck. As the mist shut off the last dull line of Navesink, and the nose of the steamer swung southward, rising and dipping in the long ground-swell of the open Atlantic, the watching man gave vent to an involuntary sigh of relief.

But he still stood there, in the slanting rain, while the deck beneath his feet shook with the purposeful throb of the engines under their "full steam ahead," and the pulsating and ponderous thing of steel, "carrying a bone in her teeth," shouldered her way on through a ghost-like world of sea and rain. She seemed, for all her pitted and rust-stained plates, dignified with some new-found sense of mystery, of austere and unknown missions, as she sought out her predestined path through the grey loneliness of her universe. She seemed humanized, endowed with the will of a sentient and reasoning being.

The stranger looked about quickly, as the thick-necked, short-legged captain, in dripping oilskins, leaned over the port bridge-gate and called back along the empty deck:

"You, there!—are you gettin' anything?"

There was no answer to his call.

"Aren't you gettin' that ship out there?" he demanded peremptorily, as he flung the raindrops from his cap-brim with a bull-like shake of the head.

He leaned on the wet rail and waited. But still there was no answer to his question. So he repeated it, this time in a bellow. Then came the sound of a chair being pushed back on deckboards in the wireless-room, and the rattle of a quickly-opened shutter.

"I'll have her in five minutes," answered the operator. The shutter closed again, sharply. Captain Yandel, the master of the Laminian, mumbled under his breath, and turned back to the bridge.

The man in the raincoat swung casually about on his heel and studied the operator's station, where the after-deck superstructure rose squat and square as a scow-cabin out of the bleached flooring of the weather-deck. He peered up to where the "T" aerials of phosphor-bronze wire on their ashwood stretchers bridged the two mastheads; he followed the course of those united wires as they led down into the square little station.

Next to this station, on the right, was the ship's lamp-room. In front of it stood the flag locker. Farther along the deck, he noted, came the chart-room, and then the captain's cabin. In front of that again was the wheel-house and the canvas-strapped bridge.

On this bridge an officer, unsheathing a glass, was peering out to sea. The stranger followed the direction of the pointed glass and made out the ponderously rocking mass of a battleship as she crept up on them through the mist. There was something ominous and authoritative about her, with her sullen turrets and her monotone of colour, as she belched out her black smoke-plumes that hung low on the sky-line.

Then the stranger in the dripping raincoat swung sharply about and looked up at the masthead. As he did so he saw a nervous blue spark appear and disappear at the ends of the taut-strung aerials that cradled back and forth with every dip and plunge of the ship. A muffled crash and clatter of sound echoed out of the closed station; a simultaneous kiss and crackle of broken noise came from the masthead.

It was the wireless operator at last working his key. It was the Hertzian waves, erupting from the mended coils, winging their way with the speed of light out through the loneliness of the rain-fogged afternoon.

Then came a space of silence, interrupted by the sudden appearance of the operator, still in his shirt-sleeves, with his coat held over his head like a hood. He strode forward to the bridge-gate, where he was met by the waiting captain. Together they bent over a sheet from a tinted form-pad. Then the hooded figure hurried back to the station, and the slam of a door punctuated his disappearance from sight.

The man in the raincoat turned back to the battleship, and stood thoughtfully regarding the bursts of foam on her plunging cutwater and the intermittent shower of spray as she rose and dipped in the cross-swell. Through the engineroom sky-light behind him came the call of subterranean voices, the busy clang-our of iron scraping on iron, the quick slam of furnace doors, magnified in the open shaft-head to sounds of titanic proportions. As he stood there a deck steward mounted the brass-plated stairway, carrying a tray with coffee-cake and steaming cups of tea.

The man at the rail wheeled about quickly at the unexpected sound of a voice so close behind him. He declined the proffered refreshment bruskly and swung back to his earlier position.

lier position, staring out at the battleship. The steward took up his tray and passed on to the operator's door, where, adroitly balancing on one foot, he tapped on the panel with the other.

The door opened, and this time the white glare of the electric light shone along the wet deck. The man at the rail, twisting his head, without any betraying movement of the body, succeeded in getting a more satisfactory glimpse of the room.

Behind the door swung a curtain of soiled denim, partly withdrawn. Squatting on a canvas camp chair before his unpainted worktable was the operator. His wireless helmet-receiver, or "set," was clasped over his ears and held close to the bent head by a chaplet of glimmering metal. Against each "receiver" the operator pressed a white handkerchief, to shut away outside noises.

His face was lean, clear-cut, touched with vigour. It was too vital and youthful in texture to be called leathery, though it was sunburnt to what seemed almost a coffee-colour, contrasting strangely with the ruddiness of the open-weathered ship's officers about him. He had, too, a touch of the ascetic in the high brow and the wide cheekbones, his leanness of jowl giving one the impression of generous reservoirs of energy greedily and continually drained by some ever-adventuring thirst for activity. Though his eyes were impersonally studious and abstracted, there was a redeeming line or two of humour about the mouth. His hands were long and bony and slender, with something persistently scholar-like about them, for all their scarred and calloused and sinewed strength. This impression was further borne out by the restless, unco-ordinated, and at times, almost wolf-like restlessness of the spare and nervous body as he passed back and forth in the narrow cabin. There seemed something unsubjugated in his long strides, as though he and his great length of limb had not yet grown used to confined places. This sense of an achieved repression was strengthened by the touch of audacity about the wide and clear-seeing eyes as he circled his room or sat sprawlingly before his instruments—of an audacity tempered with intelligence.

He nodded cheerfully enough to the steward, however, at the sight of the coffee-cake and the steaming tea. Then he turned back to his responder. The steward, leaving his tea and cake on the seat of a broken-armed steamer chair, went on his way, and the deck was again deserted.

"Why aren't you getting the Princeton, there?" Captain Yandel once more demanded from the bridge-gate. It was plain to see his feeling for the new operator was not an over-kindly one.

The new operator showed his head round one corner of the stateroom.

"I'll try again!"

Once more came the hiss and rattle and crackle of the spark, and once more the lean and sun-tanned face appeared round a corner of the stateroom.

"He's busy talking to the navy-yard!"

"To what?"

"To the navy-yard."

"What'd he tell you?"

The new operator hesitated for a moment or two before answering. His singularly quiet eyes were resting on Captain Yandel's nose, for it was a remarkable nose, something between a cardinal and magenta colour, stippled with the brighter hues of countless little broken veins.

"He told me to shut up, and cut out!" he answered at last, editing the irate officer's blasphemy out of the message.

The passenger in the raincoat fell to pacing the open deck. H stopped once or twice, quite casually, to glance in at the wireless apparatus. Then, seeing that the operator had taken off his ear-phones and was leaning back in his canvas chair, giving his open and undivided attention to the tea and coffee-cake, the stranger came to a stop and leaned companionably against the jamb of the open door.

The young man glanced up at the huge figure darkening his cabin. He did so with no outward sign of emotion. He had, apparently, become inured to the wondering eyes of the passengers, and he had his own ends to pursue. So he went on with his coffee-cake in silence.

"Could you take those messages of mine now?" asked the man in the raincoat.

"Any old time now," answered the operator, without so much as a second glance.

"I settle for it with you, don't I?" asked the stranger, drawing out a roll of bills. The formidable dimensions of that roll were lost on the man bending over the teacup.

"Leave your name and cabin number, and pay the purser. They don't seem to trust operators on this floating palace! All I do is stamp the time-check on the message and send it out."

He took the two messages, stamped them, and read them aloud, before pencilling the number of words on a corner of each sheet and stabbing it on his "send" book. He read, perfunctorily:

Varrel, Sixty Wall Street, New York.

Our man on board Laminian bound Puerto Locombia. Wire Washington. Will have him held by authorities to await instructions. Duffy.

The second message he read off quite as hastily, and with equal nonchalance:

Doctor Bernado Morales, Mobile.

Advise Charleston wireless to relay Laminian southward bound if shipment of laundry equipment and steel ties left Mobile and date of sailing. Michael Duffy.

The stranger waited a moment at the door, as though expecting some further word or movement from the operator.

But the man of the key was al-

DAIRY BUTTER

From Farm and Dairy.

Laura Rose, Guelph, Ont.

'Tis true, and pity 'tis, 'tis true, and no one regrets to acknowledge it more than myself that the great bulk of dairy butter does not rank as first class. I have wondered why this is, and have come to the conclusion that the majority of butter makers have not a right standard of butter and do not know the requirements for a high-class trade. The most fastidious and critical consumers of butter are the rich. This is because they pay prices that insure the greatest skill and care being taken in the manufacture of the butter. After being accustomed to the sweet, delicately-flavored, lightly salted and lightly colored butter, the change to an inferior make is quickly noticed.

Miss Laura Rose

COMPARISONS ARE EDUCATIVE

Why does not the farm butter maker improve as she should? I believe it is because the only butter she has an intimate acquaintance with is her own and she has grown so used to the faults therein that to her they cease to exist, and she thinks her butter equal to any made. Improvement almost solely comes by comparison. We are the poorest judges of our own make and should seek the honest opinion of reliable judges and profit by their criticisms. There is a whole lot in getting used to a thing; the poor little city boy, when in the country on a "fresh air vacation," didn't like the eggs because they lacked taste and smell.

I remember a like experience. I had taken a first prize for butter, and so proud was I that when I went to visit a farmer friend I took along a piece of my prize butter. It was tasted by the family and the good man of the house frankly admitted he liked his own better and thought it was equally as good and insisted on his wife going to the cellar for a sample. She demurred a little, but obeyed. I feel my surprise yet, for when I tasted it, it was as turnipy as could be. And what was I to say a guest of the house? I was frank and told them they had become used to the turnip flavor, but it wouldn't do in the show ring.

SOME POINTS ABOUT FLAVOR

Wherein is our farm butter at fault? I trust that my readers will understand that I am writing in a most friendly, helpful spirit and hope they may get suggestions that will tend toward improvement. In the first place, the cause of the objectionable flavors is too frequently due to badly ventilated, dirty cow stables, and unclean milking. Milk seems capable of absorbing every odor that comes its way. Then the separator is ever a bone to pick at, but I believe in respect to its proper care there is a marked improvement. There are still those, however, who would hesitate and find an excuse if you asked to see their separator. A separator must be thoroughly washed every time it is used—not just a dipper or two of warm water run through it, we don't call that washing—but the bowl taken apart and well washed and scalded.

And now comes the greatest reason why so much of the farm butter, and the cream sent to the creameries, is off flavor. The cream is not quickly cooled after it is separated. I don't know why it is, but I do know that the warm cream from the separator, if given no particular care but merely set aside to cool, develops a peculiar flavor that I can detect in the cream and butter every time. Cream should be quickly cooled to 55 degrees or below by placing the can in cold water. If water be scarce pour the cream in shallow pans so it will the more rapidly give off its heat, and set the pans in a cool place.

MUCH CREAM IS TOO RIPE

Lots and lots of butter ranks as second because the cream was over ripe. Much of the cream is kept too warm during the ripening process and in winter especially is held too long before churning. The delayed churning gives to butter that "cheesy" flavor. Cream when ready for use should be of the consistency of molasses, smooth and velvety when poured and of a pleasant, mild, acid taste. Always err in having it under rather than over-ripe. We should look at the ripening process in cream much the same as that of fruit. We eat a pear slightly under-ripe, and while it has not the good flavor of one in exactly prime condition, still if it were over-ripe we would not relish it at all. I strongly urge more intelligent care of the cream from the time it leaves the separator till it gets into the churn.

THOSE WHITE SPECKS

We have all noticed tiny white specks in farm butter—a bad fault, for, if such butter has not already an old flavor it will soon develop one. These specks can easily be avoided by keeping the cream stirred right from the bottom to the top. The skim milk settles to the bottom, and if it is not well stirred in with the cream, becomes firm and adheres to the butter-fat during churning.

Sometimes care is not taken when warming the cream for churning. If overheated the casein or curdy matter hardens and white specks in the butter follow. Pouring hot water into the cream to hasten the churning has the same bad effect.

Many butter makers still guess at the churning temperature, and too often the result is a soft, greasy mass in the churn instead of firm, wheat-like granules. Soft butter holds the buttermilk, can not be well washed, and is in a bad condition to be salted and worked; and behold the product a butter weak and spongy in texture, buttermilk in the brine and the color streaked and mottled.

A SERMON BOILED DOWN

Just these few words in closing. 'Tis a tale oft told by me: Adjust the separator to give cream testing 25 per cent. butter-fat, or, in other words, cream that will make from two and one-half to three pounds of butter a gallon; have cream on the sweet side, rather than one day too old; never fill the churn over half full (better only a third full); churn at that temperature (found by the use of a thermometer and a clock), which brings butter in from 20 to 25 minutes; have the butter in the granular form when through churning; wash it in the churn, using quite as much water as there was cream; use from three-quarters to one ounce of salt a pound of butter; give it a thorough working; print and wrap neatly in parchment paper; keep in a cool, clean place, and get it to the consumer as soon as possible; observe cleanliness in every detail of the work. This summary is the boiled-down essence of a sermon on "How Farm Butter May Be Improved."

NA-DRU-CO Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound
There is no question as to the very high value of Cod Liver Oil, properly prepared and made digestible, as a "builder-up" for convalescents or those who are run-down.
Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Compound contains the valuable properties of the Cod Liver Oil without its disagreeable flavor. In fact, this preparation is decidedly pleasant to the taste. With Extract of Malt, Extract of Wild Cherry, and Hypophosphites of Lime, Soda, Potassium, Manganese and Iron added, it makes a combination that puts an edge on the appetite—aids digestion—invigorates the nerves—relieves and helps to cure affections of the throat and lungs—and generally builds up strength and restores health.
For puny, delicate children there is probably no better "builder-up" than Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound. 102

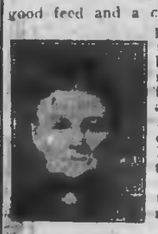
CARE OF MILK COWS

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. A. Thompson, Wellington Co., Ont.

Every attention must be paid to the care of the milk, cows must have good feed and a constant supply of pure water; the stables must be kept clean, and milk removed from them as soon as possible if we are to make good dairy butter. We keep from eight to 10 cows, and I always attend to the care of cream myself.



Mrs. A. Thompson

We regulate the separator to skim a cream of rich quality. We find that we can churn a rich cream at a much lower temperature and in less time than a thinner cream. The cream, as soon as separated, is cooled to 50 degrees or even lower in summer. We keep ice and water in a galvanized tub in the cellar. The cream pail is set in it. At this season of the year cold water can be used without ice. Our cream is stirred a time or two while cooling. When cold it is added to the cream already collected for the next churning.

We churn twice a week—three and a half days' cream in each churning. Having a uniform quantity of cream we always have an idea how much coloring to add, and how much salt required. We always scald the churn the night before, rinse with clean, cold water in the morning, and churn as early as possible.

THE CORRECT TEMPERATURE

This summer we churned the cream at 50 degrees. The correct temperature to churn at depends much on the kind of cows and the kind of feed. With two or three Jerseys in the herd we can churn at a much higher temperature, and have just as firm or firmer butter, than by churning at 50 degrees and have no Jerseys.

When the butter begins to break we add a quart or two of cold water, colder than the cream if we can get it. With a few minutes more churning the buttermilk is ready to be drawn off. We then rinse the lid and sides of the churn and the butter with cold water. After that water has drained off we add a pail or two of very cold water, turn the churn rapidly a few times, and it is then ready to drain again. In a few minutes we remove the butter to the worker and sprinkle on the salt, about three-quarters of an ounce to a pound of butter.

We mix the salt well through the butter before using the lever. We do not then need to work it so much. It requires experience to determine just how much to work the butter. If not worked enough the butter will be streaked or mottled; if worked too much it spoils the grain and makes it appear greasy. After being properly worked it should be made into pound prints, and rolled in parchment paper at once.

We always add a pint or two of the fresh buttermilk to the cream we are collecting for the next churning. It starts the cream souring and is not so difficult to ripen the cream when churning day arrives.

Miller's Compound Iron Pills have such virtue that every one should try them. Wm. Madill.

SELF-MADE MEN

From Farm and Dairy.

"A Traveller," Peterboro Co., Ont.

"I am a self-made man." How often we hear this assertion now-a-days made with great pride and satisfaction by men who in a comparatively few years and with few opportunities have raised themselves from poverty to affluence. Many of the self-made men swell themselves out as they say it with all the self-conscious pride of a gaily plumed peacock, and one would think that they had done the whole thing themselves without assistance from anybody. I have run across a good many of these self-made men and become acquainted with several, and when the whole story is told we find that some quiet woman has had quite as much to do with their success as they had themselves. The wise advice and kindly encouragement of the wives of these self-made men in many cases tells almost the whole story.

The self-made farmer—and we have many of them in this country—boys who came here with nothing at all and now have splendid farms well stocked and paid for, owe more to their wives than any other class of self-made men. I have in mind at the present moment a self-made man who is very proud of the fact and delights to tell of the day when he arrived in Canada with nothing at all, a homeless English lad, and then points to his splendid 300-acre farm and says, "and I done it all myself." His neighbors tell a different story. That man has a wife!

She is a quiet, hard-working and almost worn-out woman. She has so little to say that you would hardly know she was around the house at all. But in the early days when she and her husband first purchased the worn-out farm it was the money that she made peddling fresh vegetables and the cash that she made from their poultry that gave them their first start. She was an excellent butter maker, and the reputation she obtained for her butter was the chief factor of building up a large and profitable dairy industry on the farm. While her husband was investing in expensive machinery that made work for himself easier, she got along with the old scrubbing brush, the broom instead of the carpet sweeper, and the wash-tub instead of the washing machine, in order that money might be saved to pay for their farm and to increase their bank account. Her husband is now on easy street, but she is performing the same old grind; it never seems to occur to him that without her heroic assistance and self-denial he would not to-day be on easy street.

These self-made men make me tired. Why cannot they tell the whole truth and give to the woman in the case her due credit?

ADVENTURES of the WORLD'S GREAT DETECTIVES

By George Barton

The Clue of the Bamboo Canes

An Episode in the Life of General Trepoff, Chief of Police of St. Petersburg.

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY W. G. CHAPMAN

SHE FIRED HER REVOLVER AND THEN ESCAPED.

(This is one of a new series of stories concerning adventures that have occurred in the lives of the world's greatest detectives. Mr. Barton has gathered his material from real life, but in some cases imaginary names have been substituted for real ones simply as a matter of justice to the innocent descendents of culprits mentioned in the narratives. Permissable liberties have been taken in the construction and arrangement of these fact stories, but in all that is essential, they may be regarded as human documents of unusual interest and value.—The Editor.)

The winter palace at St. Petersburg is one of the largest buildings in the world. There was a time, it is averred, when the wonderful structure housed several thousand persons. Noblemen, attendants, servants and employes of all kinds came and went in swarms. The discipline was lax. Scores of soldiers, detectives, policemen and secret service officials were employed to guard the person of the czar, but their very numbers helped to make them a menace rather than a protection.

In October, 1879, a carpenter, carrying his box of tools on his shoulder, appeared at one of the basement doors of the palace and said that he had been sent to assist in making some repairs to the drying rooms of the czar's winter residence. He was admitted without question and within an hour was at work with other mechanics in the lower part of the great building.

The foreman of that section came lounging along. He noticed a new face among the men. He stopped and said:

"What is your name?"

"Sergay Batyschkoff."

"Who sent you here?"

"My employer—" giving the name of a well-known cabinet maker.

The foreman shrugged his shoulders impatiently.

"That is irregular. I am tired of having men put on me in this way."

The new carpenter held out his hands pleadingly.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but I need the work badly—please overlook the irregularity this time."

"Very well," was the gruff response, "but this will be the last."

So his name was entered with the other mechanics, and that act had far-reaching consequences.

On the 5th of February, 1880, the czar had arranged a splendid dinner in honor of the Prince of Bulgaria. It was a state affair and all of the details were planned on a scale of grandeur commensurate with the greatness of the Russian empire. Five minutes before the royal guests had assembled in the state dining room there was a dynamite explosion in the imperial palace. The mine had been set in the basement and the explosion pierced the two stone floors and made a gap ten feet long and six feet wide in the dining hall in which the table had already been laid for the dinner. The explosion killed five men of the police guard and injured thirty-five others.

The greatest consternation prevailed. The czar, of course, realized that the Nihilists had been at work, but he was terrified to think that they had gained entrance into the palace and that the explosion which had just taken place was intended to encompass his death as well as that of the members of the royal family.

The conspiracy in this case seemed to be widespread and far-reaching. Almost on the eve of the explosion in the winter palace a woman visited General Trepoff, the chief of the St. Petersburg police. She said her name was Vera Zassulic, and that she had called for the purpose of demanding satisfaction of General Trepoff for his tyranny in ordering a political prisoner, named Bogolinbuss, to be flogged for a slight breach of prison discipline. It seems that for years she had been nursing a grievance against the chief of police. She believed that she was to be the instrument by which Trepoff was to be removed from his position. Her life, it is asserted, was an apprenticeship for one thing—the killing of the czar's chief of police. At the age of seventeen she had been arrested and kept in prison for two years because she had received letters from a revolutionist. After that she passed an examination as a school teacher and was working at book binding. At the end of 1875 she returned to St. Petersburg. Her experience had prepared her for the deed. On the morning in question she presented him with a paper, and while he was reading it fired her revolver and then escaped.

It was soon after this that the czar called upon Trepoff, promoted him to the position of counsellor of state and then charged him with the commission of capturing and punishing the man or men who were guilty of the outrage in the winter palace.

Trepoff was a man of remarkable capacity. He was burly in form but singularly nimble in thought. He had the cunning of the fox with the patience and persistence of a well-trained hunting dog. A number of men were arrested on suspicion. That was necessary. It seems to be the practice of the police in all countries to arrest somebody at some time in connection with every crime that is committed. Afterwards, if the person can prove his innocence, all is well, but in the meantime there is a feeling that the police have been alert and have done everything in their power to capture the criminal. But in this instance those who were acquainted with the redoubtable Trepoff knew that he was not satisfied. A dozen or more men, who were placed in confinement immediately after the explosion, might or might not be guilty, but Trepoff knew in his own mind that he had not captured any of the principals.

The months lengthened into a year, and still he had not run across the person who was guilty of this great outrage. But the case was never out of his mind day or night, and scarcely a week passed by that he did not invent some new scheme for bringing the guilty man to justice. From time to time persons were arrested for minor political offences, and in these instances he closely scrutinized the evidence in order to form some connecting link with the affair of the explosion at the winter palace.

One morning one of the secret agents informed him that a number of men had been seen in the vicinity of the winter palace carrying bamboo canes. That, in itself, did not seem like a very extraordinary proceeding, but the fact that a number of persons carried the same sort of walking stick made it sufficiently interesting to be worthy of report to the chief of police. The response of Trepoff to this bit of news was characteristic:

"Arrest every man of them and bring them before me."

His instructions were carried out to the letter. Some fourteen men were rounded up and brought to the central police headquarters for examination. They were examined, but nothing of any importance was found on their persons. Then the canes were taken and carefully scrutinized. This search brought rich results. Every one of the sticks proved to be hollow and each one contained a sheet of tissue paper on which was printed a call for a meeting of revolutionists. It was the biggest haul that Trepoff had made in many months. The evidence proved that the men were enemies of the government. It did more than that—it paved the way to another discovery which bore directly on the mysterious explosion of February 5, 1880. One of the prisoners, being put to torture, revealed the names of several of his associates.

One of these was a certain Victor Chalturin. He was the son of a peasant, a very energetic agitator and an experienced organiser of associations of malcontents. The police visited his rooms and made a thorough search of the premises. A number of books and pamphlets found on the shelves and in closets indicated that he was a man with Nihilistic tendencies. That, in itself, while interesting, was not very important. The searchers continued at work and finally came to a cabinet with locked doors. It was broken open and in a secret drawer they found a blue print of the plans of the winter palace. It was worn and frayed at the edges as though it had been carried in someone's pocket for a long while. Most significant of all, the lines indicating the great dining hall were marked with a cross. These facts were promptly communicated to Trepoff, and he sent out a description of Chalturin to every police official in the Russian empire.

While awaiting reports from his subordinates the energetic chief of police made another discovery. It was a slip of paper which was found in the basement of the imperial palace. On it was written these words:

"Do not delay any longer. Now is the time to act."

Some bits of paper corresponding with the material on which this was inscribed, were found in Chalturin's room. The case against him appeared to be complete. It was in March, 1882,—over two years after the explosion occurred—that the chief culprit was taken into custody. He was given a speedy trial and on the 22d of March of that year was executed, and it was then, and then only, that he was recognized as the man who had introduced himself as a carpenter in the winter palace.

THE CARPENTER HELD OUT HIS HANDS PLEADINGLY.

The testimony which was brought out at the trial of Chalturin gave the authorities some idea of the marvelous ingenuity and wonderful perseverance of the Nihilists. Just prior to the explosion in the winter palace they had organized their forces under the title of "The Will of the People" and at once began to issue proclamations and pamphlets in order to swell their numbers and strengthen their cause. In January, 1880, their secret printing presses were discovered and seized by the police, and numerous arrests were made. In spite of this, they managed to issue, on the 26th of January, a program in which they declared that unless the government granted constitutional rights the czar must die. The result of this was fresh arrests, banishments to Siberia for some and death on the scaffold for others.

It was at this stage of the game that the Nihilists planned their most daring program. It was to blow up the emperor in his own palace. Its execution, as has already been stated, was undertaken by Chalturin, who was young and fervent and filled with an exaggerated sense of his own wrongs and the wrongs of the people. He was a clever cabinet maker and this enabled him, under the assumed name of Batyschkoff, to obtain a situation as a carpenter in the imperial palace. He ascertained that the emperor's dining room was above the cellar in which the carpenters were at work, although between it and the cellar there was a guard room used by the sentinels of the palace. Chalturin lived in the palace for nearly four months, and every night he used a package of dynamite for his pillow. A gendarme had been installed in the carpenter's cellar shortly after he began to work there, and this made the introduction of the dynamite exceedingly difficult, and incidentally had delayed the execution of the plot for many months.

It became generally known during the investigation in this case that the winter palace for years had been the refuge for vagabond workmen, friends of the servants, and others. Many of these were without a passport and could not have lived anywhere else with impunity. It seems that there is an old law which gives the right of sanctuary, so far as the police are concerned, to criminals taking refuge in the imperial palace. Naturally, the greatest disorder prevailed there. Discipline was at a low ebb, and the introduction was, after all, not such a difficult matter.

In spite of this laxity the authorities were puzzled to know how the dynamite came to be smuggled into the basement of the palace under the very nose of the police. One of the numerous prisoners who were arrested for the crime laughed airily when questioned about this phase of the conspiracy.

"It was easy," he said, "as easy as breathing."

"Did Chalturin carry it with him?"

"Not at all. That might have been fatal to our plans. At least a dozen men assisted in the delivery of the dynamite, and had any one of them been arrested the other eleven would have remained to have carried out the program."

"But what sort of men were they?"

"Just every-day, ordinary kind of men. The sort that would not be noticed in a crowd. For instance, the fact that a baker handed a couple of rolls to Chalturin would excite no comment, and yet those innocent bits of bread might have contained one-tenth of all the dynamite smuggled into the palace. Some of it was hidden in carpenter's tools, some in the lining of workingmen's caps. But why go further? The men who plan great things must possess great ingenuity as well as great courage."

But to get back to the narrative.

Chalturin said that while he was in the basement of the palace he suffered frightfully from headaches, which were caused by the poisonous exhalations of the nitroglycerine on which he rested every night. When the first of February arrived, fifty kilogrammes of dynamite had been introduced, and the counterfeit carpenter was now in a position to go ahead with his deadly work.

He hesitated at the last moment, but it was too late to retreat. He felt that in any event his own life was imperiled. If he accomplished the dastardly plot, he would be executed by the government; if he refused to do so, he was likely to be assassinated by his associates. While he was still in a state of uncertainty, he received a letter from the executive committee telling him to delay no longer, but to fire the dynamite.

In the excitement that ensued, Chalturin escaped and left St. Petersburg, but in the end, as already related, he was caught in the vast net spread by Trepoff and suffered death as the penalty of his great crime.

Churches and Tuberculosis.

Statistics showing how serious a problem tuberculosis is to the ordinary church congregation have been issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. From reports received from over 725 churches, with a membership of over 312,000 communicants of twenty denominations, and from 337 cities and towns in 12 states in various parts of the country, out of nearly 7,000 deaths in 1910, over 700 or 10 per cent. were caused by tuberculosis. This means 2.24 deaths for every thousand members or communicants. While the percentage of deaths from tuberculosis compared with other diseases is not higher in the churches, according to these figures, than in the country at large, the tuberculosis death rate, as shown by the church returns, is higher per thousand communicants than that for the general population in the registration area of the United States, which the census bureau gave as 1.67 in 1909.

It is impossible a man who is false to his friends and neighbors should be true to the public.—Bishop Berkeley.

Like Home Touch.

Tired and dusty, a party were returning by rail from a holiday trip Simkins, a little bald man, seated himself to read, but dropped off to sleep. On the rack was a ferocious crab in a bucket, and when Simkins went to sleep the crab woke up, and finding things dull in the bucket, started exploring. By careful investigation Mr. Crab reached the edge of the rack. Down it fell, alighting on Simkin's shoulder, where it grabbed the man's ear to steady itself. The passengers held their breath and waited for developments, but Simkins only shook his head and said: "Leggo, Sarah! I tell you I've been at the office all the evening!"

"Getting ready for your suburban gardening?"

"Yep. I've got a spade, a pick, a hoe, a rake and some garden seed, but I've ransacked the market and nobody seems to have any angle worms for sale."

A Delicate Compliment.

"My new gown received a very sincere compliment the other day."

"As to how?"

courtesy and great consideration as shown to a wandering newspaper woman who was rather friendless and lost in the heart of the Empire.

Judging from published extracts of the memoirs of Princess Louise of Saxony, the Saxon court is going to have a rather anxious time of it. Contrary to expectation, the ex-Princess speaks in terms of affection and admiration of her husband, who is now king. Somehow I got the impression from articles published at the time that he was a brutal sort of man who had treated her with gross cruelty. It would now appear that her marriage was a love match, that she adored her husband, but that the "machinations of enemies"—with more than a hint that her husband's father was the principal enemy—caused the separation of the young people just before her last child, the little Princess Monica, was born. Whatever the cause, this unfortunate royal woman has been most unhappy since. A Hapsburg, and cursed with the erratic tendencies of that hapless House, Louise of Saxony has led a broken life. She resisted every attempt made to take away her last child, until forced by her necessities and the offer of a large sum of money. Then she gave Princess Monica to her father, and has never since laid an eye on her. She retired to Florence, where she lived as the Countess of Montignose until she married an Italian pianist named Toselli, whom she made so wretched that he has begun an action for separation. There can be little doubt that there is a touch of insanity in the Hapsburg blood. The Princess was very reckless, audacious and not well balanced. She describes her last interview with the King of Saxony before she fled and before her husband ascended the throne, as one in which he informed her that as she had provided princes to continue the royal line he had no further use for her.

Her version of the tragic occurrence at Meyerling, when Crown Prince Rudolphe and Marie Vetschera came to a horrible end, that Marie, maddened by Rudolphe's proposed repudiation of her, attacked her lover with a broken champagne bottle and beat him down until shot to pieces by members of his suite, is the most amazing yet put forward of that sad tragedy. It may be well to mention here that when the Crown Prince was laid out, his head, bandaged heavily as it was, appeared much smaller than was possible to a human being, even a child. It had gone to a pin-point, a sort of "empty peak," and the dead face was wounded and torn as though by ragged edge of glass. Under the billiard table, asserts Princess Louise in her staggering memoirs, was found the nude body of the woman, while all who have read that great book, "The Martyrdom of an Empress," will remember the other and more pathetic account of the finding of the bodies of the two lovers together, Rudolphe lying by the dead body of his love.

Altogether the book is causing much concern in certain royal circles, and orders for its suppression have been issued by the Austrian Government. It is one more cross for the martyr of Europe, Franz Josef, to carry—that loneliest and saddest figure in all Europe.

The recent arrest of a woman, who by writing vicious anonymous letters, upset a whole community and set families and lovers by the ears, points to the danger to which anyone may be exposed by the secret malice of another. Nothing can be more contemptible than this mean way of "getting at" one whom you dislike or who in some way has excited your jealousy or hatred. Newspaper writers, especially those who conduct correspondence columns, are at the mercy of anyone of the thin and tawdry nature that will permit him to pen a villifying anonymous letter. When complaint has to be made it should be over complainant's name, and the envelope should enclose the writer's card. In my capacity of journalist I have from time to time received nameless letters filled with nonsense of one kind or another, of abuse or malicious lies, in one or two, indeed, I recognized the hand of a friend—but these occasions were, I am glad for the sake of decent humanity to be able to say, rare. In the old days such words flicked a bit on a heart that was young and unworn, but we have long outlived all such weakness, and indeed receive nothing to cause a restless moment. People are on the whole kind-hearted and sympathetic and helpful. When, however, an anonymous fiend develops in a community, no time should be lost in hunting him (it is not always "her"- out. The harm such a one can do can hardly be calculated. In the case of Harriet de Witt, found guilty in a Pennsylvania town, homes had been wrecked, reputations shattered, lovers parted, and worse, husbands and wives separated because of the horrible malice of one mean soul. Of course, if you, dear madam, got a post card to-morrow apprising you of the infidelity of your loved and trusted better half you would put it in the fire—and so, no doubt, would I, but everybody is not as wise as we are, and there would be ructions in your town and mine were such letters flying about. Oddly enough the church is always assaulted. The minister is accused of all sorts of things. The keenest watch of all was kept on the clergyman's windows by the woman with the serpent's tongue, and, unfortunately, not the writer's cramp, who lived opposite. Everyone who went in or out was suspected of something, and characters were torn to rags by the flying pen of one vindictive woman. Persons have been tarred and feathered for less.

Bernhardt is building her tomb. Once I asked her where she would like to be laid "Not in Pere la Chaise," was the answer. "No, I want to be near the sea; so close that I may hear its surge and moan and sighing, and the whispering of the sands on the shore." But will dead ears hear anything save the song of the worm as he scrapes his way to the brain? Bernhardt is watching them build the watch towers of her soul on the gray, rough rocks of Brittany. There where the gulls whirl and the seamew cries will she lie when her hour comes, the hour of this vivid woman, who has tasted every joy, and sorrow, life has to offer; who has felt the wreath of bays leaning about her brows. Great, passionate, lonely Bernhardt.

The Peerless Peninsular

a cast-iron range with modern oven and equipment

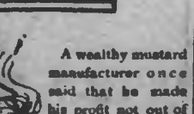
A wealthy mustard manufacturer once said that he made his profit not out of what people ate, but what they left on their plates.

The coal dealer might say about the same thing.

It's not the coal you use that buys his six-cylinder car, but the coal that goes up the chimney.

You might as well save some of that coal.

Building ranges to do good cooking and at the same time to save coal has kept us thinking and working over in Preston for upwards of 50 years. Every year improvements in range construction have been made. The flues have been widened here; a wall made thicker there; weight reduced in one spot and added to another. But every change has made the oven heat with less fuel and the construction of the range strong and durable. The perfect range which these years of study have produced is called "Peninsular."



Nickel ornaments, the number of lids, the special features or the size do not affect the internal construction or honest materials and workmanship that go into the "Peninsular." So that when buying one, a housewife may feel free to consult her own tastes as regards finish and appearance. If the range is "Peninsular" she will know that it will give her good bakings for the least amount of coal.

The Peerless

The PEERLESS Peninsular is a modern cast-iron range. Modern, because it has all the advantages of cast-iron and none of its disadvantages. In fact, it should be called a combination range—a combination of cast-iron steel. It has the firm close-fitting parts, the durable everlasting frame and the cosy home-like appearance, dear to all women; but—and here it differs from other cast-iron ranges—it also has a quick oven—an oven that heats evenly on every side, top and bottom—a square oven big enough to cook four pies at once; and it has a drop-oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

The PEERLESS Peninsular may be had with a steel warming closet and hot water reservoir and with a low closet under the oven for pots, pans and irons.

The PEERLESS is a perfect beauty and has many a convenience not found on other ranges.

Take the top of the Peerless Peninsular.

It is made in three separate sections which are interchangeable and which slide along or lift out whenever you want to clean the flues.

In most ranges the oven is either "on" or "off." That is, it is getting full heat or none at all. The Peerless Peninsular oven is regulated by means of a sliding damper so as to get just as much heat as you need. This is another way you save fuel.

Get "The Cost"

"THE COST of a Range" tells more about these Peninsular Ranges—not a list of pictures and prices, but a book showing that the after-cost is the big cost and how the "Peninsular" cuts it down. Yours, for the asking.

A WOMAN'S TRIBUTE TO SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Three instances of the kindness and courtesy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier towards a woman of no importance stand out clearly in my mind as I write to-day. The woman was myself, a newspaper correspondent; the occasions occurred during the time of the second jubilee of Queen Victoria. At the time I was serving as special staff correspondent on a Conservative journal and had absolutely not the smallest claim on the time or attention of the Liberal Premier of Canada. Barring some British politicans and a grande dame or two, who were too busy attending to their own affairs to interest themselves in those of another, the writer had none to aid her to the "heart of things," to which it was necessary she should come close in the interests of the great journal she had the honour to represent. The outlook appeared somewhat forlorn when one day a note came to the quiet London lodgings accompanied by certain invitations to attend affairs of moment. This was followed by an interview at the Hotel Cecil, where the Colonial Ministers were lodged, and where Sir Wilfrid, surrounded as he was by persons of Imperial, as well as Colonial importance, took time to see me and personally interest himself in securing for me every opportunity to witness at close quarters those events the reports of which would be of most interest to Canadian readers. With the unfailing courtesy for which he is noted, and the gentle manner which of itself flatters every woman, Canada's Premier saw to it that the correspondent of the opposition newspaper had every facility for correctly reporting the great events in progress. The interview took more than an hour, during which much that was of moment to me was made clear. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will have doubtless forgotten it. To one grateful woman the memory will remain imperishable.

The second occasion was when a carriage bearing the royal liveries came at a brisk trot down the quiet square and stopped before the house where I lodged. An invitation had preceded it, and it was with much state and outward dignity that the woman took her seat and was driven to the Hotel Cecil, there to be joined by Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier and another lady. With affectionate kindness Lady Laurier insisted that the woman journalist should have the place of honour beside the Premier, while she sat with her back to the horses, and thus we drove through the cheering crowds to Buckingham Palace, and there she was presented to Edward, Prince of Wales, and his beautiful Consort, so shortly to be our beloved rulers.

The great ball given at the Hotel Cecil in honour of the Colonial Premiers was the third occasion on which great honour came my way. I remember it keenly, because of difficulty about a gown. I was in the usual state of Woman—with "nothing to wear," but the happy thought that no one would notice me reconciled me to the fact that a "little touch here and there" would redeem an old campaigner of a gown from absolute dowdiness. What an assemblage was that gathered from the ends of Empire! Duchesses and Indian princes, Joseph Chamberlain, and the rest of the Commons; Lord this and the Marquis of the other place; brains and beauty, diamonds and diadems, red coats and black coats blazing with Orders. One's brain was so busy taking notes of the Duchess of Portland's laces, the coronet of Her Grace of Devonshire, worn the new way, far back on her head; the fringe on an Indian princess's shawl, and the diamonds worn by Lady Lansdowne, that when an imposing person in a red coat offered a neat arm one took it with a start, and was led away meek as a sheep going to pastures fresh. Seeing me rather isolated and lonely Sir Wilfrid had sent for me, being unable to move from the circle which surrounded him, and the signal honour of promenading the ball-room and going into supper with Canada's Premier was accorded to the obscure newspaper woman. I never met Sir Wilfrid Laurier before these events, and have spoken to him only once since; but I cannot forget the simple kindness and courtesy which prompted the first gentleman of Canada and his wife to single out for such honour an unknown writer simply because she hailed from their own country and was working more or less in that country's interests. Had one been a great lady, or a powerful person, or an important factor of some kind or other, these acts of courtesy would not perhaps have appealed as keenly as they did. Sir Wilfrid was Canada's pride on all the imposing Imperial occasions at which he represented this country during his Premiership, and from my heart—as apart from any one side or party in politics which a woman may favour—I can say that it was with a feeling of personal loss that I saw the tide turn against him the other day, as it is with a feeling of respectful affection and admiration that I to-day write of his kindness, his simple

Sir Wilfrid was Canada's pride on all the imposing Imperial occasions at which he represented this country during his Premiership, and from my heart—as apart from any one side or party in politics which a woman may favour—I can say that it was with a feeling of personal loss that I saw the tide turn against him the other day, as it is with a feeling of respectful affection and admiration that I to-day write of his kindness, his simple courtesy and great consideration as shown to a wandering newspaper woman who was rather friendless and lost in the heart of the Empire.

Judging from published extracts of the memoirs of Princess Louise of Saxony, the Saxon court is going to have a rather anxious time of it. Contrary to expectation, the ex-Princess speaks in terms of affection and admiration of her husband, who is now king. Somehow I got the impression from articles published at the time that he was a brutal sort of man who had treated her with gross cruelty. It would now appear that her marriage was a love match, that she adored her husband, but that the "machinations of enemies"—with more than a hint that her husband's father was the principal enemy—caused the separation of the young people just before her last child, the little Princess Monica, was born. Whatever the cause, this unfortunate royal woman has been most unhappy since. A Hapsburg, and cursed with the erratic tendencies of that hapless House, Louise of Saxony has led a broken life. She resisted every attempt made to take away her last child, until forced by her necessities and the offer of a large sum of money. Then she gave Princess Monica to her father, and has never since laid an eye on her. She retired to Florence, where she lived as the Countess of Montignose until she married an Italian pianist named Toselli, whom she made so wretched that he has begun an action for separation. There can be little doubt that there is a touch of insanity in the Hapsburg blood. The Princess was very reckless, audacious and not well balanced. She describes her last interview with the King of Saxony before she fled and before her husband ascended the throne, as one in which he informed her that as she had provided princes to continue the royal line he had no further use for her.

Her version of the tragic occurrence at Meyerling, when Crown Prince Rudolphe and Marie Vetschera came to a horrible end, that Marie, maddened by Rudolphe's proposed repudiation of her, attacked her lover with a broken champagne bottle and beat him down until shot to pieces by members of his suite, is the most amazing yet put forward of that sad tragedy. It may be well to mention here that when the Crown Prince was laid out, his head, bandaged heavily as it was, appeared much smaller than was possible to a human being, even a child. It had gone to a pin-point, a sort of "empty peak," and the dead face was wounded and torn as though by ragged edge of glass. Under the billiard table, asserts Princess Louise in her staggering memoirs, was found the nude body of the woman, while all who have read that great book, "The Martyrdom of an Empress," will remember the other and more pathetic account of the finding of the bodies of the two lovers together, Rudolphe lying by the dead body of his love.

Altogether the book is causing much concern in certain royal circles, and orders for its suppression have been issued by the Austrian Government. It is one more cross for the martyr of Europe, Franz Josef, to carry—that loneliest and saddest figure in all Europe.

The recent arrest of a woman, who by writing vicious anonymous letters, upset a whole community and set families and lovers by the ears, points to the danger to which anyone may be exposed by the secret malice of another. Nothing can be more contemptible than this mean way of "getting at" one whom you dislike or who in some way has excited your jealousy or hatred. Newspaper writers, especially those who conduct correspondence columns, are at the mercy of anyone of the thin and tawdry nature that will permit him to pen a villifying anonymous letter. When complaint has to be made it should be over complainant's name, and the envelope should enclose the writer's card. In my capacity of journalist I have from time to time received nameless letters filled with nonsense of one kind or another, of abuse or malicious lies, in one or two, indeed, I recognized the hand of a friend—but these occasions were, I am glad for the sake of decent humanity to be able to say, rare. In the old days such words flicked a bit on a heart that was young and unworn, but we have long outlived all such weakness, and indeed receive nothing to cause a restless moment. People are on the whole kind-hearted and sympathetic and helpful. When, however, an anonymous fiend develops in a community, no time should be lost in hunting him (it is not always "her") out. The harm such a one can do can hardly be calculated. In the case of Harriet de Witt, found guilty in a Pennsylvania town, homes had been wrecked, reputations shattered, lovers parted, and worse, husbands and wives separated because of the horrible malice of one mean soul. Of course, if you, dear madam, got a post card to-morrow apprising you of the infidelity of your loved and trusted better half you would put it in the fire—and so, no doubt, would I, but everybody is not as wise as we are, and there would be ructions in your town and mine were such letters flying about. Oddly enough the church is always assaulted. The minister is accused of all sorts of things. The keenest watch of all was kept on the clergyman's windows by the woman with the serpent's tongue, and, unfortunately, not the writer's cramp, who lived opposite. Everyone who went in or out was suspected of something, and characters were torn to rags by the flying pen of one vindictive woman. Persons have been tarred and feathered for less.

Bernhardt is building her tomb. Once I asked her where she would like to be laid "Not in Pere la Chaise," was the answer. "No, I want to be near the sea; so close that I may hear its surge and moan and sighing, and the whispering of the sands on the shore." But will dead ears hear anything save the song of the worm as he scrapes his way to the brain? Bernhardt is watching them build the watch towers of her soul on the gray, rough rocks of Brittany. There where the gulls whirl and the seamew cries will she lie when her hour comes, the hour of this vivid woman, who has tasted every joy, and sorrow, life has to offer; who has felt the wreath of bays leaning about her brow as Great, passionate, lonely Bernhardt.

Set this row of medicine bottles on your shelf, and put your lips to them when you are so disposed:

When doubtful or depressed, read the 27th Psalm.

If there grows about your heart a chilly sensation, warm it with the 3rd of Revelation.

If you are short in the month's rent, read the 37th Psalm.

When you get that lonesome feeling, turn to Psalm 91.

If anyone pelts you with hard words, turn to the 15th chapter of John.

When you are getting discouraged about your work, read the 126th Psalm and Galatians vi., 7-9.

And when you are down and out of sorts you may find consolation in the 12th chapter of Hebrews.

But when all these fail you, don't take it out on your wife or in on a Scotch and soda.

The same relief is ready for you. Are you sure you do not need it? If Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy helped Charles Holmes, why won't it help you?

"I was troubled with heart disease, and after reading about Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I got a bottle. Before I got the Heart Remedy I had to sit up most of the night, and felt very bad at my stomach. Whatever I would eat made me feel worse, and my heart beat very fast. But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I am all right now. I eat good, sleep good, and feel like a new man, although I am almost 68 years old. I have been a soldier in the late war of the rebellion, and was badly wounded." CHARLES HOLMES, Private Co. The Peerless Peninsular

A wealthy mustard manufacturer once said that he made his profit not out of what people ate, but what they left on their plates.

The coal dealer might say about the same thing.

It's not the coal you use that buys his six-cylinder car, but the coal that goes up the chimney.

You might as well save some of that coal.

Building ranges to do good cooking and at the same time to save coal has kept us thinking and working over in Preston for upwards of 50 years. Every year improvements in range construction have been made. The flues have been widened here; a wall made thicker there; weight reduced in one spot and added to another. But every change has made the oven heat with less fuel and the construction of the range strong and durable. The perfect range which these years of study have produced is called "Peninsular."

Nickel ornaments, the number of lids, the special features or the size do not affect the internal construction or honest materials and workmanship that go into the "Peninsular." So that when buying one, a housewife may feel free to consult her own tastes as regards finish and appearance. If the range is "Peninsular" she will know that it will give her good bakings for the least amount of coal.

The Peerless

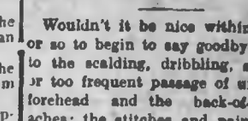
The PEERLESS Peninsular is a modern cast-iron range. Modern, because it has all the advantages of cast-iron and none of its disadvantages. In fact, it should be called a combination range—a combination of cast-iron steel. It has the firm close-fitting parts, the durable everlasting frame and the cosy home-like appearance, dear to all women; but—and here it differs from other cast-iron ranges—it also has a quick oven—an oven that heats evenly on every side, top and bottom—a square oven big enough to cook four pies at once; and it has a drop-oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

The PEERLESS Peninsular may be had with a steel warming closet and hot water reservoir and with a low closet under the oven for pots, pans and irons.

The PEERLESS is a perfect beauty and has many a convenience not found on other ranges.

Take the top of the Peerless Peninsular.

It is made in three separate sections which are interchangeable and which slide along or lift out whenever you want to clean the flues.



In most ranges the oven is either "on" or "off." That is, it is getting full heat or none at all. The Peerless Peninsular oven is regulated by means of a sliding damper so as to get just as much heat as you need. This is another way you save fuel.

Get "The Cost"

"THE COST of a Range" tells more about these Peninsular Ranges—not a list of pictures and prices, but a book showing that the after-cost is the big cost and how the "Peninsular" cuts it down. Yours, for the asking.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

OCTOBER 8, 1911.
(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Life-Giving Stream.—Ezek xlvii., 1-12. Read Rev. xxii., 1-5.

Golden Text—Whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely.—Rev. xxii., 17.

1. Verses 1-2—What does water, when used as a figure in the Bible, generally stand for?

2. What house is here referred to, was it a real or imaginary house of God?

3. What are the influences which flow out from the house of God?

4. What blessings have Christianity brought to the world?

5. In how many ways is Christianity propagated? Specify some of them?

6. Verse 3—What are the chief means by which we measure, or test, the beneficent influences of Christianity?

7. What is the least personal experience a person must have to constitute him a real Christian?

8. What are among the first blessings which come to an individual, a community, or a nation, or the adoption of Christianity?

9. Verses 4-5—What if any special blessings are there for the children of God after conversion?

10. What are the limits to the possibilities of personal Christian experience?

11. What is your conception of the meaning of the figure "water to swim in"

12. How may our growing conception of the love of God be illustrated with this figure of swimming in water that was at first only ankle deep?

13. Verses 6-7—From an art and utilitarian standpoint what do trees represent?

14. Show how Christianity ministers to the all-round needs of humanity

15. Verse 8—For what class of people is Christianity primarily meant?

16. The waters here referred probably emptied into the Dead Sea. What is the nature of the water of the Dead Sea?

17. Nothing could live in the Dead Sea. What effect was this living water to have upon it?

18. What effect has Christianity upon countries that are cruel?

19. Verses 9-11—What is the effect of Christianity upon material progress, inventions, manufacturing and commerce?

20. Verse 12—What effect does Christianity have upon sentiment, happiness, enjoyment of life and human love?

Lesson for Sunday, October 15, 1911—The Return from the Captivity.—Ezra i., 1-11; ii., 64-70.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1810 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

PROTECT FEATHERED KING

German society women and favorite actresses—who between them make and unmake fashions in Germany—have leagued together to do away with bird-of-paradise feathers and other millinery trappings derived from winged creatures. The movement is led by Professor Schillings, a famous African explorer, and he has secured the support of the Grand Duchess of Mechlinburg-Schwerin, Princess Marie Alexandrine of Reuss, Fraulein Fritzi Massary, the uncrowned queen of German musical comedy, and a number of other ladies all-potent in the realm of fashion.

TO WASH SEPARATOR

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. J. E. Watson, Missisquoi Co., Que.

We wash our separator in three different waters. The parts are first rinsed in clean warm water. In the second water a little "Kleansine" is added and the parts thoroughly washed, every minute crevice being cleaned out with a wooden splinter. The wood splinter has an advantage over a metal wire or nail in that the separator parts are not scratched by it. A small brush we use in preference to a cloth.

Mrs. J. E. Watson

Lastly comes the scalding and wiping. Many do not think wiping a necessity, but I think that by wiping thoroughly, that is rubbing hard, close inspection will not find any yellow accumulations around the seams. A sunbath completes the cleansing process.

The separator must be kept well oiled. We do not neglect this, and very seldom do we have any difficulty with our separator. If the separator is well fastened to a firm foundation, is turned evenly and kept well oiled, it will give satisfaction.

THE HEALTHY CHILD

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. K. A. Grimes

The normal child is blessed with an elastic frame that readily throws off any ordinary indisposition. Even actual diseases of transitory type, such as whooping cough, measles, etc., are little to be feared, if the child has a healthy, well-nourished body, and is given prompt and sensible treatment. The system easily recuperates after such illnesses, and, with good care and proper food, the patient is soon "as good as new."

No departure from normal health, however, should pass unnoticed, even if very slight. Any preventive or curative measures that are known to be beneficial should be taken at the outset of the trouble, and no pains should be spared to restore health conditions to their proper balance. The parent who neglects to do this is, in the last measure, reprehensible.

But there is a great difference between the sane, common-sense handling of real illness, and the over-anxious aggravation of fancied ailments. So much stress is laid on the force of mental suggestion nowadays, that it would seem as though every mother would realize its influence on the plastic child-mind. If a child is told that he is sick, and treated so, he soon becomes so in reality—so far as reality can exist in his own mind, which is the worst form of trouble to cope with.

ILLS OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

Very often a child comes in from school, over-heated and over-tired, his digestive organs over-taxed by a luncheon of rich pastry, and, in consequence, a little feverish. A cool bath and a quiet sleep are usually all he needs to remedy the conditions. But mother, alarmed at his rapid pulse, and the heat rash on his tender skin, loudly expresses her belief that he has "caught" the measles, or whatever may have been the latest local scare-crow. She bundles him into bed with ostentatious care, tells him excitedly that he probably will be out of school for a long time, and telephones for the doctor.

The little fellow, scared to death at all this boding activity, tosses restlessly, his temperature steadily rising, until between the running in and out, the discussion of other similar "cases," and the half-understood consideration of half a dozen suggested remedies, he apparently becomes very much worse.

FATHER WORKS A CURE

Meanwhile father has come home. He has a level head, and a cool temperament, and takes in the situation at a glance. Assuring the worried, hysterical mother that he will take the very best of care of the little fellow, he sends her off to get the rest that, by this time, she is much in need of. As soon as she is safely away—it would have done no good to try it before—he takes the small patient out of the tumbled sheets, wraps him in a clean, cool gown, and carries him over to a rocking-chair by the window. There he tells him odd, entertaining little stories of fairies and moon-elves, or, perhaps, of "what papa did when he was a boy," until the excitement is utterly forgotten, and the tired little head nods happily against father's restful shoulder. The rapid pulse slows, the red blaze on cheeks subsides into a healthy pink glow, and the relaxed muscles show that the tension is over, and the recovery well begun. A dose of some cooling laxative completes the cure, and the next morning the laddie rakes, "fine and fit" again.

Of course the mother was not to blame—and yet, wasn't she? Instead of yielding to the first impulse of frightened maternal anxiety, should she not have trained herself to a calmer nerve control, and a fundamental knowledge of childish ailments that would have been able to distinguish false symptoms from true ones? Such training should surely be counted a part of the equipment for intelligent motherhood.

When one sees girls of from 12 to 18 continually complaining, discontented, anemic, and what our grandmothers used to call "triflin'," one wonders what sort of mother they must have. The girl of that age ought to have something else in her mind's eye besides brooding over physical ills. Even if she is naturally slender, and not over-strong, no end is gained by focusing her attention upon herself and her ailments. Put her out into the fresh air—but do not tell her it is for her health's sake—give her some new and novel interest, a pair of skates, a camera, or a gun, even, and then never ask her how she feels. Take it for granted that life is too full of pleasure and interest for her to feel badly. Nine times out of ten she will forget her petted indispositions, and take on a tint of ruddy, healthful color.

Not that every move should not be watched. See that the slight body is well and sensibly clothed, that the strength is not over-taxed, and that the morbidly-turned mind is brought into contact with only sane, normal, healthful subjects. But never let her know you are watching for that would spoil it all.

Nine-tenths of our listless, physically and nervously-wrecked women have been made so by the unwise sympathy of friends in magnifying ordinary transitory ills into dreadful and incurable ones. Often the seed is sown in their girlhood days by the over-anxiety of nervous, tensily excited mothers. It will be an unmitigated blessing when the whole learns to talk health, not disease, especially before children.—Farmers' Review.

THOUGHT IT WAS CANCER

"Fruit-a-tives" completely restored me

SYDNEY MINES, N.S., Jan. 25th, 1910.

"For many years, I suffered tortures from Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Two years ago, I was so bad that I vomited my food constantly. I also suffered with Constipation. I consulted physicians, as I was afraid the disease was cancer, but medicine gave only temporary relief.

I read in the 'Maritime Baptist' about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the cures this medicine was making and I decided to try it. After taking three boxes, I found a great change for the better and now I can say 'Fruit-a-tives' has entirely cured me when every other treatment failed, and I reverently say "Thank God for 'Fruit-a-tives'."

EDWIN ORAM, Sr.

"Fruit-a-tives" sweetens the stomach, increases the actual quantity of gastric juice in the stomach and ensures complete digestion of all sensible food. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices.

A GOOD KITCHEN GARDEN

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. L. C. McKinnon, Cumberland Co., N.S.

I first had my eyes opened to the marvellous opportunity that we women folks have of adding to the variety and healthfulness of our diet by having a good kitchen garden when attending a lecture at the Amherst Winter Fair some years ago. Professor Sears, then of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College, remarked that there were over a dozen varieties of vegetables that farmers might grow in their gardens. I had my doubts about it, and a famer sitting directly in front of me was even more doubtful, for he turned to his wife and said, "He'll have to show me," And Professor Sears did show us. I did not count the number of vegetables that he named over, but he named his dozen all right. He advised us to send away early and get a seed catalogue. I did. And by the next spring I had my mind clearly made up as to where the garden was going to be, just exactly what I wanted in it, and the seeds ordered.

Our garden had always been more or less of a failure before that. That spring putting in several times as much as ever before, it went in without delay. The secret was that I had made all my plans beforehand, and when the men did not have to plan but simply go ahead and put the seeds in, there were not the objections usually raised and no time was lost talking about where to put this, that, and the other thing. I believe that almost every one of us farm women could get a garden if we tried. The main thing is to have our plans ready when the snow melts. Once we have had a garden with a good variety of vegetables we can always depend upon the future cooperation of the men folks in getting our plans carried into effect.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW

From Farm and Dairy.

A grain of salt odded to cream will make it whip more easily.

All stains should be removed from clothing and household linen before putting it in the wash.

To revive the luster of morocco or any other leather, apply the white of an egg with a sponge.

Always have a small opening in the center of the upper crust on a fruit pie to allow the steam to escape while baking.

A tablespoon of soda added to a quart of water and boiled in the coffee pot for an hour will thoroughly cleanse the pot. Rinse well.

Don't save old trash, thinking that it may be used some day. The time and patience consumed in handling it cannot be compensated for by it.

Physicians assert that baked potatoes are more nutritious than those cooked in any other way, and that fried ones are the most difficult to digest.

THE DUCHESS OF WESTMINSTER

The long-rumored breach between the Duke of Westminster and his wife, the Duchess, seems imminent. Of late the Duke has been squandering his patrimony to such an extent that he has been placed on allowance by the executors of his father's estate.

TO ATTEND WELLINGTON

Third Son of the King Not Likely to Go to Eton

It is understood that Prince Henry, third son of the King, who is now at school at Broadstairs, will go to Wellington College. It was thought at one time that the young Prince would follow the steps of his uncle, Prince Alexander of Teck, and his cousin, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and the Duke of Coburg, by proceeding to Eton; but, although the senior school enjoys a great deal of royal favor, it has never been regarded as the best vehicle for royal education. King Edward, as Prince of Wales, used to attend lectures at Eton, and one or two pupils used to share his recreations at Windsor, but Prince Alexander was the first member of the Royal family to be included on the roll of oppidans.

FROM SHOP TO STAGE

Mlle. Navarra, a Shop Girl, to Take a Part in David Copperfield.

One of the happiest young women in Paris is Mlle. Navarra, of Lyons, who has been engaged by M. Andre Antoine in the troupe of the Odeon, and who will play a part in M. Max Maurey's adaption of "David Copperfield" there this season. Mlle. Navarra was a member of an amateur dramatic society in Lyons. She worked for her living in a shop there, spent her evenings learning parts and rehearsing them, and became one of the leading ladies of the Lyons Amateur Dramatic Society. There are a number of these amateur societies in all the big provincial towns of France, and every year the clubs meet in friendly rivalry in one of the big towns, and prizes are distributed to those whom leading managers consider best. There was a competition of this kind at Doual. Mlle. Navarra and a M. Dervigny represented the Lyons Club, and were awarded the second prize. Among the audience was M. Antoine. He sent a letter to Mlle. Navarra offering her and M. Dervigny engagements in the Odeon troupe, and they accepted, threw up their positions in the shop, and came to Paris.

CONFESSED TO MURDER

Paul Houssard Admits Crime—Murdered Man's Wife Also Arrested

M. Paul Houssard, the well-to-do resident of Toulouse who was charged with the murder of M. Guillotin, the husband of the woman he loved, has confessed to the crime. Mme. Guillotin was arrested as an accomplice. This fact, which became known to Houssard, seems to have affected him deeply, and he sent a letter to the investigating magistrate, in which he said: "I acted in a moment of folly. From childhood I have loved Mme. Guillotin. To live with her was the ideal of my life. I wish to state that she has never been my mistress. I knew that she was unhappy. She is innocent and I am guilty. Give her her liberty and do what you like with me."

TATTERSHALL MAY GO

Archaeologists Are Up in Arms Over Possible Destruction of the Building

Before the dark shadows of the greatest tragedies that history of the country out of England will be re-lived. Some time in the future the present Lord Fortescue will sell the estate in Lincolnshire, including Tattershall Castle. When this transfer took place no anxiety was felt by those who regard Tattershall Castle as a precious national possession. Unless it were razed to the ground, a danger as remote as not to be useful to contemplate, nothing, it was thought, could happen to it. The castle and church of Tattershall were built by Lord Cromwell, Lord Treasurer of England, who died in 1455. The manor, having reverted to the Crown, was granted by Edward VI. in 1551 to the Earl of Lincoln, and towards the end of the seventeenth century passed as a dowry into the Fortescue family. The most valuable and interesting relics of the castle are its magnificent fireplaces, which tell its history in heraldry, and of which there are no less than forty-eight. It is just these fireplaces which appealed to the taste of some millionaire, and he has made a very tempting offer to the syndicate that owns the castle. "If you remove those fireplaces," said W. T. Cragg, the well-known archaeologist, "you destroy the history of the castle. The fireplace in the hall of state or audience chamber on the second floor has a row of heraldic shields and badges in circles. First the Treasurer's Purse, then St. George and the Dragon, Cromwell and Tattershall impaling Deincourt. In what was probably the state bedroom the fireplace is an exceedingly delicate architectural composition, the spandrels being carved with foliage. Alternating with the Treasurer's Purse are the shields of Bernak, Deincourt, Driby, Cromwell and Tattershall. The fourth floor has a fireplace of somewhat similar character, the shields of Deincourt, Driby, Cromwell and Bernak being separated by small Treasurer's Purses."

The Lincolnshire Archaeological Society has sent a strongly-worded protest to the commission which has care of national monuments, and has also appealed to the Prime Minister to stop the sale until a fund has been collected to outbid the American millionaire.

LAWYERS TOO NUMEROUS

The Bar is Getting Uneasy and is Asking Restrictions

Complaints about the overcrowding of the legal profession in Germany continue to grow louder and more numerous. That a great increase in the number of lawyers should mark the growth of the empire, and is especially the development of industry, was to be foreseen and welcomed, but the increase has now reached such a pitch that the Bar itself is getting seriously uneasy and is calling for State restriction on the number of candidates for admission. A young lawyer elects for the service or civil legal career. He either enters the judicial employment of the State that leads to a judgeship with a salary of $3,500 a year, or he becomes an advocate, practicing in as many courts as he can find the time or business for. To an observer the rush to the legal profession is hardly intelligible in the face of the smallness of the costs fixed by law as lawyers' fees, and, indeed, the seeming cheapness of litigation on the whole. The subject of overcrowding the Bar will be discussed at the National Law Congress to be held shortly.

FISH WERE DRUNK

Seven hundred gallons of confiscated wine, thrown into a canal at Frontignah (Herault), by the Customs officers, have had, it is alleged by Paris newspapers, the effect of intoxicating the fish, which swim to the top of the water and can be picked up by hand. The housewives refuse to buy fish when they can get them for themselves, and the fishermen in the district have united to protest against the action of the Customs officers.

Dear Sirs.—I am in receipt of my suit a few days ago, and I am very well pleased with the same. The tailoring is first-class in every respect, and the fit the same. Thanking you for the way you made all the changes I asked for. The same suit here would cost, tailor made, $30. So wishing you all success in your business,—I am, respectfully yours,
Order No. C.F. 2125. (Signed) DAN. J. McKENZIE.

"Never Satisfied after Testing in Actual Wear."
Bridgetown, Nova Scotia.
Gentlemen.—Last year I got from you some sketches, and afterwards wrote for cutting and summer samples. I must now say that after fifteen months' experience with your clothing I am better impressed with it than I was at the beginning, if possible. The tweed suitings have wore wonderfully well, retained their colours and shape, and after fifteen months of "strenuous life," they look almost as good as new.
I would now like samples of some steel grey worsteds and light-weight summer and spring cloths, and also some for camerets.—I remain, yours truly,
(Signed) M. E. ARMSTRONG.

FORTUNES MAY BE YOURS

How to Become as Rich as a Rothschild or a Rockefeller

There is no doubt that a fortune, and probably a large one, awaits the man who shall solve certain problems. Surgery, for instance, has made wonderful strides of late years, and its allied art of dentistry has become an almost exact science; but, though the dentist can furnish the mouth with new and wonderfully efficient instruments of mastication, yet the surgeon has hitherto entirely failed to replace the worn-out organs of digestion, says Tit-Bits.

He can remove, wholly or in part, almost every organ of the body, but he can do very little towards their artificial replacement. It is said that Mr. Rockefeller has offered half a million dollars to anyone who will supply him with a new digestive apparatus, but up to the present we have not heard that anyone has drawn the cash.

The same gentleman is bald, and although he is probably less perturbed about his bald pate than about his dyspeptic stomach, yet doubtless he would be willing to endow that man with a pension for life who would fathatch his roof. Many hair-washes there are which have admirable qualities in the direction of stimulating the growth of the hair and preventing it from falling out, but even the manufacturer of these articles of the toilet would frankly admit that a real and infallible cure for baldness has not been discovered. The man who could rise up and demonstrate to the world that he can make hair spring up on a patch of pate as smooth as a billiard ball would be a millionaire in six months.

Many diseases, like leprosy, the plague, cholera, and smallpox, have been wholly or nearly eradicated from Western Europe, America, and the British Colonies, yet rheumatism continues to cripple tens of thousands, and is considered by most doctors as practically incurable. The man who can find a genuine cure is likely to be a millionaire in life and to have his statue in every city after he is dead.

The same remarks apply to cancer. Investigators are engaged on the problems involved in the cure of this disease in every quarter of the globe. It is no exaggeration to say that millions of pounds have been spent on research work in connection with it, and yet its ravages remain unabated.

So far as consumption is concerned, all the above remarks apply; but in this case a more rational treatment of the patients and their more careful isolation have done something to reduce its ravages. There are teeming thousands of men and women who would be willing to shower all their treasures at the feet of the man who, one fine morning, could step forth and say, "Here is a certain cure for consumption," or, "I hold in my hands the antidote to cancer." Aye, the world would beatify him.

No one has ever found a cure for sea-sickness, yet there is a fortune awaiting the man who will do so. Many sailors even, of whom the "Mighty Nelson" was one, are victims of sea-sickness if the weather should be at all rough. It has been a human experience ever since man ventured to embark upon the ocean. Yet nobody has ever found a remedy for it.

Just as, when you have a cold, every person you meet will give you a new and infallible cure, so, when you are going for a voyage, short or long, everyone will give you a simple panacea for sea-sickness. If the sea is as calm as a mill-pond the nostrum acts, but in the chops of the Channel it proves a tragical failure. There is a lot of money in an infallible cure for sea-sickness.

GOOD SHORT STORIES

In the "upper end" of Pike County, Pennsylvania, there is a man who is so noted for his conversational abilities that his acquaintances avoid giving him unnecessary opportunities to talk.

One cold morning this man rode up to a hotel in the neighbourhood just as the guests were finishing breakfast. He dismounted, walked in, saluted the landlord in his usual loud tones and declared that he was so cold that he could hardly talk.

Just then a nervous traveller who was present stepped up to the landlord and, taking him by the coat, said:

"Mr. L., have my horse brought as soon as possible."

"What is the matter, my dear sir?" enquired the anxious landlord. "Has anything happened?"

"Nothing; nothing! Only I want to get away from here before that man thaws."—Boston Herald.

The day was stickily hot. The car windows were open and a large part of the new South blew in and stuck to the travelling man as he jolted through the Old Dominion. At last he arrived in Richmond, brushed enough dust off his face to make sure that the right man was getting off and hailed one of the little seagoing hacks common to Richmond. It was driven by an aged negro. "Drive me to a haberdashery," said the travelling man, surveying his soiled raiment with disfavour.

"Yassuh," said the negro. "Giddup."

The old horse started off at a little stiff-legged jog trot. The driver seemed to be thinking deeply. By and by he pulled the horse to a stop and leaned backward to his fare. "Scuse me, suh," said he, "but wey did you all want to go?"

"Drive me to a haberdashery," said the travelling man.

"Oh, yassuh," said the negro. "To be suah. Giddup."

The hack rattled on for a little way and then the negro stopped, got off the box and poked his head in over the little door. "Mebbe Ah didn't get dat name jus' right," said he. "Would you-all mine repeatin' it, suh?"

The travelling man said for the third time that he wanted to go to a haberdashery. The old driver shook his gray wool and looked grieved. "Ah'm an ole man," said he. "Youah kin trus' me. Wheah is it you really wants to go? Ah wont nebbah tell."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

An old lawyer had instructed his client, accused of theft, to weep whenever he struck the desk with his hand. In the ardour of his plea he forgot and struck the desk at an inauspicious moment. His client promptly fell to sobbing with much energy, and the judge turned upon her.

"What is the matter with you?" he asked.

"He told me to cry as often as he struck the table," said the woman, lifting a pair of large, dry eyes to the judge's face as she put down her handkerchief.

A laugh ran around the room, but the unabashed lawyer saw his opportunity.

"It is not possible," he said when the laughter had subsided, "that anyone here can reconcile the idea of crime with such candor and simplicity as this."—Youth's Companion.

Robbie met a neighbour who was smoking some fine fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Ha' you a match, Sandie?" he queried.

The match was forthcoming—but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I ha' left me tobacco to hame."

"Then," said Sandie after a silence, "ye micht as well gie me back me match."—Success Magazine.

"I dunno how Bill's a-goin' to vote in this election," said the campaign worker. "I've hearn tell he's on the fence."

"He was thar," replied the neighbour; "but one o' the candidates let fall a dollar on the off side o' the fence and Bill got dizzy an' fell over."—Christian Register.

It would appear from an incident reported from Vienna that an emperor is not to be trusted with a pencil.

Some time ago while holding court in the royal palace overlooking the Danube, Francis Joseph received a Hungarian blacksmith, who desired to thank his majesty for the decoration conferred upon him in recognition of his having invented an agricultural machine.

During the audience the blacksmith drew from his pocket a photograph of the emperor, and handing it to his majesty said:

"May I ask your majesty for your autograph?"

"I cannot give you my autograph at the present moment," said Francis Joseph with a smile, "for I have neither pen nor pencil within reach."

"I have brought a pencil with me," said the smith, handing it to the emperor. Francis Joseph thereon attached his signature to the photograph and dismissed the smith with a smile and his customary inclination of the head. To the emperor's surprise the smith did not retire.

"Is there anything else I can do for you?" asked the emperor.

"Yes, your majesty, I am waiting for my pencil."

The emperor had mechanically pocketed it, and he returned it with a hearty laugh.—Harper's Weekly.

Pimples So Bad He Was Ashamed

Tried Everything but Did It No Good. One Box of Cuticura Ointment Took Pimples Away.

"About seven years ago pimples broke out all over my face and neck. When they would first come out they would be big and red, then after a while they would turn white, and matter would come out. Sometimes they would itch so I could hardly sleep. I was ashamed to go down street, my face looked so bad. I went to several doctors and got medicine, which did me no good, and bought ointment, and was an patent medicines, but none of them would cure my face and neck. A friend advised me to try Cuticura Ointment. I got one box, and it took the pimples away before I had it all used up. I can say it is a wonderful remedy. Any sufferer who has pimples should use Cuticura Ointment if they want a sure cure. I never had any soap equal to Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Aylmer Mathieu, Parkhill, Ont., Dec. 26, 1910.

Sores All Over Baby's Body

"When my baby boy was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and caused terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt. We tried a great many remedies but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things and doctors too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan 28, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 88 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A., for a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. booklet.

CONSTIPATED CHILDREN

Constipation in children is the surest sign of danger—the most convincing signal that baby is going to be ill. Constipation leads to and actually causes more suffering in little ones than any other trouble. To keep baby well his little stomach must be kept sweet and his bowels regular—Baby's Own Tablets will do that—they will do it safely, surely and without pain or griping. Concerning them Mrs. S. O. Braaten, Bergland, Ont., says:—"My baby was bothered almost continually with his stomach and bowels and was greatly constipated. Baby's Own Tablets quickly relieved him and I would not now use any other medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RECIPES FOR HOUSEWIVES

MUTTON AND CAPERS

Boiled mutton with caper sauce is familiar to every housekeeper, but all may not know the best way of preparing it. The following rule is recommended by a world famous chef: Procure a fine six-pound leg of mutton and beat the meat gently with a cleaver. Put it in a large saucepan, cover with cold water, and two sliced carrots, one sliced turnip, two sliced onions, one sliced leek, two small branches of soup celery, two bay leaves, one sprig of thyme, two cloves, one bean of garlic, a good sized tablespoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of pepper. Cover the pan and let the whole boil for an hour and 10 minutes. Remove the meat, place it upon a hot platter garnished with a few sprays of parsley and serve with caper sauce.

For caper sauce mix together over the fire two tablespoonfuls of flour and one tablespoonful and a half of butter. Add slowly a pint of veal stock, stirring continually. Season with half a teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper. Reduce the sauce by cooking it to half its original quantity. Add two tablespoonfuls of capers and let the whole boil for about two minutes. Dilute an egg yolk with half a gill of cream. Add this to the sauce and stir the whole for a moment or two. Then pour into a sauce bowl and serve. Water may be used instead of stock, which makes a good sauce, but it is not as rich. It will be in that case an ordinary "white sauce," but with additions which hide its real character.

For peach marmalade use the large, late peaches. Cut them in halves, remove the pits and crack two-thirds of the kernels. Blanch them and cut them lengthwise into strips. Put the peaches into a kettle over the fire, using three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit. Place the preserving kettle where the sugar will melt slowly and stir well with a wooden spoon. When the marmalade begins to boil stir it continually, and let it cook from 20 minutes to half an hour. Five minutes before removing from the fire add the blanched kernels. Put in jars and seal with paraffin. Apricot marmalade is prepared in the same way, but only half the kernels should be added, instead of two-thirds, and the marmalade should be cooked only 20 minutes.

For a crabapple marmalade, rub the fruit well with a rough cloth, but cut the stems and flower ends and quarter, without removing the core or skin. Stew the fruit in enough water to prevent burning till it is soft enough to be rubbed through a sieve or pressed through a potato ricer. Add a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit. Set the fruit back on the fire and cook it slowly until done, which should be in about 15 or 20 minutes.—New York Tribune.

CLEVER WOMAN SWINDLER

A smartly dressed woman, giving herself out as the Countess So-and-So, entered a specialist's study in the Champs Elysees quarter. "My son," she said, "is on the verge of losing his reason. He is always talking of pearls and necklaces which he is buying at different jewelers' for his lady friends. I believe he is going to become insane. What shall I do?"

"Do not worry, my dear countess," said the specialist in mental diseases. "Bring your son here to-morrow and I shall see to him." "Thank you ever so much," said the So-and-So countess.

The next day she drove in a magnificent automobile to a great jeweller's place. "Yes, this necklace will do me," she said, after choosing the finest in the shop. Counting out a dozen or so of 1,000-franc notes, she suddenly explained, "Oh, I have not enough to pay for the necklace. Would you mind sending someone with me to my house? My husband will pay."

"Certainly," said the jeweller, and a young man was sent along. Countess So-and-So introduced him to the doctor's establishment. Leaving him alone in a room with the physician of whom she spoke beforehand as her husband, she "eclipsed herself," as the French say. The doctor, face to face with the young man, began gently.

"Well, my young man, you know what it is about. Has the thing been troubling you to-day?"

"Doctor, I am waiting to be paid."

"Paid for what?"

"I want to be paid for that necklace."

"Ah, I see the thing is troubling you. Those friends of yours—"

"I am not troubled about my friends; but I must have the money for that necklace."

"But why should I pay you? This is not reasonable."

"But your wife, the countess, has just bought a necklace."

Here the doctor could not help smiling. "I am not married, so I have no wife." This only complicated matters. The more the doctor tried to reason the more excited the young man became. He talked of having been swindled and wanted to break down doors, and the doctor, fearing that he had to deal not only with a lunatic but with a violent madman, had to call in the police. At last, when the young man had time to quiet down and explain the situation, the truth dawned on the doctor and the police.—Paris correspondent London Telegraph.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

AUGUST MOONLIGHT

The solemn light behind the barns,
The rising moon, the cricket's call,
The August night, and you and I—
What is the meaning of it all?

Has it a meaning, after all?
Or is it one of Nature's lies,
That net of beauty that she casts
Over Life's unsuspecting eyes?

That web of beauty that she weaves
For one strange purpose of her own—
For this the painted butterfly,
For this the rose—for this alone!

Strange repetition of the rose,
And strange reiterated call
Of bird and insect, man and maid—
Is that the meaning of it all?

If it means nothing, after all!
And nothing lives, except to die—
It is enough—that solemn light
Behind the barns, and you and I.

USEFUL VERB "TO GET"

There is no word, long or short, in the English language capable of performing so much labour in a clear, intelligible sense as the verb to get; and here is an old-time specimen of its capabilities:

"I got on horseback within 10 minutes after I got your letter. When I got to Canterbury I got a chaise for town but I got wet through before I got to Canterbury, and I have got such a cold as I shall not be able to get rid of in a hurry. I got to the Treasury about noon, but first of all I got shaved and dressed. I soon got into the secret of getting a memorial before the board, but I could not get an answer then; however, I got intelligence from the messenger that I should most likely get one the next morning. As soon as I got back to my inn I got my supper. When I got up in the morning I got my breakfast and then got myself dressed that I might get out in time to get an answer to my memorial. As soon as I got it I got into the first chaise and got to Canterbury by 3 o'clock, and about tea time I got home.—From the Ave Maria.

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY OCTOBER 7 1911

WERE IN A WRECK

Members of "With Edged Tools" Company Had an Exciting Experience at Belleville

TWO WERE INJURED

LINDSAY, OCT. 6— The all star company which presented the play, "With Edged Tools," at the Academy to-night, met with a rather serious accident last night as they were travelling from Kingston to Lindsay. The wonder is that there were not more hurt in the accident.

The company travels in their own private car, and it appears that a stop was made at Belleville, where there was a delay of some three hours. While waiting on a siding, it is assumed that the brakes on the private car were not properly applied and it started to move down a slight grade, the result being that it bumped forcibly into the Toronto mixed, which very fortunately was standing at the station. The compact was felt throughout the car, and every window was shattered, while the seats, luggage and passengers were thrown in various directions.

One lady sustained a broken nose while Mr. Beck, the manager, sustained a nasty scalp wound. As stated before the wonder is that more were not seriously hurt. Many of the company were making preparations to retire for the night when the accident happened.

The accident will not interfere with the appearance of the company in Peterborough to-day.

TEACHERS HEAR SPLENDID ADDRESSES ON TOPICS OF PRACTICAL INTEREST

Both City and County Teachers' Associations Hold Successful Conventions—Dr. Coleman, of Toronto University, Speaks on the Subject of "Training for Citizenship" —Other Timely Topics.

In his second address to the City Teachers' Institute at yesterday afternoon's session, Dr. Coleman, of the Faculty of Education continued the subject of his morning lecture. In the comparison of the Theory of Effort, interpreted as an attempt to force the child to do what he dislikes and the Theory of Interest which aims to develop the best natural tendencies inherent in the child's nature, he referred to the prevalent criticism of the lack of articulation between the school and life, and showed that the problem of the school is the utilization of all the inherent resources of the child for social efficiency. This attem tpat conservation of energy, this effort to produce the best results attempt at conservation of energy, is at the basis of modern civilization and cannot be brought to a successful issue by the school alone. Though he could by no means agree with the man who calls the college, the grave of youth, yet he admitted that there is, at present, much waste of energy in the activities of the school; and this for three reasons, because of imperfect ideas, of imperfect methods and of the failure on the part of agencies outside the school to co-operate by taking up the work where the school left it. But so far as the school is concerned, the most potent factor in this process of elimination of waste, is interest. This may be either mediate or immediate. The child who remains after four may have no immediate interest in the neglected lesson. But his interest in the baseball game which he is missing may stimulate him to effort, and though not so powerful as immediate interest, this serves its purpose.

But to possess immediate interest, a subject need not be spectacular. The teacher who taught the volcano by setting fire to some material placed in a sand mound, and the geyser by placing a syringe beneath the same mound, created an abnormal and transient interest, that later demanded "the fire and the squirt." In other words, she appealed to a primitive or animal interest. The highest form of immediate interest, on the other hand, directs attention to things pertaining to civilized life. It causes the pupil to identify himself with modern movements and ideals. To gain this attention the element of constraint must, in some measure, enter, even at the risk of "making an unprovoked assault upon a timid child's soul.

Training For Citizenship.

In dealing with this subject the lecturer emphasized the value of obedience, proceeding from an understanding and intelligent acquiescence in law. He took as his ideal society, "The Kingdom of God," implying as it does, righteousness, peace and joy. The school must give a training in right living, attention to minor details of life.

Further, the cosmopolitan character of the Public schools of Canada, make them a wonderful agency in promotion of good will, in the extension of the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, under the fatherhood of God. This leads children to "deem more sacredly of every human heart" and to realize that the human race is as broad as time and space, that every nation has furnished its quota to civilization.

The Fourth Dimension.

Prof. Coleman warned his audience that under this enigmatical heading he did not intend to discuss a mathematical theory. He dealt, rather, with the fundamental differences in conduct of men, due to climate, environment, etc. Between the view of the East and that of the West is an unbridged gulf. Even nations separated only by an imaginary line have their peculiarities; men of various callings develop certain attitudes of mind; individuals have their idiosyncrasies. The modern class room method may overlook the fundamental differences and the teacher may forget that he is dealing, not with mankind in the mass, but with individuals.

At the close of Dr. Coleman's address Miss Morley and Mr. Kerr each gave a very comprehensive paper upon the place of Geography in the new course of studies.

THE COUNTY TEACHERS.

The annual convention of the Teachers' Association of Peterborough county was held Thursday and Friday in this city.

The convention opened Thursday morning in the Normal school with Inspector Lees in the chair. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read by the secretary and adopted a nominating committee consisting of Inspectors Broderick and Lees, Misses Duff Martin and Hamilton and Mr. Tranouth was appointed.

Mr. Lees then gave an interesting talk on the Entrance arithmetic, showing where errors most commonly occurr and pointing out the necessity of accuracy in all work. He showed clearly the advantage and necessity of using concrete material in teaching all subjects, arithmetic especially.

An open discussion of errors and how to correct them followed, which was both interesting and beneficial to all present.

After the roll call the meeting adjourned.

In the afternoon, by courtesy of the Peterborough Board of Education, and the teachers of the city, ap opportunity was given the county teachers of visiting the city school.

At 8.00 p.m. an open meeting was held in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall, where an interesting programme was rendered by Miss Chalmers, Mr. Wilson and Prof. Morrison of Queens' Univer sity. Prof. Morrison's lecture on "The Romance of Geography" was very much enjoyed by all present. He traced the development of Geography from its earliest stages to its now advanced state and showed clearly by aid of his illustration the part played by all the nations, especially Great Britain, in the advance of civilization.

A vote of thanks by Mr. Powell and Inspector Mowat was tendered the speaker of the evening.

The meeting closed with the national anthem.

A JOINT MEETING.

A joint meeting of the county and city teachers was held in the Collegiate Assembly Hall Friday morning. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mr. Yennie and after a few preliminary remarks, he introduced the speaker of the day, Mr. H. T. J Coleman, Ph.D., of the University of Toronto.

Dr. Coleman chose for his subject "Interest and Effort in Education," and after giving examples of extreme cases of each, he went on to say that they were complementary, rather than antagonistic, to each other and should go hand in hand in hand into school work.

In his second address he pointed out the different natures of interest and showed how these should be used in order to gain social efficiency.

A report of the summer session at the O. A. C. was given by Miss Garbutt and Miss Rainey. Miss Garbutt gave a definite and interesting account of the practical side of the school work, while Miss Rainey showed very entertainingly the social side of the college.

In the afternoon Dr. Coleman gave another interesting address, continuing his two previous talks and showing how environment has much to do in determining character, especially in children.

A vote of thanks was tendered Dr. Coleman for his addresses of the day.

The course in Public School Geography was discussed by Miss D. Morley and Mr. F. E. Kerr and was of benefit to those president.

The report of the Nominating committee was given as follows: Officers of the coming year:—

President—Mr. Lees.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. Tranouth.
Sec.-Treas—Miss Kirkpatrick.
Executive—Miss Martin, Miss Duff and Mr. O'Neil.
Auditors — Miss Waters and Miss Thompson.
Delegates O. E. A.—Miss Duff and Miss Rainey.
Convention adjourned.

At the close of the convention Mr. Lees, on behalf of the county teachers expressed their gratitude for the opportunity afforded them by the city teachers. Mr. Mowat responded in an able manner, saying that they were all working for the one end.

An interesting feature of the convention was the display of art from the county school, some of the work being exceptionally well done.

Terrific Struggle With Lunatic

Special to The Examiner:

BELLEVILLE, OCT. 7.—Capt. Allen of the Salvation Army had a terrific struggle with a lunatic, William Marshall, a young Englishman, who had been staying at the Army boarding house, suddenly became demented and attacked Capt. Allen. Mrs. Allen who was present, screamed for assistance and the police were sent for, but before their arrival Capt. Allen was badly used up. So tremendous was the lunatic's strength that it required eight powerful men to hold him down. He was taken to Kingston Asylum.

Street Car Episode

An incident of an extraordinary and spectacular character furnished excitement and speculation for a crowd of visitors at the corner of Charlotte and Park streets this morning about 7.45, when two painters, whose names are not to hand, were alighting from a street car at that point. One of them had a paint pail, which was on the floor of the car. By some mysterious manner it caught fire when the car was nearing the corner and when kicked off the car, the contents of the pail spread all over the street and although it mixed with the mud and water, it continued to burn furiously for several minutes, when it was finally extinguished by the crowd that assembled. It is difficult to understand how it caught fire. However, no damage resulted.

The Deluge Of Rain Drowned Out Millbrook Annual Exhibition

Weather Man Was Not in Line With Directors and Affair Was Practically Cancelled Until Next Year—A Hundred Peterborough People Braved the Elements and Visited Millbrook.

"A wet sheet and a flowing sea," says the poet. One would not have to possess a very vivid imagination in using the above nautical reference to describe the conditions which existed yesterday at Millbrook on the second day of the fall fair. It was a wet sheet of rain and a flowing sea of mud. However, this did not deter a large number of Peterborough citizens drom braving the elements. Armed with shower sticks and rain coats they embarked on the Grand Trunk special at noon, hoping against hope that when they reached their destination they would have got beyond the range of "Jupiter Pluvius." But they had reckoned without their hosts. Millbrook's annual exhibition was in the weather man's bad graces. When the crowd disembarked from the train and beheld the watery landscape, over which hung a dark, leaden-hued sky, relieved here and there by masses of black clouds, obviously much nearer the earth than the slaty background, they saw that their hopes would not be realised. The departure of the train from the station occasioned many a pang of regret, as it was with great reluctance that many of them emerged from the comfortable and inviting cars to the liquid elements without. There was no option but to stay, an dsee the trouble through to the damp and dreary end.

The village restaurants did a roaring business during the next hour or so, nearly every vacant store in the town had been improvised into a temporoary eating house, into which the people gathered, where, mounted on similarly improvised seats, in lumber-jack fashion, they forgot their troubles for a season, their attention being occupied in catering to the wants of the inner man. Following this the 57th Band, who, by the way, had been engaged to conduct the musical programme, under the leadership of Bandmaster Glidden, accompanied by a few stragglers, braved the storm and paraded to the Fair Grounds, where they learned that the show had been cancelled. A number of exhibitors had already removed their exhibits.

To the Examiner, Mr. T. A. Kelly, President of the Fair, stated that, after due consideration they had decided to cancel the Exhibition for this year. A postponement had been suggested but it was thought advisable to take the above course of action, as the lateness of the season rendered a postponement to a later date extremely risky. Asked as to what the prospects were for the Fair had the weather been favourable, Mr. Kelly replied that they were never better. Theo had never a larger, or finer lot of entries in the stock line as they had this year, and indications pointed to a banner show.

Mr. Kelly was very optimistic about the future outlook of the Fair, and was not inclined to believe that the cancellation of this year's exhibition would, in any way, affect the future progress of the Fair. In conclusion, Mr. Kelly said that all entrance money would be returned and members who had paid their annual fees to the Society for this year, would be carried over.

The main building was practically the only portion of the Fair that was intact. The rest of it had been pretty well dismantled by the time the Peterborough contingent arrived on the scene. In the main building were stowed fruits, vegetables, home-made goods, works of art, etc., all of which were of a high order, and evoked considerable praise from those who were fortunate to see them. A glance over the entry book showed Peterborough to be well represented in all kinds of exhibits. Several were heard to declare that they had never seen a finer aggregation of horses at a Fall Fair.

During the afternoon the visitors congregated around the hotels, of which there were three in number, where, all formality being scattered to the winds, they occupied their time in discussing recent events, or in watching the storm as it increased in fury. About 4.30 p.m. the trek back to the station commenced, this being accomplished in a blinding snow storm. After an hour't weary wait for the train, which was about thirty minutes late, the Conductor shouted "all aboard," and the whitening banks of the undulating country adjacent to the peaceful village of Millbrook was soon left behind.

THE BATTLE WITH THE GREAT WHITE PLAGUE

Health Association Propose to Deal With the Subject at an Early Date—What Scientists Have Done for the Prevention of the Disease.

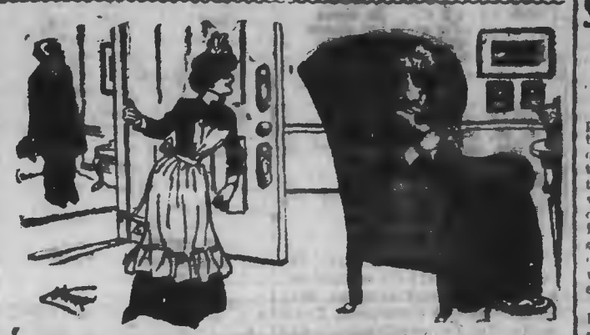
Now that our Health Association has begun this work even though in a small way, we trust that the public will become interested in its endeavours, and attend in goodly numbers the meetings to be held from time to time during the autumn and winter.

Our local press have very kindly consented to publish, from time to time, information bearing on health matters, and it shall be the endeavour of the Association to supply the press with whatever information it may have, which we think will be of interest or benefit to our citizens.

As the subject which will receive first notice will be 'Tuberculosis' it may not be amiss to give a short history of the work which is being done all over the civilized world to-day to stamp out this universal plague. The real fight dates back to the early eighties, when that brilliant German Professor Koch of Berlin, succeeded in demonstrating that the trouble was caused by a small organism called a Bacillus. So small was this organism that only by the aid of a powerful microscope could it be seen. You may ask how he knew this was the real causative a gent, In answer, let us say that certain laws are laid down in bacteriology, and to establish the identity of an organism you have to conform to the dictates of these laws.

One of the first of these laws is that (1) the Bacillus must be found in the person supposed to have the disease; (2) Bacilli taken from the sputum, say, of the affected person, can be grown artificially in proper soil. (3) Some of these Bacilli injected into animals will produce the same lesions as found in the original subject. Prof. Koch succeeded many times in doing this and it has ben done innumerable times since, thus placing beyond any doubt whatsoever, the cause of this scourge. The disease was not new. It seems to be as old almost as the history of man.

Hippocrates, the Dean of Greek medicines, describes the trouble almost as accurately as it can be described to-day, and all the way down through the ages it has occupied an important place in the medical literature of the day, but until the latter part of the last century, which saw the dawn of scientific medicine, was the real cause of the trouble found, and the first step made in the fight to rescue the race from its grip.



Servant:—"If yer please, mum, 'ere's the delegate of the Domestic Union come to see you about that little mishap you and I had last night!"—London Opinion.

SOME NEW TRACKS

Will be Laid by the Grand Trunk to Provide More Accommodation For Their Local Freight Business

OFFICIALS ARE HERE

General Superintendent Brownlee and Supt. P. J. Lynch arrived in the city last evening in their private cars and spent the night at Auburn. Mr. Michael McCarty, Conductor of the Blackwater-Midland train, was in charge of the special.

This morning the two officials were abroad inspecting the tracks adjacent to the G. T. R. station. It has been remarked of late that the freight department here is fast increasing and that greater facilities would have to be accorded this department. With the view of discovering whether any developments were anticipated the Examiner approached Mr. Brownlee who said that probably some new team tracks would be laid by the freight sheds for freight accommodation.

2000 Homeless

Examiner Special:

LACROSSE, WIS., OCT. 7.—Two thousand people are homeless here as the result of breaking of dams. They spent a terrible night and morning under pitiless rain, which soaked them and all their sheltering clothing through and through. Many of them have no tents yet, but the Army Commissary is sending relief as rapidly as transportation can be secured. The town is entirely engulfed. No examination of the faulty dams has been made yet, but it is believed that the cement was not set right.

AFTER EFFECTS OF FEVER

How to Build Up Health and Strength After Wasting Diseases

When the system is run down following attacks of fever, la grippe, or other wasting diseases, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are of special value. They make new, rich blood, which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, and in this way restore the patient to active health and strength. In proof of this we give the case of Mrs. James Randall, Silverstream, Sask., who says:—"I feel that if there is anyone who ought to testify to the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills it is myself. About four years ago I was taken down with typhoid fever which left me in a very weak state and my stomach so impaired that even a drink of milk would cause me pain. To make matters worse the change of life followed, and although I was under the care of one of our best doctors, I was steadily growing worse. Before I was sick I had often read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but thought no more about them. But now when I was sick and helpless and almost hopeless, and with no benefit coming from medical treatment, I kept thinking of the Pills and finally decided to try them. I did so and I am thankful to be able to say that they restored me to health and strength, and enabled me to pass through that trying period, from which so many poor women emerge with shattered health. I hope that many other poor sufferers may read this statement and take fresh courage from it, as I am sure that what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me, they will do for others. I may add that I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the home, and feel that they are better than a doctor."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Some Extensive Cable Laying

Some extensive cable laying and repairs will take place during the winter by the Bell Telephone Co. In order to cater to the requirements of the increasing subscribers, cables are to be laid to the suburbs of the city while the units of cables in the heart of the city will also be increased. For this purpose four hundred pairs of cables are now being made. This description of work is reserved for the winter in order to keep their men employed.

Indications point that in the future Peterborough will not be subjected to such unsightly avenues of poles as at present exist, and it is principally with that object that the underground cables are to be laid.

BOUND TO BE AT FAULT.

Sir Wilfrid's political enemies are ingenious in finding causes of dissatisfaction with him. They can find little, if anything, in his official record to furnish grounds of condemnation and absolutely nothing in his personal record. But one ingenious enemy of the late Premier has found a serious ground of objection. He sees in one feature of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's resignation a deep-laid plot, a sinister scheme to "hoodoo" Mr. Borden. Others have criticised Sir Wilfrid for delaying his resignation so long; the cause was given as his disinclination to surrender the sweets of office. But that was not the real reason. Sir Wilfrid so timed the day of his resignation as to make it fall on a Friday, so that Mr. Borden would be compelled to enter office on an unlucky day. This is a rather far-fetched and absurd claim; but is it any more so than many of the absurd cries and appeals that have been urged against the late head of the Government?

WHAT OF THE SIGNS?

Yesterday Hon. R. L. Borden took upon himself the administration of the affairs of Canada; and if the weather was a result of the change, and is a forecast of the conditions that will obtain under the new Government, the outlook is indeed, dark, and Friday, Oct. 6th, 1911, will go upon record, as being not only the day of dirtiest weather in the whole year, but as the beginning of a gloomy national period. However, Friday, is no more an unlucky day than any other. The couple that got married yesterday in the south part of the city, in spite of Friday, and nasty weather, stand as good a chance for happiness as if they had been wed on the brightest Wednesday of sunny June. So with Mr. Borden; if he will follow faithfully in the footsteps of Sir Wilfrid, and as successfully apply as good a policy and continue the country in the same path of progress and condition of prosperity, the fact of his having taken office on Friday will not have made, or make, a fig's difference. He has the matter in his own hands. The fault will not be in "Friday," but in himself, his policy, and its application, if he does not give Canada good government and the conditions of prosperity and progress. As Shakspere says:

The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

THE GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

Among the golden legacies of beneficient legislation left by the Laurier Government is the Annuities System, whose tendency is to encourage a national habit, the habit of thrift, while it furnishes easy means to the citizen of limited means to make a comfortable and certain provision for old age. A typical example of its benefits may be given:

Among the persons who have recently made provision for old age when it comes, are two sisters, aged respectively 33 and 34 years. They have purchased from the Canadian Government a Last Survivor Annuity, that is an annuity which will give them, together, an income of $600 a year, so long as they both live, and to be continued to the survivor so long as she lives. The cost of this annuity, $3,643.65, had been invested at 5 per cent., and had brought in less than $185.00 annually, with the difficulty and annoyance of reinvestment. The Annuity become payable when the younger sister attains the age of 55, and should both die before that time the purchase money will be refunded to their heirs, with 3 per cent. compound interest. Each is now earning her own living, and the sum paid in the fruit of their labours for a number of years. They were thus able the better to appreciate their splendid opportunity. A card of inquiry addressed to the Superintendent of Canadian Government Annuities, Ottawa, will secure for you any information you desire on the subject.

ASSESSMENT IMPROVEMENT.

The question of taxation is a subject of perpetual interest. Taxes are necessary and no one with a proper public spirit and sense of responsibility as a citizen, will seriously seek to avoid them. But there is no objection to providing means that will make the burden of taxation fall fairly and equably, and without creating distinctions that make taxpaying a double penalty. This double penalty is imposed by the present mode of assessment—a citizen has not only to pay his share of the taxes, but this is made, in part, a penalty for being a public-spirited citizen—he is fined for making improvements. This is inherent in our present assessment system and a remedy is suggested, whereby taxation will be made to bear more heavily upon land values. The question is now a subject of lively discussion in New Brunswick. The Union of Municipalities, which meets at Newcastle on Oct. 11th and 12th, will discuss a resolution favouring a law providing that municipalities may have power to remove the tax from improvements and place it on land. Opinions differ and though it is not possible to say in which form the resolution will come out of the discussion, it seems clear that the province is likely to follow the example of the West; to some extent at least, in lifting the burden of taxation from improvement and making land values the basis of taxation ,and especially placing a larger assessment on vacant lands, which are now, comparatively, very lightly taxed, and, besides, increase in value by virtue of neighbouring improvements that are highly taxed.

PULP AND PAPER INDUSTRY.

(Monetary Times)

The outlook in Canada for the pulp and paper industry is good. The American manufacturers are regarding with some apprehension the excellent prospects of this rapidly growing industry in the Dominion. The New York view of the position, and one with which we must naturally agree, is that the future development of the paper industry will be in Canada. This theory is supported by the fact that we have ample raw materials and water power. United States authorities think that it will be four or five years yet at least before conditions are greatly changed and Canada takes the lead.

An optimistic, though perhaps not exaggerated view of the situation, is taken by Mr. E. B. Biggar, of Toronto, in this matter;

"There is probably no single industry in Canada," he says, "which has developed so rapidly in the last ten or fifteen years as that of pulp and paper manufacturing. Its development has been based less upon the stimulus of a tariff than the great natural advantages Canada has: first, in the possession of vast areas of forest producing timbers best adapted to wood pulp; second, in the possession of more water power than any other country in the world; and, third, in having a population whose skill in woodcraft is proverbial.

"There are only two things that can prevent Canada from becoming in time the greatest paper manufacturing country in the world. One of these is the maladministration of our great forest reserves leading to their devastation by forest fires, and the other is the needless alienation of timber tracts into private hands, whether for the export of raw timber or otherwise."

BOUNCING BABY'S ECZEMA CURED

By Morriscy's No. 4 Prescription 47 Years Old

Pictou, N. S., July 8, 1910.

"When my baby was only two weeks old I noticed a slight rash on his body, and the little fellow would cry and fret night and day. I was greatly worried about him, and tried everything to relieve him, but without any success. The rash kept getting worse until his little face and body was a mass of scabs. When he was about six months old I was advised to try Father Morriscy's No. 4 Eczema medicine, which I did. In about two months time the scabs had disappeared, and the child is now healthy and strong. I most thankfully recommend it to anyone suffering from Eczema."

Mrs. F. Gratton.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

WHAT CANADA HAS GAINED FROM 15 YEARS OF LAURIER

(Montreal Herald.)

Yesterday, the life of the Laurier administration reached its end. It will take some time to become accustomed to the fact that Sir Wilfrid is no longer at the head of the country's affairs. It will take longer for Canadians to lose the sense of satisfaction with the conditions which have prevailed during the Laurier regime, their admiration for the way the country has held its head during that splendid fifteen years.

Probably there are more than a few in Canada who wonder whether it is in the nature of things that in the immediate future fortune will be as kind as for this long time she has been. Probably there are more who believe in the Laurier luck than they might care to admit. In the summer of 1897, when the country was just beginning to take hope, because the crops had been good in 1896, one farmer predicted that there would be good crops and good times as long as Laurier stayed in power. His prediction has been verified. In every way Laurier has been fortunate. He began with a Cabinet of strong men, several of them, most people would have said, stronger than himself. They took hold of things with a grip that had been sadly lacking. Mr. Blair rushed work on the canals. Mr. Mulock turned the post office into a business institution. Mr. Sifton put a corps of drummers at work looking for people to fill the Northwest. Mr. Fielding galvanised the country with the British preference. All along the line things began to be done. When Laurier came to power capital was timorous, and there wasn't enough of it. Industries dragged, Commerce was unsatisfactory. Call it good luck or good management or both, but the change was instant. The Canadian Pacific Railway had been making a manful struggle against adverse conditions. Almost on the heels of the Laurier victory came the prospect of a big mineral development in southern British Columbia. The Government gave the C.P.R. such encouragement as caused the expenditure of a few millions on the Crow's Nest railway. It wasn't much, as railway expenditures go now, but it was like Micawber's shilling; it made all the difference between depression and cheerfulness. It seemed to give the lead over to all kinds of business. Then the good crops kept coming, money flowed into the banks and from the banks out again into business. Emigration flowed into the long-empty Northwest. Grain came out of it. The St. Lawrence, deepened and equipped with the most modern appliances, bore in and out a commerce that has never ceased to grow. The wealth of the people, according to all the indices of prosperity increased as it had never done before. When Laurier came in, for instance, there were about three hundred millions worth of life insurance at risk; when he goes out there are nine hundred millions. Trade with other countries increased, doubled, multiplied. The finances of the Dominion, which had provided occasion for genuine anxiety, have been established on a basis so strong that we can face any responsibilities. Surpluses have succeeded to deficits. Where we used to borrow to pay the current expenses of government, we have of late been meeting capital expenditure for the permanent development of our resources out of revenue. The farmer, dispirited over low prices, has seen his markets broadly extended, thanks to splendid arrangements for cold storage. The mortgages are paid off. The farmer has money in the bank. Last of all, the drain of flesh and blood and brain, that went on without ceasing during a generation, has stopped, and the inward flow of humanity has been substituted for it. Where there was one transcontinental railway struggling for existence there now are three; busy in the present, hopeful for the future. The old cities have spread over the surrounding fields, new ones have sprung up where before it was wilderness. Surely the age of Laurier has been Canada's golden age, and will always be remembered as such.

It is too soon to speak of the stimulus that has been given to the growth of national spirit. We are still in the thick of the controversies which are to determine that. But if we put it to the most convenient test, certainly Canada has never been so well advertised, never has received so much favourable attention, as in the fifteen years of the rule of Laurier. She has held her head high, as high as he has held his own.

And now, with head high, he takes leave of power. Even in his fall he has been fortunate. There was no bickering, there were no reverses, there was no withdrawal of the favours of fortune until the very last. Doing big things in a big way, he escaped the indignity of bearing up against the worries of the mean and the little which many another has had to stand. He has had his worries, but in a few years Canada will have forgotten them, and the history of the Laurier Ministry will stand out for bigness, for strength, for progress, for contentment, for good feeling, for pride in Canada, such as distinguished no other period in our history. It was the golden age. Nothing can take that from it, or from the fame of him who gave it his name.

A HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR

A Little Sage and Sulphur Makes Gray Hair Vanish—A Remedy for All Hair Troubles

Who does not know the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorise druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special Agents, Warne Drug Co.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"The people, people work with, are often very queer,
The people, people own by birth, quite shock your first idea.
The people, people choose as friends, our common sense appall.
But the people, people marry, are the queerest folks of all."

"Why on earth couldn't she have married some other man? I'm sure she's attractive enough to have had some chance to pick and choose."

So, in querulous tones, my neighbour attacked our mutual friend's matrimonial taste.

Our mutual friend left college some years ago to marry the man of her choice. Her husband is deeply devoted to her and is an excellent "provider." She adores him. They have three charming children. In every way theirs seems an exceptionally happy marriage.

But, unfortunately for him—no, I won't say that, for I don't believe he minds it at all—unfortunately rather for some people's peace of mind, our mutual friend's husband has committed the mistake of being a silent and reserved, and perhaps rather peculiar man, in whom some people can see nothing pleasing.

Among these, needless to say, is my neighbour.

Of course, you know my neighbour—her type, I mean.

And isn't she absurd? She chooses her own husband or intends to if she hasn't already, but she simply will not accord that privilege to other people.

She is always querulously wondering why So-and-So married Such-and-Such, and fretting because Mr. Someone Else will not fall in love with Miss Sweet Girl, who is so manifestly the right woman for him.

It seems to me that my neighbour's attitude is a most foolish and short-sighted one.

For me the wide divergence and the complete unaccountability of folk's matrimonial tastes, is a thing of delight and a joy forever.

Why, just think, suppose all the men in town refused to love any one else but Miss—you know whom I mean—that girl who stands head and shoulders above all the others in the neighbourhood for prettiness, sweetness and lovableness. What would become of the other girls?

But, thank Providence, things aren't arranged that way.

And I seldom see a very homely and unattractive pair gazing into each other's eyes and evidently each thinking the other the nicest person in the world, without thanking Providence that tastes are queer, since their being so produces such happiness.

As the old lady said when she kissed the cow, "There's no accounting for tastes."

But on the whole I think that is a condit ion which should make us rejoice rather than complain.

Don't you?

Ruth Cameron

THE FAMILY HEARTH

A happy fireside is better than a big bank account.

* * *

There is more sunshine in life to the minute than there is misery to the same. But after all, it is just the way you look at it.

* * *

One of the most important things that a man owes to his family is cheerfulness. He should cast all trouble away when he comes to his home.

* * *

If you start a sapling the tree will tell the tale; so if a child is subjected to improper influence and example that years will remain and his life be blighted by it.

* * *

You may preach sermons and advocate reforms and denounce wickedness, and yet your children will be captivated by the glittering saloon of sin unless you can make your home a brighter place than any other place on earth to them.

* * *

The virtues grow about the home. They cluster, bloom and shed their perfume around the fireside. Love, husband, wife, father, mother, child and home—without those words the world would be a barren wilderness, and men and women but brutish beasts.

* * *

We love to see people live well, says a thoughtful writer, and to dress respectfully, and enjoy themselves, but there is a happy mean in all these things, and when that is passed in the direction of extravagance, the people distress and enslave themselves and diminish their ability to do good. For the sake of keeping up the styles people live far above their incomes, harass themselves with debt, wear themselves out, and keep themselves in a constant nervous strain by giving fashionable dinners, fashionably entertaining and making fashionable calls.

* * *

All social circles welcome cheerfulness. A sunny face is an open pleasure to hearts and homes. By it burdens are lightened, care dispelled, sorrow banished, and hope made to reign triumphant where fear and doubt and despondency held high carnival. Your own life will be sweetened, your own joys heightened by your perennial heaven-lighted, sunny face.

* * *

Let us take time to get acquainted with our families. The wealth you are accumulating may be a doubtful blessing to the son who is a stranger to you. Your beautifully kept house, busy mother, can never be a home to the daughter whom you have no time to caress.

* * *

This is the ladies' age. There is no mistaking that fact and in spite of fate she is going to play no second fiddle in the near future. The ladies, bless 'em, can do anything nowadays but fish, and already they are wonderfully proficient in that art even—as far as suckers are concerned. The lady never says can't except when she means won't, and when she says "I will," you can bet your neck she is going to if she has to sell the family Bible to do it.

* * *

God placed somewhere in the heart of each of us a tender memory, which enables us to touch with a gentle hand or soothing word the heart of the afflicted. What a comfort to know that for every heartache, there is somewhere in the universe a heaven inspired soul to comfort those downcast. Let us make our words as dew from heaven, touching with gentle hand the withered flowers, giving new vigour to the hardy.

* * *

Oh, gather all charms into your house! If you can afford it, bring books and pictures and cheerful entertainments to the household. But above all, teach those children, not by half an hour twice a year on the Sabbath day, but day after day and every day teach them that religion is a great gladness, that it throws chains of gold about the neck, and it takes no spring from the foot, no blitheness from the heart, no sparkle from the eye, no ring from the laughter, but that "her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

Of course it is the natural desire of every mother that her daughter should "marry well," to use a current phrase. But much depends upon how we interpret the word "well." Usually it is applied to a young man's income or financial possessions. When this is the case, the standard used is an unfortunate one. There is not a more cruel standard by which to measure a young man than the position he is able to offer the girl of his choice. We do not advocate the "love in a cottage" theory, by any means, but we do believe in the good old-fashioned theory of a young couple starting out into the world with a moderate income, and the climbing upward together.

* * *

Too many mothers consider their children as simply objects for the display of their own vanity and pride. Little Mary must be kept in pure white clothes all the season through, thought neither the father's purse nor the mother's strength is sufficient to provide the numberless changes necessary. Instead of dressing the child in sensible frocks of blue flannel, such as millionaire's children are not ashamed to wear for play dresses, every effort is strained to reach his false ideal of dress which the mother has set up herself. She sits up into the wee small hours of the night working on dainty gowns in which all the childish impulses for play are stifled for ever in dress array.

EVERY PLACE ON THE WIDE PRAIRIES

Tells of Cures Made by Dodd's Kidney Pills

Thos. Griffin, of Peace River Landing, tells how he got rid of his Rheumatism — honestly earned popularity.

Cold Springs, Peace River Landing Alta., Oct. 6. (Special.)—Just why Dodd's Kidney Pills retain their wonderful popularity is easily shown by a trip across the prairies. Every town, village and post office has at least one man or woman who is ready to tell of pains relieved and health restored by the great Canadian Kidney Remedy. Let Thos. Griffin of this place add his statement to the hosts already published.

"When I came to this part of the country," says Mr. Griffin, "I was troubled with a bad back and Rheumatism in my shoulders and hips. I sent for six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they gave me relief at once. I also recommended them to my eldest sons who was confined to his bed from Rheumatism.

"Now I know that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine for Rheumatism and the Kidneys. I recommend them to every person I hear complaining of not feeling well."

Dodd's Kidney Pills made their popularity by curing sick Kidneys. They keep their popularity by keeping on curing kidneys.

POST CARD COLUMN

Peterborough, Oct. 6, 1912.

Dear Sir,—I am not a crank, but it is not very nice when you expect to have a quiet evening after a hard day's work, when you are aroused by some one at the armouries giving vent to his musical abilities on the bugle, and must say, sir, it is far from anything like an organ recital or a selection on the pianola; it is more like a menagerie at meal-time, and it seems to me the performer has a bad attack of asthma and would like to advise whoever it is that entertains the surrounding neighbourhood that he would find an ideal spot for his business out at the Lift-Locks. But if he persists in giving his weekly or evening concerts, would he have a little pity for the people in the vicinity and get in a cellar.

Thanking you, sir, for your space, I remain,

Yours truly,
HARMONY.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you please tell me what is the meaning of the name given to the great Methodist gathering now in Toronto? What does "ecumenical" mean?

Reader.

Note.—"Reader" might have known by consulting any reliable dictionary. "Ecumenical" means general, universal; in a specific sense it is applied to ecclesiastical councils, regarded as representing the whole Christian church. Its etymological origin is Greek—oikoumene, the habitable world, from oikos, a house, or habitation.

EIDERDOWN QUILTS

For The Chilly Night At RIGHT Prices

WE HAVE just imported an exceptionally choice line of the finest Eiderdown Quilts in an unusually broad range of artistic colourings and designs. Covered with satin or sateen. All sizes. : : :

There's all the difference in the world in Eiderdown Quilts.

Prices do not give you much clue to their actual value, for a very poor quilt may seem far better than it is—at first.

We are Eiderdown "Specialists." A poor Eiderdown quilt cannot get into this store. So there is no danger of one leaving it—to go to you.

You may be sure of one thing—the money you spend with us for these Quilts—all medium priced---brings you full value. The prices you'll be asked to pay will return more beauty and softness, and actual durability than any Eiderdown Quilts you have ever known

You want good, warm, generously sized Quilts---of full measure, correct weight and proper workmanship. We have them.

You want Quilts that are soft, fluffy, properly filled and covered, and honestly made. We have them.

More warmth and quality for every dollar invested than we have ever before been able to give. You may select at will, and get values and service in any of them.

But Be Sure and Select in Time

Entertained The Old People

The members of Mrs. Webb's class of the Murray Street Sunday School were the means of bringing a little brightness and good cheer to the inmates of the Protestant Home last evening, when they held an enjoyable social at the Home. Some fifteen members of the class were present, and a delightful programme was given, which was heartily enjoyed by the old people. At the close of the musical numbers refreshments were served. The event was quite successful and it is hoped that other organizations may see their way clear to follow the example set by Mrs. Webb's class.

AUTO RAN FOUL OF THE MUD

One of the many incidents which served to add a touch of humour to the lugubrious circumstances of yesterday at Millbrook was the stalling of a large automobile in one of the hotel yards. The depth and adhesive qualities of the mud was directly responsible for this. However, nothing daunted; the occupants of the car put their shoulders to the rear of the car and with the assistance of the engine, endeavoured to release the car, but all to no avail. Finally, with the assistance of a number of onlookers, the car was released and placed on terra firma.

CHANGE OF TRAIN SERVICE

Commencing on October 2nd the Lakefield train service will be changed as follows: The train which has been leaving here at 8.30 a.m. will now leave at 7.00 a.m. and returning will arrive in Peterboro 8.15 a.m. The noon train for Lakefield will leave at 12.20 and returning will arrive Peterboro 5.15 p.m. The evening train is discontinued. The public will be glad to learn that the new service inaugurated this Summer to Port Hope will be maintained throughout the Winter and will thus enable all passengers to leave Toronto at 9.0(a.m. any arrive in Peterboro at mid-dad. This train also affords good connection for all Eastern points to Montreal and Boston. 12d-77

FOR VALOUR

A Short Story

Gilbert Ames lounged lazily back in the large tapestry armchair and listened, his face expressionless, to the girl who had been talking, he felt sure, for ten minutes steadily. At last she stopped and he jumped to his feet.

"Marjorie, I suppose you believe all that you have said or you would not say it. There was a time when I thought you said I was wild and ambitionless because the others did, but now I know you mean it, I can't listen to it any more. Go on thinking I am worthless. No ,please don't keep me." The fellow avoided her outstretched hand and went out of the house.

Marjorie Bartlett knew that there was good in Gilbert Ames, but that his father had been so strict that he had brought out only the bad in his son. How strange that she should feel all this now when she had no hope of ever seeing him again. She knew that he would never be able to forget the unkind words she had just spoken. She wondered if he suffered as much as she did as he thought of what she had said, and she prayed that night that he might forget her entirely, even though she knew that he loved her.

The Coldstream Guards had been stationed at Bethany in the province of Naamqua, South Africa, just one month, when an attack was made upon them. The British regiment was caught in the valley and the men fell in hundreds with their horses lying writhing among them. They were overpowered and their guns were in the hands of the enemy. As the Coldstream Guards rode back to their tents each one knew what the next step would be. The guns must be destroyed or brought back to the British camp or they would be used against them. The general would call for volunteers to spike the guns; who would go?

That night a sergeant went to the general's tent and earnestly asked for the honour of leading the men who volunteered. The man had been with the Coldstream Guards but a short time, and had only been appointed sergeant the day before, on the illness of the man who had held the position for seven years. For this reason the general hesitated. He could not decide then, but sent an answer to the sergeant's tent later in the evening, giving his permission. He felt that he was passing a death sentence. It was unusual for a man in the service for so short a time to offer himself in this way.

Before daybreak the sergeant and his men were skulking through the underbrush of the valley. They had almost reached the guns when a volley of shells was fired among them. He urged his men on, and before the enemy had gathered all its forces upon them, the guns were destroyed, but not without causing injury and death to the men. The leader of the volunteers stumbled down the hill and fell unconscious by the dead body of a comrade. A bullet had lodged in his side and another in his arm. The British soldiers brought his body back to the camp, and after a consultation the surgeon said there was no hope.

When he opened his eyes he saw a familiar face bending over him. Yes, it was the general. What was he saying?

"My boy, do you understand me, can you hear me? You have won the Victoria Cross, the highest honour that Britain can give you."

The sergeant known in Grovestown as the "worthless Gilbert Ames," grasped the meaning of what the general was saying, and tried to raise himself up from his cot, but fell back, his face twitching from the pain. He knew why the general had come to tell him this.

"Is there anyone to whom you wish the Cross to go, your mother, or perhaps your wife?" The general held one hand of the dying sergeant, and found it harder to speak these few simple words than to command his army in a conflict.

Gilbert Ames spoke brokenly. "Yes, Miss Marjorie Bartlett, Grovestown, England. She is the only one I want it taken to. If she is married—" Here the man seemed to become suddenly weak, and the general heard him whisper to himself: "Oh, she can't be," and then he saw his eyes close and he became unconscious.

A surgeon stopped at the door of the tent and saw the general sitting with bowed head, but could not hear the words as he muttered: "It's a shame you can't live, my boy."

. . . . . .

The pounding of the brass knocker on the Bartlett door thundered through the house, and the maid shivered as she thought of opening the door on such a bitter cold night. She hurried through the hall, and, lifting the heavy bolt, opened the door and curiously scrutinized the man in uniform on the small porch.

"Miss Marjorie Bartlett?" His voice sounded to the girl like an echo of the fearful knocking.

"Yes, this is Miss Bartlett's home."

"Will you tell her that a messenger from the War Office wishes to see her?"

In a few moments Miss Bartlett came to the door and the messenger handed her a package which he had into her own hands.

Marjorie, bewildered, murmured, "Thank you," and closed the door as the man hurried down the steps. She went into the reading room and laid the small package on the table. For some reason which she herself did not know, she was afraid to open it. At last she broke the seals and unwrapped it; there was a black leather case, and instinctively she pressed the tiny spring. She picked up the contents, a silver cross, and read the words cut upon it, "For Valour." The Victoria Cross slipped from her fingers and turned over as it fell upon the table. The terrible significance of the message brought by the cross stunned her. Benumbed, she read: "Gilbert Ames—died." The rest of the inscription she could not read. Gilbert Ames was dead!

Some hours later the maid came into the hall to lower the lights, and saw Marjorie Bartlett sitting at the table, her head buried in her arms.—Boston Post.

ROYALISTS BEATEN.

Reports From Portugal Indicate Blow to ex-King Manuel.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 7.—The Journal says the Portuguese royalists concentrated at Puebla de Sanabria, Province of Zamora, Spain, about twenty miles northeast of Braganza, Portugal, have formed themselves into three columns under the command of Capt. Conciere, Senhor Camacho Canavarro and Homen Gristo.

Their first objectives are Chaves and Braganza, where the garrisons are reported to have pronounced themselves in favor of the monarchy and court-martialed and shot a few officers who held contrary opinions. The monarchists now declare that the entire population in North Portugal has made common cause with them.

The Journal further says that the monarchists have acquired two warships, one of them of 16,000 tons. It says that all the foregoing is confirmed officially by the monarchist leader.

Have Crossed Frontier.

Madrid, Oct. 7.—A press despatch received here from Badajos says that Don Miguel of Braganza and his two sons are now with the monarchists in Portugal, they and other leaders in the revolutionary movement having crossed the Spanish frontier in twenty motor cars during the past few days.

Manuel Is In London.

London, Oct. 7.—The report from Paris that ex-King Manuel is in Spain, presumably on his way to Portugal, is without foundation. Manuel is at Richmond with the Queen Mother Amelia.

Despatches from Lisbon published here say that several warships have left the Tagus for Oporto.

Royalists Defeated.

Lisbon, Oct. 7.—A band of royalists has been defeated in a fight with the Republican troops near Braganza, in Trae-Ose-Montes, the northeastermost province of Portugal. It is rumored that a royalist column at Vinhaes, 14 miles west of Braganza, is surrounded by Republicans.

A column of 700 monarchists commanded by Senor Camacho Canavarro, principal lieutenant of the royalist leader, Capt. Coucierre, entered Portugal Thursday morning from Zamora, Spain, and occupied Franca, Carregosa, Espinhozello, Paco, Soutello and Paraimo, all in the district around Braganza.

Two thousand royalists gathered from various places also have joined the column which is now at Venhoes.

Good Press Agents.

Badajos, Spain, on the Portuguese Frontier, Oct. 7.—The Portuguese Government admits that royalist disturbances are in progress in northern Portugal, near the Spanish frontier. Besides the interference of the censorship there is great difficulty in learning the exact situation where the monarchists are operating because of the distance of those points from the railways and telegraph stations.

Royalist agents and sympathizers are spreading the news of a triumphal march of the monarchist troops toward Oporto. Thursday the invaders were represented as numbering 4,000. Yesterday it was asserted that 6,000 men are following the white and blue flag of the deposed King Manuel.

It is also stated that the royalists engaged and defeated the Republican troops at Guimaraes, a fortified town, twelve miles southeast of Bragas, and that Capt. Conciere will have 30,000 men behind him when he is prepared to invest Oporto.

Big Demand on Rain Fund.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—J. Lockie Wilson of Toronto, provincial superintendent of Fall Fairs, who is in Ottawa, said: "No fewer than forty fairs this year had to be postponed on account of the elections. This bunched a number of them at a season characterized by rains. As a result the ten thousand dollars voted for the first time this year to be used as insurance against bad weather came in very conveniently.

"Thirty fairs have applied for a share as a result of the drop in their gate receipts due to the wet weather."

Guard M.P.'s From Fires.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—It is likely that automatic fire protection equipment similar to that in use in the Legislative Buildings at Toronto will be installed in the Parliament Buildings here. Chief Graham thoroughly inspected this apparatus when at Toronto last week. Yesterday he said: "It is simply impossible for a fire to break out in any part of the Legislative buildings at Toronto without it being known."

Market Prices Still Soaring

The market this morning was as large as ever, and the prices were about the same as usual, except some things took a jump in price. There was a great demand for butter and eggs, and although these were in abundance, the supply was not sufficient for the demand. The following were the average prices:

Ducks—80c each.
Geese—$1.25.
Butter—30c and 28c.
Apples—25c peck or 75c per bag.
Pears—50c peck.
Pork, 13c and 14c.
Lamb, 13c and 15c.
Potatoes, $1.40.
Pigs, 6 weeks, $5 per pair.
Crabapples, 20c per peck.
Citrons, 10 and 15c each.
Onions, red skins, 30c peck.
Carrots, 15c per peck.
Tomatoes, 20c per peck.
Watermelons, 10c and 20c according to size.
Farmers' hides, 8½c.
Butchers, 9 and 9½c.
Live hogs, $6.35.
Dressed hogs, $9; the first offered.
Baled hay, 80c per cwt.
Loose hay, $14.00.

SELLARS' MUSIC

The blush of grapes—the agony of the wine-press' cruel hold,
The rich, red blood poured out—a living stream;
Speak in his music as we've power to hear.
The maniac's might—the lover's lingering lute,
The witchery of Mozart's "magic flute";
The cradle of symphonies—a mother's lullaby;
A storm-swept mountain top—a lost soul's cry;
Love, rest, and home, with bells at eventide,
A benediction, even as Milton said,
"Not wanting power to mitigate and [illegible]
With solemn touches, troubled thought, and [illegible]
Anguish, and doubt, and fear, and sorrow, and pain
From mortal minds."

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor of the Examiner:

I see by this morning's Times that it assumes the role of Conservative authority for West Peterborough and endeavours to show the Conservative workers what they may expect. Prior to the election it was, "Hurrah, boys, with victory, the plums are ours"; now it is a different song the Times is singing, assuming to speak for itself on behalf of the Conservatives, but the public will find that it will take more than the mere whim of a few office-seekers to disturb those in positions who have become familiar with the duties of their various offices. However, my object in writing is to suggest that if justice and fair play are to be meted out, the first office-holders to go would be those in the employ of the Whitney government. Perhaps for bold brazen violation of the practical law of the province and of the resolutions passed by the Local Legislature and known as the Garrow resolution, some of the Whitney Government officials were the most conspicuous.

From the evening of the nominations until the close of the election, some of these officials could not keep themselves quiet and had to butt in wherever possible. If the hotelkeepers could speak they could supply considerable information, and if any officials should walk the plank, the License Inspector should be the first. However, we shall see what we shall see. There is not a hotelkeeper in Peterborough who can call his soul his own for a minute. The more interested and active he becomes in politics the more certain he seems to become of his license. When it comes to this in Peterborough that the British born are to be lined up in the Grand Hotel and the Orange flag to be waved from the Montgomery house, by license holders, things have come to a nice pass in practical politics, as well as in other things, as I notice that the good old Review, which has been fighting the battles of the Conservative party for half a century, is gently side-tracked and an "independent" paper is made the mouthpiece of the new figure head of the Conservative party in West Peterborough. If any hotelkeeper under the Liberal regime, had taken the overtly offensive part in party politics that is now taken by some license holders, there would have been a howl that would have been heard from Apsley to the Albany Club, Toronto.

"COMMON DECENCY.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I noticed in a late edition of the Examiner that the School Board of this city purpose erecting two new schools at an approximate cost of $80,000.00. I trust that in the designing of these schools the School Board will have sufficient loyalty to employ home architects. There is a certain church building in our city that is now nearing completion. This church was, I understand, designed by an outside architect, and I am of the opinion that anyone having the slightest idea of architectural beauty, symmetry, or proportion, will at once admit that there is no comparison whatever between this church and other churches in the city, designed by our own architects.

Yours truly,

Peterborough First.

Peterborough, Oct. 7, 1911.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE EARL OF PAWTUCKET"

"When Augustus Thomas told me that he was going to write a new play for me and make me an Earl, I said to him 'For Heaven's sake, Thomas, my dear boy, don't give me one of those silly ass parts; I'm tired of them". And he said: "That's all right, D'Orsay, just be yourself," and here I am," explained Lawrence D'Orsay, the eminent English comedian, during the speech he had to make in answer to the enthusiastic applause that followed the second act of his appearance at the Grand last night, in that deliciously funny comedy "The Earl of Pawtucket." Nothing more amusing has been seen in Peterborough for a long time than this refreshing farce, which gives Mr. D'Orsay a part of rich humour which he handles with so much ease and naturalness that his audience unhesitatingly agrees with the well-known critic who has said: "D'Orsay does not act the Earl of Pawtucket. He is the Earl." His mannerisms, his accent, his droll stare, were too much for the risibilities of last night's audience, who were kept in a continuous gale of laughter, while he was on the stage. He was given an ovation at the end of the second act and so hearty was the applause that after bowing to half a dozen curtain calls Mr. D'Orsay was compelled to make a speech, which he did in very happy vein. "I was born here," he informed the audience. "Oh, I'm not spoofing" he assured them when they laughed: "I was born in Peterborough—England—and if there is anyone here who comes from Peterborough, England, I would be delighted to shake them by the hand. This is my first visit here and I hope I may come back again".

The story of the play is well-known to theatre-goers, or to those who read the dramatic columns of the newspapers. It is based on the usual theory of mistaken identity and Peterborough play-goers have seldom seen anything more amusing than the complications that ensue when an English Earl, following the girl he loves to America, chooses as his alias the name of her divorced husband. As the action advances the deeper the Earl gets into difficulties and the louder is the laughter from the audience.

Some stars, especially when they are on the "road" are content to have the support of a mediocre company, trusting to their own ability and reputation to carry them to success. Mr. D'Orsay, however, has chosen a splendid company of accomplished players to assist and the acting of the entire cast was magnificent. Miss Katharine Emmet, who had the leading feminine role is a charming and pleasing actress and the other roles were well looked after.

"The Earl of Pawtucket," all in all, was the greatest treat local theatre patrons have had in a long time and thanks are due Messrs. Turner & Sons for giving an opportunity of seeing Mr. D'Orsay. May he soon fulfill his promise to come back to Peterborough.

FORMER PETERBORO' RESIDENT DIED IN HAMILTON

The many friends in Peterborough of Mrs. Henry Dickens, formerly connected with the Salvation Army here, but who removed to Hamilton from Peterborough, about a year ago, will regret to learn of her sudden and unexpected death on Wednesday, Oct. 4. Mrs. Dickens had been ill with pneumonia for a few days and much to the sad loss of the family, passed away on Wednesday last. Mr. Dickens and family have many friends in Peterborough, who will extend their deepest sympathy in their hour of trial.

FASHION NOTES

Buttons are particularly good as a trimming this fall. Double rows of them are being used down the front of one-piece gowns and also the full length of long sleeves. Pearl buttons dyed in shades to match gowns are very smart. Suits of cloth or velvet are being trimmed with large gilt or oxidized buttons, striped through the middle with a band of colour to match the material of the gown.

On small close hats velvet fruits—especially grapes in a rich purple—are being used. Velvet buttons, large and small, are somewhat of an innovation in the way of a millinery trimming. These are used especially on ribbon loops or on the high velvet wings employed in the decoration of small hats.

A striking feature noticed on some of the smart lace blouses and handsome lace gowns is the touch of rich dark blue velvet ribbon used in several different ways. Combined with the blue ribbon are small square or oblong buckles of brilliants and sapphires. The ribbon is arranged to cunningly hold up a bit of lace drapery on the bodice or some lace effect on the sleeve. The broad ribbon or panel effect starting from the waistline in back shows one of the lovely button or buckle affairs put slightly ot one side and the scalloped overdress of overskirt of chiffon is frequently caught together into flat knots of the blue velvet, which are themselves held by buckles.—New York Tribune.

Sealskin is wihout doubt the fur par excellence for trimming gowns and wraps. Wide and very narrow bands are put effectively on lace gowns, the tiny bands outlining the lace design. Sealskin bands, combined with heavy gold lace, make exquisite shoulder wraps, which are matched with ample muffs similarly made. A striking use of the sealskin is with oyster white cloth and satin. With the sealskin bands silver fringe and pearl trimming, resembling long fringe, is used.

UNIQUE PLACE CARDS

Instead of the usual place cards at a recent green-and-white luncheon, the hostess had made dainty souvenirs, that served to mark the places for her guests. Green crepe paper had been cut and shaped like lettuce heads, with the edges of the leaves curled and crumpled, and in the center of each head was glued a tiny mirror.

Upon entering the dining room the guests were told that each must find the clue which told her where to sit. There was much fun and excitement until one girl thought to look inside the lettuce head. She saw her own reflection, and sat in the chair in front of that place.

You can make just such place markers by cutting crepe paper the size of young leaves of lettuce and gluing them to a small round disk, and on this glue a small round mirror of the kind that shows the whole face greatly diminished in size.

Roses, chrysanthemums, water lilies or any flower that can be set flat can be made of the crepe paper, in natural colours, and serve for the same purpose, if you desire to give a floral luncheon, or want any particular colour to be supreme in the decorations. —Buffalo Express.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Following the case of Bennett vs. Havelock Electric Light and Power Co., which was referred to the Court of Appeal, this case was heard at the Osgoode Hall, Toronto, on Thursday last:

S. T. Meld and R. R. Hall (Peterboorugh) for defendants. D. O'Connell (Peterborough) for plaintiff. An appeal by defendants from the judgment of a divisional court, whereby they allowed plaintiff's appeal from the judgment at trial of Britton, J., dismissing plaintiff's action with costs.

This was an action by plaintiff on behalf of themselves and other shareholders of the defendant company for the cancellation and annulment of the issue of 200 shares of the company alleged to have been issued by the directors to themselves, or in the alternative that defendants be ordered to pay $4700, the amount said to be unpaid on said shares, or to set aside the agreement between William Mathieson and the other defendants. Appeal argued and judgment reserved.

BUILDING PERMITS

The following were the building permits for the week: M. H. Gainey, Cricket Place, brick veneered dwelling, $3,000; M. McFadden, 291 Smith street, shed, $25.00; E. Flaherty, 365 McDonnell street, kitchen (frame), $75.00; J. Blodgett, Dublin and George streets, frame dwelling, $350; Little Lake Cemetery Co., in cemetery a stable, $1,000; F. Sanderson, 529 Reid street, lumber stable, $150. The total permits for the month of September, 1911, was $891,945.00.

BIRTHS.

WAGAR.—At 566 Sherbrooke street, city, on Oct. 7th, to Mr. and Mrs. Luther A. Wagar, a son.

A Theory Expounded

Why do the hands of the dummy clock that adorns the exterior of a jewellers establishment all point to either the hour of 8.18 or 18 minutes to 4. This query was advanced by one drummer to another in the lobby of a local hotel one evening.

No satisfactory solution being forthcoming, the questioner ventured a theory of his own, to the effect that these clocks indicated 8.18, in commemmoration of the hour that Abraham Lincoln was assassinated.

An Examiner representative, who overheard these remarks, started out on a tour of investigation and this is what he discovered. There are seven known dummy clocks in this city, each of which represent an individual establishment. Three of these clocks indicate 8.18 minutes to 4, two of them indicated 8.18, one 9.23 and the seventh was without hands. It was probably a Jonah. Disregarding the last two it is seen that there still remain five clocks, which come under the head of the above query.

In order to throw some more light on the mystery, the Examiner called on Mr. McClelland, Jr., to ascertain his views concerning the question. Asked as to whether he believed in the theory advanced by the traveller he replied in the negative. He said that the matter had often been threshed out in the Jewellers Trade Journal and the above solution was not generally accepted. Mr. McClelland's opinion regarding the matter was that the clocks show one of the two hours mentioned because both are equi-distant from the figure 12, thus dividing the dial into three parts, leaving a place for the jewellers name and another for the second hand.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Prospect of a huge increase in the visible supply total made wheat sag to-day as trading came to an end. The close was 1-8 to 1-4c under last night. In corn the result proved to be a net loss of 1-4 to 3-8 to 3-8c, and for oats a decline of a shade to 1-8c. Provisions were all the way from 2 1-2c lower to a rise of 15c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ½d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ⅝d to ¾d higher on corn. Antwerp wheat closed unchanged. Paris, ¼c higher. Berlin, ⅛c higher, and Buda Pest, ¼c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 6.—There was an increased demand from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat and as bids in some cases were 1½d to 2d higher, sales of several car loads of No. 2 and No. 3 northern were made.

The foreign demand for oats was quieter, but the local market was firmer under a fairly good demand from outside sources for car lots.

A good business is doing in flour for local account, but the prices bid from foreign buyers were a little out of line. The demand for bran and shorts is good at firm prices. Cheese and butter is fairly active and firm. Demand for eggs good and provisions fair.

French Flyman Injured.

Rheims, France, Oct. 7.—While testing a new monoplane for the French army yesterday, Lieut. Conneau, who flies under the name of "Andre Beaumont," met with a serious accident. In making a landing part of the frame of the machine struck the ground and the monoplane rebounded, throwing out Lieut. Conneau violently. The aviator suffered a broken leg and other injuries, but it is not believed he is mortally hurt. Conneau is a navy lieutenant and flying in competitive meets as "Beaumont" has won such notable events as the Paris-to-Rome, the European Circuit, and the British Circuit races.

Boy of 15 Weds Girl of 14.

New York, Oct. 7.—Homesickness temporarily checked the romantic plans of Arthur Edward James, aged fifteen, and Ruth Jane Day, fourteen years old, who eloped from South Orange, N.J., last Saturday. They returned to their homes Thursday night, having tried in vain to obtain a marriage license. Although footsore and dispirited, the children begged to be permitted to marry, and the wedding will now probably take place at once in the Episcopal Church at South Orange which both have attended since they were mere babies. The parents have consented to the union.

Does The Fly Carry Infantile Paralysis?

The much "swatted" house fly (by the way, don't store your screens yet) has another crime laid at its door. In a paper on infantile paralysis read at a meeting of the Michigan State Medical Society, Dr. Burt F. Green, of Hillsdale, Mich., declared that the disease was carried about by flies and that there were many more cases of it than were reported to the health authorities. That the paralysis microbe also was carried by dust was another assertion of Dr. Green, who went deeply into the history of the disease. Infantile paralysis, although it has been recognized for many years, has only become prevalent in the last few years. It is now recognized as an infectious disease, and under a rule of the State Board of Health of Michigan it is necessary for physicians to report it and in some cities quarantine is being enforced.

In Ontario, however, the matter has not been gone into so thoroughly and as yet it has not been discovered that the "innocent" fly is to blame for carrying these microbes; however there is nothing to the contrary, and it is well to be on the safe side.

Local physicians acknowledge that the disease is infectious, and advise and in the more recent cases, urge, that precaution be taken to starve out the disease and keep it from spreading. It is also regarded as a disease of the more serious class, and during this year it has claimed more victims than former years.—"Swat the fly."

WEDDING BELLS

KINGDON—KIRKWOOD.

The home of Mrs. S. A. Smith, 498 Park street, was the scene of a pretty wedding last night, when Miss Lavina Kirkwood was united in marriage to Mr. Orvall Kingdon. The ceremony which took place at 7 o'clock, was performed by Rev. H. J. Keith in the presence of immediate relations and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Kingdon will reside in Peterborough.

Freight Cars In Splinters.

Brampton, Ont., Oct. 7.—At an early hour yesterday morning a Grand Trunk freight train entering Brampton from the west ran off the track just above the station. About twelve cars were derailed but no person was hurt. It is not yet definitely known how the train left the rails. Flour, lime, cement stone and other commodities are strewn about the track in inextricable confusion and the cars are reduced to matchwood. The line was cleared about ten o'clock, but it will take many hours to clear up the wreckage.

Had Not Read Enoch Arden.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—Frank Calve, who came to this city from Ottawa a few months ago, looking for his wife, and finding her living as the wife of another, struck her with a knife, cutting her across the face, was sentenced to six months in prison and a fine of $50 or three months additional, with two bondsmen of $500 each to keep the peace for one year, yesterday.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts, a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of home-stead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased home-stead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Intercolonial Railway

BADDECK BRANCH LINE.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alba-Baddeck Branch," will be received at this office until sixteen o'clock on Thursday, October 12th, 1911, for the construction of a branch line of railway from a point on the Intercolonial Railway near Alba to the town of Baddeck, a distance of 32.7 miles.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into may be seen and full information obtained on and after the 15th inst, 1911, at the office of the Chief Engineer, of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Intercolonial Railway at Moncton, N.B.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $30,000.00, made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Methodists Discuss Duty to Other Religions

NEED OF LATIN RACES

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Foreign missionary enterprise was the topic of the third day's sessions of the Ecumenical Methodist Conference. The responsibility of Methodism in world-wide evangelism, her mission to the non-Christian races, the backward races, and in particular to the Latin races, and to the countries of France and Korea, were the subjects of the addresses and essays, and the resources of the church in men and women and in means were passed in review. The high note of service to the less highly favored peoples was sounded with no hesitancy, and time and again through the day the call rang out in the earnest words of the speakers that Methodism should gird herself for the task of evangelization more determinedly and on a larger scale than ever she has done. This was necessary, it was declared, if she would save herself from stern condemnation. Spurgeon's declaration was quoted by one speaker, that it was "not so much a question whether the heathen could be saved if we did not send them the Gospel, but whether we ourselves could be saved if we did not give it to those who are without it." Methodists alone, he said, could, if they set themselves to the task, carry the Gospel in less than ten years to the thousand million inhabitants of the earth now crying for it. Antagonism to Roman Catholicism as a system was prominent in some of the addresses.

French Flag at Agadir.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—A group of Frenchmen hoisted a French flag over the fort at Agadir, Morocco, threatening grave international complications. It was announced that France had proclaimed a protectorate and that a French cruiser was en route for Agadir.

The French Government immediately disavowed the action and as it is not represented at Agadir, instructed the French consul at Mogador to ask the Moroccan authorities to take measures to remove the flag and end the incident.

According to the latest advices the Frenchmen were defying the local Calif of Agadir, who on his own responsibility had ordered the French colors lowered.

Agadir is the seaport on the Atlantic coast of Morocco where the German gunboat Panther and the German cruiser Berlin landed men to the surprise of France, which was engaged in putting down a revolt of the natives and which incident caused the recent Moroccan crisis.

Municipal Clean-Up.

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—Warrants for the arrest of Director of Public Safety Henry Clay, City Architect Carl B. Zeisenger, John R. Wiggins, a contractor and builder, and Treasurer Wall, of the latter's firm, were issued yesterday on the affidavit of Logan M. Hullitt, chairman of the taxpayers' committee. The charges are conspiracy to defraud the city and are an outcome of the investigation conducted by the Catlin Senatorial Commission. The men will not be taken into custody but will accept service through their attorneys and appear for a hearing.

Died of Injuries.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—After lying in a semi-conscious condition in St. Joseph Hospital, Parry Sound, as the result of being struck by a falling log, Joseph Patnote, 222 Wellesley street, succumbed to concussion of the brain.

Mr. Patnote was directing the removal of a boom of logs when one struck his head. Another man was also injured, but will probably recover.

Crippled With Sore Back

Kidneys Were Badly Diseased and She Didn't Know It

Was Completely Cured by Less Than Three Boxes of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Women are very often deceived and mistaken in regard of kidney disease. The pains in the back are attributed to other derangements, and kidney disease is allowed to run on and on until beyond the reach of medical science.

There is needless suffering, and life itself is risked, because backache is not recognized as the most marked symptom of kidney disease.

There is no treatment which so quickly relieves and cures kidney pains in the back as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. As proof of this read Mrs. Patterson's letter:

Mrs. Richard Patterson, Haldimand, Gaspe Co., Que., writes: "I will gladly say that I was cured of kidney trouble by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. When I began using this medicine I was crippled with sore back and did not know what was the trouble. In looking over Dr. Chase's Almanac I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and decided to try them.

"I had not used two boxes before my back was all right, and before I had completed the third box was entirely cured. There has been no return of the old kidney trouble, and I therefore believe the cure to be permanent."

One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmandson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

LAURIER STEPS OUT

Hon. R. L. Borden is Now Prime Minister of Canada

A SIMPLE CEREMONY

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—The Laurier Administration is no more, and Canada to-day is without a Government. At three o'clock yesterday afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier left his office in the east block, drove out to Government House ad formally tendered his resignation.

The next step was a message from His Excellency to Mr. Borden's secretary asking the leader of the Conservative party to come to see the Governor-General.

Mr. Borden drove out to Rideau Hall and from six to seven o'clock was closeted with the representative of the crown.

He was asked to form a Government and undertook the task.

There was little of the dramatic about the final scenes. The members of the Liberal Cabinet met at 10.30 yesterday morning and remained in session until 1.30.

It was the final meeting, and at its close Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues left the council chamber for the last time.

The outgoing Premier appeared to be in high spirits and was chatting gaily with Mr. Paterson and Mackenzie King.

To the newspaper men gathered outside the room, he cheerily announced his intention of visiting Earl Grey in the afternoon. He waved his hand and with a brief "good-bye boys," he entered his cab and drove home.

Shortly after three o'clock Sir Wilfrid Laurier drove up to Rideau Hall. He was immediately ushered into Lord Grey's presence, and the formality of tendering the resignations took but a brief space. Then the outgoing Premier chatted with the King's representative for some time, and took his farewell.

At 4.30 Arthur Sladen, Earl Grey's private secretary, called up Mr. Borden on the telephone, and asked if it would be convenient for him to wait upon the Governor-General at six o'clock. Then a more formal message was sent over by hand and all was ready for the final act in the drama.

Just before six o'clock Mr. Borden passed out of the door at his residence on Wurtemburg street and entered the waiting cab. Mrs. Borden smilingly watched him leave, and also Hon. Frank Cochrane, who happened to be with the new Premier when the vice-regal messenger came.

The old gardener stopped sweeping up the autumn leaves as the carriage swept by and said, "Good luck, sir." "Thank you, John," was Mr. Borden's smiling reply as the cab whirled away to Rideau Hall.

He accepted the task of forming a Government and asked for a day or two's delay—the customary request. Within an hour he was back at his home.

Now Mr. Borden has formally undertaken the work matters will move swiftly. The official slate will be given out on Monday.

There is likely to be a shake-up in the distribution of portfolios. Thus Mr. Foster is generally slated for secretary of State and Minister of External Affairs, while Marine may go to British Columbia. Mr. Doherty is conceded to have the right of way to the portfolio of Justice.

In a few days the ex-Ministers will have scattered to all points of the country. Sir Fred Borden has sold his fine residence. Mr. Fielding will continue to reside here for some time.

Monday will see the official list of the men who will assist Mr. Borden in the Government of Canada.

T. W. Crothers, of West Elgin, is now suggested as the probable speaker of the House.

May Re-enter Politics.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Hon. Geo. P. Graham will likely re-enter public life and go back to the House of Commons. The ex-Minister of Railways is in Toronto at present attending the ecumenical conference.

Mr. Graham says his friends are very anxious to have him go back to the House, and already he has been offered two seats in Ontario and several in Quebec.

There are also some flattering offers in the business world waiting for him if he cares to abandon public life, but Mr. Graham will hardly persuade himself to leave his old love. He prefers to re-enter the fight, though he does have to sit in the cold shades of opposition. Hon. Mr. Graham says there is a possibility that he may spend the first short session in the press gallery. He thinks it would be an enjoyable occupation, for a little while at least.

Provincial Appointments.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—The following appointments by the Provincial Government were announced yesterday:

S. R. McCready is appointed director of elementary agricultural education.

Henri St. Jacques, B.A., has been appointed principal of Sturgeon Falls English-French model school, in succession to L. E. O. Payment, who has been transferred to the English-French model school at Ottawa.

James Henry Barritt, K.C., of the town of Pembroke, has been appointed crown attorney and clerk of the peace for Renfrew County in the room of J. P. Metcalf, resigned.

Perks Talks of Canal Plans.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—Sir Robert Perks, British financier and head of the Georgian Bay Canal Co., announces that at an early date the canal scheme would be laid before the incoming Government, though it was not expected there would be any pronouncement from the Cabinet for some time.

While Sir Robert would not say that the passage of reciprocity would have obviated the necessity for the ship canal, as was alleged during the campaign, he stated that the result of the election was undoubtedly a declaration for east and west trade and the Georgian Bay Canal was the natural sequence.

APPEAL TO POWERS

Turkish Cabinet Send Out Appeals to All the World

KING GEORGE ADDRESSED

Constantinople, Oct. 7.—At a meeting held yesterday in the Mosque of St. Sophia a telegram of protest against Italy's declaration of war on Turkey was formulated and sent to all the Parliaments of the world, peace and arbitration societies, universities, Socialist organizations and The Hague Peace Tribunal.

The telegram says the occupation of Tripoli is unjustified and that Italy is unworthy of a place among the great Powers. It asks whether western civilization has considered the effect upon the eastern mind of Italy's brigandage.

The meeting also sent the following message to King George of England.

"How can a power like England, ruling between 80,000,000 and 90,000,000 of Moslems, regard with complaisant silence the declaration of war against the Ottoman nation and the blockade of Tripoli? Is such policy in harmony with the present and future interests of England."

Annoy the Italian Officers.

Rome, via Frontier, Oct. 7.—Rear Admiral Borea d'Olmo, who has been appointed Italian governor of Tripoli, is a distinguished naval officer and son of the master of ceremonies at His Majesty's court. He commanded the cruiser Elba, which participated in the blockade of Venezuela and witnessed the battle off Chemulpo during the Russo-Japanese war when he rescued 200 Russian sailors after their cruiser Varing was destroyed.

Captain Umberto Cagni, who was made commandant of the landing parties, is president of the international polar commission and was a companion of the Duke of Abruzzi on the latter's Alaskan and North Pole exhibition. He was one of the few officers at Messina at the time of the great earthquake, who remained calm when others lost their heads.

The intention of the Italian Government to avoid further incidents on the Albanian coast was frustrated either because Captain Biscaretti, in command of a section of the torpedo boat flotilla had not received the instructions on this point, or being provoked by the Turks assumed responsibility for his action.

In order to avoid a repetition of such an occurrence, the Admiralty Office, upon the suggestion of Vice-Admiral the Duke of the Abruzzi has recalled all the ships cruising along the Albanian coast and adopted an other plan to protect Italian steamers from attacks by the Turks. This plan is kept secret.

It is understood that Rear Admiral Aubrey is manoeuvring in the Aegean Sea, intending to have his warships so placed that he can capture without destroying the whole Turkish fleet if it dares to emerge from its hiding-place.

How the Turks Were Fooled.

Syracuse, Italy, Oct. 7.—The Italian battleship San Marco arrived here yesterday from Tripoli. She steamed throughout the night without lights, in order to avoid detection by Turkish torpedo boats, which are still cruising with surprising audacity, about the Italian fleet. During the trip the San Marco stopped a steamer, which proved to be British-owned. It was allowed to proceed.

The officers of the battleship described the bombardment of Tripoli as having been arranged with great care in order to spare the enemy as much as possible. At the last moment Vice-Admiral Faravelli decided not to bombard even the palace and so the governor was left undisturbed, though the batteries adjacent were silenced.

The Turkish soldiers gave proof of extraordinary courage. Frequently they exposed themselves unnecessarily. It appears from statements made by prisoners taken that the Turks did not at first realize their inferiority. The Government of Constantinople and the local authorities had instilled in them the conviction that Italy was an insignificant country and weaker than Greece.

When they saw the imposing fleet assembled off the coast they were assured by their officers that the vessels were not Italian, but British warships, which had been ordered to Tripoli to prevent its occupancy by the Italians. Notwithstanding this deception and the subsequent disillusionment the Turkish gunners responded bravely to the attack and made a good fight considering the equipment at their disposal.

Factories To Be Established Here.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 7.—Irving Schaffer, secretary-treasurer of the Richelieu Securities Co., Buffalo, fiscal agents, yesterday about completed negotiations for the establishment here of a branch of the American company, manufacturing vacuum-cleaners. He said that a plant would be in operation by the spring. He is also negotiating for the establishment here of a Canadian branch of the Stotts Railway Signal Co.

"I know at least a score of large American concerns that will establish branches in Canada. They did not finally decide to locate in Canada until the pact was turned down," said Mr. Schaffer.

Sweden Also Has New Cabinet.

Stockholm, Oct. 7.—K. Staaff, the Liberal leader, yesterday succeeded in forming a Cabinet to succeed the one of Premier Lundamen, which resigned Sept. 30. In the new Cabinet M. Staaff will take the portfolio of Premier and Count Albert Ahrenavard, Swedish Minister to the United States, that of Foreign Affairs. The Socialists declined to participate in the formation of the new Ministry.

The other members of the new Ministry are:

War, Dr D. K. Bergstrom; justice, M. Landstrom; marine, Deputy Jacob Larssen; interior, Deputy P. A. V. Schotte; finance, Barton A. T. Adelswaerg; institution, Dr. Fridtjof Berg; agriculture, Deputy Alfred Petersson; ministers without portfolio, Senator Petren and Assistant Judge Stenstrom.

See that Flexible, Adjustable GILLETTE Blade?

Note the curve that gives the automatic adjustment.

As you slip the razor together and tighten up the handle, the guard curves the flat blade. The tighter you screw the handle, the closer the blade edge fits against the guard, and the lighter the shave. Loosen it a quarter turn and the edge springs away from the guard, giving a closer shave.

That's one reason why, among the millions of GILLETTE users, with every conceivable variety of beard and skin, each one finds the GILLETTE suits his face exactly. That's one reason why

Russell Case Closing.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—It became evident at yesterday's session of the long drawn out Russell conspiracy case, that the trial is drawing to a conclusion. As outlined to Judge Archer at the close of the afternoon hearing, the arrangement is now that the defense will close its case on Monday morning, when McNamara, Montreal manager of the Pinkertons, and one of the defendants, will be continued. Then the plaintiff's side will take up evidence in rebuttal, and it is likely that one of the witnesses will be Moses Cochenthaler, whose name has figured so prominently in the testimony of previous witnesses.

In all probability the hearing of evidence both main and in rebuttal will be concluded Monday, and Tuesday may see the end of the case.

The defendant McNamara was on the stand the greater part of yesterday afternoon. The greater part of his evidence consisted of details as to accounts, but some major issues were reached.

Brothers-in-Law Quarrelled.

Chatham, Oct. 7.—Orlando Arnold, came to his death through injuries received on July 13, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury Thursday night. On that date he had a quarrel with his brother-in-law Thomas Griffith.

Witnesses told of hearing Griffith say: "I hit him and I guess he will stay hit for a while," and "I knocked him down and he will be there yet if someone hadn't picked him up."

Griffith came before the magistrate yesterday for a preliminary hearing on a murder charge.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION GOES

Makes Your Disordered Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach, if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Biliousness, Heartburn, Water Brash, pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach cannot. A single dose will digest all the food you eat, and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist, and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong Stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Should you eat this moment be suffering from indigestion or any stomach disorder you can surely get relief within five minutes.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Mr. Thomas D. Stanley, magistrate of St. Mary's, is dead.

The big freighter Corunna ran aground on Welcome Island.

Alanasi Leshick, a Russian, stabbed a fellow-countryman to death on Higgins avenue, Winnipeg, Thursday night.

The Winnipeg Council has decided to drop negotiations for the purchase of the street railway and allied interests.

Following a heavy rain yesterday afternoon the weather turned cold, and snow fell for a couple of hours a Brockville.

Three young children of Alex. Lachance of Fercol, Quebec, were burned to death in a fire that destroyed the family dwelling.

One man was shot and probably fatally wounded late Thursday night when a party of Illinois Central strike-breakers were fired upon at New Orleans.

William Burnisky of Carthage, N.Y., was yesterday sentenced to two years and six months in the penitentiary for importing white slaves from Ogdensburg, N.B.

Percy G. Call, a Montrealer, was sentenced to Central Prison for one year for forgery. He cashed bogus cheeks for $45 at the Russell House in Ottawa.

Mikail Mordkin, the Russian dancer, has been operated on for appendicitis in a New York hospital. It will be several weeks at least before he can resume rehearsals.

It is reported that Col. Sam Hughes will be appointed honorary aide de camp to the Duke of Connaught, and it is believed that more than one A.D.C. from each province will be appointed.

Henry Hace, a young Finlander, is being sought by the provincial police on a charge of having murdered Andrew Samanen, another Finlander. Samanen's body was found in the bush near Fort Frances.

Farewell to the Duke.

London, Oct. 7.—The Duke and Duchess of Connaught left Euston at 11.55 on a special train, attended by Lieut.-Col. H. C. Lowther, military secretary; Captain Walter Long, aide-de-camp; Lieut. Hon. A. Ramsay, of the navy, attending the duchess, with Miss Pelly and twenty servants. Their Highnesses occupied the semi-royal coaches, decorated with carnations, chrysanthemums and roses. Luncheon was served on the train.

The duke's special desire was that any unnecessary fuss attending the departure should be avoided, nevertheless the scene at Euston demonstrated the extreme popularity of Their Highnesses with the general public of London. There is a confident belief among Canadians on both sides of the water and dwellers in all parts of the Empire that the new Governor-General will have a brilliant period of office.

The platform was entirely reserved, but a large party of guests was present, and outside a large crowd witnessed the royal arrival.

Just a Fairy Tale.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—In reference to the reports from St. John's, Nfld., that the steamer Kite, returning from a prospecting expedition to Labrador and Baffin's Land, had brought back with her rich samples of gold quartz, and that her sailors were carrying in their pockets nuggets of almost virgin gold, the officials of the Geographical Survey state that when Dr. Low of that department explored Labrador he made no important mineral discoveries.

DATES ARRANGED FOR THE WORLD'S SERIES BATTLE

NEW YORK, OCT. 5.—The National Commission to-day decided to play the first of the world's baseball championship games at the Polo Grounds here Saturday, October 14. The choice was determined by the toss of a coin. Ben Shibe, President of the Athletics called heads and the coin settled with tails up. The games will alternate between the two cities. The following schedule for the games was adopted: Oct. 14, 17 and 19 at New York. October 16, 18 and 20 at Philadelphia. Should any of the games be postponed on account of rain or from any other cause the commission decided that the visiting nine shall remain in the city where the game was scheduled until it can be played. A postponment of any game would, therefore, necessitate a change in the remainder of the schedule. The commission also decided that the seventh game, should it be necessary to decide the championship, should be played in New York. In the event of a tie, the game must be played off on the grounds on which the tieoccurred before the next game is played. Umpires Klem and Brennan were detailed by the National League for the contests and Umpire Connolly and Dineen by the American League.

At the conclusion of the meeting John Heydler, Secretary and Treasurer of the National League, said the prices of the seats for the world's series would be announced later. It was said that the New York Club wanted the prices advanced over the rates of last year, but this was resisted by the officials of the Philadelphia American League Club. Last season the prices were: Bleachers, $1, grand stand $2, and boxes $3, and these prices will probably prevail. The issuance of the tickets and distribution of them will be done by the respective clubs, but with the approval of the commission. The tickets probably will be ready the first of next week.

All games will begin at 2 o'clock p. m., and will be attended by the members of the National Commission and its Secretary. The official ball of the National League will be used in games on National League grounds, and the American League's official ball in games on American League grounds. Each of the contesting clubs is required to deposit a certified check for $10,000 with the Secretary of the commission not later than 11 o'clock on the day of the first scheduled game.

The Commission issued a special warning to players that the rule regarding conduct on the ball field would be strictly enforced against any offending player. It also served notice that under the commission's rules the winner of the world's championship will not be permitted to participate in any exhibition game during the remainder of the present year, the victorious team being required to disband immediately after the completion of the series.

WILL BE A BATTLE OF WITS

New York, October 4.—Baseball "fans in every city and hamlet in the country have assigned the pennants in the American and National Leagues to the Athletics and Giants. Railroad time tables and record books are now being studied, but up to date no big wager has been made at odds. In Philadelphia, where one would naturally look for the strongest support in behalf of the Athletics, bettors stamp the proposition as an even money affair, and unless cash is rolled into the speculation by carloads the even money system is likely to prevail.

In the present week all details of the world's series between the pennant winners in the National and American leagues, will be decided upon. That the Giants and Athletics will figure in the contests is now conceded by experts, who have wearied of the task of figuring how the Giants would be defeated. The Athletics have already sewed up the American League gonfalon, and by winning two more games the Giants may do the same in their circuit. Plans of the National Commission call for a meeting in New York on Thursday to decide upon the schedule for the series of seven games. The National Commission is in charge of fixing the price of admission.

Remember 1905

In a Broadway resort where followers of the Giants congregate each day, several bets have been placed. Memories of the defeat of the Athletics by the Giants in the world's series six years ago have not been downed by recent events, and the followers of the Athletics have that same respect for "Christy" Mathewson's pitching power and John McGraw's strategy that they had after the last meeing between the teams.

Veterans of that series—George Browne, formerly a Giant, and "Ossie" Schreckengost, a catching standby with the Athletics—were in the city recently with another player who shared in the receipts of the championship series of 1905, "Andy" Coakley, who was a pitcher for the Athletics.

Browne rates the teams as the most evenly matched that have met in recent years. He has leanings towards the Giants, but insists that the Athletics will not be as easy to solve as they were six years ago. "It's a great machine that 'Connie' Mack has built up," said Browne, "but the Giants have been going so fast that it seems unlikely that they will be stopped by any kind of opposition. 'Matty' will be there as big and strong as ever. A pitcher who 'has had it' on a team once can be depended upon to repeat.

A Battle of Wits

"Schreck" and Coakley think the two teams to be the best that could be provided for such an engagement. Coakley says his old mates are travelling faster than they ever did. "It will be a battle of managerial wits," says Coakley. "Of course I have faith in the Athletics, but that base running combination that the Giants have in operation every day will be a big factor. The Athletics are better equipped for a hard series than they were six years ago." "Schreck" likes the Athletics' chances but is not at all positive.

For the first time since 1905 the Giants had a chance to win a season's series form the Cubs. The games played between the teams this season have resulted in an even break, each getting eleven victories.

Supporters of the Athletics figure that with Coombs and Lapp as a battery the Athletics will have eight three hundred per cent. hitters in the line-up. "Jack" Barry is the only regular who is not batting up to the mark, but Mack rates him as the most effective pinch hitter in the ranks. In base running the Giants have a big lead over the American Leaguers, but there are some very fleet young men in the Athletics' list, including Collins, Strunk, Baker, Barry and McInnis.

Busy Time for Catchers

Two catchers of the Athletics and two of the Giants' pitchers are the chief figures in the preliminary sizing up of the teams that seem sure to meet in the world's series. Thomas and Lapp are the American League catchers upon whom is imposed the task of stopping the fleet Giants. It is generally conceded that tthe Giants need Mathewson and Marquard at their best in order to win

On recent performances Thomas and Lapp do not appear to have the power to check the Giants' base running. Neither is of the ability of Dooin, Archer, Kling, Gibson or Bresnahan in throwing to bases. Thomas showed last season that he had greatly improved in pegging ability and clever handling of pitchers, but in that respect he has advanced no further than "Chief" Meyers.

Hard on Favourites.

In a majority of the world's series contested, the team that has been a decided favourite has been defeated. Last year the Cubs were named to stop the Athletics easily, but the resul of the series showed that the American Leaguers had been underrated. Before the Cubs got into the habit of tearing up the Tigers annually they had an experience against the White Sox in Chicago, a series that was listed as a 3 to 1 shot for the Cubs, but the Sox won.

The Yankees' season ends wtih this week's games, the Boston team appearin ghere for the three days and the Yanks taking to the road for the wind up in Philadelphia. A majority of the players plan to remain in this city for the world's series.

MORE ENGLISH VIEWS OF BASEBALL

By Casey, in English Labour Leader

The most important man on the field is the ampire. His voice is the greatest thing I have tumbled across in America. He is a human megaphone. The lung power he places behind the word "Strike" is enough to dislocate the New York dock traffic. He wears a triangular mustard plaster outside his chest to protect his voice. Of course, baseball is not near so dangerous as some people fancy. There is always a staff of doctors in attendance, also trained nurses, ambulance wagons, lint antiseptic dressings and surgical instruments.

The catcher is also protected by a mediaeval costume and an iron mask. He occupies a peculiar position. His business is to catch as many balls as possible, before they reach the spectators. Sometimes a well-pitched ball hits the umpire. This is the only chance the pitcher has to settle old grievances.

Some of the other players stand upon plates. They do not carry the plates round with them like churchwardens or deacons. Many men have got rich quick by carrying plates round on Sundays, but if the new regulation comes into force, it will spoil their profession. An English clergyman suggests that in future none bu one-armed men should be allowed to take the plate round. Of course, one arm would be useless to an American baseball pitcher, one hand would not hold his salary. During the progress of the game, the stranger is generally paralyzed by the weird effect of twenty thousand jaws working in unison on a gum-chewing serenade.

The eagerness with which a young man will purchase a 25 cent toothbrush, a 50 cent pot of fragrant tooth paste, and then dump a piece of sweetened india-rubber or a slice of 5 cent cut plug into his dental depot, is a bigger mystery than Conan Doyle ever solved. But I am digressing, and must get back to my base. The batsman who hits the ball drops his bat, and runs about 90 feet to his base. The aforesaid base is a plate let into the ground. Should he reach it before he is hit with the ball, or before the man standing there can catch him out, he is all right. If he can get to the next base, that is called stealing a base.

Professional base stealers are allowed to slide in on their head, stomach or stick their spiked shoes into the man who guards the plate. To become a good base stealer it is necessary to practice falling off high buildings. Of course they are all padded—not the buildings. After the match is over, the spectators race on the field to collect portions of the base stealer's pants, epidermis or hair. These are handed down as family heirlooms.

Base running in America is an art, in England it is a science, as any person knows who has backed the favourite at a village sports.

In New York it is considered an honour to steal a base. In England, should you steal a "base" from either theatre, concert room or orchestra, you stand a chance of meeting the professional owner of it, or going to jail for five years.

Morals are oft a matter of miles. A time batsman at baseball is not necessarily a man who has done time. He may be quite a decent fellow. His position is rather hazy to me. So far as I can gather after an exhaustive study of the game, "A time bat is a bat of the batsman who bats at times at the ball with a bat in his own time." Whether the time is three-fourth time, common time, six-and-eight, or Alla Breve I cannot say just yet. In another twenty years or so I may. On the other hand, a time bat shall not be batted against a batsman, for being hit by a pitched ball off a bat, or a called ball when made a sacrifice hit by the batter, with whose bat he batted his bat with. This, of course, simplifies matters considerably. I should think myself that a time bat on the monthly instalment plan, which misses the payment owing to the batsman's lack of memory, should not be taken with the rest of the furniture. It is the man's living. A foul hit is when the ball hits a friend who is cheering the strikist.

In spite of a few minor drawbacks the game is as fascinating as it is exciting. To hear the cultured inhabitants on the grand stand helping the game on is quite an inspiration.

"Hang on there!" "Get at 'im!" "Bing him on the beezer!" "Rah, Rah-" "Look at the dope!" "Bite him!" "Eyup, yup, yoh!" "Too late!" "Swat the stiff!" "Baby, baby!" "Skin him alive!"

These yells fairly fascinated me. As the game progressed the excitement rose with it. Never shall I forget the excitement. At quarter time the score stood:

New York	0
Philadelphia	0

At half-time the score stood:

The crowd stood up. We do the same in England during Handel's Hallelujah Chorus. It is an act of adoration in both cases. It also enables one to stretch the foot that has gone to sleep. The excitement was almost too much for me. Strong men snored aloud in their agony, and ladies nervously twisted their bangles. At three-quarter time the dreaded moment had arrived. I felt as if I wanted to do something.

The score board read as follows:

Philadelphia	0 0 0 0 0 0

It was too much for me. I cleared out and took the first boat to England.

Alas! I shall never see another game.

PUPILS ARE TO BE CONGRATULATED

The pupils of the Collegiate Institute are to be congratulated upon having as their teaching staff a coterie of gentlemen who have the science of teaching thoroughly in their grasp, as is shown by the splendid success of the Collegiate students in the mid-summer examinations, but who also take a keen interest in developing manly sport. At the Collegiate games yesterday the staff from Principal Kenner down, turned out and helped to make the events a big success by acting as officials. Such actions cannot fail to establish pleasant relationships between pupils and teachers.

Do You Realize

That McKINLEY-DARRAGH returned in the past year 50 cents in dividends, and on its present price is paying 33 PER CENT ANNUALLY, with the company piling up immense earnings from shipments of high grade ore, which are second largest from the camp so far this year?

So great have its reserves of low-grade become that it will be necessary to build another mill to take care of them. McKinley-Darragh is bringing more ore in sight than it is taking out.

That TEMISKAMING, after having paid 41 per cent. on the par of its capitalisation in dividends, is making a bigger mine at depth than it has ever been, and that the dividends are now at the rate of BETTER THAN 30 PER CENT. ANNUALLY on the purchase price, with reserves in the mine sufficient to pay them for years to come? ENGINEERS who have recently been in the Temiskaming mine say that its possibilities are greater than they have ever been.

Are You Aware

That BEAVER CONSOLIDATED, paying 12 cents annually in dividends, is paying 25c annually on the purchase price and its ore reserves are of a not equivalent to double its market price?

The company is shipping the richest ore from the Cobalt district, and one carload is sufficient to pay a quarter's dividends at prevailing figures.

A mill to treat the immense tonnage of low grade ore is now in course of construction, which will mean a big increase to its already large surplus treasury. Beaver's liquid assets are now in the neighbourhood of $300,000.

An Explanation.

The Examiner wishes to correct a totally mistaken impression that seems to have gotten abroad in connection with the recent police court case, in which a druggist was fined for selling alcohol on Sunday. The name of the man who purchased the alcohol was Herbert Johnson, who has not always been a resident here and who comes to Peterborough from an outside village. It is perhaps, unnecessary to say that Mr. Herbert Johnston of 110 Dublin street, who was born and who has lived all his life in Peterborough, was in no way connected with the case.

LAYING HENS

From Farm and Dairy.

Bessie M. Main, Victoria Co., Ont.

I have charge of 200 laying hens, which are divided off in lots of 13 birds to a pen. During the season just past I have hatched 673 chickens, 500 of which were hatched by the natural means—by hens—the rest being brought out with an incubator. We have but two breeds of poultry, these being White Wyandottes and Barred Rocks.

In getting winter eggs the secret is to look after the hens and to feed them well. Have them always provided with fresh air and keep them clean. One must not be careless with the poultry, else returns will not be satisfactory.

Our chickens are never kept after their third year, all being killed off when slightly over two years old. In order to make sure that no old hens be kept I have each one marked with a leg-band. For the first year a band is placed on the right leg of each of the pullets to be retained for laying stock. The second year the pullets are banded on the left leg. The third year the band is taken off of all hens having it on the right leg, and those are killed, while the pullets of that year are marked with the ring on their right legs. By following out this system I know the age of all of the hens, and I kill them off in the third year. Then we have only young stock all of the time. Nothing is kept after the third year, since after hens reach that time they are not profitable.

After these points have been attended to I consider the main thing about successful poultry keeping is to keep everything sweet and clean about the poultry house and to keep the poultry free from vermin.

The pens in which our laying hens are housed are each 12x12 and are in long continuous houses 6 ft. 10 inches high. The pens have cement floors and straw lofts. When winter sets in two barrow-loads of sand are scattered over each floor and a foot of straw is placed on top.

The morning feed in winter consists of a mixture of oats and wheat, thrown in the straw, after which the straw is well shaken. The chickens are thus provided with plenty of exercise in finding their food. In the forenoon I place a mangel within reach of the hens. The noon feed is a boiled mixture of grain and potatoes and table refuse; when all is boiled well together I thicken it with shorts. The night feed is composed of bran, oat chop, corn meal and shorts boiled, with a quantity of ground bone added.

All water basins are filled each morning with fresh separated milk. When water is supplied the chill is first taken off. Plenty of grit, oyster shell and charcoal is kept in small tin hopper-feeding boxes, placed in each pen.

When practicing this style of feeding I can always get plenty of eggs in winter. I always make sure to have the mashes thick and well mixed together. When the mating season starts I discontinue the noon feed and feed grain instead. I have secured the very best of results during the hatching season from the above feeding.

I always make sure to have the male birds away from the pens during winter; then I place them back again six weeks before I start to collect my eggs for hatching.

The latter part of April I clean out all the straw and sand from the pens and scrub each pen from top to bottom thoroughly, then all about the roost boards I whitewash with lime. Two barrows of fresh sand are placed on the floor of each pen, and a pail of sand is placed on each roost board. The pens are kept like this all summer.

First thing every morning the roost boards are cleaned. They are sanded twice a week and the dishes are raked once a week. I keep the nests thoroughly clean by putting fresh straw in often.

NOTE.—Miss Main has charge of Lady McKenzie's dairy and poultry at Kirkfield. It is wonderful the success she has made of her work. Early in August one of the editors of Farm and Dairy visited Lady McKenzie's dairy and was much impressed with the extraordinary fine appearance of everything about the dairy and about the henneries, both of which Miss Main has charge of. Never before have we seen things around a poultry establishment in such splendid and immaculate shape. The public are always welcome to visit the dairy and the henneries at Kirkfield. Farmers and others who find it convenient to do so may learn much and be well repaid by inspecting the henneries and "The Dairy" at Kirkfield.—Ed.

CREAM CHEESE

From Farm and Dairy.

The process of manufacturing cream cheese is inexpensive and simple, says Miss G. Bagnall, N.D.D., Instructor in Dairying, Macdonald College, P.Q., and the cheese is so profitable that farmers should encourage their wives and daughters to follow these instructions, so as to be able to furnish their tables with a good wholesome and nutritious article of diet. If made from fairly rich cream, it will contain from 40 to 50 per cent of butter-fat. Butter-fat is more easily digested than other fats, and should, therefore, prove most beneficial to invalids. With or without butter it is most palatable, and makes delicious sandwiches. During the three years that this cheese has been made at Macdonald College, the demand has increased from four dozen to 60 dozen a month. Here are a few reasons why the manufacture of cream cheese on our farms should be encouraged:

1. It is profitable. The cream from 100 pounds of average milk will make 25 cream cheese, which retails at 15c each, or equal to $3.75 per 100 pounds of milk.

2. The return is quick, the cheese being marketable in three days, thus saving the expense of storage.

JOHN EDMUND KANE SENT UP FOR TRIAL

Young Man Charged With Forgery Tried in Police Court This Morning and Was Sent Up for Trial.

MUCH EVIDENCE

John Edmond Kane, who appeared in the Police Court a week ago, charged with forging the name of John Kane to a Government cheque, and who pleaded not guilty, and was remanded, was tried before Magistrate Dumble this morning, with the result that he was sent up for trial. It required from ten o'clock until twelve this morning to take all the evidence in the case, and then there was not sufficient to give judgment.

George Jones of the Ontario Government Treasury Department, Toronto, was the first witness called. He presented the cheque in court, which he stated that he knew had been issued to one John Kane, who had been acting in the capacity of fisheries and game special patrol. He had seen Mr. Kane's signature on previous occasions, but was unable to swear that the one on the cheque presented was, or was not, that of Mr. Kane, as he explained that so many signatures came under his notice, that it was an utter impossibility to remember for any length of time, any particular signature. The first time the case was brought to his notice, was when he received a letter from the Fisheries and Game Department, on July 27th, requesting him to stop payment of the cheque, and as a matter of fact they had mailed the cheque on the 11th of the month.

Mr. John Watt, Fisheries Overseer for the territory form Lakefield to Bensford Bridge, testified that he had engaged the John Kane, whose name was forged, and that he had sent in the account for the $91.50 to the Government and wondered why they had not paid it.

John Kane, Fisheries Patrol, stated that the signature on the cheque was not his own, and, of course, was unable to state whose it was. He admitted that the box where his mail was placed served for the family and the rest of the boarders, where he boarded, numbering in all, nine. The prisoner does not board with him however.

George E. Clarke, accountant in the Bank of Commerce, gave evidence to the effect that he had known the prisoner for two years, during which time he had seen him about the streets frequently. He stated that the cheque was presented to the Teller, Wm. N. Galougher, and he sent Kane over to him. He (Clarke) then asked him if the cheque was his own, whereupon he answered in the negative, replying that it was his brother's. The cheque was then taken over to the Teller, who cashed it. That was the 15th of July. Clarke was sure that it was the prisoner, who got the money.

The Post Office Clerk, was then put in the box, and stated that Kane had often asked for mail there, but he did not remember giving him the letter containing the cheque.

Wm. Galougher, the Teller of the Bank of Commerce, stated that he had seen the prisoner before, but could not swear as to his identity. The cheque was presented in court, and the teller remembered cashing it.

George Kane, father of the prisoner, who lives in Orillia, stated that he had not seen his son since last January, and believed him to be here.

Harry Kane, the prisoner's brother, then gave evidence to the effect that the prisoner had worked for him, as a barber, for some time last fall, and that since that he thought he had been working for a contractor named Baker.

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood asked the witness if he had not told a certain man around theeity that he knew that his brother had cashed a cheque, and refused to pay him $25.00 which he owed. He denied this, but stated that he heard that his brother had gotten some money from Baker, and further, that he refused to pay him some money he owed him.

The Magistrate said that it was very clear that the young man had cashed the cheque, which was not his own, knowing that he was not the Kane, to whom the cheque was sent, but there was no evidence as to the hand writing on the cheque, the signature having been put on before presentation to the bank. He then sent the prisoner up for trial.

Turkey Ready To Give In Now---Will Cede Tripoli To Italy

Great Powers Have Received Note From Turkey Asking About the Basis of Peace---Naval Engagement Rumoured---Turks Claim Victory.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, OCT. 9.—What looked to be the beginning of the end of the Italian-Turkish war was contained in a note received by all the great powers to-day. Turkey asking if they thought the time had arrived to seek basis of peace between Italy and Turkey. The note intimates that Turkey will give Tripoli to Italy on certain conditions.

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 9—The Turkish governor at Saint Jean de Medua on the Albanian coast has informed the porte that a vessel flying the Austrian flag, but carrying Italian officers and three hundred soldiers, has been sunk off that port by Turkish guns, with all on board. It seems that the Turkish commander was informed of the vessel treacherously using the Austrian flag and immediately sunk the vessel. On the other hand there comes a report from Rome of the sinking of Turkish torpedo boats with three hundred men on board, near the same place. Putting conflicting reports together, it is summed up here that there has been a severe naval engagement in that vicinity with many casualities on both sides. Italians in Turkey have been threatened with expulsion and as the feeling runs high, the position of all foreigners is very dangerous.

NO ANNOUNCEMENT YET AS TO THE CABINET

Premier-Elect Borden Refused to Give Out Any Information This Morning, While His Secretary Intimated That Nothing Would Be Announced Until 5 O'clock To-day ---May be Surprises.

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 9.—An anxious crowd of newspapermen and politicians shadowed Premier-elect Borden all morning with the hope of getting some official inkling of the cabinet ,but it availed nothing. Borden himself was as tight as a clam, smiled sympathetically at those thirsting for information, but that was all. His secretary at one o'cock gave it out that there would be no announcement before five o'clock to-night and possibly not then. He also hinted that it would contain some surprises.

OTTAWA, OCT 9.—Those present in Ottawa this morning are the following men, all cabinet possibilities: Rodolphe Forget, Hon. L. P. Pelletier, T. W. Crothers, Sam Hughes, J. E. Armstrong, Judge Doherty, Hon. G. E. Foster, G. H. Perley, Hon. J. D. Hazen, Acton McInnis, Dr. Roche and F. D. Monk. On their way here and expected to-day are: W. T. White Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. Robt. Rogers, Martin Burrell and O. S. Goodeve.

OTTAWA, OCT. 9. — Col. Sam Hughes' chances of landing the portfolio of militia seemed brighter this afternoon. The opposition to appointment of W. T. White as Minster of Finance, has brought strong delegates of old line Conservatives here to-day from Toronto and Western Ontario to make a fuss about it. These, it is claimed, has caused Borden to delay in naming the cabinet.

Died From Result Of Blow

TORONTO, ONT., OCT. 9. — John Walter Dick, of the Inland Revenue Dept., who was touch line judge at the Argonaut-Hamilton game last Saturday, some hours after the game had an argument with an unknown man and was knocked down, fracturing his skull. He died this morning without recovering consciousness. He was an unmarried man, aged 54. There is no clue to his assailant.

URIC ACID SUFFERING
Uric acid is an accumulation of poisons which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES HELD AT BETHANY

Rev. Mr. Brown of the Campbellford Presbyterian Church conducted services for Rev. Dr. Marsh at Bethany yesterday, Rev. Dr. Marsh preaching in Campbellford. There were very large congregations present to hear Mr. Brown and the services were very enjoyable and profitable. A pleasing feature was that the Methodist congregation of Bethany not only cancelled their service, but also gave up their church to the Presbyterians for the anniversary service. Needless to say this brotherly and kindly act was thoroughly appreciated.

The services at Springville, in the absence of the pastor, were conducted by the Messrs. Albert Sanderson, Solomon and Fred Wilson, and were bright and enjoyable, the church being crowded.

A QUARTER CENTURY OF HONOURABLE BUSINESS.

To-day, October 9th, Mr. Robert Fair of Robert Fair & Co., makes announcement of his retirement from business. To-day is also the twenty-sixth anniversary of Mr. Fair's assumption of the business of the late Thomas Bradburn, conducted at the well-known sign of the "Golden Lion," George street. Mr. Fair's retirement marks the conclusion of twenty-six years personal association with business success achieved by honourable enterprise. He has also achieved as creditable a distinction as a citizen as he has as a merchant. While devoted industriously to his affairs, Mr. Fair has found time to take his full share in the activities of a public-spirited citizen, in connection with the Board of Trade and the Board of Education. In the latter his intelligent interest in our civic educational affairs won him the honour and responsibility of Chairman. In all his relations as a man of affairs and as a citizen, Mr. Fair has a quarter century record that will stand the closest scrutiny, viewed from the standpoint of either business man or citizen.

GIVE PETERBOROUGH A SHARE.

The Toronto World declares that the defeat of reciprocity has given an immense stimulus to the invasion of Canada by United States manufacturing industries. On Saturday it, declares with large confidence—

"I know at least a score of large American concerns that will establish branches in Canada since voters were wise enough to turn down reciprocity. They did not finally decide to locate in Canada until the pact was turned down," said Mr. Schaffer to The World."

We hope that the World's optimism is, and will be, justified by the facts. Now that the reciprocity agreement is voted out of the way, and we are to have a flood tide of "Yankee" industries pouring into Canada, perhaps those who worked the British Born with such enterprise and energy, may have a little left to secure one or two of these "score of industries for Peterborough. They certainly owe the city some amends for depriving it of the influence and services of the friend who has done more than any one other man, to advance it material and general interests.

TWO GREAT MINES.

Ontario's mineral production continues to increase, according to the annual report of T. W. Gibson, deputy minister of mines. The aggregate production for 1910 of nearly forty millions—$39,313,895—much exceeded that of the former year, the gain in value over 1909, previously the record year, being upwards of $6,000,000. The silver mines of Cobalt, which have placed Ontario in the position of the third largest producer of silver in the world, increased their output by four and three-quarter million ounces, and the nickel mines of Sudbury, now recognized as the most important source of this metal, by 5,495 tons.

There is another mine in addition to our great silver, nickel and gold mines. That is the farmers' fields, which, on an average yield wealth to the amount of about 200 millions every year. With more intensive methods of culture, with the encouragement of better markets, this wealth could easily be doubled. Northern Ontario furnishes the bulk of our mineral crop, but a tenth of its agricultural crop possibilities has not been reached. If the Ontario government had shown, in filling up Northern Ontario with settlers, half the enterprise of the Dominion Government in filling up the North West, the crop output of New Ontario would have been immensely increased.

KILL LAURIER, ANYWAY.

The London Advertiser has the following:

The Orange Sentinel says that Laurier allowed his cabinet ministers to figure in the Eucharistic procession in their official robes, and offered no rebuke to Chief Justice Girouard for "offering the homage of Canada" to the papal delegate. No cabinet ministers wore their official robes in the Eucharistic procession, and Chief Justice Girouard did not offer to the papal delegate the "homage" of the Canadian people. The chief justice sent a telegram on his own behalf offering his respects or compliments, for which the French equivalent is "hommages." The other day Mr. Bourassa sent a pamphlet to many of the newspaper offices of Canada with the words "hommages de l'auteur" (compliments of the author) on the cover. The English meaning of the word homage was no more intended in one case than the other.

But no explanation counts. Laurier was Laurier, and any excuse or misrepresentation or misinterpretation was welcome to secure his deposition. Anything French was to be condemned, even the language, because it did not permit the word "hommage" to be translated "worship" or "toe-kissing" according to the fantasy of the cult of the P. P. A.

NO FREEDOM OF CHOICE.

Hon. Mr. Borden, in becoming Premier, hasn't, evidently, become thereby any more the leader of his party. He is not, as is due his new responsibility, given a free hand. The Toronto Conservatives are up in arms against making Mr. White, of Toronto, a member of the Borden Cabinet. They have two objections—he "has been a Liberal all his life." Here speaks the spoils system. Merit is not to be so much the measure of Cabinet choice as party allegiance, and party service. Neither of these is, per se, a legitimate reason. Other things being equal, of course preference should be given to members of the dominant party. But, making such membership a prevailing factor, in either the Cabinet, or in the public service, is a vicious principle. The other objection—"he is a representative of the trusts—is a very legitimate and powerful one. The high cost of living, the canker that eats away the bulk of the best incomes, in the way of either wages or salary, is the most dangerous evil of the age, and it is fostered by lack of competition, permissible by inordinate protection, or contributary mal-adjustment of tariffs. If Mr. Borden is in trouble over these things he has himself to blame. He welcomed the assistance of Mr. White, and what he stands for, and cannot, in common fairness, ignore the bridge that carried him over the stream. This applies to the combines and monopolistic interests, as well as to the help afforded by the Bourassa Nationalist movement. If to the victors belong the spoils, the elements that secured the victory cannot be set aside as negligible quantities without some friction and heart-burning. The straight Conservatives of Toronto, or elsewhere, in Canada, do not, on this principle, deserve the spoils. They tried vainly for fifteen years to gain power, and failed. Now, they have nominally gained power, but not by virtue of any Conservative policy, but by a hotch-potch combination of many collateral interests. Mr. Borden is, therefore, justified if he is moved by a spirit of gratitude, and the precise application of the spoils principle, to recognize in the compilation of his cabinet, the elements that placed the spoils of office at his disposal. He has not much freedom of choice.

THE RIGHT SORT OF OPTIMISM.

(Ottawa Free Press)

The last words Sir Wilfrid uttered as he left the Eastern block recently to proceed to Rideau Hall to tender the resignations of himself, and his colleagues in the Ministry, were "Au Revoir."

It was not "Good Bye." That might have meant a complete severance of his connection with the building, which has known him now for fifteen years, and has been the theatre of his development from a man of middle age to one who is approaching the Psalmist's term of life.

And yet as he left, the sermon he preached in these two words was absolutely characteristic of the man. There was no despair about the parting. There was no pessimism. There was the doctrine of hope, and the sermon of optimism.

There he was, the great old statesman leaving his office for probably the last time, but he was not downcast. He knew how to take his defeat like a man, and he took it like a man. But he left office with the determination that the defeat was but a temporary one, and with the confidence that ere long his party would be called back to power, whether under his leadership or under that of some other, it mattered not. The come back was certain.

It was "Au Revoir" and not "Good bye."

HOW ANTI-CATHOLIC AND PRO-CATHOLIC INFLUENCES WERE "WORKED" AGAINST LAURIER

P. P. A. Influence in Peterborough and Clerical Influence in Quebec Worked Hand in Hand to Elect Two Borden Supporters.

The members of the P. P. A. and their dupes in Peterborough will be interested in knowing that while they used here, the argument against Laurier, the cry that he was a Frenchman and a Roman Catholic, the latter elements were used against him in Quebec, on the grounds that he was a bad Catholic and a disloyal Frenchman. The anti-French and anti-Catholic cry helped to get Mr. Borden a supporter from West Peterborough and the extreme Catholic and French cry helped Mr. Borden get a supporter in Charlevoix, Quebec. It was no wonder Mr. Borden got a big majority, when Orange and ultra-montane worked together to secure the same end — kill Laurier and strengthen Borden. That the un-principled or principleless policy of appeal to prejudice and passion was largely instrumental in securing Mr. Borden his present support, is daily bearing more evidence. The following despatch to the Toronto Star is additional proof:

QUEBEC, OCT. 7.—Mr. Lucien Cannon, lawyer, Liberal candidate defeated by Mr. Rodolphe Forget in Charlevoix County, declares that he owes his defeat to the intervention of the Roman Catholic clergy against him.

He gives on this intervention the following interesting particulars.

On the 11th of September last, Rev. Mr. Larouche, curate of the Parish of St. Fidele, County of Charlevoix, made a violent attack, in his pulpit, during the high mass, against Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Government, on the Manitoba school question. He exhorted his parishioners to withdraw their confidence from men who had betrayed their religion and their fellow-citizens.

After the high mass, Mr. A. Corriveau, K.C., and E. Theriault, student-at-law, held a meeting near the church in favour of Mr. Cannon's candidature. Curate Larouche was present at this meeting, and began to discuss politics with these gentlemen on the hustings. He vigorously denounced Laurier's attitude on the school question.

On the 13th of September, two days after the meeting, accompanied by a friend, Mr. Laramee, K.r. Cannon paid a visit to Curate Larouche. He told him that he belonged to a Catholic family, and that he was sincerely attached to the Catholic religion, and that he was ready to submit himself to his regular religious authorities.

More Catholic Than Pope.

After this interview, Mr. Cannon addressed the electors. On the school question he said: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not given everything he would have liked to give, but he gave all that was possible in the circumstances. In this election there is no more question of these schools, but only of reciprocity. It does not belong to a simple curate to resuscitate these burning problems. We must not be more Catholic than the Pope. I will do what the Pope and the Bishops command me, but I will wait, before doing anything more, until they have spoken."

On the 17th of September, Curate Larouche, from his pulpit in his church, gave to his parishioners the following advice:

"The children must go to the schools to become learned citizens, who shall not let themselves be fooled by the first comer (qui ne se laisseront pas emplir par les premiers venus), and who shall be able to distinguish good newspapers and bad ones, such as those which are now sent to you in great quantities.

"It has been announced by the Soleil that the Liberals will get majorities for Mr. Cannon in St. Simeon and St. Fidelle. As to St. Simeon, it is possible; but as to St. Fidele, he has lied (il a menti.)

"My bishop, Mgr. Labreque, has never forbidden his priests to mix up in politics. Even if he wanted to take away from us our rights of citizen, he could not do it.

Will Refuse Absolution.

"The people who rely on this authority to shut our mouths are mistaken. They call themselves Catholic Liberals. There are too many of these Catholic Liberals in this parish. There are also too many Catholic Liberal women. These women are worse than the men. We can see them applaud the Liberal speakers in the public meetings. Damned women! Get away from this parish! I do not want to see you any more. Do not come and confess your sins to me any more. I will refuse you the absolution!

"The settlement of the Manitoba school question has been condemned by the Pope, because this settlement was made by a Liberal Catholic."

Recalling Mr. Cannon's words as to the priests's intervention into politics, Mr. Larouche said: "This is Catholic Liberalism condemned by the church. This means that the priest must stand by his sacristy. It is true that we the priests, are Holy God's dogs, but I do not want to be a dumb dog, and I shall bark!"

Curate Larouche then read a part of the encyclical entitled "Affari Vos," and he continued:

"You see that the Pope condemns the neutral schools, the school without God. If the Pope condemns the neutral schools, he must also condemn the chief of the party, which has established these schools. Do you want to know who? It is . . . I shall not give his name in this pulpit. Come to my presbytery, and I will tell you . . .

"If the Pope condemns the neutral schools, he condemns the members of Parliament, who approved these schools. And do you believe that the Pope will forbid the bishops to blame this politic? And do you think that the bishops will forbid the curtes to condemn these schools and the candidates who approve this politic?

"If you do not believe that the Pope has said so, I shall call anyone amongst you to read this part of the encyclical."

Then Curate Larouche turned to Mr. Ernest Bonchard, one of the principal Liberal leaders of the place and told him: "You are a Liberal, read this!"

And he commended Mr. Bonchard to read this part of the encyclical where is mentioned the settlement of the school question.

Mr. Bonchard began to read the encyclical and he stopped at the words: "The law is defective and insufficient." Curate Larouche exclaimed: "Continue and read. You stop at the most interesting parts!"

After this reading Curate Larouche said:

"You have heard this. I do not lie to you (je ne vous blague pas), as do most of the passers-by speakers whom you listen to, whom you applaud and whom very often humbug you, my dear brethren, and profit of your ignorance to fool you."

The result is that the parish of St. Fideli, which used to give a majority of eighty to the Liberals, gave a majority of eight to the Conservative candidate, Mr. Rodolphe Forget.

ENJOYABLE EVENING

The Boys' Guild of St. James' church spent a very enjoyable evening on Friday last, being treated to a pancake social, by the Rev. Mr. Brown and Mr. Wilfred. After a short meeting the boys adjourned to the basement of the church and sat down to a sumptuous supper. After the supper a vote of thanks was given to Mr. Brown. Mr Wilfred and the ladies who prepared the supper.

Choir Entertained

At the close of the choir practice on Thursday last, the choir of St. James' Church were entertained at a luncheon given by the organist and choir leader, Mrs. M. Rehill. The members of the Trustee Board were also present and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Speeches were made by Mr. J. J. Goodwin, Mr. D. W. Dumble and Mayor Morrow.

A FREAK BET

There will be an event of somewhat unusual interest on George street this evening when a bet on the recent election will be settled in a somewhat unique manner. The wager was one of those "freak" bets that spring up at an election, and as a result a local young man will roll a peanut with a toothpick along George street from Simcoe street to Brock street or forfeit $10. The payment of the bet will undoubtedly attract a large crowd.

Charge Withdrawn

Four local men appeared in the Police Court this morning, charged with stealing two scows from Capt. W. H. White. The charge was withdrawn, however. It is said that the scows were in the possession of the Bailiff and the men took them to unload or load them.

RHEUMATISM FOR FIFTEEN YEARS

Throws Away Crutches After Using Father Morriscy's No. 7

SOUTHAMPTON, N.B., OCT. 15, 1910.—"I had suffered with Rheumatism for fifteen years—sometimes so badly I had to use crutches—and could get nothing to help me. I saw your No. 7 Tablets advertised and decided to give them a trial. I procured a box, and in a very short time I got relief, and by the time I had taken five boxes the Rheumatism had all left me. After 18 months it returned—I got another box, and now I am free from Rheumatism. I can conscientiously recommend your remedy to all sufferers from Rheumatism. Your No. 7 Tablets are great—worth their weight in gold."

Charles R. Cronkite,
General Merchant

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

ready busy over his "tuner." So the stranger in the raincoat turned away, with a look of mild exasperation in his predaceous and puzzled little eyes.

CHAPTER III.

THE CALL FROM WITHOUT

It was four hours later that the man in the raincoat reappeared on the bridge deck. The night was thick, and McKinnon, the operator, worked with his coat off and his door hooked back against the wall-plates.

"Anything come in over this machinery o' yours for me?" he inquired as he took out a cigar, pushed his hat back on his head, and struck a light. The operator looked up with his habitually abstracted and unseeing stare.

"What's the name?" he asked once more studying his "tuner."

The other was indignantly silent for a moment; then he laughed a little forgivingly. "Duffy," he answered. "Michael Duffy."

The operator shook his head; the movement was followed by another minute or two of silence.

"It might have come under the name of Cody, Richard Cody," explained the intruder. Something in the younger man's smile caused him to add: "You see, that's our firm name, Duffy & Cody."

An alias, south of the twentieth parallel, often enough carries its own explanation. The Laminian's bow was pointing towards a land of patriots where a change of name only too often synchronized with a change of continents. But McKinnon merely gave a shake of the head. It was several minutes before he glanced about at the other man, with a closeness of scrutiny that might have been impertinent had it seemed less frankly impersonal.

"There's nothing in for passengers this trip," he announced as he turned back to his "tuner." He drummed impatiently on the table-edge for a moment before readjusting his helmet-receiver. But the huge-shouldered intruder was not so easily shaken off.

"Your machine's working, isn't it?" he asked, preoccupied with an inspection of the end of his cigar. This cigar was soft and thick and short, like his own fingers. Despite its dark and baleful colour, he kept inhaling and expelling great lungsful of it as he talked. The operator idly registered the mental decision that cigars such as those were surely of Hondurian make.

"I saw you giving a message to the captain, didn't I?" And again the bellows-like lungs expelled their languid cloud.

"That was not to take on coffee at Puerto Locombia!" answered McKinnon. He delivered himself of this information casually, almost with amusement, though his half-averted eyes were not unconscious of the effect produced by what he had said.

The stranger was suddenly offering him one of the thick, short cigars. A shadow seemed to have lifted from his face.

"I don't smoke," said the ungracious man at the key, seeming to draw back into his shell of reticence. "And I'm busy sending."

"You mean you're actually talking to New York now?" amiably persisted the other. The operator's hand went out to the switch, black against the unpainted boards, and flanked on either side by a fuse.

"I've been tuning for Atlantic City. We're just picking him up," he answered as his fingers hovered over the starting box lever, clamped to the same pine boards, above the switch. A sudden deep buzzing filled the cabin. It grew louder and louder as the lever crossed farther and farther down on the contact-pins. It sounded like a hive of bees stired into anger. The stranger peered in at the dynamo under the operating table.

"So you're talking?" he murmured meditatively, appreciatively.

"How long will you be in communication with them?" he went on after a second or two of thought.

The other raised an earphone to listen, as a question was repeated. Then he turned back and bent over the carborundum tip between his responder-points.

"We're never really out of touch with 'em, on this run," he retorted. He seemed to resent his own increasing concessions to the other's imperturbable good nature.

"You mean you can call up New York from the Caribbean?"

The operator put down his earphones and shook out his small cardboard box of carborundum fragments, picking through them for a fresh piece for his responder-points. It seemed apparent enough, to the patient-eyed man across the cabin from him, that he was neither friendly nor unfriendly; it was simply that he was busy.

"No, I don't mean that, exactly. New York never works south of Atlantic City as a rule. He's got too much to handle there, too many ships going in and out. But New York can relay to Galilee and then down to NF—that's Norfolk—and from there to Hatteras. Then Hatteras could throw a message over to Charleston, and if we're depending on land stations alone, Charleston can relay to Savannah,and then Savannah can get in touch with the naval station at Saint Augustine."

"And then where?" asked the stranger, leaning back against the cabin wall.

"Then Key West could catch it up, and if there wasn't a gunboat or an Atlas fruit liner crawling somewhere around Cuba, why, the navy yard at Guantanamo could get it relayed over to Limon, and from Limon in decent weather, you'd catch the navy yard operator at Colon. And if the night was clear ,you'd run one chance in a hundred of waking up the Cocoanut Trail aerials behind Puerto Locombia."

There was a moment or two of silence.

"Could Puerto Locombia get anything outside of a passing ship?—Kingston, for instance?"

"Kingston never had a wireless—it's prohibited by the British Government."

"Then there's New Orleans, on a pinch."

"There's too much map between," explained the operator. He gathered up his box of scattered carborundum.

"Queer, isn't it, getting words on a tape that way, four hundred miles off?" said the stranger. He scratched his huge head in a sort of mute astonishment, as he surveyed the cabinful of apparatus.

"We don't use a tape," the other corrected, waving a preoccupied hand toward the inscription on the condenser case. "We're De Forest! And we don't claim to talk around the world yet."

The stranger was peering contentedly and aimlessly about the crowded little cabin. "Where the devil d'you suppose that cruiser was off to?" he next inquired.

"That's what I've been trying to find out."

"They all carry wireless?" asked the other as he sent an exhalation of pungent cigar smoke ceilingward.

"Yes; but they're not aching to talk just yet. Wait till they've been lying down there in the heat for three months. They'll be calling all night just for the sake of seeing something doing with a coherer again. They'll kai-tow to a coal-tug, just to pick up a scrap of outside news."

The stranger, who seemed well satisfied with what he had learned, remained silent for a moment or two.

"By the way, could you take a message for New Orleans to-night?"

"I could take it all right, if you're willing to prepay land charges."

"I'll pay anything you say, so long as you get me in touch with my people there. I want to ask Jean Careche, at the St. Charles, just when a shipment of oil and mill shafting got out of that port."

"Wait a minute, then, until I get Atlantic City again. You can be writing out your message and I'll get the time-check on it."

McKinnon bent over his table, with a wrinkled brow, and started to "call." As he caught the lever-handle of the huge key in his fingers and worked it deliberately, yet slowly, up and down—he was sending "strong"—the sudden blue splash of flame exploded and leaped and hissed across the spark-gap, from one brass-knobbed discharging-rod to the other. It fifilled the roughly improvised station with a sound like the rattle of musketry. The ceiling and walls of the room, crusted with many paintings of white lead, mirrored and refracted the purplish-blue flashes. A faint otonic odour, not unlike a subliminated smell of brimstone, filled the air.

The operator threw off his switch again and listened intently, with his two handkerchiefs muffling his earphones. Then he suddenly swung about and looked at the man behind him.

"That cruiser's going to Culebra, off Porto Rico. She's ordered south on account of the Locombian trouble."

"You don't mean she's going to mix up in that mess?" the intruder cried with a note of disgust.

(To be continued).

Teacher Cured of Barber's Itch

Tells of Cures Among His Pupils That Were Remarkable

Raw, Inflamed, Itching Skin is Soothed and Healed by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Barber's Itch is a form of Ringworm, which, when once started, is most annoying and unsightly, and most difficult to cure. Barbers often refuse to shave anyone having this disease, for fear of passing it on to other customers.

But you can cure Barber's Itch and keep the skin wonderfully soft and healthy by applying Dr. Chase's Ointment. Just read what this teacher has to say about the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Chas. C. Poirier, Upper Caraquet, N. B., writes: "Two years ago while teaching at Shippegan I caught Barber's Itch. A friend told me Dr. Chase's Ointment would cure me, as it had him. When I went for a box I thought it dear, but when I found how good it was I thought it cheap.

"Not only was I cured by that single box, but it also cured two of my pupils, and this too quickly to be believed. One of them, a girl, had a running sore on the chin, which the doctor had tried in vain to cure. The other had a sore on the ear; water running out of it all the time. I can certify to the cure of these cases."

Wherever there is itching skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with positive assurance that the results will be entirely satisfactory. The soothing, healing power of this great ointment is truly wonderful. 60c a box, at all dealers, or Edmandson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"I think my mother ought to be called the 'where is it lady,'" a quaint little boy once commented.

He was the youngest of a large family, and he had heard his mother so often appealed to in this way by the various members of the household that he had good reason for his suggestion.

I fancy there are a good many homes in which 'the where is it lady' might be one of the house mother's titles.

For I have myself observed not a few families where the habit of appealing to mother to find anything which does not come readily to hand is a fixed one.

Now, of course, a mother's mind would naturally be the best index of the home and a mother is inevitably a last resort to which to appeal when anything simply can't be found.

But heres' the rub.

I think she should be kept as a last and not a first resort.

And a first resort is what she is frequently made. It is so much easier to say, "Where is so-and-so" and to throw the responsibility onto mother's mind, than to use your own brains; it is so much simpler to say, "I can't find something or other," and have mother come down or up and help you hunt than to go poking about by yourself, that many of us get into the habit of making no effort to do anything else.

"What have you done with that magazine I was reading last night," cries father. "It's gone and I was right in the middle of a story." And mother patiently gets up and finds it right under father's elbow, hidden only by a newspaper.

"Where on earth is the tie that goes with my dress suit," calls big brother, and mother toils up the stairs and finds it right in his handkerchief box, where he left it the last time he went to a wedding.

"Mother, I can't find my pumps anywhere. I'm sure Bridget did something with them when she swept," fulminates big sister. Ad mother leaves her sewing and locates the pumps in the closet, hidden only by the folds of sister's dressing gown, right where big sister might have found them very easily herself if she had only really tried before she called mother.

"Where is the milk bottle? How can I go and get the milk if you don't tell me where the milk bottle is?" sputters little brother. He has seen that milk bottle on the pantry shelf a dozen times, but, of course, mother gets up and gets it for him.

And all this means that the mother must bear all the body and brain fag that hunting for things means—and myself, I think there is nothing more tiring than hunting for things—which should be distributed over the shoulders of the whole family.

Now I believe that "I can's find it," and "Where is it?" are habits that all children fall into unless they are checked.

And I think they should be checked.

Both for mother's sake and their own.

A child who is taught to hunt for things until he finds them will have more self reliance and initiative than the child who gets into the "Where is it?" habit.

A mother whose family does their own hunting for things instead of piling it all on her shoulders, will have less care to lessen her chances of becoming a happy old grandmother.

Housefurnishings,

Bright and New and Lowly Priced

Rugs, Carpets, Upholstery, Curtains and Draperies in Wonderful Variety, Await Your Inspection

What has this old world to offer that is more thoroughly conductive to real happiness, than a comfortable and cheerful home? Every housekeeper strives to make her home as pleasant as possible. We are now prepared to help her add to the beauty of her home—and economically

Our new assortment of Home Furnishings have arrived. Beautiful carpets and rugs, dainty pretty curtains and draperies, and upholstery goods are here in wonderful profusion of colour patterns and design. The display excels any we have ever had before. It does credit to our taste and demonstrates more forcibly than ever our superior buying advantages.

The Prices are as Unusual as the Showing Itself

It seems natural when one sees a beautiful rug or curtain to expect a big, high price. Not so here. We invite comparison of our qualities and prices, and we insist that every housekeeper who fills her home—furnishing needs here will save money. One visit will convince you of the truthfulness of this statement.

COME! To-morrow.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

SERVICES CONDUCTED BY REV. R. J. M. GLASSFORD WERE LARGELY ATTENDED

For thirty short minutes last night the congregation of Mark Street Church listened to a compelling and inspiring address by the Rev. R. J. M. Glassford. Taking for his text the 21st Chapter of St. John, 9th verse, the speaker outlined the fundamental principles of this particular passage of the gospel, according to the Apostle John, regarding the need of the people to-day for more spiritual food, and less of those services where millinery and eulogy form the biggest factors.

"I find Christ magnifying the common things of life. Wherever you find the common things of life there you find Christ. What would you do if the Lord appeared among you to-night in the church. You would probably be nonplussed if He were to ask you to name a subject that He might talk to you about; you would probably ask him to tell you about the eternal life, or the state of the soul after death. Bpt Christ never talked about the Resurrection, theology, or even higher criticism. He would talk about worldly things, just as He talked to the fishermen long ago. Supposing you were consulted as regards the conditions surrounding the birth of Christ. You would no doubt desire to see him born amid splendour and kingly wealth, but not so with God. Christ was born in one of the wickedest cities in the land at that time. He later became a carpenter, and that's why I am always glad to meet a man who is a carpenter, and shake him by the hand. I was in Ottawa during the marvellous reception which was tendered to the Premier elect; bands played and flags floated in the breeze, while the carriage containing the victorious one was drawn through the streets by men themselves. Was Christ accorded a reception following His entry into the world as the Premier elect? No, He lived the first years of His life as a wayside flower, and I say to the young man and young woman, that if your life is linked with God, it is just as honourable to stand behind the plow as it is to stand in the pulpit. There is a plan for every life. I wonder if you have got yours yet. He wants you to come for it; don't let it be pigeon-holed; don't try to carve one out for yourself. I like to talk to young people; it gives me inspiration to look into your frank, open countenances. A few years ago, while I was taking a little coasting tour upon the mighty Atlantic, one moonlight night, as I stood upon the deck and gazed out upon the ocean, I was thrilled by the glorious sight. The mountains, in the far distance carried wonderful messages to me, and as I looked at the life-boat beside me I wondered what she would do if she was cast adrift, without anyone in. Why, it would drift until it would strike a rock. Why? Because it would lack the intelligence of a guiding hand. Any man who has not linked his life with Jesus Christ is running his life express right into the open switch. Have you been living in the soulless life of doubt, a life of failure? If you have you are on the wrong side. He is calling you to get over on the right side. Don't delay. There is no more opportune time than now.

NERVOUSNESS AND DYSPEPSIA

CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES" THE GREAT FRUIT MEDICINE

In Nervous Dyspepsia, the Dyspepsia does not come from the Nervousness—but the latter trouble does come from the Dyspepsia.

The stomach is a network of nerves. Now if all these nerves are irritated by improper food, hasty eating, or poisoned by gases from the constipated bowels, then they will make one nervous.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures both the Nervousness and the Dyspepsia because "Fruit-a-tives" cures all stomach troubles, keeps the stomach sweet and clean, and enables you to eat and sleep as you did when a child.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The "Happy Bunch" met as usual yesterday around the fire place when the parable of the lost sheep was studied. This class meets every Sunday at 4 p.m., and all men are welcome.

CASCARETS SURELY STRAIGHTEN YOU OUT

No Headache, Biliousness, Upset Stomach, Lazy Liver or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver and stomach clean, pure and fresh, with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway through these alimentary or drainage organs every few days, with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters.

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food, and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

MR. ROBERT FAIR TO RETIRE FROM BUSINESS

Head of the Golden Lion Store After Twenty-eight Years Successful Career in Peterborough About to Withdraw ---Entire Stock to be Sold Out at Record-Breaking Sacrifice Prices.

The announcement that Robert Fair, one of the most prosperous business men of the city, whose mercantile career has been a part of the history of Peterborough, is about to retire, will come as a great surprise to his host of friends. Mr. Fair has reached an enviable position in the business world, with the highest credit, both at home and in the foreign markets, and is now about to relinquish his hold on the more stirring affairs of life, and indulge in a well-earned rest.

Mr. Fair has, for thirty-six years been in business for himself, first at Centreville, South Monaghan, where he succeeded the late Mr. Hugh Waddell, in the highly successful business which the latter had established there Seven years later, Mr. Fair entered the field in Peterborough, acquiring the business of the late Mr. Thomas Bradburn, in the same stand, now occupied by Robert Fair & Co., Limited. During the twenty-eight successful years that the business has enjoyed since that time, the exact date of commencement being October 9th, 1883, the store has had to be enlarged several times in order to accommodate the rapidly increasing trade, and the added departments found necessary from time to time. One year after taking hold of the Peterborough store, a dressmaking department was added to the equipment of the establishment, Mr. Fair being the pioneer in this step, and running the idea for many years before it was adopted by other similar places of business. Later on, the house furnishing department was taken up more extensively and made a feature that marked a still further step on the road to progress. Four years ago the Robert Fair & Co., Limited, stock company, was formed, of which Mr. Fair is the largest owner, president and general manager.

Now, after twenty-eight years in Peterborough, of the most gratifying success, Mr. Fair can contemplate his retirement with complacency, looking back on a record that is certainly one to be proud of.

One of the prime reasons for the steady and substantial growth of the trade at this store, has been the unvarying policy that has been followed right from the start of carrying strictly high-grade goods, a fact that has given the Robert Fair store a reputation as the "Store of Quality." Dependable goods has so completely imbued customers with the standard aimed at, that the idea is fully established that "if you get it at Fair's, it's good."

As the ready-to-wear goods came into demand, the best sources of supply were called upon to contribute to this department, and the same high standard continued.

Another line of goods, for which Fair's is a noted emporium, is linens—the best makers in Ireland and Scotland sending out semi-annual importations to this department. This continued catering to the highest class of trade in the community, has created a stock that is a veritable mine of strictly first-class goods.

The stock has always been cleaned up every season, no old goods having ever been allowed to accumulate, so that the present assortment is all new and crisp. This was a policy adopted by Mr. Fair many years ago, and strictly adhered to ever since.

Mr. Fair has reason to feel satisfied with his record and of what he has done to help to elevate the tone of the drygoods business of Peterborough; and, now, at his retirement he is determined to give the people of the district something in the way of low price values during a mammoth 'Retiring From Business' sale, such as will be long remembered by all who secure them.

The familiar Golden Lion trade mark, which has for years stood for high quality, still presides over the door—a guarantee of right goods, now reduced to little prices.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the store will be closed for the arranging and marking down of the goods and re-opened at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, ready for the big rush that is bound to come when the public know that the Robert Fair stock is to be cleared out in a few short weeks, at greatly underpriced values.

$65,000.00 worth of high-class goods will take some time to liquidate, but it will be hurried as much as possible, the extremely low prices that will be quoted being relied on to make the clearance so rapid that the end in view will be reached in a very short time. Of this mammoth stock $20,000.00 worth is the new importation and purchases of fall and winter goods, the greater part of which has arrived, and the balance is now on the ocean, coming as fast as steam can bring it, to complete Fair's always splendid assortment. For this great event the staff has been doubled with competent salespeople and the public can feel satisfied of efficient service.

During the sale the same privileges that those accustomed to having open accounts with the firm have enjoyed, will be continued, and all departments, such as dressmaking, millinery, etc., will be carried on the same, and customers are at liberty to make the fullest use of them, as usual, right up to the end of the sale, which will be found of great advantage, so that goods can be made up the same as at present. One price, and that the lowest, will be the rule of the sale, which Mr. Fair has determined to make a memorable event, and a striking finish to his business career.

The opening announcement will be found in to-morrow's paper.

T. A. S. Societies Have Big Turnout At Communion

Yesterday was a red-letter day for the St. Peter's and Sacred Heart Total Abstinence Societies, when the members attended Communion in a body.

St. Peter's T. A. S. assembled at St. Peter's School and, marshalled by Messrs. Grisdale and Hurley, marched to St. Peter's Cathedral, to attend 8 o'clock Mass. There was a very large turnout and a feature was the large number of young boys who were in the procession. Rev. Father McColl addressed the members, urging upon them the necessity of being loyal to the Society and keeping their pledge.

In the afternoon one of the largest meetings ever held by the Society took place. Thirty-five new members were added to the list. A Literary Committee was organized with Vincent McCabe as chairman and J. Hanrahan as secretary, while the Social Club will have as its president, George A'Hearne and its secretary, J. Arthur Sharpe. The Athletic Section will be organized at a meeting to be held to-night.

The first entertainment of the season will be held to-morrow (Tuesday) night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, when Miss Henry, the well-known Buffalo journalist, will give a lecture on "The Passion Play," illustrated by stereopticon views.

Sacred Heart T. A. S. attended Sacred Heart Churchb in a body at 7.30 a.m., with a very large turnout of members. Rev. Dr. O'Brien, their spiritual advisor, gave an inspiring sermon on temperance.

BRUCE HAMPTON WAS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY BROTHER ON SATURDAY

A serious accident befel Mr. Bruce Hampton, who resides near the South Central School, at 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

He, with his two brothers, was shooting rabbits, round and about the second line of Smith. One of his brothers sighted a number of the animals and Bruce, eager to get a shot, pushed on ahead of the others, becoming lost to sight. Whilst crouching in the undergrowth his boot of buckskin became exposed to the view of one of the following party, who, quick as a flash raised his gun and fired. The distracted brother rushed to his aid, and he was eventually taken to the Nicholls Hospital, where no less than eighteen shot wounds were discovered in his right arm and leg. The wounds, however, are not serious, and the only concern is blood-poisoning, from which every precaution is being taken. Dr. Carmichael is in attendance.

On 'phoning the Nicholls Hospital this afternoon an Examiner reporter was informed that Mr. Hampton was progressing favourably.

WORSE THAN THE WAR FOUR ITALIANS KILLED

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, OCT. 9.—Four Italian workmen were killed and six others more or less injured badly this morning in a dynamite explosion sixty feet under Sixty-sixth street, where a deep shaft is being sunk for water system. A dynamite stick left unexploded from last night caused the accident. The victims were blown to pieces. Two superintendents were arrested.

Ketchecum Lake Club Off On The Annual Trip

A representation of the Ketchecum Lake Fishing and Hunting Club, numbering about twelve, set out from the city this morning for a fishing expedition to Ketchecum Lake. The party included Messrs. E. A. Peck, A. H. Stratton, J. E. Belcher, W. H. Bradburn, R. Stuart, H. Winch, R. Gibbs, R. Denne, R. Dobie and T. H. Hooper.

In connection with the Club an interesting presentation took place last week, when Mr. Robert Munro was the recipient of a magnificent rifle from the members, in honour of his recent marriage, with a short, but well-worded address. Mr. Harry Winch made the presentation, and Mr. Munro ably responded. The assembly then participated in a bountiful repast.

Brutally Abused His Wife

A case af assault was aired in the County Court before Magistrate Edmison on Saturday, the central figures being Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Batten of Dummer. Jacob Batten was the defendant, and was charged with assaulting his wife, the alleged assault consisting of slapping her face and kicking her, and otherwise brutally beating her. He pleaded guilty, but stated that he apologized to his wife, and wanted to be good friends again. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence for six months.

Mrs. Batten was represented by Mr. E. L. Goodwill, and the evidence in the case was to the effect that the defendant had often brutally used his wife, and on this particular time, he took the little child which she had in her arms, and left it on the ground, while he gave vent to his temper. After the assault, which occurred on the 21st of August, Mrs. Batten left her husband, and went to live with her parents, where she lived ever since. Her husband, however, seemed glad to get her back, and she was satisfied to go back, so the case was disposed of as stated.

The Taxes Are Sufficient Now

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me space in your daily paper to say that I quite agree with the letter that appeared in your issue of last week, regarding the "exemption of industries." There is no question of doubt about it that our taxes are sufficiently high now, without incurring an expenditure of $80,000 to erect new schools for the newcomers to Peterborough, who may be here to-day and away to-morrow, and who have never done anything to help the city along. I quite agree that Peterborough is better without the increased population, without increased factories, if we have got to build new schools and, spend our earnings to help the newcomers along when they come here. Go into the bar rooms any pay day of the large works in Peterborough, and you can easily see how many of the newcomers spend their evenings and their money. Let those who come to Peterborough and want to live here build and pay for the schools, necessary to provide the accommodation required.

Yours truly,

Ratepayer.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I read with interest the letters written by Mr. Carlisle on the milk by-law, which is being forced on the people by our city aldermen and would say, I endorse every word he says, for why should the working people and poor of our city be compelled to pay 8c. a quart for milk for the whims of a few wealthy families who live here. They can have their milk men bottle their milk if they so desire, and not have us, who are less able, pay such an exorbitant price. They are just depriving us poorer people of one of the few luxuries we have. I am a mother who is perfectly satisfied with milk from a can rather than a dirty bottle.

"MOTHER."

ENGLISH PLAYERS LIKE CANADIAN AUDIENCES

The Examiner sought out Mr. Hamilton Deane, the prominent English actor of the "With Edged Tools" Company on Saturday afternoon and had a pleasant and interesting conversation with him.

The Company only landed in Canada nine days ago, and performed for the first time in Ottawa. From Ottawa they came to Peterborough, and will fill engagements in the larger cities of western Ontario and Toronto. A short tour in the United States will follow.

Mr. Deane is as agreeable in social life as he is before the footlights and is very eager for information with regard to the country. "I like the air here," he said. "It promotes a splendid appetite and makes one feel remarkably fit."

When asked his opinion of the Canadian audience he said: "Very appreciative; they don't indulge in too much clapping, but listen intently, while the plot works itself out. If we are to take our present reception as a criterion, we look forward to a very pleasant tour. The people, too, have been very kind to us."

Mr. Deane was commencing an eulogy of the City of Peterborough, when, with a gentle tap at the door, Miss Marie Leonhard entered. Miss Leonhard is a charming young lady. The Examiner reporter, who saw her some years ago as Mercia in "The Sign of the Cross," saw no change in her. With her winsome and smiling face beaming with good humour she both asked and answered questions. "I love this country," she said. It contains ambitious air; that is to say, everybody appears to be so hopeful."

The interviewer asked how the unfortunate lady who met with the accident in a train at Belleville, Saturday morning, was progressing, and was told that she was improving, but will not be able to assume her role in the piece for a week or two.

WORK WILL NOT BE DELAYED ON EXTENSION OF STREET RAILWAY

Although the North Monaghan Council, when it met on Saturday, to consider the application of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, for a franchise of the Boundary Road in order to extend their line south, found that it would be impossible to grant the franchise without a vote from the ratepayers of the Township, little delay is anticipated by the Company, and Mr. Munro stated to the Examiner this afternoon that work would be commenced at once. Three car loads of ties and a carload of rails have arrived and are being unloaded. The proposed extension is from the present terminus at the C. G. E. gates, along Albert street to Lafayette avenue, along that street to Chamberlain street, and down that thoroughfare to the boundary road, ending at the C. P. R. tracks. The work will not be delayed although the North Monaghan Council took no action pending a report from their engineer.

Will Go To The Durbar

BRANTFORD, ONT., OCT. 9.—T. H. Preston of the Expositor, said this morning that he would probably make the trip to the Delhi Durbar despite a morning paper assertions to the contrary.

SHE GAINED 36 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was, in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 36 pounds in weight."

REV. MR. KNOWLES TO LECTURE HERE

In Saturday's issue it was stated that Rev. R. E. Knows of Galt, would appear in Knox church on Oct. 24th. The lecturer is none other than Rev. R. E. Knowles, of Galt, so well and favourably known in Peterborough, Who has not read St. Cuthberts, The Attic Guest, The Web of Time and Mr. Knowles' other books, so full of vitality and interest. Mr. Knowles is described as the "Ian McLaren" of Canada and is one of the most entertaining lecturers of the present generation. He is assured of a very large audience in Knox church on Tuesday, the 24th of this month.

Temporarily Appointed

The vacancy on the police force, caused by the resignation of John Brown, has been temporarily filled by his namesake, John Brown, who is officiating upon the recommendation of the Chief, until such time as the Police Commissioners can meet to consider the appointment. Mr. Brown has had several years' experience on the force in Glasgow, Scotland. There are several applications for the position, but Mr. Brown, being a man of experience, was the better man for the posit ion in the Chief's opinion and it is now a matter for the Commissioners to consider his permanent apopintment.

Delegate to Ecumenical Conference Pleads For Worker

GOLDEN RULE NEEDED

Toronto, Oct. 9.—The subject of religion in relation to industry and commerce was discussed by four speakers at yesterday afternoon's session of the Ecumenical Methodist Conference. Three of the speakers were politicians, and one was a clergyman.

From the popular point of view the address of the preacher was by far the most interesting to listen to. Rev. S. S. Henshaw of Leeds, England, Primitive Methodist, is a staunch Radical. Perhaps his religious friend, Sir Robert Perks, would call him a Socialist. Anyhow, Mr. Henshaw hates that of Socialism, and is not afraid to express them in public, least of all at a Methodist Conference.

"Many men in business preach the golden rule," he said, "but not many practice it. Righteousness needs not only to be talked about, but written up in the offices, the market-places, and the stock exchanges.

"It is the business of religion to lessen the outrageous inequality that exists in industry and commerce. The churches should never be tired of preaching for the workers' proper environment, a living wage for all—including those of my class — decent dwellings, a little leisure for culture and spiritual aspirations.

"Old England is going ahead now with social reform. Lloyd-George has led the way. We got the famous Bugdet. We have old-age pensions. We have shifted the veto of the Lords. And in a few years England will be a new land."

These sentiments were vigorously applauded by a large section of the Metropolitan Church audience, and it evidently just as heartily agreed with Mr. Henshaw when he denied that the Sermon on the Mount was impossible to-day. "The whole New Testament can be applied if we will apply it. And it ought to be applied now, in the name of God," he said. It was the church's duty to banish from the sanctuary social distinctions. They have been with us far too long," he added.

Fatal Train Wreck.

Rochester, Mich., Oct. 9.—Two people were killed and eleven injured, one probably fatally early Saturday night, when a Detroit United Railway work car, attached to two cars loaded with cinders, crashed into the front end of the northbound Detroit United Railway Flint Limited, about a mile north of Rochester. The dead:

Daniel Fallon, aged 50, a Flint grocer.

R. E. Lee, 35, Oxford, Mich.

Eight of the injured were taken to Detroit and the others are being cared for here.

The limited was crowded with passengers, and almost without warning the work car plowed through the front vestibule nearly to the rear of the smoking compartments. How more people were not killed is a mystery.

Conflicting reports have been received regarding the speed of the cars and of who disobeyed orders

MINISTERS CHOSEN

Announcement of the Cabinet Line-up Expected Late To-day

COL. HUGHES FOR MILITIA

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The Borden Cabinet will not be sworn in till noon on Tuesday, Earl Grey afterwards leaving by special train for Montreal to catch his boat.

The Ministry is yet uncompleted, but while this is so, there are a number of men who are regarded as certain selections. These include:

Nova Scotia: R. L. Borden.

New Brunswick: Hon J. D. Hazen.

Quebec: Doherty, Perley, Pelletier, Monk.

Ontario: Cochrane, Foster, White, Broder, Hughes.

Manitoba: Rogers, Roche.

British Columbia: Goodeve.

Col. Sam Hughes will, it is expected take the militia portfolio, and W. T. White of Toronto seems a certainty as Minister of Finance. Mr. White is in Ottawa to-day.

There is still some doubt as to Quebec, though when the delegation from that province left Ottawa Saturday, it is said that Rodolphe Forget would go in without portfolio, instead of Wilfrid Nantel.

The portfolios have not been alloted.

Hazen For Railways?

St. John, N.B., Oct. 9—J. D. Hazen, Premier of New Brunswick, left for Ottawa last night, to accept a seat in the Borden Cabinet. He said he was not sure what portfolio he would get. It is believed he will be the next Minister of Railways.

A $2,700,000 Offer.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—St. James' Methodist Church, the largest home of Methodism in the world, has not been sold as yet, despite reports to the contrary, but it is announced that Major John T. McBride has been authorised by parties in close touch with the Canadian Northern interests to offer the sum of $2,000,000 for the property. The church, including the site, cost $385,000.

To Represent Canada.

Brantford, Oct. 9.—T. H. Preston of The Expositor, confirmed the report here Saturday that he had been appointed to represent the Canadian Associated Press Association at the Royal Durbar at Delhi in December. The invitation came from the Indian Government. Mr. Preston stated, however, that circumstances rendered it impossible that he would go.

West Still Forges Ahead.

Calgary, Oct. 9.—In one day this week building permits amounting to $20,000 were issued in Calgary, nearly all for residences, ranging in values from $1,500 to $5,000. Bank clearings for Calgary, for week ending October 5, amounted to $4,166,006, an increase of 53.4 per cent. over the corresponding week of 1910.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to save a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. Sick Women Well.

ANXIOUS FOR PEACE

War Spirit Shows Signs of Diminishing Among the Italians

APPEAL MADE TO BRITAIN

Lucknow, British India, Oct. 9.—The Council of Moslems of all India has appealed for the intervention of the British Government in behalf of Turkey. It has advised also a boycott of Italian goods.

Outlined Italian Policy.

Rome, Oct. 9—Premier Giolietti, in a speech at Turin yesterday, outlined the policy of the Government with reference to Tripoli, which seems to have the support of most of the members of the Chamber of Deputies, and a great majority of the people. Signor Bisolati, leader of the Socialists in the chamber, however, writes to The Secolo, giving the view of a section of the Democrats and Socialists, differing from that of the nation at large. Signor Bisolati was the first of his party to be received by the King, when, during the last Ministerial crisis, the Premier offered him a portfolio.

In his letter to The Secolo he says: "Now that the occupation it accomplished, it must be decided whether Tripoli will be considered conquered territory unconditionally, or whether Italy is ready to compromise—stopping the war, sparing Turkey excessive humiliations and offering her political and material satisfaction, and thus tendering the resumption of good relations between the two nations possible."

Signor Giolietti expresses the opinion that it will be necessary for Italy to adopt a "less brutal solution," so as to remove the impression that violence has been used against Turkey, and that Italy should show a spontaneous conciliatory disposition, thus avoiding such measures as may be "proposed, if not imposed by the powers."

Turkish Censorship.

Constantinople, Oct. 9.—The Government has decided to establish a censorship on all press telegrams, particularly dealing with military matters. Code messages will be prohibited.

The Turkish commander at Tripoli reports that the Italian bombardment destroyed numerous houses and killed many inhabitants, including several women and children.

Tripoli Now Tranquil.

Malta, Oct. 9.—Prof. Arthaeur, chief of the Austrian scientific mission, who has arrived here from Tripoli, says that the town is now tranquil. Europeans are not endangered, and only 1,000 Turkish soldiers remain in the hinterland, but the Arabs, he says, are already organizing guerilla bands and intend to put up a dogged resistance.

Prof. Arthaeur expresses the opinion that if Italy is content with the occupation of Tripoli her mission might be considered ended, but that if she intends to embark upon a campaign in the hinterland, it will take years to subdue the natives.

Closed Canal to Both.

Athens, Oct. 9.—The Corinth Canal Co. has decided to close the canal to both Turkish and Italian vessels during the continuance of the war. This canal connects the Gulf of Corinth with Aegean Sea.

Inviting Mediation.

Constantinople, Oct. 9.—The Chauvinist press still demands severe anti-Italian measures, but the moderate press and the general public realize that the only possible course is to end the war without delay. It is understood that the Grand Vizier and the Minister of War are inviting mediation by the Powers to secure the completion of peace, and that in the meantime the execution of the decree of expulsion relating to Italians will be postponed.

Grain Contraband.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 9.—Russia is negotiating with Turkey in connection with Turkey's intention to declare grain contraband of war. Such action on Turkey's part would paralyse the Russian export trade Complained to Stagni.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—Lucien Canon, who was beaten in Charlevoix by Rodolphe Forget, has entered a complaint before Monsignor Stagni, the papal delegate at Ottawa, alleging strong partisan conduct on the part of Rev. Abbe Larouche, parish priest of St. Fidele. Canon alleges that he complained in the first place to the Bishop of Chicoutimi and having no reply from his lordship, he goes to the delegate for redress.

Mr. Canon says that it was the clerical influence that defeated Laurier, but L'Action Sociale Wants to know what the priests had to do with the result in Ontario and the eastern provinces.

German Balloon Wins.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 9.—The balloon Berlin II., carrying the flag of Germany, has won the international balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett Cup. The Berlin II., landed in the wilderness near Holcombe, Wis., at seven o'clock Saturday morning. The Berlin landed about 440 miles from Kansas City.

The Buckeye, the United States representative in the race and the Berlin II.'s nearest rival, landed 365 miles from Kansas City at Lacrosse, Wis. The Berlin has beaten the Buckeye's mark by about 75 miles.

Earl Grey's Farewell.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Earl Grey attended a farewell service at All Saints' Church yesterday, at which the rector, Rural Dean A. W. McKay, officiated, and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Borden were also in attendance. The sermon was one of farewell to His Excellency, and the service was unusual as a final send-off to His Majesty's representative. The Governor-General chose the hymns, which were Old Hundred and Kipling's Recessional.

A prayer was said at the close and the whole congregation sang the National Anthem, which had been ringing on the church bells as the vice-regal party first entered the church.

Earl and Countess Grey afterwards drove to the residence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on a farewell visit.

WEST END RUGBY CLUB WAS BEATEN BY T.C.S.

Lack of Training and Absence of Team Play Chief Cause of Defeat of Peterboro' Team---Material is There for Splendid Fourteen and Saturday's Game Was of Great Benefit in Showing Where Improvements Can be Made.

The West End Rugby Club journeyed to Port Hope on Saturday afternoon and went down to defeat at the hands of the Trinity College School team in a practice game by 18 points to nil. The superb condition, splendid teamwork and generalship of the Little Big Four champions were too much for the half-in-shape Peterborough aggregration, but the game will be invaluable to the locals if only as an object lesson. It was the first really good workout and the first time the entire team has ever been seen together, and the match will be beneficial in demonstrating the weak spots and in showing where improvements can be made. Peterborough's lack of practice and absence of team play were painfully in evidence, but with another week's faithful training, and the development of a little system, the West End aggregation will be an entirely different team when they meet. Central Y. M. C. A., in the first O.R.F.U. game on Saturday. The material is there; individually, the Peterborough team was as good, if not better, than their opponents, Saturday, but where they showed their weakness was in the absence of the machine-like play that distinguished their opponents. It was the Hamilton Tiger-Varsity game all over again with Peterborough in the Mountaineers' role.

Trinity College School have a splendid team. They are trained to the minute, know their plays perfectly, tackle low and hard, and the backs catch, kick and run like veterans. They demonstrated a Varsity-like system of play in the back-field, passing the ball from one to another in almost reckless fashion, and this passing gained much ground for them.

Peterborough had not so much the advantage of weight as might be expected. The Students trotted out a pretty husky-looking wing-line, and their backs had a shade on the Peterborough rear guard, in avoirdupois.

With Len Johnston, their only kicking back disabled with a broken bone in his ankle, and their end runs cut off by the perfect tackling, the West Ends were forced to fall back upon line-plunging, and whatever chance they had of gaining by this method was neutralized by the fact that they almost invariably lost possession of the ball for offside, or alleged offside interference. The officials, both T. C. S. men, were kept busy penalizing the Petes throughout the game, and these penalties, some of them deserved, and some of them not, were a very important factor in the play, losing many yards to the Petes. Early in the first half they lost fifty yards in succession on five penalties, and as a result, T. C. S. were enabled to score the only touchdown of the game, stealing the ball from Davidson as he was making a plunge at his own ten yard line.

Peterborough pressed for a short time, after the kick-off, but a series of penalties for off-sides carried the ball from centre well into Peterborough territory and Trinity kicked over for a rouge. They followed this up by almost immediately stealing the ball during a line-plunge and going over for a try which they failed to convert. Splendid kicking by the T. C. S. halves and fast following up by their wings, kept the play pretty well in West End territory, and although the Petes tried determinedly the lack of team-play, coupled with the fact that the advantage in kicking, whether with or against the wind, was all in favour of T. C. S., made it a losing battle. When they did assume the aggressive they lost the ball, either through penalties or fumbles, and in spite of their efforts the College score mounted slowly up by single points. It was 11 to 0 at the half, and in the last two periods T. C. S. annexed seven more points on rouges and kicks to the dead-line.

The Peterborough team, all through showed the lack of systematic practice, and the backs demonstrated the need of daylight workouts by their uncertainty in handling and running back punts. Corkery and Hayes saved nicely on several occasions by pretty dodging runs from behind the line, but generally the T. C. S. wings were down under the ball so fast that the West End rear guard had little chance of working out.

Manager Oldham's team will work out every night this week and will be in the best of shape for next Saturday's game. The line-up at Port Hope was as follows:

Full-back—Hayes.
Halves—Corkery, Johnston, Hogan.
Quarter—Denison, (Capt.)
Scrimmage — Ecclestone, Leahy, Bearss, Stewart, Thompson).
Inside wings—Turner, Craig.
Middle wings—Davidson, Kirn.
Outside wings—Langley, Gilbert.

The T. C. S. line-up was as follows:
Back—Pearce.
Halves—Perry, Caldwell, Savage.
Quarter—Simons (capt).
Scrimmage — Fitzgerald, Voght, Stone.
Inside wings— Bartlett, McKendrick.
Middle wings—Mathers, Skinner.
Outside wings—Baker, Cochrane.

Saturday's Rugby Scores

The rugby season opened on Saturday and the day's playing brought few surprises, the games resulting for the most part according to dope. In the Intercollegiate, Varsity got away to a good start by beating Queen's in Kingston, while Ottawa College invaded Montreal and were beaten 20 to 5 by McGill. In the Big Four Argos, as expected, took the Tigers into camp at Rosedale after a hard battle, while Ottawa triumphed over Montreal at the capital. The biggest surprise came in the senior O.R.F.U. when St. Michael's College defeated T.A.A.C. The Crimson had rounded together a formidable aggregation, including Reddy Dixon of last year's Canadian champions and were looked upon as likely winners, but the Collegians turned the trick. The Hamilton Alerts had an easy victory over Dundas.

Practice To-night

The West End Rugby Club will practise at Central Park this evening at 7.15 o'clock and a full attendance of players is expected in uniform. The team opens the O. R. F. U. season here on Saturday with the Central Y. M. C. A. team of Toronto, and must turn out to practise this week consistently in order to be in the best possible shape for the reception of the fast Toronto team. The following are expected out to-night: Hayes, Corkery, Johnston, Craig, Denison, Ecclestone, Leahy, Bearss, Stewart, Thompson, Hill, Elliott, Canniff, Turner, Kirn, Davidson, Langley, Gilbert.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

Commencing on October 2nd the Lakefield train service will be changed as follows: The train which has been leaving here at 8.30 a.m. will now leave at 7.00 a.m. and returning will arrive in Peterboro 8.15 a.m. The noon train for Lakefield will leave at 12.20 and returning will arrive Peterboro 5.15 p.m. The evening train is discontinued. The public will be glad to learn that the new service inaugurated this Summer to Port Hope will be maintained throughout the Winter and will thus enable all passengers to leave Toronto at 9.00 a.m. any arrive in Peterboro at mid-dad. This train also affords good connection for all Eastern points to Montreal and Boston. 12d-77

BASEBALL SATURDAY

At Chicago (Am.)—Cleveland and Chicago broke even in a double-header, the former winning the first game by 4 to 3 in an eighth inning rally against Walsh, while the locals with Scott pitching, easily annexed the second 4 to 1. Batteries: First game—Walsh and Sullivan; Kaler and O'Neil. Second game—Scott and Kreitz; Swindell and Easterly.

At Philadelphia (Am.)—New York v. Philadelphia, postponed; rain.

At St. Louis (Am.)—Detroit played an errorless game and won from the locals by 5 to 1. Works allowed only three hits. Hawk, pitching for St. Louis, was effective in all but the fifth inning. The day was raw and the attendance at the game 05 persons, by actual count. Batteries—Hawk and Clarke; Works and Wilson.

At Boston (Am.)—Boston won the closing game of the season from Washington by 5 to 1. Batteries: Hall and Williams; Cashion, Becker and Ainsmith.

At New York (Nat.)—Donlin's home run in the third innings with Sweeney on first base and Drucke's wildness in the seventh gave Boston a victory over the Giants in the last game of the season on Saturday between these two teams. The score was 5 to 2. Tyler was invincible, except in the third inning, when three of New York's seven hits were bunched, resulting in two runs. Manager McGraw put Charley Faust, the eccentric Kansan, in the box in the ninth inning. Batteries: Tyler and Mason; Marquard, Tyler, Drucke, Faust, Myers and Hawley.

At Chicago (Nat.)—Adams held Chicago to three hits and Pittsburg won by 5 to 0. Slapnicka, who succeeded Toney in the second innings, was hit safely only twice. Batteries: Toney, Slapnicka and Graham; Adams and Gibson.

Postponements (Nat.): Philadelphia v. Brooklyn, wet grounds. St. Louis v. Cincinnati, rain.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Better acting has seldom, if ever, been seen in Peterborough than that which distinguished the production at the Grand on Saturday, of Henry Seton Merriman's great book play, "With Edged Tools," by the original English company. The work of the entire caste was superb throughout. There were no stars, or better, perhaps, they were all stars, and the result was a most entrancing performance, in which the histrionic ability of the company carried all before them. Peterborough play-goers were rarely privileged in being given an opportunity of seeing this brilliant company from over seas, and it is regrettable that larger audiences did not avail themselves of the chance. The clearness of articulation on the part of the caste was a most pleasing feature, a pleasant contrast to the manner in which the average American thespian slurs over his or her words.

As to the story, it is so well known that a repetition seems to be superfluous. Suffice it to say that Millicent Chyne, beautiful, witty, is a past mistress in the art of thin-ice skating. She becomes engaged to two men at one and the same time, Jack Meredith and Guy Oscard. Sir John Meredith, conscious of a mistake he made in his youth, has other views for his son and opposes the engagement from its inception. Jack Meredith, however, will have no interference in this affair "de coeur" and the separation of father and son is the consequence. Jack Meredith goes to Central Africa in search of the priceless drug, Similacine, a necessary adjunct to modern science, in the train of Victor Durnovo, a trader on the coast. The third in the partne rship by a decee of fate, turns out to be the other string to the bow of Millicent Chyne, "Guy Oscard," and thus we have the unique spectacle of two men, engaged to the same woman, working side by side in the sweat, fever and heat of the African swamps, unconscious of the fact. Through dangers and adversity a strong attachment springs up between the two men and endures until the end. The scenes in which the wily old diplomat, Sir John Meredith, pits his keen wit and admiral foresight against the beautiful feline Millicent, form the most engrossing pages in contemporary dramatic literature. The denouement could never have been foreseen by the most accustomed play-goer. We have the unusual situation of a heartless young lady receiving a severe and well-deserved castigation at the hands of her lovers, and being relegated to the undusted shelf where she belongs.

Richard Hicks, as the wily, bright old diplomat "Sir John Meredith" coming out of his retirement to fight for his son's happy future gave an admirable interpretation of the role. Hamilton Dean's characterization of the part of the likeable Jack was remarkably life-like and natural, while the "Victor Duverno," of Campbell Goldsmid was a striking demonstration of histrionic ability. Marguerite Cellier gave an artistic portrayal of the part of the heartless Millicent, and Marie Leonhard was wholly charming as Jocelyn Gordon. The scenic investure was quite adequate and the storm scene in the fourth act a triumph of stage craft.

SERIOUSLY ILL

The many friends of Mr. Thos. McDonough, Clerk at the Oriental, will regret to learn that he had to give up work on Friday last, and has been confined to his home since. Mr. McDonough, on Thursday, was taken with hemmorhage of the lungs. To-day his physicians can say that he is somewhat improved, but will not be able to be about for some time. His many friends sympathize with him and hope for his speedy recovery.

VISIT IS POSTPONED

Duke of Connaught Will Not Go at Once to Montreal

HAVING FINE TRIP

Montreal, Oct. 10.—The Montreal Star yesterday published the following wireless despatch:

"On board the steamship Empress of Ireland, via Malin Head, 9th.

"Fine weather continues to attend the Duke of Connaught's trip across the Atlantic. The duke and his party are proving themselves the best of sailors and are enjoying every minute of the time aboard ship.

"The Star's correspondent was granted an informal chat with His Royal Highness. He found the duke to be most affable and eager to discuss Canadian affairs. His Highness is apparently losing no opportunity to acquaint himself with conditions in the Dominion.

"Upon being asked if he had any message that he would like to send to Canada in advance of his arrival there, he replied:

"'No, I could not give you an official message of any kind, as that would be contrary to etiquette. Earl Grey being still in Canada, official messages can only come from Ottawa. But everybody knows that I am most glad to return to Canada, whose acquaintance I first made 42 years ago, and renewed in the nineties, while on my way to India. I shall be delighted to be in the Dominion once again.'

"I am officially informed that the winter program of Their Royal Highnesses will include visits to the important cities in Eastern Canada; the dates are at present unfixed.

"I have also been requested to state that the duke is not going up to Montreal, on his arrival at Quebec, because he feels that he could not do a visit to that city justice in the present circumstances of his divided establishment. He will, however, make an official and formal visit to Montreal at the earliest opportunity.

"The duke is most popular with the passengers and the staff aboard ship. There is no attempt to isolate him from the other passengers, and he is a familiar figure on the promenade deck."

Visit Postponed.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—The Duke of Connaught will not visit the city of Montreal until November 1.

This was the information received yesterday morning by the mayor and Ald. Dandurand, chairman of the reception committee.

Sometime ago when it was found that the repairs to the City Hall would not be finished in time to receive the duke on his arrival in Canada, Mayor Guerin wrote to Ottawa asking if it would be possible to arrange a postponement of the new Governor-General's visit to a later date. Yesterday at noon the reply was received, stating that the duke had been made acquainted with the position of affairs and would delay his visit accordingly.

By that time the new floor on the second storey, where the mayor's office and council chamber are located, will be finished and a special carpet that is being prepared for the occasion will be ready.

Hydro Power Popular.

Thamesford, Oct. 10.—Only one vote was cast yesterday against two by-laws in connection with the purchase of Niagara power from the Hydro-Electric Commission. One bylaw was the purchase of the power from the province instead of from Ingersoll, and the other was for raising the funds—about $6,000—needed for the installation of the local plant and its appliances. In both cases the vote showed 58 in favor of and 1 opposed.

Hitherto the electrical energy used here has been transmitted from Ingersoll and the price to be paid under the new conditions, $48 per horse-power, will be considerably less than the present cost.

It is proposed to supply Kintore power users from here and between 500 and 600 horsepower will be added to the list of the province's customers.

Aviator's Narrow Escape.

New York, Oct. 10.—Thomas O. M. Sopwith, the English aviator, and Nelson Doubleday, son of Frank Doubleday, his passenger, had remarkable escapes yesterday from serious injury when the aviator's biplane fell 53 feet, landing on a fence at the Nassau Aerodrome, on Long Island.

Sopwith was about 300 feet in the air when he suddenly found that the handle of his control gear would not work. He started to come down, and when 53 feet from the ground the connecting wire broke and he partly lost control of the machine. With rare coolness and judgment, he managed to keep right side up and landed on the fence without much damage, aside from an injured plane.

Earl L. Ovington again failed to start from here on his trip to Governor's Island, where he was to commence his trip across the continent. Motor trouble was reported as the cause.

British Novelist is Dead.

London, Oct. 10.—Hesba Stretton, the novelist, died here yesterday. She was never married and she and her sister, Elizabeth Smith, lived together all their lives. When the latter died, last February, it was predicted that the author would not survive her very long, as she was in feeble health at the time.

The father of the novelist was a Shropshire bookseller. She wrote first for Charles Dickens, from 1859 until his death. Afterwards she wrote a number of religious and philanthropic stories, which have been translated in all European and several Asiatic languages.

War on Cockroaches.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—The triple-distilled war spirit of Tripoli has fired the Roman spirit in the hearts of Montreal's Board of Control and they are resolved to make war upon an army of cockroaches which Ald. Lavalle and La Pointe have assured them have taken possession of St. James' market to the exclusion of trade and the public health. Dr. Laberge of the Health Department and Market Inspector Biron have reported that the historic market place is in the hands of the bugs and that the honest tradesmen are fleeing in terror from their stalls and taking to the tall timbers, while the cockroaches are hauling down flags in the shape of price tickets wherever found.

Shooting Accident.

Richmond, Que., Oct. 10.—A shooting accident occurred here yesterday morning, resulting in the death of Frank Dresser, insurance agent, of this place. The particulars of the shooting have not been learned, but one story is that the young man, who intended going hunting, was standing in the door of his house, when his gun was accidently discharged. The contents entered his body and he died in a few minutes.

Sunk With All on Board.

Boston, Oct. 10.—The sinking of an unknown British barkentine, said to have hiled from Bridgeton, N.S., off the entrance to the Bany of Fundy, on Sept. 30, with all on board, was reported yesterday by Captain Goodwin of the fishing schooner Good Luck.

NOTHING TO FEAR

Methodist Conference Delegates Welcome Higher Criticism —Must Face Facts

DEBATE WAXES VIGOROUS

Toronto, Oct. 10.—Biblical criticism was under hot fire yesterday morning in the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, but emerged from the conflict triumphantly vindicated. Seventeen speakers took part in the liveliest discussion this conference has yet witnessed, some vigorously attacking the critics, while others defended them, and declared that the age demands truth, and the people are bound to have it. The general feeling of the conference appeared to be that there was no need to fear for the results of scientific investigation of the Scriptures.

It was significant that the British delegates who spoke were almost to a man upholders of the scholars known as higher critics, pointing out that they were eminently evangelical men.

Probably the best summary of the discussion could be given in these words of the last speaker, Rev. Dr. J. G. Tasker of the Wesleyan Church:

"I hope we shall never again hear a higher critic represented as a man who exalts himself upon a pedestal of superior knowledge, and looks down with scorn upon his fellows. We have to live in the intellectual atmosphere of our own time. This age is determined to face the facts in all realms. It is determined to get at origins. Then if you are going to get at origins you must be a higher critic, because all that higher criticism means is: that you follow the stream that comes down to you a little higher up towards its source."

The discussion arose chiefly out of the essay by Prof. A. S. Peake, D.D., of the Primitive Methodist Church, which summed up the permanent results of Biblical criticism.

Arrested After Long Search.

Washington, Oct. 10.—After a search across the continent and up into British Columbia, the secret service operatives yesterday captured Albert Leon, a Russian Jew and political refugee, as he was about to leave New York for South America. Leon is alleged to be the head of an extensive counterfeiting gang which has flooded the Pacific coast with spurious $10 bank notes during the past year.

The secret service was yesterday advised that Leon was alleged to have perfected a process by which he photographed the face of a note that looked so much like surface printing that many experts declared it to have been printed from etched plate.

Two of Leon's alleged confederates, Rudolph Swanson and Fred Marneck, were arrested in Chicago two weeks ago. These two men are charged with passing some of the counterfeit money.

Leon arrived in this country about three years ago. He took up a section of land near Beaumont, near Los Angeles, where it is believed the first spurious notes were made. In December, 1910, he went to Nootka Island in British Columbia, and it was charged that most of his counterfeit work came out of his plant there.

Colonial Office Collecting Data.

Kingston, Ja., Oct. 10—The Colonial Office at London is seeking information here as the possible influence the opening of the Panama Canal will have on the British West Indies. Sir Dyney Oliver, the governor of Jamaica, with this end in view, will pay a visit to the Panama zone in November. He will collect data and make a report to the British Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Gets Three Years.

Chatham, Oct. 10.—John Dawson, found guilty of stealing eight bottles of whiskey from the Grand Trunk warehouse, was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary by Magistrate Howston yesterday morning. Dawson still maintained that he was not guilty. He walked to the jail with Officer Dodson, calmly smoking a cigar.

PROBABLE CABINET

Announcement of Personnel Delayed Until Midnight

FORGET DECLINES PLACE

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—The Borden Cabinet will be sworn in at noon to-day, as follows:

R. L. Borden—Premier and President of the Council.

Martin Burrell, B.C.—Minister of Agriculture.

Dr. J. D. Reid, Ont.—Minister of Customs.

W. L. White, Ont.—Minister of Finance.

W. B. Nantel, Que.—Minister of Inland Revenue.

Robert Rogers, Manitoba—Minister of Interior.

J. C. Doherty, Quebec—Minister of Justice.

T. W. Crothers, Ontario—Minister of Labor.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, New Brunswick—Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

Col. Sam Hughes, Ontario—Minister of Militia.

F. D. Monk, Quebec—Minister of Public Works.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Ontario—Minister of Railways.

Hon. George E. Foster, Ontario—Minister of Trade and Commerce.

L. Pelletier, Quebec—Postmaster-General.

Dr. W. J. Roche, Manitoba—Secretary of State.

Without portfolio, A. B. Kemp, Ontario; George Perley, Quebec; Senator Lougheed, Alberta.

A seat in the Cabinet was offered to Rodolphe Forget of Montreal, who declined it for the time being as the granting of a certificate to the Bank International, in which he has a large interest, will come immediately before the consideration of the Government.

The list was incomplete up to a late hour, unforeseen complications having developed Sunday and yesterday.

These difficulties were smoothed out last night, and at midnight the official list had been sanctioned by the Governor-General.

Daylight Robbery.

Chatham, Oct. 10.—Thieves picked the combination of the Aberdeen Hotel safe Sunday afternoon in broad daylight and walked away with over two hundred dollars in cash, undetected. Calixe Bechard, proprietor of the establishment, was in the hotel at the time but the robbery must have been committed in a very few minutes while Mr. Bechard was upstairs. For some time Mr. Bechard had been missing small sums from the safe, but in the hope of catching the thief, he said nothing about it, keeping a keen watch on the quiet. Last week $80 was missed in one day. Mr. Bechard did not know at that time just how the money was taken, but now he is positive that the thief knew the combination and opened the safe.

Russians Threatened Conflict.

Teheran, Oct. 10.—The National Council decided yesterday to confiscate the property of Shua-E-Sultaneh, brother of the ex-Shah of Persia, and one of his strong supporters in his recent attempt to regain the throne. Gendarmes were sent to take possession, but they were opposed by a body of cossacks, headed by two Russian consulate officers, who threatened to open fire. Thereupon the gendarmes withdrew.

The matter was referred to the Russian Minister, and if the Minister does not arrive at a decision by ten o'clock this morning, the Persian treasurer-general will take definite action.

A Fancy Swindle.

New York, Oct. 10.—Frank J. Dorlan, cashier of the Hotel Manhattan for the last twelve years, who is alleged to have stolen sums aggregating $10,000 from the hotel, was yesterday sentenced to serve from five to ten years in Sing Sing. He was convicted on three specific counts, obtaining him with stealing $400, $500 and $1,180.

Dorlan's method was to extract from the cash the exact amount of a check received from a patron for his hotel bill. Thus the proper balance would be shown at the end of the day, the check counting against the abstracted sum.

Spanish Losses in Morocco.

Madrid, Oct. 10.—The Spanish losses in the engagement between the Spanish columns and tribesmen in the Kert River region, Morocco, on Saturday, were 48 killed and 103 wounded.

The Spanish columns, in resuming operations against the hostile tribes, advanced ten miles inland, burning the houses and driving the tribesmen from their positions. But they met with determined resistance. The operations were directed by the Minister of War in person.

Prize For Peace Essays.

Mohonk Lake, N.Y., Oct. 10.—The Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration, announced yesterday the opening of its third annual prize contest for the best essay on international arbitration by an undergraduate male student of any college in the United States or Canada. The prize of $300 is given by Chester Dewitt Pugsley. The conference also announced two prizes of $200 and $100 given by Mrs. Elmer Black of New York, for the best essays on international peace by undergraduate women students of colleges in the United States.

IS THIS FOR YOU?

Do you want cheapest glasses with which you can read?

Do you consent to risk the well being of your eyes with second quality glasses merely because you can see with them? If so this message is not for you. But if you value the precious gift of sight, if you appreciate accuracy and quality this is for you, and we invite you to come where accuracy and quality are above every other consideration.

It is well to secure appointment.

TO TRY INVADERS.

Portuguese Parliament Will Arraign For a Tribunal.

Lisbon, Oct. 10.—The Chambers of Parliament have been summoned to meet in extraordinary session on Oct. 16. The Government will then ask that paragraphs 30 and 31 [illegible] of the constitution be suspended, and a special tribunal be constituted for the immediate trial of those charged with political offences.

This is the Government's response to the Monarchist invasion of Northern Portugal. Awaiting trial the political prisoners and to these there are likely to be added in the next few days, Col. Alberto da Silva, former commander of the police, who yesterday appointed Minister of War, succeeding Gen. Pimento Castro, resigned.

According to last night's news the Royalists are entrenched in the mountainous district of Serra da Corvo, within less than a mile of the Spanish frontier, and so able to retreat if necessary, into neutral territory. Four regiments of infantry, a squadron of cavalry and 400 soldiers landed from the warships at Oporto, are pursuing the Monarchists, with whom there are occasional skirmishes. The Government feels somewhat hindered, as it does not wish to annoy Spanish susceptibilities by fighting near the frontier.

Monarchists Retreating.

Oporto, Oct. 10.—Latest official advices say that the Monarchists are retreating, having abandoned Carrazo yesterday and taking refuge a mile from the frontier to the north-west of Vinhaes. The Government troops in pursuit is closing in upon the Monarchists. Oporto is quiet.

A Youthful Robber.

Kingston, Oct. 10.—In broad daylight, a 10-year-old lad walked into the home of W. Linton, took $3 out of a purse on the hall-tree, put the purse back in its place, and walked out. Members of the household heard the door slam, and, rushing to the door, saw the lad getting away. The boy is under arrest, having been identified by Mrs. Linton as the thief. He was caught twice before stealing in hotels.

No Foul Play.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—The coroner's jury enquiring into the death of J. Frederick Fraser, former light commissioner of the Marine Department, decided that the deceased died from cyanide poisoning, probably self-administered. There was nothing in the evidence to support the theory of foul play or the sensational stories sent from Ottawa on the affair.

Motormen's Wish Misquoted.

Detroit, Oct. 10.—Investigation by the Detroit United Railway officials verified the belief of Motorman Harry Uber that Saturday night's collision at Young's curve on the Flint division of the railway, in which two were killed and 15 injured, was caused by Uber's watch having become magnetized. Superintendent Bullen gave out an official statement to this effect yesterday.

"No; Atlantic City says she's just going to lie there and wait for instructions from Washington."

The operator turned back to his table without apparently noticing the interest in the other man's eyes. He was seemingly detached and unconscious of any presence in the room except that of the mysterious spirit which came and went at a touch of his hand. A smile began to play about his mouth as he listened. It was held there in suspension, while his gaze shifted from side to side, vivaciously, in response to that far-off and mysterious voice that was winging its invisible way across so many miles of rain-washed sea and emptiness, to creep along a slender thrad of metal into his closed and crowded cabin.

H still seemed unconscious of the mounting look of determination, of obdurate belligerency, that smouldered up into the square-jawed fac of the watching stranger as his eyes travelld from a wall map of th Caribbean down to the brass key, and then back to the map again.

"You'd think our Uncle Samuel had enough troubles without trying to play school-teacher to those dinky little fire-eaters down there," he meditatively ventured as he took out another of his black Hondurian cigars and once more fell to studying the map of the Caribbean.

The operator, bent low over his apparatus, did not deign to answer him.

CHAPTER IV.

THE MAN ON BOARD.

"You've made this trip before?" observed the stranger, studying the man before him with the same calm and half-closed eyes that he had bent on the faded wall-map. He seemed as strangely disturbed by his companion's note of quiet authority as he was by his incongruously sunburnt face and his unseemly length of limb.

"Never on this tub!" McKinnon responded, with a contemptuous side glance about his station.

The stranger followed that glance as it circled the crowded and disordered room. It was both a sleeping-cabin and an operating office. Under the wide shelf that supported a double row of Leyden jars, surmounted in turn by the De Forest helix, was the operator's narrow berth. Toward the foot of this berth below the condenser, stood an enameled washbowl and a litter of tools. Next to these was a wooden-slatted trunk, on which lay a clutter of recently unpacked clothing, a pair of canvas-covered dumbbells, a shaving set, and a tin box of photographs. Against the farther wall, half way to the door, and directly in front of the dynamo, stood a broken steamer chair. In front of it was the rough pine able at which the operator sat and worked. On this table stood the tuning-box, with its mysterious rows of numerals along the three slots in which lever-heads moved back and forth, the great, long-handled despatching instrument, like a Brobdingnagian model of a telegraph key, and the delicately mounted little responder, the nerve centre of the wireless system. Above this, on the outside wall, stood the switchboard. It was of unpainted pine, like the table. Set in it, near the top, was the starting-box, with its broken and roughly spliced lever, and below it the switch-arm itself, standing between its two protecting fuses. At the end of he table was the faded wall-map of the Caribbean and a shallow clothes-locker. Above this was tacked a lithograph of a stage dancer, pointing with a pink-stained toe to other and brighter worlds. It was a strange medley of the obvious and the inscrutable, of the commonplace and the mysterious.

"How'd you get aboard this tub, anyway?" the stranger suddenly asked, with a sympathetic wag of the head.

"I needed the money. But I never thought I'd have to face a mess like this." And the new operator disgustedly waved an arm about the room.

The stranger was meditatively rubbing his pendulous chin.

"You don't like the work, eh?"

"It's good enough when you've got a decent station. But this room isn't fit for a pig to live in! Look at that box of a sleeping berth! It's worse than a coffin! And I'm going to kick a board out of that cabin wall if they don't get a ventilator tube in here—it's like sleepin in a dough-box! and look at that bunged-up tuner! And that operating table, that's never seen a coat o fpaint; and that switchboard—nothing but raw pine! Why, nine of the connecters in those Leyden jars turned out to be broken, after I'd struck this place at noon. I had to patch them up with all the washbowl chains from the first cabins as we came down the bay. I got on to that dodge aboard the Prinz Joachim."

"She's a real boat!" interpolated the stranger.

The young operator was wistfully nodding his head. "They carry a German band ,and an ice machine, and free beer for the officers."

"But you can make this snug enough," the other soothed.

"Snug. Why, this place looked like a box stall in a livery stable. I haven't even got a silence-room or an annunciator connecting me with the bridge—I've got to be hollered at like a sinker cook in an East Side beanery!"

The stranger laughed. It was altogether a laugh of sympathy. But his meditative eye kept roving about the stateroom.

"I suppose you've seen a good deal of he South?" he said at last.

"All I want to, thank you!" promptly answered McKinnon. The vigour of his retort made the other man smile again.

"You don't like it down there, eh?"

The operator, who had slowly adjusted his caplike receiving apparatus, performed his habitual rite of lifting the 'phone-receiver from his ear to catch the question as it was repeated.

"Do you?" demanded the operator.

The stranger did not answer the question. Instead of that he asked another.

"Why don't you keep out of it, then?" There was nothing, apparently, but off-handed good-nature in the query. The operator laughed.

"I can't afford to," was all he said, though he added in an afterthought: "Until I can get at the work I want."

McKinnon's questioner looked relieved. He became more light-hearted, more suavely consolatory.

"But it's so deucedly mysterious—sending all kinds of messages to all kinds of people," he argued.

"What's so mysterious about it?" the man at the table demanded. "I think it's confoundedly simple."

"The machinery is, I suppose, when you understand it; but I mean the mixing up in the big events, the getting next o life wih the shell off."

"Oh, it's mostly weather reports and 'sweetheart' messages and captains giving distances and saying they're coming into port or passing lights or wanting wharf room, if it isn't the Navy people asking for Sunday papers and news from home."

"But think what a swath you could cut with wireless if you wanted to," pursued the oher in his placid disregard of all side issues.

"Me?" said McKinnon, turning slowly about.

"I mean as a side line," interposed the stranger with a shrug. Still again McKinnon's nervous grey eyes swept the figure in the steamre-chair.

"But I have a side line," explained the operator as he noted the other man's puzzled gaze resting on his box of models.

"How d'you mean?"

"I mean that reed-disk and Ruhmkorff coil transmitter you see there. That's the work I want to get at."

"Bu what is it?" was the other's half-diffident inquiry. His lack of interest in no way seemed to depress the younger man.

"It's my wireless telephony scheme for pilot-boats and fleet manœuvres and yacht races an dten-mile work in general. For instance, there's a battle going on, and the whole top hamper of a cruiser gets blown away: all we'd have to do, with this, would be to run a wire up on an oar and call on the flagship for orders."

"But aren't other folks for getting in ahead of you on this?"

"Well, I can still use my outfit to smash their monopoly and stop royalty overcharges. You see, it's only an arrangement of steel reeds connected with a receiver, or say to a responder like this one on the table. These reeds are tuned in unison with the transmitter-reeds—it works on what we call the law of syntonic synchronism."

He noticed, as he went on, the other's companionable imace at the polysyllables.

"But this is all Greek to you," he said, with a shoulder movement of humorous resignation.

"No, it ain't," protested the other. "Go on."

"Models cost money, of course," McKinnon continued more deliberately. "I have to go slow. But once I get that apparatus where I want it you'll never see me south of Hatteras again."

He stopped, and waited for the other man to speak.

"It's not a white man's country," admitted the stranger with a nod toward he South. "The only good thing in it's the mules."

"We've got to take that as it comes," McKinnon said with an unlooked-for placidity of tone. Then he leaned back, with half-closed eyes and linked his long forefingers together behind his head. "You see, I can always save money on a coast-wise run like this; there's no way of getting rid of it."

"Well, money's worth having now and then," the stranger remarked as his sagely ruminative eye fell on the little varnished box that held the wireless responder.

He was silent for a moment or two, though McKinnon watchedh im closely out of his half-shut eyes. Then the stranger swung slowly about and touched the operator on his soiled shirt-sleeve. McKinnon felt the heavy forefinger on his arm, but he did not move.

"See here," said the stranger, and both his voice and his expression had undergone some quick and pregnant change, "see here: d'you want to make ten times what you get out of this key-operating business D'you want to make a good round sum, helping me out of a hole?"

The Laminian's operator looked closely at the man who had invaded his cabin. He had apparently been afraid of some such undercurrent of self-interest in the other's advances. He seemed to possess the man of thought's persistent horror of material and entangling alliances; he seemed to feel that some secret web of inveiglement had been wovn about him.

"How could I hlp you out of a hole?" he curtly demanded.

The stranger did not answer at once. The other's suddenly aroused suspicion had warned him to go slow. Instead of speaking he leaned back in the steamer-chair and studied his companion. The path before him seemed a precarious one. His pursed-up lips workd slowly in and out as he sat there temporising. There was something suggestive of the ruminant in his large and heavy silence.

"Could we talk here—us two, man to man!" he finally asked, with a look at the door.

"Of course we can," the operator retorted ,nettled by the sense of mystery the other was conjuring up about so simple a situation. This vague feeling of irritation seemed to merge into something that was almost anger as he watched the stranger slowly rise to his feet and cross over to the cabin door, held back against the wall-plates' by its brass hook. He lifted the end of this hook on his toe and let the freed door swingsh ut wth the slow dip of the steamer's deck. Then he ruffled out the faded denim curtain and came back and sat down. The two men continued to look at each other guardedly.

"I've got a hard job ahead of me," began the intruder, seeming to feel his way as he went. "A hard job—and you're the only man on this ship who can help me along."

"Go on," McKinnon commanded with an impatient reach for his discraded coat.

"That's just it. I'll be hanged if I know how to go on!" the other explained. He gave vent to a guttural laugh of uneasiness and sat stroking his pendulous, turkey-cock throat.

The operator ,drumming on his pine table-edge, waited in silence. The other man was also silent. The pulse and throb of the engines crept into the white-walled cabin.

"Well," said McKKinnon with a significant glance toward his large and authoritative siver watch. The stranger's eye, following him, passed on to the key-lever and then on again to the helix wires.

"You may recall that you sent a couple of messages out for me this afternoon," he finally began.

McKinnon recalled the fact of the two despatches.

"Maybe you happen to remember the wording of these two particular messages?"

McKinnon, with wrinkled brow, turned to his "send-hook." He found the two sheets, and straightened them out on his knee. Then he looked up to say: "We never hold these things in our head, you know. We can't, any more than a wire can."

He let his gaze run over the sheets of paper before him. The other man sat watching him as he read. For just a moment, as he made note of what seemed the operator's half-forbearing, half-cynical indifference, a shadow of disappointment flitted across his face, typifying apparently, some passing regret for a reconnaissance at last recognized as unnecessary. But he pulled himself together at once, as though determined to face the problem immediately before him.

"Would you mind reading that first despatch out to me?" he asked with the placid authority of a presti-digitateur sure of his trick.

McKinnon rattled through the message at a breath: "Varrel, sixty Wall Street, New York. Our man on boards he Laminian, bound Puerto Locombia. Wire Washington. Will have him held by authorities to await instructions. Duffy."

The operator put the message on the table and calmly weighted it with the carborundum box. The other man suddenly realized, as he made note of McKinnon's attitude of unmoved neutrality,—how automatic he human mind can become; how, when once immersed in he method of doing a thing, it can lose all sense of the thing itself. The man of he key had seen nothing but a string of words to be "sent." It was only oo apparent tha heir meaning had escaped him.

"I suppose I've go to explain that," said the stranger, fondling one of his thick, short cigars in his thick, short fingers. "You'll notice that this message went to 60 Wall Sreet. You may or may no know that that's he Information Bureau of the Consolidated Fruit Concern. And if you've knocked abou the Banana Belt long enough you've found out that those people just about own those little yam-eating republics down there."

McKinnon nodded as a sign that he understood.

"They've got a good many millions of money locked up in that export business o' theirs. And when you're doing business in a republic that's built on bullets you've got to watch where you're walking. It means that you've got to keep your ear to the ground; see that your governments are stable, I mean; and your marionettes in their nice little red and gold uniforms running smooth and true. That's why they retain a big man like Varrel for their information bureau—just to know who's poking a finger into the political pie down there, and to be ready fo rtrouble when it blows up."

"Well, I'm here acting for Varrel an dthe Consolidated Fruit people' The Locombian charge d'affaires a' Washington tipped our office off some five weeks ago about trouble ahead in Guariqui."

"Where's Guariqui?" quietly asked McKinnon'

"Guariqui's their capital—the capital of Locombia. Since we've heard that ,of course, we've been co-operating with the department at Washington, keeping an eye on any Locombian likely o be interested in the Guariqui mix-up."

McKinnon confessed that he had known of detectives engaged in the sole pursuit of shadowing Latin-American exiles.

"And it's right 'here under this deck"—Duffy tapped the floor with his heel as he spoke—"it's right here on this ship o' yours that we've got Ganley—the one and only Ganley!"

CHAPTER V.

THE WEB OF INTRIGUE

The stranger peered across the cabin at the unperturbed operator.

"Who's Ganley?" asked McKinnon.

Would Fall In a Faint

When She Attempted to Work, so Exhausted Was the Nervous System

The Feeble, Wasted Nerves Were Restored and Revitalized by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nervous prostration is a terrible disease to all who understand its symptoms. At times the sufferer feels comparatively well, but with slight exertion the dreadful helplessness returns and all strength and vitality seems to leave the system.

This letter from Mrs. Martin very well describes the terrible conditions in which many a sufferer finds herself. She also tells how she regained health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after all other treatments had failed.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., wriees: "Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition from nervous exhaustion and prostration. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. The weakness was so great that I could not so much as sweep the floor without fainting, but the nerve food helped me after the doctors failed. It has done wonders in building up my nervous system. I can do my own housework now and washing, and feel that this great medicine has been a God-send to me. I think it is the best of medicines."

DOCTOR ADVISED HOSPITAL

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back hurt, my sides ached. I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice. I have done as you told me.

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. Benj. H. Stanebery, Route 6, Box 10, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too late, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give everyone confidence.

SOUND SLEEP

Can Easily Be Secured.

"Up to 2 years ago," a woman writes, "I was in the habit of using both tea and coffee regularly.

"I found that my health was beginning to fail, strange nervous attacks would come suddenly upon me, making me tremble so excessively that I could not do my work while they lasted; my sleep left me and I passed long nights in restless discomfort. I was filled with a nervous dread as to the future.

"A friend suggested that possibly tea and coffee were to blame, and I decided to give them up, and in casting about for a hot table beverage, which I felt was an absolute necessity, I was led by good fortune to try Postum.

"For more than a year I have used it three times a day and expect, so much good has it done me, to continue its use during the rest of my life.

"Soon after beginning the use of Postum, I found to my surprise, that, instead of tossing on a sleepless bed through the long, dreary nights, I dropped into a sound, dreamless sleep the moment my head touched the pillow.

"Then I suddenly realized that all my nervousness had left me, and my appetite, which had fallen off before, had all at once been restored so that I ate my food with a keen relish.

"All the nervous dread has gone. I walk a mile and a half each way to my work every day and enjoy it. I find an interest in everything that goes on about me that makes life a pleasure. All this I owe to leaving off tea and coffee and the use of Postum, for I have taken no medicine." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ontario.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Montreal, 22nd February, 1909.

I Hereby Certify that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. I have analyzed same and find them uniformly to contain 99-99/100 to 100 per cent of pure cane sugar, with no impurities whatever.

IT ENDS PAIN!

Have you a sore place? Have you any skin disease, old sore or obstinate wound, that has defied all efforts at healing? If so, apply Zam-Buk and prove its merits.

A Woman's Message to Women.

Mrs. James Elsworth, 962 Selkirk Ave., Winnipeg, Man., says:—"Eight and a half years ago ulcers started on my left ankle, and spread until the top of my foot and limb, to the knee, was well-nigh covered. I used ointment after ointment, until everything I knew of had been tried, but I received little or no benefit. I was laid up in bed for a long time, and had no rest or sleep, night after night, from the acute pain and irritation.

"I consulted doctors, until I had taken treatment from at least five. After using their ointments and preparations until I was positive I could get no cure, I almost gave up in despair. I was next persuaded to try a course of treatment supplied by a company operating in this city, paying as much as thirteen dollars and a half in one week for ointments, which proved of no use whatever.

"One day a sample of Zam-Buk was left at the house. This seemed to soothe the pain almost instantly, and encouraged me to get a supply from the druggist and give it a fair trial. Zam-Buk had a wonderful effect in a very short time. The irritation and the pain were quickly relieved, and gradually the ulcers were cleansed of all poisonous matter. The discharging then ceased, and the ulcers began to show signs of healing. I kept on using Zam-Buk until every ulcer had been completely healed."

LONDON PREPARES CHRISTMAS ARRAY

Reminders of the Season Yet Afar Off Are Already Being Arranged In Metropolis.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

CHRISTMAS is rather far off as yet, but this is an age of anticipation—an age when Christmas numbers are published for midsummer season and summer numbers in the snowy ones. And is not the Christmas card always with us?

Publishers of these artistic reminders of the festive season are now very busy indeed in producing missives of kindly sentiments of good will. The collection can best be described as an art pageant, and there is probably not a single phase in art which it does not represent. Never was there such a glorious, gorgeous, glittering array.

Knights of the palette have given of their best in this coronation year series. Fittingly, though, first in importance among five thousand distinctive designs are the royal cards, copied from the original productions.

The King's Christmas card depicts Cedric, the ancestor of the royal family of England, accepting the crown, A. D. 813. The striking scene has been reproduced from a painting by Howard Davie. The Queen's card shows William and Mary accepting the crown of England. "A Voice Divine" is the title of Queen Alexandra's. Seated at a window is the figure of a beautiful woman, on whom light is streaming down. An open Bible is on a reading desk before her. Edward the Black Prince figures in the card chosen by the Prince of Wales, while that selected by the German Emperor illustrates a link between the past and the present, Christmas greetings being signalled by the latest type of dreadnought to the Victory, Nelson's flagship, lying in Portsmouth Harbor.

The Dickens centenary has been specially catered to by a highly interesting series, and the fact that 1912 is leap year has not been forgotten.

Family of Eleven Totals 700 Years

"Baby" Is 51 and "Big Brother" Is 73—Porridge Is the Recipe for Longevity.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE celebration of a birthday in the circle of a Preston family named Gardner draws attention to the fact that the total age of this family of eleven approaches seven hundred years. There are six brothers and five sisters, of whom the youngest is a "girl" of fifty-one and the eldest a "boy" in his seventy-third year. Not less remarkable than the longevity of the family is the fact that they are all in good health and working—the men at their occupations and the women at looking after their homes.

Asked to what he attributed the good health of the family, Mr. Richard Gardner, who is sixty, answered "Porridge! We were brought up on porridge. It was the meal both morning and night, and meat was rarely tasted, the midday dinner usually consisting of bread and butter. It was uncommon to have more than half a pound of meat and a quarter pound of dust on the table at one time to serve the whole of us."

There is a wonderful old centenarian, named Mrs Ann Dovey, down in Wolverhampton, who has just celebrated her 103rd birthday. Asked what was her recipe for longevity, she said, "Work hard and eat heartily. I've done both," she said, "for I've had nine children, and have always had to work very hard."

Her memory is good and her most treasured recollection of the late Queen Victoria, then a girl, being driven in a carriage, attended by the Duchess of Kent. The young Princess was thirsty, the carriage pulled up at a wayside inn kept by Mrs. Dovey's parents, and in response to a request for a glass of water Mrs. Dovey, then a young woman herself, handed it to the Princess.

NATIONAL MEMORIAL TO THE BARD OF AVON

London, Saturday.
[Special Despatch.]

A Shakespeare National Memorial Theatre, constructed on the island plan, with an elaborate frontage on Trafalgar Square, will be the outcome of a great scheme if the ambitions of the promoters are realized.

The Executive Committee of the National Theatre movement here has the option of the site of the County Council Hall in Spring Gardens until April, 1912, and though the scheme involves an outlay of £2,000,000 the committee is very sanguine that by April 23, 1916, the tercentenary of Shakespeare's death, not only will the theatre be an accomplished fact, but it will be ready for opening.

In a couple of years the site will be available, as the County Council will be removing to their new home at Westminster. At the present time nearly £600,000 has been collected and subscribed, the substantial contributions to the amount being the £250,000 presented by Sir Carl Meyer and the £80,000 which the Shakespeare ball in the Albert Hall yielded. Now, for the first time, a public appeal for money is to be made by means of meetings and lectures in various parts of the country.

All Plans Are Prepared for the Royal and Imperial Durbar Days at Delhi.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

ALTHOUGH the task of organising the royal tour to India has been greatly handicapped, owing to the fact that there was no direct precedent on which to work, the arrangements for the Delhi Durbar are now complete.

It is now settled that a very much larger suite shall attend the royal party than originally was thought necessary. The Mistress of the Robes, for instance, is to attend the Queen, and the Duchess of Devonshire has just received an intimation to this effect; while it is thought at court the Duke also will join the royal party and be temporarily attached to the King's suite.

The King and Queen are to arrive at Delhi on December 7. They will be met by the Viceroy, Governors and heads of provinces. Inside the fort walls the chief ruling prices will be presented. Three processions will then be formed, which will move to the great canvas city outside the city walls.

The first procession will consist of the Governors, Lieutenant Governors and Chief Commissioners of provinces. The second procession will be that of the King and Queen. The ruling princes will furnish a third procession.

The next two days will be taken up with official visits to the royal encampment. On the afternoon of December 8, the King will lay the foundation stone of the King Edward Memorial, for which £105,000 has been collected.

December 12 will be the great day. The King and Queen will then appear in the centre of the arena, where the royal proclamation will be read before 100,000 of their Asiatic subjects, after which the great feudatory princes, rulers, satraps and bashaws will pay homage.

On the morning of December 13 there will be a brilliant levee, at which lesser personages will attend, and a great people's fair outside Delhi. The King has given a great largesse for the feeding of the poor on this day. The 14th will be the day of the review. An investiture ceremony will be held in the evening. On the 15th come the races and the military tournament. On the 16th, the final day, there will be a State progress through Delhi City, at which more than half the domesticated elephants in all India are expected to be in use. The King will then leave for his shoot in Nepal. The Queen will go on a visit to Agra.

The Prince of Wales has completed his first month of naval service on H. M. S. Hindustan and his practical naval education will terminate not later than February, though he may make a tour of the world in a war ship with his brother a little later. It is not intended to qualify the Prince for actual command, and he will begin his active connection with the army early next year.

The Prince is now being taught how things are done in the navy from practical observation both afloat and ashore. For this reason he spends a great deal of his time in close companionship with Captain Campbell, who is his governor by the King's special appointment.

Life on board ship, say the officers of the Hindustan, is already developing the Prince's natural self-reliance and manliness. He likes to talk with the men on board and constantly interrogates the gunners. In fact, the Prince is encouraged on the Hindustan to ask questions of everybody. Several of his messmates are old comrades from Osborne and Dartmouth. With them the Prince is a merry, light hearted lad, and forgets the great responsibilities which may some day devolve upon him.

"Prince Albert, who, in three months' time will complete his sixteenth year, is to leave the Royal Navel College at Dartmouth next year. He is to follow then in the footsteps of his elder brother and to serve as a midshipman aboard a battle ship. Early next June he is to be admitted as a Knight of the Garter.

Prince Henry, the third son of the King, is to go to Wellington College. Up to the present he has attended a school at Broadstairs. It was at one time thought that the young Prince would follow in the steps of his uncle, Prince Alexander of Teck, and his cousins, Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duke of Coburg, by proceeding to Eton. King Edward, as Prince of Wales, used to attend lectures at Eton, and one or two pupils need to share his recreations at Windsor, but Prince Alexander was the first member of the royal family to be included in the roll of Oppidans.

The months of November and December certainly will be unique in the history of social London, for during the weeks of absence of the King and Queen in India England will practically be without a court. This is a state of affairs which is without precedent, for even during the brief absences of the late King for his holidays on the Continent it did not seem to make so much difference, as one knew that he was still to all intents and purposes only within a few hours' journey of his kingdom.

Before the appointment of the Duke of Connaught as Governor of Canada there were some rumors that he would be named Regent in the absence of King George, but he will not even be within the British Isles, for only a few weeks must elapse before he takes up his new duties. The Duke will be accompanied by the Duchess of Connaught, who is very busy just now making preparations for her departure.

It is reported, however, that Princess Patricia may remain behind for a time in order to visit friends in England, and in all probability will make her annual stay with her sister, the Crown Princess of Sweden, with whom she always enjoys some weeks of skating in the winter. Princess Patricia always has been much before the public, for she has since the marriage of Princess Margaret to Prince Gustavus of Sweden been the constant companion of her parents both in public and private life, and, like her brother, Prince Arthur of Connaught, she has been made the subject of many rumors as to proposed matrimonial alliances, so far without foundation. Prince Arthur, like his sister, seems to be in no hurry to take upon himself the responsibilities of married life.

As a man of affairs in the diplomatic sense, Prince Arthur has already made his mark, and as a member of the social world the best compliment that can be paid him is that he is a great favorite with his own sex, for his manner is earnest and unassuming, and he is well known to be a thorough sportsman.

• • •

Socially the capital continues to be very dull. Nor are matters likely to improve until the Court returns to London.

Whether or not racing as a fashionable pastime is less the attraction it was, the fact remains that Doncaster this year was decidedly less cheery than in former days.

when King Edward made a point of putting in a week at Rufford Abbey between his cure at Marblehead and his visit to Balmoral. Equally King Edward timed his departure from Scotland so as to be at Newmarket for the second October meeting.

The present King prefers a quiet domestic existence on Deeside to being the centre of a large house party for the Leger, while his engagements are not regulated according to the dates of the Newmarket meetings, and it is well known that the Queen cares little for racing. The social side of this sport can hardly fail to feel this withdrawal of royal favor, and the difference noticed in the Leger meeting this autumn may very possibly be thus accounted for.

King George and Queen Mary are not entertaining large house parties at Balmoral, but the few intimate friends who have the honor of a royal command are reinforced by members of the household and by the Minister in attendance, for the nonce the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who, curiously enough, is a very popular personage among the younger members of the royal family.

The Duke of Connaught is paying a farewell visit to the King and Queen before his departure for Canada, and Prince Arthur of Connaught joined the royal party this week on the conclusion of a visit to the Crown Princess of Sweden, who probably will accompany Prince Arthur to England, so as to bid the Duke and Duchess goodby before they leave. The report of Prince Arthur's engagement to a Russian princess is at present only the intelligent anticipation of a not necessarily probable event.

The royal party at Balmoral this week has been delighted with the command exhibition of the Kinemacolor picture performances, and the King was highly amused at the film depicting the Lord Mayor of London in his robes endeavoring to mount his horse after presenting to him the city sword at Temple Bar, and he laughed heartily. At the conclusion of the performance the King said it was "a very wonderful show, most excellent indeed," while Queen Mary expressed herself as having been "highly delighted." For the production of effects such as the clattering of hoofs, the surging of the waters in the Niagara scene and the clanging of bells, numerous contrivances had to be taken to Balmoral, including a special drum eight feet in diameter, which was necessary for producing the sound of the heavy booming of the guns in the scene depicting the Royal Naval Review at Spithead.

The Queen has quite recovered from the fatigue of the coronation season and, accompanied by Princess Mary, she drives out every day visiting the cottagers. Princess Mary is now the Queen's constant companion, and therefore spends much less time with her brothers than she did in the days when she shared all their pastimes at Abergeldie Castle.

Princess Mary, by the way, has been having a series of dancing lessons the last few days in Highland reels and flings and strathspeys. She revels in them and is already quite an accomplished sightsome dancer.

The Duke of Argyll, who has been spending the last six weeks at his chalet at Hardelot, returns to town in time to take leave of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught when they depart for Canada to take up the appointment which was once held by the Duke when Lord Lorne.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire returned to Chatsworth from Bolton Abbey this week and intend to reside for a short time during the autumn at Hardwick Hall, near Chesterfield. Compton Place, the Duke's residence at Eastbourne, is lent for the autumn to Lady Edward Cavendish.

Every year Grosvenor Square seems more intent on justifying its second title as the "American corner" in London. Since Mrs. John Astor bought her new London mansion there this year another prominent American wife will take up residence in square for her permanent headquarters in town, and as soon as the alterations are completed Lord Maidstone and his pretty American wife will take up residence in their new house. Since their marriage Lord and Lady Maidstone have occupied a suite of rooms in Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel's house at No. 2 Grosvenor square, but by next season Lady Maidstone will take her place among London hostesses in her own town house.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gould are returning to America in October and will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gould, who have been paying some visits on the Continent during the last four months. Mrs Edmund Baylies has been on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin at Balmacaan, and also Lord and Lady Craven, at Combe, and returns to America later in the fall. Mrs. Newhouse, who paid a short visit to town since her return from the Continent, is now paying some visits in Invernessshire, and Mrs. Amory Moore has a party of friends at Elcich, where she has been entertaining as usual this summer.

FOLLOW THE DUKE'S CANADIAN MOVE

Lord and Lady Castlereagh Among Those Who Like the Sutherland Idea.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE Duke of Sutherland's pioneer movement in Canada bids fair to be taken up by many others, for much talk is heard in society circles of first one, then another going over to look up the possibilities of the country.

Lord and Lady Castlereagh are on their way there, with no other object in view than to investigate the question of land holdings, so that on their return Lord Castlereagh may be able to give his constituents in Maidstone the benefit of his views of the country.

Not long ago—in fact, only two months since—Mr Francis Grosvenor, Lord Ebury's younger son, went back to Canada, where he has taken up work under new conditions. Sir Edward Ward's son, who married one of Mrs Jefferson's daughters, is settled on a ranch in Canada, and now Lady Ilcene Campbell and her husband have gone to Canada with their two young sons, with the intention of remaining there a couple of years, their desire being that the boys may have a good opportunity of seeing for themselves and studying all that the country has to offer to the rising generation.

SAYS AUTOMOBILE KILLS HOME LIFE

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

That home life in England is being destroyed by the automobile is the opinion of Mr. Albert Halstead, American Consul at Birmingham, in a report to the United States government.

"People," he says, "are spending less time at home, caring less for the attractiveness of home, and devoting their surplus money, and even more than their surplus, to the purchase of automobiles and their upkeep—many purchasing them without any idea as to the cost of their maintenance and the loss through depreciation."

Askwith Knighthood Very Pleasing to Englishmen

SIR GEORGE ASKWITH

Conferring of the Honor at the Present Time Wins General Approbation, for the Recipient Is Well Known as an Amazing Worker and a First Class Sportsman.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE knighthood conferred on Mr. G. R. Askwith has met the approbations of Englishmen generally. An amazing worker and a good sportsman Sir George is universally popular and esteemed. The honor has come during the busiest and most anxious time that the "strike settler" has ever known. Within the last few weeks he has disposed of dispute after dispute, hurrying off from one trade centre to another and tackling complicated labor questions with an unwearied attention that would have prostrated an average man. Altogether he has taken a successful part in more than fifty arbitrations and nearly a hundred trade disputes. Among his recent triumphs are the tentative settlement of the national railway strike, the shipping strike at Hull, the cotton dispute last autumn and the Belfast strike. He also settled the boot trade dispute and the strikes of the Scottish weavers, the Nottingham lace weakers, the London compositors and the music hall artists.

THE DEUTSCHLAND IN A NEW DRESS

Changes Made in Great Steamship Bring Her Up to Date in Speed and Accommodations.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE Hamburg-American line steamship Victoria Luise, named after the daughter of the German Emperor, on her latest trip to New York, carries a full complement of first class passengers.

Behind this announcement lies the passing of the famous Atlantic greyhound the Deutschland, and the creation of a new, up to date pleasure cruiser. The Victoria Luise is the new name of the Deutschland, which has been entirely overhauled, and practically rebuilt by the German builders.

Beyond the hull there is little of the old Deutschland remaining. The company found that her twenty-three and one-quarter knots were hardly sufficient for their fast service. Her new engines have shown an average of seventeen knots in her trials.

"She is now all that the pleasure cruiser should be," an officer of the company told your correspondent.

"Her promenade deck runs from one end to the other, and she has been refitted and refurnished throughout. Anti-rolling tanks have been installed, and her reduced speed is just what we desired for the special pleasure service that we had to provide. Her trip to New York may be followed by others across the Atlantic, but in the spring she will make a special cruise to the Orient."

GIRLS IN HIGH LIFE TAKING UP WORK

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

MORE and more girls in high social positions appear to be fitting themselves very practically for making a living should circumstances demand.

Some years ago one young girl, now the wife of an English diplomat and daughter of one of society's most recognized leaders, had serious thoughts of taking up the study of gymnastic work and physical culture very thoroughly in order, should it be ever necessary, to earn money thereby. As it was, she carried away several medals at five of the most fashionable gymnasiums of Belgravia.

Another girl, a daughter of the late Lord Henniker and a sister of the present baron, now Baroness Claude de Chassiron, studied shorthand and typewriting in the city, where more than one society girl has fitted herself for a business career. She is a sister of the late Miss Sylvia Henniker, who was so notable a figure in society till her death, in 1907.

Mrs. Julian Clifford, well known in the musical world for her singing, is a sister of Baroness de Chassiron. Her little son, Master Julian, only seven years old, is considered a musical prodigy, and recently conducted "William Tell" at a concert given by his mother at the Kursaal at Harrowgate, when she herself sang.

ADVERTISERS OF LONDON ARE SLOW

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

MR. A. D. LASKER, managing director of the Lord & Thomas Advertising Agency, of Chicago, who has been in Europe studying the methods of commercial exploitation on this side of the Atlantic, told in an interview before he left on board the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria for home what he thought of English and general European methods of advertising.

"Advertising in England," he said, "has not shown sufficiently profitable returns to warrant a greater outlay for publicity than is now apparent, and the newspapers, of course, are as great losers by this lack of understanding as the advertisers themselves.

"If English producers and merchants would adopt similar methods to the American and pay big money to first class men advertising would quickly tell a different story than it does at present. Of course I know that advertising rates are high in England, but the right kind of advertising would be profitable. Profitable advertising would mean more of it, and more advertising would bring down the rates.

"I believe that newspapers make the best medium for publicity of all kinds, because they reach a wider field and results are quicker. Moreover, newspapers exercise a certain supervision over their advertising columns and censor anything that may be fraudulent in character."

LORD MAYOR DENIES HE WAS "BOOED"

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

Sir Vesey Strong, the Lord Mayor of London, has returned to the Mansion House from Vienna with a bad cold in his head, because he had to raise his hat so often in response to the cheering of the crowds as he drove through the streets. He denies the statements of certain correspondents that he was "booed" by the food rioters.

"We were accompanied by ex. own English General who has been in Austria for many years, and I was struck with the wonderful demonstration of friendship. Even the workmen on the buildings would drop their tools, perhaps not reluctantly, and turn round and raise their hats. I could hardly keep my hat on my head there were so many salutes to acknowledge, with the result that I have a cold in my head now."

SAGE AND SULPHUR CURES DANDRUFF

Restores Faded and Gray Hair to Natural Color—Itching Scalp Quickly Stopped,

This applies to Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, for if it does not do exactly what is claimed for it, the sales would naturally drop off. However, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy does "make good," as evidenced by its daily increasing sales. Druggists say that this preparation gives the best satisfaction of any hair remedy ever sold. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It removes dandruff, strengthens the hair, gives new life to dull or parched hair, and gradually restores gray hair to natural color.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

WILL NOT EXPEL THEM.

Italians Will Be Allowed to Remain In Turkey.

Rome, Oct. 10.—It is semi-officially announced that, following the intervention of the German ambassador the Ottoman Government suspended the order for the expulsion of Italians from Turkey. It is expected that the Government will now abandon the measure altogether.

Must Know Conditions.

Berlin, Oct. 10.—The Cologne Gazetter, in an inspired Berlin despatch says that the Turkish note cannot be complied with until the conditions are named, whereupon the cessation of hostilities might be successfully attempted.

It is assumed that Turkey finally will declare her readiness to turn over Tripoli to Italy, while retaining the external signs of power, and that Italy will interpose no stout resistance to peace negotiations.

Should Omit Grain.

Constantinople, Oct. 10.—The German ambassador is urging the Porte to publish a definite statement as to what articles will be treated as contraband of war, and advising the exclusion of cereals from the list, on the ground that to make cereals contraband would offend Russia and Great Britain, but not seriously affect Italy.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

David Copper, a leading business man of Welland, is dead.

Britain's latest and largest Dreadnought was launched yesterday.

Mr. Borden will submit the names of his new Ministry to Earl Grey to-day.

Natural gas and petroleum have been struck in Delaware Township, near London, Ont.

Alfred Meaken, who escaped from the Central Prison, has been captured at London, Ont.

J. W. Dick of Toronto died from the injuries he received Saturday evening at the hands of an unknown man.

Two men were killed as the result of a premature blast at a cutting on the new C.N.R. at Colwood, B.C., yesterday.

A special trolley car jumped the track on the Gray's Ferry Bridge, Philadelphia. The motorman was drowned.

Victoria University observed its 75th anniversary by conferring honorary degrees on a number of conference delegates.

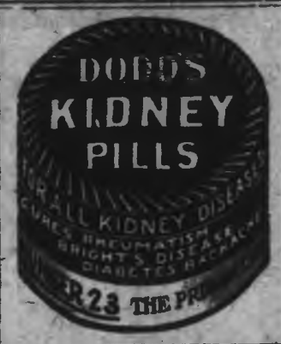
Cornelius N. Bliss, former U. S. Secretary of the Interior, and ex-treasurer of the Republican national committee, died in New York yesterday.

Harry Hall, a driver for the Canadian Express Co. at Hamilton, has been driven out of his mind over the recent robbery in which $8,000 was stolen.

The Danish steamer Canadia arrived in Buenos Ayres from Gulfport via St. Thomas, has had an outbreak of fire in her bunkers, and the fire has spread to her cargo.

The derelict steamship A. L. Hopkin, abandoned by her crew in Lake Superior ten days ago, has been sighted awash in the track of navigation between Ashland and Keewenaw Point.

The old stepping-stone, which for 700 years stood in the public square in Hingham, England, was presented to Hingham, Mass, last night in honor of the people of the English village, by Hon. James Bryce.



Home Rule Fight Begins.

London, Oct. 10.—Right Hon. Walter Long, in opening his anti-home rule campaign at Darlington yesterday, pointed out that self-government upon the lines of Canada and Australia meant virtual separation. Couldn't Canada to-morrow, if it choose to do so, throw off the British flag? They knew perfectly well that all the soldiers and sailors in the world, and all statesmen could not prevent Canada, Australia or South Africa taking their own line.

These great colonies had no intention of doing anything of the kind, for they love the Mother Country, and meant to stand by her. That was true, but wise people ought not to be content with securities of that kind in certain circumstances. They would regret it with bitter tears if Canada or Australia or the Union of South Africa were to leave the Mother Country, but it would not interfere with the security of her defence.

But was it so with Ireland? Could they regard the prospect of the separation of Ireland with the same comparative equanimity as they do that of the colonies? Ireland was part of themselves. She was as much a part of the Mother Country as Lancashire or Yorkshire or Durham.

A Big Difference.

Washington, Oct. 10.—A discrepancy of over $3,288,271 between the material on hand and that called for by the books of the Washington navy yard was shown by the inventory of that yard just completed, according to an announcement by Secretary of the Navy Meyer yesterday. This is the first inventory of record made at this yard within the last 25 years.

The Navy Department officials stated explicitly that there was no indication whatever that moral turptitude was involved in the discrepancy and that it undoubtedly was due to the antiquated bookkeeping methods.

To Improve the Service.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Mr. Stephen Furness, brother of Lord Furness, and general manager of the Manchester Lines, Ltd., arived here on Saturday by the Allan Line steamer Victorian. Mr. Furness expected a big improvement in the trade of the company with the port of Montreal, and the object of his visit is to investigate facilitiesm for an additional Manchester steamer.

The Rye House Plot.

The famous Rye House plot to assassinate the English king in 1683 miscarried from the merest accident. The house in which Charles II. was staying happening to catch fire, he was obliged to leave for Newmarket a little sooner than he had intended.

Bread.

Bread is said to have been first introduced by Ching Noung, who taught Chinamen the art of making it about the year 1998 B. C.

Barley.

Barley is the most widely cultivated of all cereals.

Wax Candles.

When wax candles become discolored through keeping they may be restored by being rubbed over with a clean flannel slightly dipped in spirits of wine.

Rise and Fall of a Barber.

Sometimes the barber to the king succeeded in playing an important part in the state by gaining the royal confidence. Most notable instance of this was Peter of Brusse, at first barber and then prime minister to Philip the Bold of France. He was afterward hanged for his abuse of power.

THE SEAL CROP.

Fur-Hunting Is One of Newfoundland's Big Industries.

The treaty recently concluded between the United States, Great Britain, Russia, and Japan, prohibiting pelagic sealing for sixteen years, should naturally result in an appreciable increase in the value of the skins of these creatures by lessening the supply, and a most probable result will be the seeking of substitutes. Among the most likely articles to be used for this purpose will be the skins of the hair seal which are principally taken in Newfoundland waters every spring, and which are at the present time, chiefly used for making leather.

The skin of the hair seal, as its name would imply, is covered with long, dark, stiff hairs, but closely adhering to the skin is a furry covering which makes it not possible to convert the pelts to the uses to which the skins of the fur seal are now applied, namely, the making of fur coats for ladies, etc. Hitherto, however, the compartive abundance of fur seals made it unprofitable to utilize the Newfoundland sealskins for this purpose very extensively, even though a fur seal pelt is worth about $20, and that of a hair seal only about $2. Shortly, though, it is expected that there will be a radical change in these conditions, and that a new market will be created for the Terranovan (Nfld.) article, which will much increase its value and cause a more extensive prosecution of the sealing industry in the waters of this colony.

Few enterprises prosecuted at present, afford greater inducements for outside capital to invest therein than does the Newfoundland seal fishery, which yields those operating it now from 20 to 30 per cent. annually and which ranks second in importance among the seafaring occupations of the people of this colony. It is prosecuted in March and April of each year by a fleet of twenty steamers, crewed by 4,000 men; and its product is about 300,000 "pelts"—hide and fat—yielding as many skins and about 5,000 tons of oil, the export value of each being over $500,000, so that this industry really represents the garnering of a million dollars within the brief space of two months each year.

The seal fishery begins the industrial year in Newfoundland, and is reckoned of double importance—for its intrinsic value, and for the impetus a successful quest imparts to the other occupations which follow later in the season. The adult male population of the island is about 40,000, and as 4,000 are engaged in the seal hunt, practically every family has a relative among the sealers. Thus it is that the return of the first ship is counted among the chief events of the year; thousands throng the wharves to cheer her as she enters St. John's harbor, and the news she brings is speedily wired to every section of the colony.

The industry is a peculiarly perilous one, and is attended with excitement and adventure, such as few other pursuits provide. From the departure of the fleet to the ice-fields, until the return of the first ships, two or three weeks later, personal anxiety is intense throughout the colony, because the venture is associated with such frequent dire disasters that another catastrophe is always dreaded. Scarcely a season passed without some gruesome tragedy, and it is not surprising that anxious hearts should eagerly await the news from the earliest homecomer.

England's Nobility.

The nobility of England date their creation from 1066.

One of Sterne's.

"God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" is not a Scriptural quotation. The sentence is taken from "The Sentimental Journey," by the Rev. Laurence Sterne.

An Author's Slip.

Rider Haggard committed a queer blunder in "Jess." A simple matter of arithmetic upon the data supplied by the novel itself shows that a character therein had grown up and become the father of two children before he was in his teens.

Korean Mourning.

Koreans wear full mourning for their fathers. The dress is of hemp cloth, with a hempen girdle. A face shield is used to show that the wearer is a sinner and must not speak to any one unless addressed. The costume is retained for three years, the shield for three months. This is worn for a father only. Secondary mourning is worn for a mother and no mourning at all for a wife.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Evening up of trades to be prepared for the government crop report rallied the wheat market to-day from depression, due to better weather northwest. The close was a shade to 1-8c higher than Saturday night. Corn showed a net loss of 1-8c to 1-4c to 1-4c to 3-8c; oats finished a sixteenth off to a like amount up, and hog products varied from 2 1-2c decline to an equal advance.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d higher to ½d lower than Saturday on wheat, and ¾d lower on corn. Antwerp wheat closed unchanged, Berlin ⅛c lower, Paris ⅛c to ¼c higher, and Budapest ⅛c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 9.—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat, and the prices bid continue away out of line. The local and outside demand for oats is fair at steady prices, but there is no business doing for export account.

Flour is firm under a good local demand, but business for export account was quiet. Demand for bran and shorts is good.

Lard—Compound tierces, 375 lbs., 9¼c; boxes, 60 lbs. net (parchment lined), 9¾c; tubs, 50 lbs. net, grained, two handles, 9¾c; pails, wood, 20 lbs. net, 9¾c; tin pails, 20 lbs. gross, 9¾c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 95 carloads, consisting of 1866 cattle, 643 hogs, 331 sheep and lambs, 45 calves and 4 horses.

Exporters.

Export steers sold at from $6.85 to $6.90; export bulls sold at from $5 to $5.50.

Butchers

Prime picked lots of butchers sold at $6.20 to $6.30; loads of good at $6.00 to $6.35; medium, $5.30 to $5.55; common, $4.50 to $5.25; cows, $3 to $5.25; bulls, $3.50 to $4.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders, $4.50 to $5; stockers, $3.50 to $4.30.

Milkers and Springers

A limited number of milkers and springers sold at $40 to $65 each.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold at from $4 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep sold at from $3.50 to $3.85; lambs, $5 to $5.65; average price, $5.50.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston, for Gunns (Limited) quoted selects, fed and watered, at $6.40, and $6.15 f.o.b. cars.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 9.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 7 were 2250 cattle, 2375 sheep and lambs, 6150 hogs and 900 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1400 cattle, 2400 sheep and lambs, 1950 hogs and 850 calves.

Owing to the increased supplies of cattle, and especially so from the Canadian Northwest, a weaker feeling developed in week show a decline of 25c per 100 pounds, the market, and prices since this day but even at this reduction butchers considered that they were too high, when the quality of the stock offered was taken into consideration. Some of them found it difficult to fill their wants with the right class of cattle, and stated that they would rather pay 4c per pound more and get the quality, as they dressed out far better.

The gathering of buyers was large, and the demand was good, consequently a fairly active trade was done. A few full loads of steers and heifers, mixed, sold at $6.80 per 100 pounds, and picked lots of choice steers brought 6¼c; good, 5¾c to 6c; fairly good, 5½c to 5¾c; fair, 5c to 5¼c, and common, 4½c to 4¾c per pound.

The weak feeling which has characterized the market for hogs for the past month still continues to be the main feature of this branch of the trade, on account of the liberal supplies coming forward, and the lower prices ruling through the country, and in sympathy with the same prices here to-day were 10c to 25c per 100 pounds, lower than they were last Wednesday.

The demand from packers was good at the above reduction, and sales of selected lots were made at $6.50 to $6.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Heavy hogs and sows sold for $1 per 100 pounds less than the above prices.

Owing to the increased receipts of sheep and lambs, the tone of the market this morning was weaker, and prices declined 10c to 15c per 100 pounds. The demand was fairly good, and sales of choice lambs were made at $5.90 to $6.00, and sheep at $3.65 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. The supply of calves was larger, for which the demand was good, and prices were maintained at $5 to $15 each, as to size, quality, etc.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 9.—Cattle—Receipts, 4275 head; market active and firm; price steers, $7.25 to $7.50; butcher grades, $6 to $6.75; cows, $3 to $5.

Calves—Receipts, 1500 head; market active and steady; cull to choice, $5 to $10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 26,000 head; market opened firm, closed weak; choice lambs, $6.80 to $6.90; cull to fair, $5 to $6.50; yearlings, $4.50 to $5; sheep, $3 to $4.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 16,150; market active, 15c to 20c higher; yorkers, $7 to $7.05; stags, $5 to $5.25; pigs, $6.50 to $6.60; mixed, $7.05 to $7.10; heavy, $7.20; roughs, $5.50 to $5.90.

Charged With Manslaughter.

Quebec, Oct. 10.—Judge Angers has returned from Rimouski, where, on Saturday Eugene Banville was placed under arrest and brought before him to answer the charge of manslaughter. It will be remembered that an English impressario, named Causton, manager for Mark Hambourg, the pianist, was shot and killed while boarding a train at Rimouski for Halifax. Banville admitted having fired a shot into the air at a political demonstration at the time. Preliminary investigation will open on the 19th inst.

Preston to Attend Durbar.

Brantford, Oct. 10.—T. H. Preston of The Expositor announced here yesterday that the circumstances which rendered his going to the Royal Durbar at Delhi as the representative of the Canadian newspapers improbable, had been in part removed and that he would likely make the trip. The Dominion Government will pay Mr. Preston's expenses.

Colored Porter Indicted.

Chatham, Oct. 10.—At the fall assizes which opened here yesterday before Hon. Mr. Justice Falconbridge, the grand jury brought in a true bill for murder against Charles Hurst, the colored porter, who is charged with slaying of Thomas Brown (white) on August 1 last. Hurst's trial will proceed to-day. O. L. Lewis, K.C., will act for the defence, and William Meredith, K.C., of London, will be crown counsel. The killing of Brown came as a tragic climax to the last emancipation celebration held in Chatham. At the inquest witnesses testified that Hurst beat the white man over the head with his fists till he fell to the ground. Brown afterwards died from fractures of the skull.

The grand jury will be next asked to consider the depositions in the case of Rex v. Thomas Griffith, for the alleged murder of his brother-in-law, Orlando Arnold. Arnold died from injuries claimed to have been inflicted in an assault upon him by Griffith on July 13 last. If a true bill is brought in this case, Griffith will get his trial at the spring assizes.

Caused by Children.

New York, Oct. 10.—Two thousand violations of the fire regulations were committed in the ten-storey building in Washington place, where 145 employes of the Triangle Waist Co. lost their lives by fire last fall, it has been disclosed by prolonged investigation, it is charged by chief of the fire department. He made the charges before the budget committee of the board of estimates in a plea for increased appropriations.

Fire Commissioner Johnson desires to establish a bureau of fire prevention. He said that the majority of fires were due to the ignorance of the foreign population of the city. "Matches," he said, "cause 2,000 fires a year. Parents allow their children to play with fire, and they are not educated to the danger. And we have a larger number of incendiary fires than the public has any idea of." He asked for an appropriation of $3,900.

Strike on G.T.P.

Winnipeg, Oct. 10.—Three hundred and fifty Grand Trunk Pacific machinists and boilermakers between Westfort, Ont., and Edson, Alta., will go on strike to-day, their claim being for an equal scale with similar trades of the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern Railways, which is nine hours at 45 1-2 cents an hour. A board of conciliation was formed a couple of months ago, consisting of Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Toronto, for the company; T. J. Murray, Winnipeg, for the men, and Dr. Sparling, Winnipeg, chairman.

Mr. Nesbitt has never attended and has twice resigned.

Dr. Sparling wired Premier Borden yesterday, asking for another appointment in Nesbitt's stead.

Black Letter Days.

Unlucky days were marked by the Romans with a piece of charcoal and lucky ones with a bit of white chalk, hence the expression "black letter days," meaning days of misfortune.

First Army Corps of Italy's Forces of Occupation of Tripoli Are Now Strongly Entrenched

MORE ON THE WAY

Special Wire to the Examiner.

ROME, OCT. 10.—News was received here that the first army corps of Italy's forces of occupation, arrived safely in Tripoli and have landed at Tobruk without material resistance. They have thrown up earthworks and made the position apparently secure against any inland army of Turks, which may make onslaught. Thirty thousand more troops are now on the Mediterranean for Tripoli.

CABINET SWORN IN

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, OCT. 10.—Promptly at midday seven cabs, containing the new Cabinet Ministers, drove up to Rideau House, and were sworn in by the Governor-General. The ceremony was notable for the democratic simplicity. Some of the members didn't even wear silk hats and frock coats. It was over in a few minutes.

BURNED TO DEATH BY BLACK HAND

ANGLICANS IN MAJORITY

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, OCT. 10.—The Anglicans in the new cabinet are Borden, Hazen, Perley, Rogers, Roche, Burrell and Lougheed. The Methodists are Cochrane, Crothers, Kemp, White, Hughes and Reid. The Roman Catholics are Monk, Pelletier, Wantel and Doherty, while Foster is a Baptist. It is understood that Frank Cochrane will obtain a seat in East Elgin.

How to Grow Hair

It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

This preparation is called SALVIA and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair dressing. Warne's drug store, your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into Peterborough, and a large, generous bottle, can be procured for 50c.

BOARD OF HEALTH TO URGE THE APPOINTMENT OF AN INSPECTOR

At Meeting This Morning They Decided to Have a Deputation Wait Upon the City Council—No Deaths From Infectious Diseases.

WATER REPORTED PURE

At a meeting of the Board of Health this morning, Dr. McPherson, M. H. O., reported that the city water, at present, is in a first-class condition; showing no signs of infection. He gave the following report on the infectious diseases:

	Dip.	Sc. F.	S.Pox	Typ'd.	Deaths
June	2	4	0	0	0
July	0	1	1	1	0
Aug.	0	3	0	3	0
Sept.	0	4	0	3	0

The question of the payment of salaries for the nurses for the smallpox cases came up. Dr. McPherson thought that it should be arranged in a manner so that nurses would not have to wait so long for their money. It was moved and seconded that nurses, etc., would be paid upon the recommendation of the M. H. O. and chairman of the Board, Dr. McNulty.

Mr. John Carlisle will be requested to have his terrace on Cricket Place connected with the sewer.

Dr. McNulty said that the two most important matters before the Board, at present, was the appointment of a Sanitary Inspector and the passing of the Garbage By-law. It was arranged that a deputation from the Board wait upon the Council and urge the passing of the measures thought necessary.

The rate for patients in the Isolation Hospital was fixed at $2.50 per day.

TORONTO CONSERVATIVES ARE BITTER OVER THE APPOINTMENT OF W. T. WHITE

TORONTO, OCT. 10.—This morning it is all comment on the cabinet in this city. There is no mistaking the fact that old Conservatives are still bitter about the appointment of W. White, Minister of Finance. A seat must be found for him. It is thought here that he will run in Halton, where he was born, and that David Henderson, the sitting member, will be appointed to the Senate. Halton is next door to Toronto and there is a serious proposition on the part of some angry Tories here to run over and beat him, if they can, in his bye-election, Hamilton and London, who both supported Borden strong, are rather disappointed at being overlooked and declare to-day that Toronto is more than ever entitled to be called "hog town," having cinched for Cabinet seats for itself, namely, Cochrane, White, Foster and Kemp, and letting all the rest of populous Western Ontario go unrepresented in the Supreme Council of the Dominion.

The Toronto Star says, editorially, to-day, that the Alliance between Borden and the Nationalists is apparent in the formation of the Cabinet. Monk, Natel, Pelletier, all three Nationalists, are taken into the Cabinet. To Mr. Monk goes the spending department of Public Works.

The fact of these appointments is so significant as to require no comment. It remains to be seen whether the Nationalist programme of referendum will be carried out, or whether Mr. Borden will adopt and extend the policy of his predecessor. The country is so strong and prosperous, however, concluded the Star, that a few errors in Cabinet making will not be followed by calamity.

THE MISSING GIRL HAS BEEN DISCOVERED

Little Mary Weaver Whose Disappearance From Her Foster Home in Smith Caused Considerable Comment, Turns Up.

NOW AT THE HOME

In order to throw some light on the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mary Weaver, of Smith Township, the facts of which appeared in these columns a few days days ago, The Examiner visited the home of Mr. William Mathews yesterday, where it was learned that the whereabouts of the girl had been discovered.

It appears that the girl had been accustomed to visiting a near-by neighbour quite frequently, finally becoming so enamoured with the place that she thought that it would be a good idea to move over. This she did about two weeks ago, leaving no information or clew with her former employer, Mr. Mathews, as to her whereabouts. Mr. Matthews naturally became very much alarmed; a search party was at once instituted, and the adjacent country was scoured, including the creek, but to no avail. The Sunday following, during Mr. Matthews' absence, the girl made her way back to her former home, and removed some clothing which she had there. This aroused Mr. Matthews' suspicions, believing that the girl had been enticed away by the neighbour in question. He visited the house, but they denied having seen her. One week passed away, and the following Sunday she repeated the same performance, this time removing a pair of new shoes belonging to her, from her former employer's home, during the absence of the household. This confirmed Mr. Matthews' suspicion, and he at once communicated with the authorities of the Margaret Cox Home, Peterborough, of which the girl was a ward. On Saturday an official of the institution drove out and secured possession of the girl, and she was removed to the city.

Mr. Matthews does not attach any particular blame to the party who secreted the girl, as it was partly at the girl's own inclination that she left her former employer.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF METHODIST W.M.S. HELD

Gathering of Representatives of Various Societies Took Place Yesterday in Stewart's School House, Otonabee ---Splendid Papers Were Read and Sessions Were Interesting and Profitable.

The annual district convention of the Peterborough branch of the W.M.S. of the Methodist church, was held in Stewart's schoolhouse, Otonabee, yesterday. The attendance was a large one and the interest evinced was great.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock by devotional exercises by Mrs. (Rev.) Craig, of Ashburnham, after which very satisfactory reports were received from all the different societies of Mission Circles and Bands. The reading of some very excellent papers followed, namely:

Mrs. John Carlisle, of George street Auxiliary, "Work Among the Galatians."

Mrs. Finney, of Bensfort, "What the W.M.S. women of this country owe to Christianity."

Mrs. Walsh of Fairmount, "The Watch Tower."

Mrs. (Rev.) Couch, "The Importance of Crusade Day."

Mrs. Hanbridge, of Otonabee, "Systematic and Proportionate Giving."

After this paper, Mrs. Morrison led a discussion on the subject.

Mrs. Rev. Henderson, "A Talk on Our Work in China."

The reading of the papers was interspersed with two charming solos by Mrs. (Rev.) Ireland of Bridgenorth. Mrs. Ireland is a vocalist of exceptional ability and her contributions were appreciated by the gathering.

The afternoon session was terminated by a consecration service conducted by Mrs. Thos. Allum of Charlotte street auxiliary.

Evening Session.

The evening session commenced at 7.30 and was opened by devotional exercises by the Rev. Mr. McKenzie of Centreville. An address of welcome was read by Mrs. Fred Collins of Otonabee and ably responded to by Mrs. Sherin of Lakefield.

At this juncture a local trio was rendered by Miss McCamus and Mr. and Mrs. Hanbridge of Otonabee.

The Rev. Mr. Henderson of Charlotte street Methodist church, gave an address on general missionary work, the fundamental principle of which was the necessity of prayer. After a selection had been given by the Stewart Union choir, the Rev. Mr. Henderson pronounced benediction. The collection for the day amounted to between twelve and fifteen dollars.

The President was Mrs. J. K. Moore.

After the close of the day's business a magnificent entertainment was provided by the Otonabee auxiliary. Although the convention was so large, it was handled with efficiency by the small district auxiliary. A well favoured board was also placed before them and was appreciated by all.

FINAL MEETING OF TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

At the final session of the city teachers, Mr. Frith of the Collegiate staff gave a very interesting and comprehensive talk on "The Development of Chemistry."

The following officers were elected:
Pres.—Mr. Kenner.
Vice-Pres.—Miss Warner.
Sec.-Treas.—L. J. Pettit.

Executive committee — Messrs. Kerr and Stacey, Misses Smith, Thompson, Tomlinson, Perrin, McDonald, Thomas, O'Connell, Sister principals of Sacred Heart and St. Mary's Convent, superintendent of Separate schools and inspector of Public schools.

Representatives to O. E. A.— Miss Staples and Mr. Walkey.

MR. WILLIAM O. LIDGATE WELL KNOWN HERE IS DEAD

The many friends of Mr. William O. Lidgate of Pasuilo, Hawaiian Islands, will learn with deep regret of his sudden death at Ithica, N.Y., last evening, caused by a severe attack of appendicitis. He was taken suddenly ill on Wednesday last, and underwent an operation. Mr. Lidgate was a third year under graduate at Cornell University, and during the time he attended the University he frequently visited his aunts, Mrs. A. E. Coulthard and Mrs. R. R. Hall, Peterborough. His mother, Mrs. Lidgate recently came to town to visit her mother, Mr. John Ludgate, and his father only arrived in town last week from the Hawaiian Islands, and contemplated making a visit to their son at Ithica before returning to the Islands.

The late Mr. Lidgate was 22 years of age and was taking a very creditable course at the University. He is survived by his father and mother, and by his brother, Kenneth, and his two sisters, Misses Elsie and Dora.

The deceased's remains are being brought to Peterborough and will arrive on the midnight train. It is expected that the funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon, from the residence of Mr. A. E. Coulthard, 210 McDonnell street.

BIRTHS.

SCHNEIDER.—At 170 London street, on Oct. 9th, 1911, the wife of Mr. F. S. Schneider, of a son (still born.)

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Hanford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

Alfred Meaken, Sent Up for Six Months, Managed to Get Out of Toronto Institution, But Was Nailed By London Police.

WELL KNOWN HERE

LONDON, ONT., OCT. 10.—Alfred Meaken, who was arrested at Peterborough last spring and sent to the Central Prison for highway robbery with violence, and who broke out of that institution last week, is under arrest here. He was seen on the street and recognized by Detective Down. He was partly intoxicated at the time, and a charge of drunkenness was laid against him. When closely questioned to-day he confessed that he was the man wanted.

Warden Gilmour of the Central Prison said last night that he had not been officially notified of the capture. He had every reason to believe, however, that Meaken was the man who had escaped, together with one named William Macdonald, who was recaptured and sentenced to another term of two years. Dr. Gilmour had communicated with the Chief of Police at London, and was waiting to hear from him.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH

This Offer Should Be a Warning to Every Man and Woman.

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable.

His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Every one who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of gastric juices, lack of tone in the walls of the [illegible]h. The result is that the stomach [illegible]es its power to digest food.

We are now able to supply certain missing elements — to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependable remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

RE FORESTRY IN PETERBORO' COUNTY

On Friday next Prof. Fernow, Professor of Forestry in Toronto University, forestry adviser of the Government, and late expert employed by the U. S. Government in its extensive reforesting schemes, will arrive in the city and proceed to the Northern part of the County of Peterborough, to investigate the possibilities for reforestry there. The northern part of Peterborough County is rapidly being cleared of its timber and is becoming waste, or second growth, useless at present for all commercial purposes, or a waste of arid land. Mr. Burnham, M.P., has invited Prof. Fernow to accompany him on a prospecting tour with a view to a report to the Government and the adoption of some plan of reforestring.

CONDITION SERIOUS

Mrs. James Stratton, Gilmour St., has received word of her brother's serious illness at his home in New Westminster, Mr. W. J. Armstrong was stricken with paralysis a few weeks ago, and as he is in his 86th year, his physicians hold out little hope for his recovery.

Mr. Armstrong, with his parents, left Cavan for British Columbia over 60 years ago. He is two years younger than his sister, Mrs. Stratton and Mr. Armstrong are the last remaining members of the family.

VIEWS OF LOCK

C. P. R. Men This Afternoon Taking Motion Pictures of Peterborough's Famous Lift Lock in Operation

TO BE SENT TO ENGLAND

Peterborough's famous lift-lock will be shown to the people of England by the kinetoscope, as the result of the visit to the city to-day of two representatives of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who are here for the purpose of taking motion pictures of th celebrated structure in operation. Arrangements had been made with the Trent Canal officials to have the lock operated and this afternoon pictures were taken of the steamer Geneva, being lifted from the lower to the upper reach of the Canal and of the tug Ajax being lowered. The pictures will be displayed by the C. P. R. in England, and should prove a big advertisement for Peterborough.

MARVELLOUS DISCOVERY

An exhibit of more than usual interest, which is attracting the attention of hundreds of citizens, is now to be seen on the premises formerly occupied by the Boston Cafe, 410 George street. There you will see in the stern and solemn democracy of death, the remains of an Alaskan Eskimo. Medical authorities state that they have never seen a body petrified, mummified or otherwise, in a more remarkable state of preservation than this one. The flesh and skin are quite pliable and that the body is intact, is indicated by the presence of the internal organs, as well as the hair on the head, eyebrows, etc. Medical authorities assert that this remarkable state of preservation is due to the presence of certain gases which were in the cave in which the body was found. The body is that of a man, large of stature, and judging by the worn condition of the teeth, that of one advanced in years.

The price of admission is 10c. The ladies are invited to see this wonderful exhibit as well as the children, as there is nothing immodest whatever in the exibit.

Official Board Held Meeting

Last night the official board of George Street Methodist Church met in the Church parlour, to talk over matters for the coming season's work. There was a large attendance; larger than usual. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Couch, presided, and a most optimistic spirit prevailed. The officers were deeply interested and spoke in feeling terms of their gratitude to God for the way in which they had been led, and felt that they should plan for a still larger work. Each man seemed to have the Church at heart and there was manifested a strong desire to do everything to make the people feel at home in this large and growing congregation. While it may be difficult at times to obtain pews, yet the Board wish strangers to feel at home in any pew. All are heartily welcome. The choir is doing grandly under the able leadership of Mr. Renwick. Special committees were appointed to inaugurate a forward movement along missionary and other lines. They are anxious to keep their pastor to lead them on. After three hours' deliberation the Board adjourned, encouraged, and felt they had had one of the best business meetings in the history of their church.—Com.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It was [illegible] to me that the activity of the Hotel keepers in the last election was anything but decent. Night and day they pursued the Liberals, as a wolf would a human being, and although the election is two weeks past, they are not satisfied with their work, but they seem to be full of boasting of what they did. In view of the activity of the hotel keepers, in Peterborough, in the last election, I would suggest that they be struck, in the binding of the licenses, "as active partisans," and consequently not worthy of recognition. The band had better serenade these gentlemen once more.

Yours truly,
A Voter.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy Frank caught cold, chest, and took a very severe case," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Wingham, Ont. No treatment is as thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

TUESDAY, OCT. 10, 1911

HON. SAM HUGHES.

The Examiner heartily congratulates Hon. Sam Hughes on his selection as Minister of Militia in the Borden government. He is to be congratulated on personal political and military grounds. He is a thoroughly good fellow personally; as a political force he is one of the veterans of the cabinet, his representative experience being exceeded by only that of Hon G. E. Foster. The Hon. Sam has been a member of the House for fifteen years, while Mr. Foster has almost continuously been in the House since 1882. If Hon. Mr. Hughes make as good an administrator as he has shown himself to be, as a practical exponent of military matters, he will fill the bill well. For us it is with no small consideration that he represents more directly the Midland district than the rest of the Dominion, and we may expect that in respect of local military matters, the minister's official interest will be invested with a little more extra personal and local solicitude. We may, therefore, reasonably expect that the new rifle range for the Fifty-seventh, staked out by the late Minister of Militia and the late member for West Peterborough, will soon be put into commission ;and become the scene of new triumphs of the Ross rifle, of which the new minister, in his representative capacity, has been a warm champion.

A COALITION CABINET.

After all the pother of the elections, and of the great Conservative victory, and the "Conservatives coming to their own" by fifty of a majority, we are to have a coalition government after all. A coalition is the voluntary association of members of different political parties to carry on a government and carry out a policy. Mr. Borden is only half Conservative—about all that is good in him in the matter of political principles, is the saving remnant of Liberal principles, not entirely overlaid by the new principles he espoused when he left the Liberal party to become a Conservative. And Mr. Borden has selected for the chief member of his cabinet—the kingpin—the Minister of Finance, a Liberal, in the person of Mr. William T. White, of Toronto. Mr. Borden wants to have at least one "white" minister in his cabinet. Mr. White has as yet "no mandate" from the people to assume this high responsibility; he has not even a seat in the House; but that can be easily arranged. Still the most self-sacrificing Tory will give up his seat with a wry face to a Grit, and Conservative electors will have to feel a pretty sharp sting of the party whip to make them vote for a Grit. By the way, it is a great tribute to Liberals that Mr. Borden has to go outside the ranks of his own party following-elect ,for a finance minister. But his action is quite natural. A Liberal finance minister has for the past fifteen years set a pace that Mr. Borden practcially acknowledges, cannot be kept up without putting another Liberal "on the job." '

BORDEN MAKES HIS CABINET.

Hon. Mr. Borden, Premier of Canada, has completed his cabinet and has submitted its personnel, to the Governor-General, who has approved it—as he was constitutionally bound to do. If he had been compelled to base his approval upon merit, he would have had as much difficulty to arrive at a decision as have the majority of Canadians. Only four of the members of the new cabinet have had administrative experience, and of these the experience of three has been confined to provincial cabinet positions. Only one member of the cabinet, Mr. Foster, has ever been a Dominion minister. All the others are new and untried men, and most of them with a parliamentary term of only two or three years, and two of them without seats in the House. Hon. W. T. White and Hon. Frank Cochrane.

The cabinet of Mr. Borden does not possess any phenomenal overweight of statesmanship, but it is as strong as can be expected of a cabinet of compromise, where reconcilement of factions and satisfaction of special ambitions and deference to special interests were more deciding factors, than the selection of ministers of the greatest parliamentary ability and administrative promise. It would be evidently premature to pronounce strongly on either the merits or demerits of Canada's new government. All Canadians will vote for giving it a fair chance, with the hope that it will develop greater strength of statesmanship and capacity, for good administration, than is, at first, sight, apparent on the surface.

PROVINCIAL GENERAL ELECTIONS.

The probabilities are that there will be a provincial general election in the near future. Sir James Whitney seems to think that the business interests of the country demand that he should dissolve the Legislature and have the turmoil of a general election right on the heels of last month's contest. It would help business so much. We know or are convinced that the late election put a good deal of money into circulation, one way and the other, especially the other. Sir James does not trust altogether to the virtues of his regime and policy to secure him endorsation in a general election. He wants the moral force of the Conservative victory of last month to help him.

At any rate there seems to be a reasonable certainty of a general election before long, and the Liberals of West Peterborough should be preparing to bring a candidate into the field. The Conservatives have already nominated a candidate; and, estimable a man as he is, professionally and personally, he should not, for the sake of the bad political company he keeps, be returned unopposed, if he be returned at all. It depends upon the action of the Liberals whether he shall have a walk-over, or walk the plank. Speaking of candidates, it is rumoured that a three-cornered fight may be brought on by the nomination of a Labour candidate. The Labour element is strong in Peterborough, and showed its ability in the recent election to range itself pretty strongly upon the winning side. If it should vote for itself as strongly as it votes for the party that has never done anything, to speak of, in the interests of labour, West Peterborough might send a Labour member to keep the solitary Mr. Allan Studholme, of East Hamilton, company in the Legislative halls in Queen's Park.

A LABOUR CREED.

At the great ecumenical Conference at Toronto, in an address, ex-Vice President Fairbanks of the United States, formulated the Methodist Labour creed as follows:

"The Methodist Episcopal church (corresponding to Methodist church in Canada) stands:

(1) "For equal right and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.

(2) "For the principle of conciliation and arbitration in industrial dissensions.

(3) For the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational diseases, injuries and mortality .

(4) "For the abolition of child labour.

(5) "For such regulation of the conditions of labour for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

(6) "For the suppression of the "sweating system."

(7) For the gradual and reasonable reduction of thehours of labour to the lowest practical point, with work for all; and for that degree of leisure for all which is the condition of the highest human life.

(8) For release from employment one day in seven.

(9) For a living wage in every industry .

(10) "For the highest wage that each industry can afford, and for the most equitable division of the products of industry that can ultimately be devised.

(11) "For the recognition of the golden rule, and the mind of Christ as the supreme law of society and the sure remedy for all social ills."

Whatever may be the conditions in the United States, many of the demands in the above list have been met in Canada. That is, their principle has been legislatively recognized and laws, based upon them, enacted. The Dominion Parliament has passed laws recognizing the principle of arbitration and conciliation in the settlement of industrial disputes. The Legislature of Ontario has laws providing for the protection of workmen from dangerous machinery. Child labour is discouraged by law. As far as the Canadian Government has power, the "sweating system" is abolished—made unlawful. We have general cessation from labour on Sundays. The other features of what "the Methodist Church stands for" leaves something for that church and other churches to do. The first and the last paragraphs (No. 1 and 11) are demands that can only partially be met by human regulation. Beyond the limited power of human law, the moral law must be brought into operation. When the churches bring about universal recognition of the obligations of the Golden Rule, we shall have "the mind of Christ" in universable influence; we shall then have "equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life" and "a sure remedy for all social ills." There would then be no necessity for the Methodist Episcopal, or the Methodist Church, or any other church, or for anybody to differentiate in terms as between a "labour creed" and the creed of Christianity. Settle the labour question, adjust the rights of labour according to the golden rule and all men, all classes, leisure and labour, high and low, rich and poor, young and old, will come under the influence of the one grand milleniel condition—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them."

Khan Kerneghan's Little Moral Lesson Of The Muezzin

They are making a big fuss in Toronto about the ringing of church bells. It's a pretty how d'ye do that a person can't lie on his back on the sofa on Sunday morning and enjoy the Buffalo Sunday papers on account of the ding-dong-delling on all sides! If the bells were musical, it wouldn't be so bad; but there are all kinds of bells, as the late Mister Poe pointed out—iron bells, particularly big hoarse fellows—she-bung! she-bung—and the little cock-robin bells that go tink-a-tink, tink-a-tank, tink, tank, tank! As Mister Poe beautifully expressed it, there are bells, bells, bells, bells, bells!

The little unspleasantness at Tripoli draws our attention to those wonderful people, the Mahometans. They have no use for bells. They have something better, vastly better; they have the muezzin. Watch him tonight, as he climbs the minaret on the corner of the great market place of Tripoli. Long and Lean, with fiery eyes, and something in his swarthy cheek that beats like a clock. His voice is bugle-like and clear. Watch him as he leaps up the dizzy stairway of the cloud-capped minaret. His feet are bare, his white burnous blows behind him, and as he whirls upward he cries the hour of prayer. There he is at the top, leaning over the eerie balcony, a wild, picturesque figure, and from his pulsing throat he pours out a fierce defiance of the Giaours:

"There is no God but God, and Mahomet is His prophet!"

He whirls a circling curse on all unbelievers, and the eddies spread outward over the roof-tops till they are lost on the echoing deserts and the battleship-bestudded sea.

That fellow is worth a thousand bells, for behold, he hath 'roused the whole city. On the house tops, in the gardens, in the bazaars, in the narrow streets, and out on the Saharan sands uncounted thousands spread their prayer-rugs and bow their heads toward Mecca.

All over the vast territory of Islam it is muezzin, not a bell, that calls the faithful to prayer. Clear and startling, outstripping the trumpet in effectiveness, his majestic voice swells upward and outward morning and evening. There's no tink-a-tunk tank, tank, tunk, about that fellow. He's the real thing, and when he gets too old and feeble to climb the lofty stair, a young human chamois with a voice like a fog-horn kicks off his sandals and Marathons up the minaret. The people of Tripoli have not had our advantages. If Mary Ellen went over there and recited "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night," they would wonder what was the matter with her.

Talking about Tripoli and its little war, why are we so disquieted by a war? There were more people killed in a little town in Pennsylvania the other day than have been killed in this six-ounce -glove Marquis of Queensberry affair in Tripoli. Our greed, our carelessness, our selfishness, our ignorance, our stupidity, kill more people in a minute than the guns and torpedoes and such like kill in a month. War happens only once in a while, but we are "on the job" killing people all the time, and—oh, the irony of it!—we kill an extra lot on holidays. A foreign war is a good thing to draw attention away from the fact that there is a good deal of killing going on at home; not on battlefields, but in the shops and factories and stores, on the farms, in the homes and on the highways.

How would it do to advertise for a good muessin and try him out some Sunday morning from the City Hall tower?

A BIT OF HISTORY.

Another contribution to the history of Canadian politics has been made by the publication of a letter from Sir John A. Macdonald, written in 1890, to Mr. S. J. Ritchie of Akron, Ohio, who was then a strong advocate of reciprocity.

The letter is as follows:

Les Rochers, St. Patrick, Riviere du Loup, July 30, 1890.

PRIVATE—

My Dear Sir,

In answer to your esteemed note of this day I desire to say that I am fully assured that the Parliament of Canada will be ready to take off all the customs duty on coal, ores and lumber, imported from the United States, whenever Congress makes those articles free of duty.

The Canadian Government has already authorized Sir Julian Pauncefote to state to the American Government that they will be prepared to take off the export duty on logs whenever Canadian lumber is admitted into the United States at a reduced rate of $1.50 per thousand board measure.

You are at liberty to show this to such members of Congress or the Government as you please. It should not, for obvious reasons, be published in the press or quoted in Congress.

In the U.S. Tariff Act provision might be made for the making the above-mentioned articles free whenever and so soon as they are made free by the Canadian Parliament. I remain, my dear sir,

Faithfully yours,

(Signed) JOHN A MACDONALD.

S. J. Ritchie, Esq.

It did not require the publication of such a letter to establish the fact that Sir John A. Macdonald was in favour of reciprocity; that fact is almost as familiar as is the fact that he was Premier of Canada.

BERESFORD'S ADVICE.

(Ottawa Free Press)

Lord Charles Beresford ("Condor Charlie") has been telling the Canadian Club of Victoria, B. C., his ideas of what Canada should do in regard to the navy. He insists first upon the fortification of Esquimalt, and its transformation into a great naval base with a fleet unit in the Pacific stationed there, ready for use when the hour of danger comes from the east, and then manifests a confidence in Canada's ability to solve the problem, which may seem to many to be too optimistic. For instance he said:

"We hear a good bit about the Canadian navy. Well, I hear somebody laughing. You should never laugh at such a thing as that. It is going to come all right; everything has got to have a beginning, and you started very well. How you are going to get that navy is your business. As an individual I am never bold enough or impertinent enough to tell another country what they should do, I merely point out what I think might be done, but they have got to do it their way; and you have got to do it your way, and not according to the way the British want it, or any other people want it; if you do it your own way my idea is it will be the best way for you, because you understand your own affairs a great deal better than other people can for you."

That is the right spirit in which to approach the subject. Whether we like it or not, we have got to have some form of naval defence, and it has got to be done by us, and by us alone. We have tackled greater problems than this before, and tackled them successfully. So, we believe, Canada will solve this problem, if she is left alone. Whether it will take the form of the navy as laid down by the Liberal Government, or whether it will mean the creation of a Dreadnought unit for the Pacific, time will tell. We have to do something, and no amount of plebiscites or contributions to the British Admiralty will be satisfactory to the pride of the Canadian people. If they want a navy at all, they want one built in Canada and manned by Canadians.

HE COULD NOT SLEEP AT NIGHTS

Till He Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

Fred. Swanson, of Saskatchewan, sends a message of cheer to those who feel the weariness and discouragement that comes from broken rest.

Macklin, Sask., Oct. 9.—(Special)—Those who suffer from sleepless nights and get up in the morning feeling discouraged will find renewed hope in the statement made by Fred Swanson of this place. He could not sleep at nights. He discovered the cause .It is Kidney trouble. He discovered the cure. It is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Yes," Mr. Swanson says, in an interview regarding his case, "I was troubled with my Kidneys for over a year, so bad that I could not sleep at nights. After using one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. Four boxes removed all my pain, and now I sleep well and I am as strong in my Kidneys as any man."

If the Kidneys are wrong the blood becomes clogged with impurities and natural rest is an impossibility. Strong, healthy Kidneys mean pure blood, new life all over the body and that delightful rest that is the sweetest thing in life. Dodd's Kidney Pills always make strong, healthy Kidneys.

CHANGE OF TRAIN SERVICE

Commencing on October 2nd the Lakefield train service will be changed as follows: The train which has been leaving here at 8.30 a.m. will now leave at 7.00 a.m. and returning will arrive in Peterboro 8.15 a.m. The noon train for Lakefield will leave at 12.20 and returning will arrive Peterboro 5.15 p.m. The evening train is discontinued. The public will be glad to learn that the new service inaugurated this Summer to Port Hope will be maintained throughout the Winter and will thus enable all passengers to leave Toronto at 9.00 a.m. any arrive in Peterboro at mid-day. CONGRATULATIONS

Mr. Milne Hamilton left Monday for Chicago. The Examiner is informed that Mr. Hamilton is to be married on Thursday to Mrs. Ad Ferguson, widow of the late Mr. Ad. Ferguson of Peterborough. After the wedding the happy couple will spend a few months in California, after which they will return to Vancouver, where Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton will reside.

The many friends in Peterborough of the happy couple will join in wishing them happiness and prosperity.

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN FOR A BAD STOMACH

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion in Five Minutes

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or Indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

MADRIGAL CLUB

The first rehearsal of the Conservatory Madrigal Club will be held next Tuesday evening, Oct. 17th in the Conservatory Music Hall at 8 o'clock sharp. The last two seasons the membership has been limited to 60 voices. This year, at the suggestion of the committee, the chorus will be augmented to 100 voices, which will enable the society to take up some standard work. New members wishing to join, kindly make application during the week. Telephone 35.

CITY ATHLETIC CHAMPIONSHIPS WERE DECIDED SATURDAY

Stan. Canniff Retains the Senior Championship---J. Mann, of the T.A.S. Captured the Intermediate Title---Several Records Were Smashed and Events Were a Great Success

Winners 1911.
Howden Trophy,
S. Canniff, Y.M.C.A.
Eastwood Trophy,
J. Mann, T.A.S.
Huycke Cup,
O. Cavanah, Y.M.C.A.
Peck Cup,
G. Phillips, Y.M.C.A.

The above athletes are the champions of the city of Peterborough as returned at the "Howden," "Eastwood," "Huycke" and "Peck" sports at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon last.

The morning broke clear and fine and remained that way until evening. There was a warm sun in the afternoon, and just enough wind to tingle the blood of the athletes. Owing to the deluge of rain and snow on Friday the track was rather soggy and not at all conducive to fast time. The award was also in a very uninviting condition especially for the jumps. Several of the boys got nasty spills, but the only one injured during the meet was Roy Smith. He twisted his hip while running the hundred yards for the Eastwood trophy, and had to drop out of the running.

In spite of the condition of the track and green, there were two of last year's records in the Howden trophy contest broken, and one was equalled. For the Eastwood but five of last year's marks went by the boards, and one was equalled. This was surely a good showing on such a track and field. Canniff, the winner of the senior championship, was responsible for the new marks in his class, while J. Mann, the Eastwood winner, gets the credit for four in his class. M. Huycke taking the running broad jump at 17 feet.

Howden Trophy.

S. Canniff and "Jimmy" McMartin were the rivals for the Howden trophy. The points won by each were: Canniff, 2993 1-4; McMartin, 2980 1-4. As the small difference between the points to the credit of each man show, there was a close race, and not until everything had been finished was the issue decided.

Canniff won the high jump, the shot put, the running broad jump and the 120 yards hurdles, and McMartin, who was first in the 100 yards dash and the half mile walk, was a close second in nearly all the other events.

Canniff, who won last year by a large margin, depends almost entirely upon his jumping ability to win for him. In the high jump he went 5 feet 5 inches, at which he is especially clever. He is not a speedy runner, but he is in the pink of condition and keeps at it for points. His staying powers won him the trophy against McMartin on Saturday.

McMartin, on the other hand, is a fairly good jumper and runner, but he could not touch Canniff in the jumps. There wasn't anything like two men working together, as is often the case in athletics, but every man got points according to what he did.

The following was the work of the competitors in the Howden contests:

100 yards dash—H. Smith and J. McMartin. Time 11 1-5 seconds;; S. Canniff, 11 2-5 seconds.

High jump—S. Canniff, 5 feet 5 inches; J. McMartin, 4 feet 9 inches.

Shot put— S. Canniff, 30 feet 7 inches; J. McMartin, 25 feet 6 1-2 inches; H. Smith, 24 feet 3 inches.

120 yards, hurdles — S. Canniff, 20 2-5 seconds; J. McMartin 20 3-5 seconds; H. Smith, 22 seconds.

1-2 mile walk — J. McMartin, 4 minutes 10 seconds; S. Canniff, 4 minutes, 45 2-5 seconds.

Mile run—H. Smith, 5 minutes 10 seconds; J. McMartin, 5 minutes 8 2-5 seconds; S. Canniff, 6 minutes 14 4-5 seconds.

Eastwood Cup.

St. Peter's T.A.S. rooms will again be the holder of the Eastwood Trophy, which is for boys under eighteen years of age. Last year Nagle Phelan was the winner and on Saturday J. Mann captured it. Phelan was unable to defend it this season on account of an injury to his hip which he received some time ago and Harold Hill, who was hurt at the Collegiate Sports on Thursday last was also scratched. Had Hill, Phelan and Mann met there would surely have been something doing.

Meredith Huycke was second with 1080 points, Mann winning by 2006. Mann can run as well as jump and he made a sorry mess of last season's records, in spite of the sloppy going, setting up four new records in the eight events, while Huycke clipped the fifth and equalled the sixth. There was far more speed shown than last year and had the track and field been drier, there would undoubtedly have even been better time in all the running events.

The following is the order in which the events were pulled off and a record of the manner in which the boys acquitted themselves:

100 yards dash—J. Mann, 11 sec., M. Huckye 11 1-5 sec.

High jump—M. Huycke 4 ft. 8 in., J. Mann 4 ft. 5 in.

Shot put—J. Mann, 35 ft. 7 in., M. Huycke 29 ft. 9 1-2 in.

Broad jump—M. Huycke 17 ft., J. Mann 16 ft. 5 in.

120 yds. hurdles—J. Mann 21 sec., M. Huycke 22 sec.

Mile run—J. Mann, 2 min. 28 sec., M. Huycke 2 min. 32 sec.

Huycke Cup.

The "Huycke Cup," which was presented this season by his Honour Judge Huycke, for boys under sixteen years of age, was won by Orvand Cavanah. There were sixteen competitors, but Cavanah won by 493 points over his nearest competitor, Kenneth Routley.

As Saturday was the first time this trophy had been competed for, the best marks made will stand as the records. Cavanah will be credited with the 100 yard dash (with O. Taylor, who also did it in 11 3-5 sec.); the high jump, shot put, broad jump and 120 yds. hurdles with N. Routley, while C. Taylor has the mark for the 1-4 mile which he made in 1 min.

The first three boys were credited as follows:

100 yards dash—O. Cavanah 11 3-5 sec., K. Routley 11 3-5 sec.

C. Brown 11 4-5 sec.

High jump—O. Cavanah 4 ft. 8 in., C. Crown 4 ft. 5 in., K. Routley 4 ft. 4 in.

Shot put—O. Cavanah 34 ft. 3 in., K. Routley 31 ft. 4 in., C. Brown 31 feet.

Broad jump—O. Cavanah 15 ft. 7 in., K. Routley 15 ft. 5 in., C. Brown 14 ft.

Hurdles 20 4-5 sec., C. Brown 23 3-5 sec.

1-4 mile—K. Routley 1 min., 2 sec., C. Brown 1 min. 2 2-5 sec., O. Cavanah, 1 min. 7 sec.

Peck Cup.

G. Phillips, by a majority of 8 1-2 points over P. Gray, who was second, was the first winner of the Peck trophy, presented by Mr. E. A. Peck for the boys' championship under 14 years of age. As for the Huycke trophy there was a large field of aspirants, no less than seven youngsters competing.

The best mark in each event will be put down as the record as in the Huycke competitions. G. Phillips led for the broad jump and the 220 yards run and was tied in the 100 yards dash, and D. Canniff, brother of the Howden Trophy winner, landed the high jump, while H. Saunders was first in the 120 yards hurdles.

The boys did not make very good time in the running events, but the jumping was good. D. Canniff, brother of S. Canniff, promises to be as good a jumper as the Howden Trophy winner. He cleared 3 ft. 11 in. in the high jump.

100 yds. dash—G. Phillips and P. Gray, 13 sec., D. Canniff 13 1-5 sec.

High jump—D. Canniff 3 ft. 11 in., P. Gray 3 ft. 6 in., G. Phillips 3 ft. 4 in.

Broad jump—G. Phillips 13 ft. 4 in., D. Canniff 13 ft., G. Gray 12 ft. 8 1-2 in.

120 yds. hurdles—G. Phillips and P. Gray 23 1-5 sec., D. Canniff 23 3-5 sec.

220 yds. run—G. Phillips 28 2-5 sec., P. Gray 29 2-5 sec., D. Canniff 30 sec.

McGRAW SAYS TEAM WORK WON RAG FOR GIANTS

PEN SKETCH OF McGRAW

Born in Truxton, N.Y., April 7, 1873.

First professional engagement with Olean New York State league team in 1890.

Became famous as a third baseman under Ned Hanlon, with the Baltimore Orioles.

A member of Hanlon's "Big Four," which was McGraw, Kelly, Keeler and Jennings.

Purchased for $10,000 by Stanley Robinson in 1900, jumping to the American League team in 1901, but after a feud with Ban Johnson during the war days hopped over to New York.

Took charge of a bogus team in Gotham and in ten years has turned out three pennant winners.

ST. LOUIS, OCT. 9.—Who's the man of the hour around the National League circuit?

In chorus, the answer is—John J. McGraw.

He is a scrapper; he's a rowdy and he's a fiery little devil with the flames spurting out of those sharp eyes, but he wins.

And why have the Giants dethroned the Cubs, Pirates, Phillies, and the rest?

Our answer might be Mathewson and your answer might be Marquard or the wonderful speed of the team.

But what do you think is the answer from Muggsy?

Team work is the reason.

From one end of the country we have heard the praise of "Rube" Marquard, and how he has pitched the Giants to the championship; how often "Big Six" has stepped on to the hill just in time to stop the opposition from overcoming the lead of the New Yorkers, and how by a daring steal of second, third or home, the Giants have snatched a close game and turned defeat into victory.

TEAM WORK IS HIS SUCCESS

Team work never was mentioned. It was some individual feat that always featured the work of the Giants, so we have thought.

But Muggsy comes and tells us we are wrong; that it has been the machine of the Giants, working in harmony, and each and every one pulling off something unexpected together that sends the Giants into the world's series with the Athletics.

We met this Muggsy party last week for the first time since the meeting of the minor Leagues in Chicago last November. Then he was scouting around, chatting with the lesser lights and figuring how he was going to win the championship. And he's the same. He wears the same size chapeau and his voice isn't one note higher, denoting no enlargement of the top piece.

So we proceeded to find out what methods come from the McGraw brain and how it was he has been successful where many have failed.

"Looks like a sure thing, this National league stuff for you, doesn't it, Mac?"

"Somewhat, but you can't tell until it's all over. Many a cog has slipped its place before he final turn and you can't tell what may happen," came back Jawn.

NO INDIVIDUAL PRAISE

"A wonderful pitcher, this Marquard, eh? And Matty's getting back to form just at the right time. You wouldn't need more than those two to win for you, would you, Mac?"

"You might think so, and I know Matty and Rube have pitched great ball for me, but there's one point that you scribes and everyone else have overlooked.

"It's team work. I tell you no one can stand on top if he hasn't team work on the club. Sometimes I give a signal from the bench and you'll see the boys move here and there. On a double steal I'll motion for this or that play, but not all the time.

"If you have watched us carefully you'll see the signals shoot around to every member out there on the diamond. Fred will do this; Larry will do that; Josh another thing and so on. They all work together.

"With a man on first I may tell the batter to sacrifice. He sees the infield come rushing in and in a flash slips the hit and run code. Then, instead of laying 'er down he cracks it out. Sometimes everything goes wrong and a double play results.

"But the boys are working together. One never makes a move without the other knowing just what he is going to do. And that's what I have drilled into my players since I became a manager."

"I know, but listen, how is it Mac, you kept Marquard as long as you did especially after he was such a failure for the first two years?"

"When I first saw him work I believed that some day he would be the great pitcher that he is. Why he has the greatest curve ball ever pitched by a left-hander, and speed, whew, none of 'em have anything on him.

"He was nervous when he joined us, and couldn't get going. Then the kid was raw, and had a lot to learn. But when you become disgusted with a player if he doesn't pitch a no-hit game for you the first time, then you'll never develop a winner. Take your time with them, find out their weaknesses and then work with them on the spots that need finishing.

"It is the same way with almost all the boys. Chief Meyers was a big rough fellow; Devore was fast, but he didn't know how to use his speed, and had a bad position at the plate; Snodgrass couldn't come in on a ball when I took the catching regalia off him; Murray had difficulty judging the ones over his head; Fletcher needed seasoning; Merkle couldn't dip up the low ones and others were shy several points. So it was up to me to correct these faults."

All the time Mack was telling of this we tried to edge our way through a conversation on the world's series and to find out just what Muggsy is going to do against the Athletics. Finally we cut in.

"Gee, but a lot of us never think of such little tricks as that. Well, it will be you and Connie Mack again."

"We would just as soon play the Athletics as any of them. Fine team Connie has this year, isn't it? Looks pretty, but they'll get the best we have," came in Muggsy.

"How are you going to line up your bunch?" we asked; "Matty in the first or Marquard?"

"That all depends on how they go from now on. Little far away, but just as soon as the flag is settled on them I'm going to rest Matty and Rube. This world's championship belongs right here in the National league, and we're going to bring it back.

MATTY OR RUBE IN FIRST

"The Cubs lost it so it's up to us to get it back, isn't it? They might say that Matty is going bad and is not as good as he used to be. Well, I'll give them a chance to see just how far Chris has dropped. Can't tell though how I'll work it. I have so many good pitchers that I would like to give them all a shot at the American league. Personally, I like Connie and all the boys on his club, but friendship ceases when the first ball is pitched. I am not saying that we'll go out and win four straights, 'cause I don't think we will, but the Athletics will not find the Giants the same team as the cubs.

"Matty only shut them out in the three games he pitched in 1905, so do not be surprised if I start with him and then use Rube the next day. Or it might be the other way. If Matty works the first shot I'll shoot him right back the third game. You can look for Marquard or Ames the fourth day, as I believe Leon can fool Mack's team. From then on you can't tell what will happen.

"I hope the series doesn't go more than four games, as I want to do just what Chance did that one year with the Tigers, make an entire clean sweep.

"Mack will get the best we have, and I think we can show him a few pointers on how to run bases, can't we?"

Some Features Of Rugby That Even The Players Do Not Know Thoroughly

(By W. A. Hewitt in the Toronto Star Weekly.)

The championship rugby season has commenced and the padded knights of the moleskin and gridiron will hold the board for the next six or seven weeks, practically to the exclusion of all other branches of sport.

There are hundreds of players engaged in football games throughout Canada to-day, and it would be a safe wager that not one-tenth of them thoroughly understand the rules that are set down for their guidance in the very complete rule book issued by the Canadian Rugby Union.

One-tenth is a very safe estimate, as in the practices of three senior clubs this week it was noticed that none of them had thoroughly comprehended the changes that had been made last winter by the governing body; and this, in view of the fact, that one of the rules had to do with the all-important play of scrimmaging the ball.

A Glance at the Rule Book.

The rule book is not as interesting reading as some novels, and the language some times is mystifying, so that a summary of some of the more important rules might not be out of place at this interesting juncture.

The different Unions must have their championship decided not later than the 2nd Saturday in November. That means the Canadian semi-finals and finals will be played this year the 3rd and 4th Saturdays in November, viz.: the 18th and 25th. Rugby followers should make a note of these dates.

No player is eligible for the Canadian championship who has not taken part in at least one championship game in his own Union. This is to prevent bringing in players who have no right to participate in the games.

Kick-off and Kick-out.

In a kick-off at centre the ball must be kicked at least 5 yards towards the opponents' goal. There are no more fake kicks at centre and a punt behind interference.

A kick-out is a drop-kick from not more than 25 yards from the kicker's goal-line and must move at least 5 yards in any direction unless blocked by an opponent. The team kicking out has the option of a scrimmage on the 25-yard line, instead of a drop kick. This latter is a new ruling that should prove very helpful to a defending team when playing against the wind.

Did You Ever See This?

A mark cannot be made from a bounding ball, but one can be made from a forward pass—that is something that few players are aware of.

Should the ball strike an official it is not regarded as dead, but play continues.

Should the ball be absolutely motionless on the ground and not in possession of a player, it is still in play.

Even if a player is on side he has no right to charge a player who has made "his mark" and if the latter is thrown to the ground the same penalty applies as to an off-side play.

"Yards" Behind Goal Line.

Yards must be given behind the goal line, just the same as in the open field. The penalty is the same.

The ball is not to be considered in play until it is put in motion by the foot of one of the scrimmagers of the side in possession of the ball. That is to say the ball can be placed on the ground without being put in play. This gives the centre man a fraction of a second advantage in getting the ball out.

A try is to be scored when the ball is declared dead and any part of it is on, over, or behind the opponent's goal line. How many arguments have you heard over this?

Should a player cross an opponents' goal line with the ball in his possession and goes, without losing it, into touch in goal or across the dead ball line, a try is to be allowed. If he gets the ball behind the goal line and goes into touch or across the goal line it only counts one point.

In case of injury to players substitutes are allowed during any period of the game. No player once removed, can re-enter the game except with the consent of both captains.

Keep Off the Field.

Should any coach or trainer or supporter go on the field without the referee's permission, a penalty of 15 yards will be imposed on the offending side.

The home team is responsible for the field, and will forfeit the game if the grounds are not kept clear. This prevents any trouble such as occurred in the N.L.U. this summer.

Anniversary Celebrated

The 65th anniversary of the Gilmour Baptist Church, Smith, was celebrated last evening, when a most delightful supper and entertainment was held. The evening being an ideal one for such an event, the congregation and friends turned out in large numbers and the attendance was increased by a couple of merry 'bus loads who went from the Park Street Baptist church here. Supper was served in the early part of the evening, after which a splendid programme was given, including addresses by Rev. J. S. LaFlaire, of Port Hope, Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of the Murray Street Baptist church, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of the Park Street Baptist Church, and Rev. Ireland. The programme was opened by the whole assemblage singing "O Canada," and the second item on the programme was an instrumental solo by Mr. Banks. Miss Ethel Hill delighted the audience with some humorous readings, which were well recived. Several anthems were sung by the choir, as well as other entertaining numbers.

Try This Pinex "Sixteen Ounces of Cough Syrup"

A Family Supply for 50c, Saving $2. The Surest, Quickest Remedy You Ever Used or Money Refunded.

A cough remedy that saves you $2, and is guaranteed to give quicker, better results than anything else, is surely worth trying. And one trial will show you why Pinex is used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

You will be pleasantly surprised by the way it takes right hold of a cough, giving almost instant relief. It will usually stop the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours, and is unequalled for prompt results in whooping cough.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes sixteen ounces of the best cough remedy ever used. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

The taste is pleasant—children take it willingly. Stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, and a highly successful remedy for incipient lung troubles.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"THE SQUAW MAN"

In "The Squaw Man" which comes to the Grand Opera House on Thursday night, October 12th one finds a play of the West replete with types and characters of that region, and with a spice of novelty that is far too infrequent upon this stage. Strangely enough, for that is true, a drama that touches on the teeming strenuousity of the Wyoming territory, there is little of the swashbuckling element in the play. While there is a bad man and a sheriff, and several cow punchers, one misses the riproaring clash of personalities that is expected in a Western play. In fact there is no hint of coarse ruffianism so often to be found in plays of this description, and while the emotions are stirred by many moving climaxes, these are safely side-tracked in an artistic manner by the dramatist until they satisfy the sense without shocking the nerves.

Edwin Milton Royle who wrote the play, has admittedly done the best work of his career in "The Squaw Man," which by the way was evolved from a short one-act piece. Mr. Royle wrote for the Lambs Gambol in New York quite four years ago. He has built up a drama that is of the heroic mould, and which moves steadily forward with an inexorable purpose until the plot has been filled out in a satisfactory manner down to the last detail. There is no point that is left uncovered, but just a good whole-souled, clean and satisfying picture of men and things that moves the auditor irresistibly and carries him along. It is a play that deals with men as they are, and points to the dormant something that lies at the bottom of every man's soul when there is a woman somewhere in his life. While the first act is laid in England, the last three are placed happily in Wyoming, in the heart of the cattle country, as it was some twenty years ago, and the character of the British army officer, who for love of his brother's wife, deliberately saddles himself with a crime of which he is innocent and buries himself in the west, is splendidly drawn and ably handled.

WEDDING BELLS

BELL—LAMPITT.

A wedding was solemnized in St. John's Church, Norway, Toronto, on Saturday last, when Miss Edith Lampitt, second daughter of Mr. Wm. Lampitt of Peterborough, East City, became the bride of Mr. Christopher Bell, of Peterborough. The Rev. W. L. Baynes Reed officiated. The bride was given away by her father, assisted by Miss Mary Colley. The groom was assisted by Mr. Jack Colley, of Toronto.

YOUNG—McCAULEY

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, September 27th, at St. Anne's church, Wooler, when Miss Mary McCauley, of Trenton, became the bride of Mr. Fred M. Young, of Young's Point, the popular engineer of the Steamer Islanda.

At ten o'clock the bride entered the church, leaning on the arm of her father, while her sister, Miss Nellie, played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The bride looked handsome attired in an empire gown of white silk embroidered net, veiled over white satin paillette, and wore a large Gainsborough hat to match.

The bridesmaid was Miss Kate McCauley of Rochester, N.Y., sister of the bride, who was daintily attired in white embroidered Marquisette, and wore a very pretty large white hat. The groom was ably assisted by "Pat" Young, Captain of the Steamer Islanda.

Rev. Father Phelan, of Lakefield, cousin of the bride, performed the ceremony, and Rev. Father McCauley of the Sacred Heart Church, Peterborough, said the nuptial mass, ably assisted by Rev. Father McFadden, of Wooler.

The numerous and costly presents testified in no small manner the esteem in which the young couple are held.

Among the friends present were Mr. Harold Young, and the Misses Mollie and Irene Young of Young's Point, brother and sisters of the bridegroom.

McKAY—CAREY.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Carey, 450 George street, was the scene this morning at 9.30 of a quiet, but charming wedding ceremony, when their only daughter, Evelyn Etta, became the bride of Thomas Sutherland McKay, of Halifax, N.S.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's. To the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, the bride entered the parlour with her father, by whom she was given away. Miss Aldrich presided at the piano. The contracting parties were unattended. The bride was married in her travelling suit, and wore the groom's gift, a beautiful gold necklace and pin. His gift to the pianist was a gold bar set with pearls.

The bride has been one of the popular teachers in Central Normal training school, and for the last ten years has been a member of St. Paul's church choir, which suitably remembered her.

Mr. and Mrs. McKay will reside in Halifax, where the groom is prominently identified with the Quaker Oats Company.

A Conference Was Held

Special Wire to The Examiner.

A conference committee meeting took place this morning at the Charlotte street Methodist church. Those present were the Rev. Mr. Shorey, of Lindsay, Rev. Mr. Johnson of Keene, Rev. W. G. Clark of Belleville, and the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Henderson. The chief business was the consideration of the recent grants to missionaries by the General Board which the committee had power to adjust.

Whiffletree Broke Horses Ran Away

Mr. W. H. Smith, a North Monaghan farmer, happened with an accident this morning, while on his way to the city. Mr. Smith lives about ten miles out and when he was about half way to Peterborough, driving a spirited team of horses, the whiffletree on his waggon broke and the horses took leave of both their driver and load. The waggon was not otherwise damaged, nor was Mr. Smith injured. The horses ran home, where they were found to be unhurt.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"If the sum total of all the unhappiness caused by people who murder and the sum total of all the unhappiness caused by people who tease could be reckoned, which do you think would be the greater?

Myself, I haven't a doubt but that the latter would make the former look like a molehill beside a mountain.

Sometimes I almost wonder if teasing isn't the unpardonable sin.

Perhaps before you decide that I'm altogether talking nonsense I'd better give you an idea of what I mean by teasing.

I know a certain brother and sister who live together, and who are exceptionally fond of each other. The brother is an exemplary brother in most ways. He supports his sister in comfort. He often denies himself for her sake. He is very thoughtful and frequently brings her lovely gifts when he comes back from business trips. I know he would feel terrible if anything should happen to her and I am sure she adores him.

And yet their home is not a happy one.

Why?

Because he will tease her.

She has an unfortunate trick of mixing up names, and saying just the exact opposite of what she means.

For instance, she will say, "I think I'll wear my thick dress, because it is so warm," when she means "so cold."

Or, she will be telling about a call from her Cousin Ruth, and half the time she will refer to Ruth as Anne, who is her older sister.

Now what she means is almost perfectly obvious.

And yet the brother is never satisfied to tolerantly make the mental correction, and let it go at that. He always laughs, an irritating, nagging little laugh, and says sarcastically, "You are going to wear a thick dress because it is so warm, are you?"

Or "What's that? I thought you said Ruth was here, and now you are talking about Anne."

Of course that frets his sister and she says something tart in return, and in a moment they are at loggerheads with each other.

Then again, he knows that if he says certain things she will be disturbed and will protest and he never omits an opportunity of saying these things and then explaining after the protest comes, "I knew I'd get a rise out of you."

Whereupon the dove of peace again flies out the window, or up the chimney if the window is shut.

And so in this home where peace and harmony might reign there is discord and antagonism just about half the time ,all because of these and other little habits of teasing.

Now that's just one illustration of what I mean by teasing. But I guess it's enough to start a train of thought that will take you to some other illustration among your acquaintances or perhaps even in your own family.

And what on earth is the use.

Is it possible that the brother has enough amusement from correcting his sister's little mistakes or "getting a rise out of her" to make up for the discord that fills their home?

Is it possible that any of the people who are always teasing others get enough pleasure to outweigh the pain they inflict?

Isn't it strange to reflect that there are thousands of homes where the members of the family love each other very dearly and would be heartbroken over a vacant chair and yet cannot refrain from teasing each other, thus causing those they love so dearly much unnecessary happiness?

To be happy and to make others happy—it seems to me that this very nearly covers "the whole duty of man."

And think how thoroughly they fail of it, who tease.

Ruth Cameron

REV DR. CHOWN'S ADDRESS ON HIGHER CRITICISM

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT. 10.—At this afternoon's session of the Ecumenical Conference a resolution, urging international arbitration, was introduced by Bishop Hendri of St. Louis, and was passed, after favourable comments. The resolution referred in high terms to the pending treaty between Great Britain and the United States, and urged tha the nations represented in the Conference should take the necessary steps to see that the cause of arbitration he furthered.

"Modern life," began Rev. Dr. Chown, Associate Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, in his speech at the Ecumenical Conference to-day, on the adaption of the Church to the needs of modern life, "is permeated with faith in the inductive method of seeking and understanding truth. The method has won the day in science and philosophy, and it is unthinkable that it should not prevail in the study of theology. It must do so if theology is science. What course may the church reasonably take in the presence of these conditions. At the outset the Church has the right to hold that no real progress is possible by sinking into a sea of forgetfulness the treasures of the past. It is foolish, if not wicked, to kick down the ladder by which we have climbed this far, but as the organ of human progress, the Church is in duty bound to recognize that the ladder which fails to reach the heights of truth this age demands is too short. The ladder of the past ecclesiastic declarations cannot reach the present needs. Each seeker after truth must add the rungs of personal experience and of observation, history and insight, and give heed to the messages of the spiritual wants of the age, who must be regarded as the exponents of the special aspects of truth necessary to build the kingdom of God in our time. Let us not think that theology is an inanimate thing which can be handed down, unchanged, from generation to generation. It is the ripening fruit of truth and thought, and its process is never complete."

MUSIC AND DRAMA

GUY BROS. MINSTRELS

The Guy Brothers Minstrels rendered a performance last evening at the Opera House, which maintained its usual popularity. The Musical Baum's contributions were received with loud applause, their playing upon the lyre and bells being exceptionally beautiful. Levoy and Adams, novelty acrobatic artists, furnished much mirth, as well as some really clever acrobatic feats. Happy Benway, the comedian, who occupied a few moments in a heart to heart talk with the audience, was very amusing. An item worthy of special mention was the performance of Zella, the human frog. His feats of physical contortion were truly marvellous. All the other members of the company contributed items which served to make the performance a thoroughly creditable o

The first part was up to the mark in every particular.

When Nerves Need Fixing

"There's a Reason"

Look back to the cause, for one can never get well until the cause of sickness is removed.

Perhaps its the drug, caffeine, grown in tea and coffee.

That thing which makes the heart of the tea and coffee drinker flutter and fail; also slowly breaks down the nerves in many people (not all).

If you are one of the many affected by tea and coffee, and really want to get well, suppose you leave off the drink which has caused the trouble, and take on well-made for the morning beverage.

POSTUM

In a few days you may discover why—

WORRY

A Sure Starter for Ill Health.

Useless worrying (a form of nervousness) is indirectly the result (through the nerves) of improper feeding. A furniture man of Memphis says:

"About a year ago I was afflicted with nervous spells, would worry so over trivial things.

"I went to consult one of the best physicians in Memphis and he asked among many questions, if I drank coffee.

"His advice was: 'Go to some provision store and get a box of Postum, drink it in place of coffee and as you are confined to your desk to a great extent try and get out in the open air as much as possible.' I followed his instructions regarding the Postum.

"At that time my weight was 142 and I was taking all kinds of drugs and medicines to brace me up but all failed. To-day I weigh 165 and all of my old troubles are gone, and all the credit is due to having followed this wise physician's advice and cut off the coffee and using Postum in its place.

"I now consider my health perfect and that it is all due to my having used Postum in place of coffee." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ontario.

"There's a reason for quitting the drug-drinks, tea and coffee, and there's a reason for drinking Postum. Trial ten days proves them all.

Exciting Mix-up In Fenelon Falls Races Drivers Were Thrown

(Lindsay Warder.)

The most exciting event of the Fenelon Falls races which were held fair day, took place when the named race was called. There were four entries: Al. Keswick, owned by Mr. Carr; Goldie, owned by T. Polson; Fred, owned by Mr. Stephens, and Jack, by the local horseman, Mr. John Aldous.

After a series of starts and scoring which delay caused the crowd to get boisterous, the quartette of fast ones received the word "go," by Starter J. A. Darch, of Lindsay. Jack, the horse driven by Aldous, outside; Goldie, driven by T. Polson next, and the two other horses close to the pole. They had only gone about forty yards when the Aldous horse, Jack, slipped, rolled on his back, upsetting sulkey and driver in a heap on the race track. Matters looked serious for a time, most people expecting to see Mr. Aldous taken out mangled and bruised. The crowds rushed to his assistance, but before they had arrived Mr. Aldous had crawled from under his bike and assisted in getting Jack on his feet, wh oall the time was pounding vigorously at the air in hopes of regaining his feet.

Mr. Polson, who was driving Goldie, was in advance of the first horse, which fell, and in taking a look back over his shoulder the bike careened to one side and Polson fell, as all thought, a bruised mass on the track It was so sudden no one knew just how it happened. His horse kept on running madly, while women screamed and childern sought the safety of fences and trees.

Around went the horse passing the other two horses, which were still contesting the race. Men threw out boards and blankets to stop his mad career, but it was futile. The starter rang the bell, but it heeded not for the equine kept going till he finally entered the woods at the north end of the track and disappeared in the shrubbery, where he was afterwards caught.

No harm was done, save to the racing rigs. The two plucky horsemen, covered with mud and slush, were on hand for the next two heats and pulled in first and second money, regardless of the little misfortune.

First Rugby Game Of The Season On Saturday Toronto Centrals Won

The first rugby game of the season in Peterborough will be played on Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park when the Toronto Central Y. M. C. A. team will be the opponents of the West End Athletic Club, in a junior O.R.F.U. game. The result should be a first-class exhibition of Rugby, and will undoubtedly attract a large crowd. The West End team, profiting by their experience at Port Hope on Saturday, are losing no opportunity to practise, and last night a big squad worked out for a solid hour and one-half, under the watchful eye of Dr. McPherson. The team will practise again to-night and to-morrow night, and Thursday afternoon will get out at Riverside Park to have a big daylight workout. This, with a signal practise on Friday night should leave them right on edge for Saturday's big game. They will need to be in shape, too, as reports from Toronto say that Manager George Barber has gathered together a fast and heavy team who will take a lot of beating. Centrals beat Victoria College on Saturday and the Collegians generally have a classy team. The locals will be in much better condition than they were last week, and are confident of opening the O. B. F. U. season with a victory. Players are reminded of to-night's practice at 7.15 o'clock at Central Park.

WATER COMMISSIONERS HOLD THEIR REGULAR MEETING

The Water Commissioners met yesterday afternoon with the following president: T. F. Matthews, chairman, W. H. Moore and W. H. Hill.

The first matter dealt with was the salary of Mr. A. G. Fawcett, Act. Supt. his salary being fixed at $120 a month from June 1st, 1911 for one year, with the right of either party to terminatae the engagement on giving a month's notice in writing.

A letter was read from the Electrical Supply Co., giving a price for wiring the pumping station.

From Wm. Van Every, saying he should not be charged for rooms over 200 and 202 Rubidge street. No action was taken.

From W. Kennedy, Jr., regarding the McDougall pump.—Received.

From Aylesworth, Wright, Moss and Thompson, regarding the resolution passed on Sept. 26th, 1911, regarding the McDougall pump.—Received.

It was moved by W. H. Hill and seconded by W. H. Moore, that the account from Conroy for $376.97 be paid when certified to by Mr. Fawcett, Act. Supt.—Carried.

It was moved and seconded that a reply was sent to Aylesworth, Wright, Moss and Thompson, that the 1st day of February next will be the latest day on which the commissioners will permit the John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Co. to do any work on the pump on the Commission premises

It was decided also, that the lawn gate of F. J. Cook, 556 Bethune street will be remitted, providing he cuts off the lawn service.

Manufacturers Express Satisfaction at the Defeat of the Pact

RATES ARE LOWER

Toronto, Oct. 11.—Election day echoes permeated nearly every address at the opening session of the annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, which commenced yesterday at the King Edward. It seemed as if every speaker was imbued with optimism regarding the future of Canadian manufacturing interests, and in this connection the defeat of reciprocity was referred to time and time again as the best stimulus that the manufacturing interests of Canada could by any possible means have received.

In his annual review, the president, C. H. Rowley, emphasized the fact that intense national feeling had been displayed by Canadians in the recent elections, and his forecast of a splendid industrial and commercial future for the Dominion seemed to voice the feeling of everyone present. The past year has been a year of peace within the empire, industrial strikes in Canada have been few and far between, immigration has increased by leaps and bounds, the country has developed in every field of endeavor, the output of mine, field and forest being wonderfully increased. As a result, the people of the Dominion have been actively employed, and wages were never so good as now.

President Rowley's address was one of optimism throughout, and his comprehensive survey of the whole field of Canadian politics, industry and development brought forth the hearty applause of all the members present.

In every convention the opening day usually sees a rather slim attendance and there was no exception to this rule when the opening session commenced yesterday morning. About 150 members were in attendance when the president called the meeting to order, but the vacant chairs filled rapidly as the session progressed.

The prevailing rates for fire risks were favorably commented on by R. D. Fairbairn, chairman of the insurance committee. These rates are appreciably lower than in the years immediately following the great Toronto fire. The development of business in the northwest, as well as New Ontario and Quebec, where high rates were in force, had been the cause of a relatively high rate for the whole Dominion. Recent reductions on manufacturing risks were, therefore, greater than they appeared from the Government's official figures. It was to improvement in the risks that the lower rates were largely due, the members having shown ready response to the suggestions of the committee in this regard. In addition, the insurance companies were giving full recognition in cases where improvements had been made.

As regards the legality of the insurance associations, as alleged combines, the Parliamentary and insurance committees in pursuance of the resolution passed at the last annual convention, reported that nothing could be done at present. The result of their investigations had shown that the cases now before the Supreme Court must first be passed upon, before any action be taken. Regarding licensed and unlicensed insurance, the report gave returns of $179,860,576 carried in Canada by unlicensed companies; $1,815,289,605 carried by licensed companies, in one year, an indication that over 90 per cent. of the wear was written by licensed offices.

The report referred to the recent consolidation of the mutual companies, and recommended the re-election of G. M. Murray to the board of the Central Canada Co.

Suggestion was also made that the convention reaffirm its desire that the Provincial Governments should provide for the appointment of marshals to record and investigate the country's fire waste, and that this be communicated to the Conservation Commission.

The annual appropriation of $1,000 for the expenses of the department was asked for as usual. The adoption of this report was seconded by W. K. George, and carried by the association.

The assets of the association, according to the financial statement, are $31,917.37, and liabilities $12,211.39. The revenue for the year consisted of $35,000.87 from members' fees, $1,325.75 for interest, $5,950.36 from Industrial Canada, $2,921.34 from the Trade Index, and a surplus from the Western excursion $264.79, a total of $48,923.11. The expenses, including $15,000 to the Tariff Education Fund was $47,502.11. The estimated revenue receipts for this year are: Membership fees, $36,000; interest, $1,000; Industrial Canada, $5,000; total, $42,000.

The membership seemed about equally divided between a desire to increase the rates and a determination to keep the fees as they are at present.

The barn on the farm of H. W. Park, 9th concession of Raleigh, which had been raised and made ready for the putting in of new foundation, was blown over by the terrific wind storm.

Andrew Brenban, a prominent farmer of Cornwall Township, was found dead in bed at his residence, near Moulinette yesterday morning. He was a bachelor and lived all alone.

Aviator C. P. Rodgers has broken the world's record for cross country aeroplane flights by about sixty miles. Atwood flew 1,265 miles from St. Louis to New York. Rodgers has covered 1,325 miles, according to railroad mileage.

40 Cent Butter for Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Forty-cent butter for the coming winter, is the prediction made by butter dealers following a report of the warehousemen's association, which figured cold storage holdings of butter on Oct. 1 as only 46,027,000 pounds, as against 60,849,000 pounds last year.

WILL HAIL ARBITRATION

Methodist Delegates Spend the Day on the Subject of Peace

WILL ASSIST CHURCH

Toronto, Oct. 11.—"We hail with pleasure and profound gratitude, the deepening and growing of good-will and peace among the leading nations of Europe and America.

"The noble work of The Hague Conference, as promoted by the federal council of the Church of Christ in America, the Church of England and the Free Church Council in England, is already bearing fruit in this arbitration treaty, which agrees to submit questions of national honor to the proper tribunal for arbitration.

"We heartily endorse this signal advance in the interest alike of peace and universal brotherhood. We strongly urge the Christian nations represented in the Ecumenical Conference speedily to take necessary legislative action to consummate the arbitration treaty which has been signed by the representatives of the British Empire and the United States of America.

"By every proper means we will seek peace and promote it in His holy name, Who is the Prince of Peace."

Henry Haigh, John Maclaren, Earl Cranston, E. R. Hendrix, A. W. Wilson.

With a dignity befitting the great principles for which the Ecumenical Conference stands, the above resolution was presented and unanimously adopted at the afternoon session yesterday.

The chairman, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, D.D., of the Methodist Church South, took advantage of the early usages of Methodist conventions and moved the adoption of the resolution. In speaking on the resolution he praised President Taft and representatives of the British Empire for advocating and successfully carrying out a peace pact between the two nations which makes war between them impossible.

Ald. T. Swape, J.P., brought forth vigorous applause when he characterized the late King Edward as "The Peacemaker," and the act of President Taft in promoting a peace pact between the United States and England as "the most courageous" ever put forth by an official during the history of the world."

He said the war system had been and was still the most stubborn obstacle which the church had to face. Dr. Henry Hayes, in seconding the resolution, said he hailed with joy the fact that England and the United States of America had clasped hands in a peace pact making war impossible.

"I say impossible, because the two great nations agree to submit all questions of honor between themselves to arbitration, and any other nations will think twice before they challenge that compact."

The resolution was seconded by Sir Robert Perks on behalf of the laymen of England, and as a commercial man, during which he said the churches and the Christian world were entitled to much credit for the consummation of this long-worked-for peace pact, "but," he said, "let us not forget that two of the largest Jewish banking houses in the country gave the pact their sanction. And," he continued, "no war between nations can be conducted without the assistance of the financial institutions of the banking interests of the country."

Rev. George Elliott, D.D., came in with a large share of praise for the two Governments, saying other nations must of necessity follow their lead. "For Christian thought and action," he said, "is bound to eventually rule in world's things."

Gets His Farm Back.

Barrie, Oct. 11.—The fall assizes opened here at 10 a.m. yesterday with Sir John Boyd presiding. The first case heard was a non-jury case of Henry Moore, of Nottawasaga, against his son, James Moore, claiming $861 for rent and $1,000 damages for cutting and wrongfully removing wood, and to reclaim possession of property. Decision was given in favor of plaintiff.

His lordship charged the grand jury at 1.15 p.m., stating that while their work would be light, it would also be of a very serious nature. His lordship regretted to learn that, during the past year, there had been a number of cases of murder in this section and the jury would be called upon to consider the evidence relative to the alleged murder of Rose Ford of Orillia, by Arthur Sheridan. The two young men had been courting two girls. One had been carrying a knife for some time. The defence may be able to produce evidence to show provocation.

Great Damage By Floods.

Denver, Col., Oct 11.—With the telephone and telegraph service crippled, and more than 300 miles of railroad out of commission, only meagre reports are being received from the flood-swept district of south-western Colorado and northwestern New Mexico, comprising an area approximating 100 by 75 miles.

There are rumors of heavy losses of life, but the verified death list so far is comparatively small.

Residents of towns in the flood district face a serious situation from food shortage.

Want Board of Control Abolished.

Montreal, Oct. 11.—At a meeting of the former aldermen of the old regime and their friends, a few nights ago, it was determined to enter upon a campaign to oust the present city council and the board of control, and to once more assume the power formerly enjoyed. The first attack will be made upon the board of control upon a platform to abolish that body.

Four Were Be-Headed

Hankow, China, Oct 11.—Twenty-eight Chinese revolutionaries have been arested at Wu-Chang, capital of the province of Hupeh, and four of the number were be-headed in front of the viceroy's yamen yesterday.

A bomb was exploded, whereupon a search revealed a factory for the manufacture of explosives and a plan for an attack on Wu-Chang.

At 66, Assaulted Girl.

Welland, Ont., Oct. 11.—J. D. Fortier of Fort Erie, aged 66, was placed under suspended sentence by Justice Middleton, after he had pleaded guilty to committing an indecent assault on a young girl, under fourteen years of age, who is now in the Alexandria Home, Toronto. In was owing to his extreme old age that the judge did not impose a prison term.

Times Victim of Mistake.

London, Oct. 11.—The Times yesterday explained that the quotation of editorial comment from the N. Y. Times on the Canadian election, wrongfully attributed to The London Times, is the cause of many complaints from Canadian readers. "They were opinions," says The Thunderer, "in direct contradiction of the views we have often expressed."

Wonderful Strathcona.

London, Oct. 11.—Last night's papers made much of Strathcona's 10,000 mile journey in 17 days. His lordship told the admiring pressmen surrounding him at Euston station, that some day 90 will be nearly the middle age in a man's life.

A Bad Boy.

Kingston, Oct. 11.—In the Juvenile Court, Magistrate Farrell sentenced a 12-year-old burglar to the Industrial School for an indefinite period. In broad daylight the youngster entered a home and stole $3 out of a lady's purse left in the hall.

CABINET GATHERS

Ministerial Bye Elections Are Subject for Considerable Discussion

QUEBEC PLEASED

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—The new Cabinet went into council yesterday afternoon after the formal swearing in at noon at Rideau Hall. The council lasted an hour, being cut short in time to let the Ministers attend the send-off to Earl Grey, who left by special train at five o'clock for Quebec.

The only subject discussed at the council was the holding of the bye-elections in the cases of those Ministers who have been entrusted with portfolios. No decision was reached, and at eleven o'clock this morning the talk was resumed.

The only Minister not here yesterday was Martin Burrell of British Columbia. Mr. Burrell leaves for Ottawa to-day, and will be the only man in the new Government to take the oath of office in the presence of the Duke of Connaught.

It is likely to be some time before anybody is chosen for the office of Solicitor-General.

Premier Borden yesterday received from George Taylor (Leeds), a blackthorn stick, which was given to Mr. Taylor many years ago by Sir John Macdonald.

One of the first duties of the new Cabinet will be to find seats in Ontario for Mr. W. T. White and Mr. Cochrane, and in Manitoba for Mr. Rogers; in New Brunswick for Mr. Hazen. Among seats mentioned as available in Ontario for Mr. White, are West Toronto, South Toronto, Halton (of which Mr. White is a native), East Middlesex, held for a number of years by Mr. Elson. It is understood the seat for Rainy River and Thunder Bay, won by Mr. Garrick, is to be held by that gentleman. Mr. Cochrane, however, might find a seat in some other portion of New Ontario. Gordon Wilson, M.P., has offered Mr. Cochrane his seat in Wentworth.

Satisfaction in Quebec.

Montreal, Oct. 11.—The personnel of the new Borden Cabinet as published yesterday morning, appeared to give very general satisfaction to the business community, the impression being that the new Prime Minister had endeavored to gather around him men who would make active and able administrators. It may be said, however, that so far as the English-speaking Quebec is concerned, the present arrangement is looked upon as temporary by the business and banking community, and that in a short time, the Hon. George Perley will be the holder of an important portfolio.

On the whole, French-Canadians looked upon the Cabinet as very generously conceived towards this province.

More Light To-day.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—Sir James Whitney intimated yesterday that he will this afternoon state when the Ontario Government will go to the country. Yesterday afternoon the Cabinet Ministers held a long conference in the Premier's private room and will to-day announce a definite decision.

Up to the present Sir James has not made any statement further than that the matter has not been decided.

"The people are anxious for news, and if I could say anything definite now I would do so," said Sir James "I assure you that the very moment any information can be given out you will have it."

In the event of an election the date would probably be set for the early part of November.

Premier Whitney said that Hon. Frank Cochrane, the new Dominion Minister of Railways, will be greatly missed from the Ontario Legislature and that he has proved himself to be a faithful servant in Government affairs.

Irish Bacon Industry.

London, Eng., Oct. 11.—In forwarding statistics relating to the Irish bacon industry the American Deputy Consul-General in London remarks that while Ireland sends its bacon and ham to England, it eats more of American and other foreign produce. Many firms in the wholesale provision centres of the greater English cities, while buying Irish produce extensively, at the same time forward to Ireland large quantities of American and other produce.

Bequest to Acadia University.

New York, Oct. 11.—The will of Charles F. Hyers, M.D., D.C.L., who died Aug. 28 last, was filed in the surrogate's office yesterday. To the Acadia University of Nova Scotia is left $25,000, "or any part of it that has not already been given to establish and for all time support a professorship known as that of biology and zoology." To the church "known as Baptist, in Boylston, N.S.," $1,000 is left.

Strathcona Still Going.

London, Oct. 11.—Lord Strathcona, High Commissioner for Canada, returned to London yesterday, after a trip of fifteen days to Canada. He appears in the best of health and spirits, and will go at once to Scotland.

Acquitted.

London, Ont., Oct. 11.—Hiram A. Burgess, a London merchant, charged with obtaining $800 by fraud from Ray and C. W. Tomlinson of York county, was yesterday morning discharged by Judge MacBeth.

Package of Wine Missing.

Hamilton, Oct. 11.—The Canadian Express Co. has another mystery to solve in addition to the ten thousand dollar robbery in its main office here.

It was learned yesterday afternoon that a package of wine, forwarded from Aylmer the other day, is missing.

Pioneer Lady Dead.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 11.—Mrs. Jane Cronin, born in St. Catharines seventy-four years ago and well-known around the frontier, died here yesterday. She leaves a son, Harry, and a daughter, Mrs. George Hillman of this city.

More Fighting in China.

Kankow, China, Oct. 11.—Much fighting was heard yesterday afternoon in the direction of Wu Chang. Communication with that city has been cut off. Several large fires are seen.

It is evident that the soldiers have gone over to the revolutionaries following the execution of four conspirators at Wu Chang earlier yesterday.

A message from Chung King says that the leaders of the movement in protest against the Government's plan of building railways with foreign capital, are protecting the missions in the districts where rebels are operating.

Royalists Have Two Columns.

Lisbon, Oct. 11.—The Royalists expect another column now advancing through the Minho Valley to create a diversion and lead to a division of the Government troops, which are now concentrating. The Monarchists keep their line of communication with Spain open and are able to receive recruits and supplies from sources which the Republicans cannot attack without a quarrel with Spain. The invaders are able to obtain plenty of food from the countryside, but few men join them.

Buried With Civic Honors.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—With mounted constables leading, eight special pall-bearers, representatives of the civic and his mill interest, and five hundred city corporation employes, including police and firemen, and 300 mill men marching four abreast, the funeral of Controller Davidson was held yesterday afternoon. The Governor-General's Foot Guards' band played.

Royalists Win a Fight.

Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 11.—The Royalists entrenched near the Galician frontier were attacked by the Republican forces Monday. They responded with a hot fire from behind rocks and wooded heights, compelling the Government troops to retire. The Republican artillery was quite useless.

"The Gun Runner"

by ARTHUR STRINGER

The man in the steamer-chair let his astonishment explode in a ceiling-ward belch of smoke.

"Ganley! Why, Ganley's the biggest gun-runner doing business in the Caribbean!"

"Gun-runner?"

"Yes, the slickest revolution-maker that ever shipped carbines and smokeless into a Latin-American republic!"

"He's new to me," McKinnon protested.

"He's the man who's always smelling out a country that's looking for a liberator. And he gets a rake-off from the patriots and a rake-off from the Birmingham gun people, and another rake-off from the nitro-makers. Why, he's the man who's been engineering this Locombian uprising for the last seven months! But now we've got him good, and got him where we want him."

"Then what's he doing on a steamer like this? Couldn't he see he was going to be cornered?"

The disposition of the operator was not altogether an inflammable one.

"That's just the point, my friend. He couldn't get out of Charleston or Mobile or New Orleans. We had those ports watched. So he slipped quietly up to New York, engaged a passage on Saturday's Hamburg-American steamer for Colon, and then slipped over to the Laminian in a closed cab when he thought we weren't taking tab on him. But, pshaw! you know all this already, don't you?"

"Not all of it," replied McKinnon.

"But you saw that yellow-skinned man who was helped aboard? The scik-looking fellow with the Spanish servant, who was almost carried up from that cab on the wharf?"

McKinnon confessed to some vague remembrance of the incident.

"That man is Ganley!" said the other. "And he's under this deck, down there in cabin fourteen, and you'll fiind that he's going to stay there until we slip into the roadstead at Puerto Locombia."

A meditative silence filled the little white-walled cabin.

"But what have I to do with all this?" McKinnon at last demanded. His face seemed to carry the complaint that he had always found dissension on shipboard hard to endure: it was never easy to get away from disturbances in a world so small, or to put hate behind one in a life so circumscribed. Yet he smiled a little, in spite of himself. A ship, he had somewhere heard ,must be either a heaven or a hell. The next fortnight, he felt, would find little of the celestial about the Laminian.

"That's just what I'm coming around to," the intruder was saying to him. "That Ganley, remember, has got his 'fences' and confederates and small-fry helpers. He works the thing thorough when he does it. And as likely as not, between here and Puerto Locombia, he's going to get messages sent in to him, or he's going to send out some despatches on his own hook—so as to keep in touch with his people."

The stranger came to a stop and sat regarding the younger man as though he looked for some word of encouragement or comprehension fro mhim.

"The thing I've got to guard against most," the stranger who called himself Duffy continued, "is the department at Washington. If they sent something in, and it got out all over the ship, it would be likely o spoil everything."

"But it won't get out all over the ship," the operator corrected.

"You'll promise me that?" asked the other with a look of relief.

"Of course I'll promise you that—it's part of my business."

"But there's the other side of the question," the stranger discreetly continued. "Ganley is almost sure to be sending or receiving gsomething. Why, I shouldn't be surprised if you've been handling something for him already."

The operator reached out for his message-hooks. The movement was merely perfunctory ,for the books were all but empty.

"What name would he be travelling under?" McKinnon looked up to ask.

"He's booked as John Siebert, cabin fourteen," was the answer.

The man in the steamer-chair looked relieved, but only for a moment, when he learned that nothing had come or gone.

"Of course I may be wrong about his trying to keep in touch with those people of his. And it may happen the department won't even try to have him held. Perhaps they won't do anything until we get him ashore at Puerto Locombia. But we've got to get him there—it's our last chance. We've worked oo hard on his thing not to see it put through to a finish."

"And?" asked McKinnon, waiting.

"All I want you to do is to keep tab on anything that comes in for this man Ganley, or about him and his tin-horn warfare down there—and on anything that's to go out, until we land."

"Are you acting officially?" McKinnon demanded, with a studied effort towards imeprsonality. "I mean, are you acting for the department at Washington?"

"I'm acting as the confidential agent of the Consolidated Fruit people, an dthe Consolidated Fruit people have been co-operating with the departmnt for several weeks now."

"And you simply want to know what these messages are?"

"Yes, that's all; I mean that's all, unless they're of such a nature as to defeat the ends of justice. We don't want anything to get through that's goin gto help our man slip away from us."

"You mean for me o hold back everything that looks suspicious until you O.K. it?"

"And couldn't you do that if I made it worth while for you?" quietly inquired the stranger.

"How do you mean worth while?"

"Why, I'll pay you for your trouble. I'll——"

But McKinnon's seemingly indignant start brought the older man to a stop.

"You don't suppose I'm going to take money to hold up the company's business?" he demanded.

The stranger raised a thick, red hand protestingly. McKinnon noticed a scar in the centre of the wide palm. He inappositely wondered if it could be a bullet wound.

"Hold on a minute!" he warned the other, appeasingly. "This isn't a matter o' messenger-boy tips. It's out and out business. You've got to remember they're big things involved in this, an dbig people, too."

"Why do you want to mix me up in the mess, whether it's big or little?" complained the operator. The other man permitted the protest to go unanswered.

"But can't you tell me what it's worh for you o co-operate with us in this?" he blandly insised.

"It would be worth my job!" McKinnon cried. The other man, eyeing him closely, could not rid himself of the impression that the operator was acting a part, that he was feigning reluctance for some potentially better bargain yet to be driven.

"Well, what's your job worth?" was the older man's undisturbed query. In fact, there was an undertone of contempt in his guttural question.

"Oh, it's not what the job's worth," protested McKinnon. "It's the putting outside business before the business I'm paid to do. It's the acting against regulations and getting the company officers down on me. It's the doing of something I'm not here to do."

"But this is merely a matter between us two, man to man. The company doesn't have anything to do with this."

"They own this junk," broke out the operator, with a wave of the hand that designated the apparatus about him. "And they about own me, too, as long as I'm on their payroll."

"Of course they do," the other soothed tranquilly. "But you're here, and they're in eNw York, and you've got the running of this apparatus until we dock at Puerto Locombia."

The operator sat looking at the other man in silence.

"Why, you told me yourself, a few minutes ago, that your machinery doesn't always work right. And you say you haven't a tape, or anything that registers the messages as they come to you. Isn't that right?"

The operator nodded.

"Then why couldn't you accidentally miss a message? Or why couldn't you send it out without being sure that it was going to carry clear across to the next operator?"

McKinnon still looked at the other man. There was something so placid and intimate about the tones of the stranger's voice that the very purport of his suggestion ha dseemed robbed of its enormity.

"I wouldn't do a thing like that for five hundred dollars!" the operator at last declared.

The stranger looked back at him without a move of his great body in the steamer-chair. McKinnon's glance of open contempt in nowise disturbed him.

"I'll give you one thousand dollars if you do it!" he said. His voice was quiet and casual as he spoke, but again the operator swung about and peered at him. He opened his lips to reply, and then suddenly became silent. He shifted in his chair, as though to draw away from some tangible and precipitating temptation.

"I'll give you one thousand dollars," repeated the stranger, "and I'll promise to stand between you and any trouble you're afraid of."

"It's not what I'm afraid of," the other retorted.

"Then what is it? You fail to catch a message or two, and no one's the wiser. What of that? Good heavens, man, you're not doing anything crooked! Nobody's cut a throat back there in New York! Nobody's trying to get away from your Centre Street people. You're not doing anything against the penal code."

"Why didn't you go to the captain about this?" complained the operator. The tacit note of concession in that complaint did not escape his companion.

"That low-brow!" he grunted in disgust.

"Being a low-brow, as you call him, ought to make him all the easier to handle," suggested McKinnon, with his short and puzzling laugh. "And he's still the master of the ship."

"The captain has no more to do with this than De Forest himself! And I imagine he'd rather be soaking in brandy pawnees than talking business to outsiders. This is something between us two. You're not cheating anybody. You're not hurting anybody. All you do is to help me win a big case, and get well paid for your trouble. And a twist of the wrist is what it costs you. For I'm assuming ,of course, you can put that machinery of yours out of business for the time being without exactly showing how."

"That's easy enough," said the operator, with a stare at his apparatus. "There are a dozen ways of throwing a complicated thing like that out of kilter. It's my getting out of the kilter with he company hat worries me."

"The company doesn't count, my friend. They're outsiders in this. And you get your thousand dollars in cold cash, to work on that reed-disk of yours for half a year, if you want to."

McKinnon laughed a little. Then he grew more thoughtful, and was about to speak, when the quick tread of feet sounded on the deck without. He caught up the 'phone "set" hurriedly and bent over the pine table. The steps passed on, but the betrayal of disingenuousness remained a consoling and obvious fact to the man in the steamer-chair. It left him no longer in doubt.

He reached down into his capacious trouser pocket and produced a roll of treasury notes, held together by a double rubber band. He peeled off three orange-tinted twenty-dollar bills and folded them neatly across the middle, lengthwise. Then, with equal deliberation, he thrust them into McKinnon's still hesitating nagers. The operaor looked down at the money doubtfully and then up at the stranger.

"That's just a trio of twenties to bin dthe bargain," the latter explained. "You've got to get something for me taking up your time like this."

"But how are you going to clear me—I mean how are you going to make them see I haven't been acting against the ship ,if it ever comes to a showdown?" asked the operator, not so much with timidity, but more as though he took a morbid joy in toying with the dangers of the situation.

"There'll be nothing to clear, and nothing to show," the other retorted. "All you've got to do is to have a bad ear when a certain message or two happens along. But I'll go further than that just to put your mind at rest. To-morrow, when I pay over the balance, I'll put it down on paper, with my name to it, that I guarantee to protect you. We can both sign a note showing we're acting straight, and where we stand. Then you'll have me tied down in black and white. That seems square enough, doesn't it?"

"Oh, it's square enough. But suppose this man Ganley comes to me with a message to send out. I've got to show it to you, and if you don't approve of it I've got to act the lie that the message has been sent and keep lying to him every time he asks me about it."

"You're not paid to be a 'fence' for a gun-runner, are you?"

The older man laughed a little. Then he rose heavily to his feet. His head almost touched the cabin ceiling. "There's not much danger he'll ever ask about it. And when you know the man and his business you'll never let things like that worry you."

"That deosn't excuse me—his benging a gun-runner."

"Well, if you felt that way, of course you could send the message. Only you might send it as I mentioned—with the risk of falling short, I mean: some time when the engine room doesn't happen to be giving you quite enough power."

The operator weighed and pondered the question. The man beside him was anarchistic enough in his ideals of conduct. He recognized no authority beyond the dictates of expediency. He went back to primal and feral conditions—went back to them with the disquieting directness of a savage.

"I'd have to call uhtil I got my station," temporized the operator, "and the other fellow's O.K. after he'd got my call. Then he'd signal 'Go ahead,' to show he was ready to receive, and if I failed to reach him he'd keep 'coming bake' for me to repeat. Then, too, what I was trying to send might be picked up by any stray operator behind the sky-line. On the other hand, if I let the message die ,after getting my 'go ahead' signal, the thing would be reported and looked into. And that would mean trouble with the company when I got back."

"Then when you get your 'go ahead' signal why couldn't you just lay low and complain that your receiver or coherer, or something, was out of order—that you were cut off from receiving?"

"I hate to lie about my machinery," retorted the operator with what seemed a blind and foolish pride in his tools.

The older man's curl of lip showed a slowly-mounting dislike for further argument. Then he lifted his wide shoulders with a movement of resignation.

"Of course, I don't want you to lose either your job or your self-respect just because my official duty's been making me shadow a man."

The wireless operator seemed groping about for an answer when the quietness of the ship was broken by a sudden sound. It was the Laminian's foghorn, hoarse and mournful through the darkness, tearing the quiet with its slowly repeated call. The two men stood side by side listening, as the bass-noted complaint was repeated.

"We're running into thick weather," said the operator, turning to take up his earphones. The two men, immured in their own ends and aims, had lost all thought of time and environment.

A moment later heavy footsteps sounded on the deck and the captain appeared in the doorway. He stood in the narrow opening, red-nosed, gnomelike, with the white light glistening on his waterproofed figure.

"Are you keeping an ear open for everything in there?" he demanded, with a scowl of disapproval at the man beside the steamer-chair.

The Old Pains and Aches Are Now Only a Memory

Tells of the Wonderful Benefits Obtained From

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Like many another Newfoundlander living far from doctors, Mr. Stone feels unbounded gratitude for the benefits obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

For years he had suffered from a congested condition of the liver and kidneys, with headaches, backaches, pains in limbs and body. Words fail to describe his sufferings as well as the gratitude he wants to express for the cure.

Mr. Alex. J. Stone, West Point, Nfld., writes: "I suppose you thought I had forgotten all about you when I got Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but I haven't. You must excuse mistakes, for like many Newfoundland men, I have not much education, but I want to thank you many times for your medicine.

"I cannot tell you what I suffered from liver and kidney derangements, indigestion and constipation, nor can I find words to express how much good this medicine has done me. I feel better than I have for ve years and have given some of these pills to friends, who tell me they have done them a wonderful lot of good. I want to express my heartfelt gratitude for the benefit derived from the great medicine."

White Bread Eaters

Beri-beri! What's That?

A recent press despatch from Paris to the New York American quotes Thomas A. Edison as saying, that in France:

> "They (the French) do not unbalance the wheat for the sake of appearance, but retain the gluten qualities in an extraordinary way. I think that most of the indigestion in America comes from the desire to make bread look pretty, and in so doing, unbalancing the wheat, taking from it the qualities most essential to nutrition and health.
>
> "It has been found in countries where that dreaded disease known as beri-beri flourishes (Beri-beri is a fatal disease attacking the nerves and nerve centres) that in the process of polishing and whitening rice, elements are taken from the food that, if allowed to remain and fed to patients suffering from the disease actually cures them."

In the making of white flour, the vital elements of the hard, outer coat of the wheat are "thrown away," because they darken the flour. Nerve starvation is a natural result.

No one can "beat" Old Mother Nature. She places in wheat and barley certain elements (Diastase, Potash, Lime etc.) up under the outer shell. Diastase is the element which helps to transform or digest starch and make it useful for the body. Potash goes to rebuild the grey matter in the nerve cells.

In the making of

Grape-Nuts

these brain-and nerve-building elements are purposely preserved, among them the valuable Phosphate of Potash, (grown in the grain) the essential tissue salt of all grey nerve matter.

For growing children, for men and women who work with body and brain, there is no better food than Grape-Nuts.

Grape-Nuts contains all the meat of the wheat and barley from which it is made. A dish of Grape-Nuts and cream is the cereal part of the daily morning meal of hundreds of thousands of people all over the world.

Two Minute Talks About

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

How It Will Save Fuel For You

OF course the Pandora Range is a few dollars more than an ordinary range. But it will soon pay for itself in the fuel it will save for you.

The Pandora Flue System and Wide Fire Box, designed by our brainy stove experts, save about half a ton of coal per year, because they supply more air than the flue systems and fire boxes of ordinary ranges, causing better combustion of fuel.

The Steel Oven saves some more fuel, because it heats up more rapidly than a cast iron oven. The heavy Fire Clay Coating on the main bottom of range prevents any heat wasting towards the floor. It drives the heat back into the oven, and thus saves still more fuel.

But the big economizing feature is this: The draft for cooking on top of the range is also the draft for baking in the oven. The heat does double duty and your fuel bill is largely reduced.

Get the Pandora---the range that pays for itself. No other range is high-class enough for you.

AN OLD GOLD BRICK

Used For Fleecing the Innocents a Generation Ago.

THE PATENT SAFE SWINDLE.

It Was a Plausible Trick That Generally Caught the Coin and Sent the Bewildered Victim Out of Town in a Hurry For Fear of Arrest.

Although the essentials of imposture remain unchanged from generation to generation, so that the rogue of today would have no trouble in recognising his counterpart of the seventeenth century, nevertheless there are fashions in thievery, as in everything else. Old tricks are cast off like threadbare coats in favor of newer ones, and these in turn are discarded when publicity has rendered them familiar and therefore less effective, but plausibility and address are the indispensable qualities of the gentry who live by their wits.

The newest type of confidence man is the get-rich-quick individual who breathes of money and wouldn't turn his hand to a small "job." He angles for victims with new corporations and great business ventures for bait, but he is the same man who a generation ago raked in the shekels by means of the patent safe game. This game is now an outworn fashion. But it had its points.

Let us suppose a countryman, carpetbag in hand, to have alighted at the union station and set out to see the sights. Although his name is conveniently printed on the outside of his bag or set down in a legible hand on the hotel register, he is amazed to find himself hospitably greeted by an utter stranger, who knows his name and the town from which he hails. The stranger is an old friend whom the countryman is ashamed to think he cannot remember—place is the word. But the stranger is very affable and lays himself out to entertain the newcomer. They stroll about town in company, visit a bar or two, exchange reminiscences and at the end of a few hours are bosom companions. The stranger invariably pays the score, has a lordly disdain of money; good fellowship is its own reward.

The two stroll by devious ways until finally while they are walking arm in arm down a quiet bystreet the stranger's eye is caught by a curious object lying on the pavement. He pauses to examine it. It is a miniature globe about the size of a billiard ball. The stranger turns it over curiously in his fingers and finally sees that it is fitted with a small plug, which comes out under pressure. Continuing his explorations, he then unscrews the top of the plug, takes out a piece of crumpled paper, shows his dupe the empty box and throws the paper on the ground. There is a similar bit of paper in the small chamber at the end of the plug, but this the countryman does not see. The two then stroll on, discussing the mysterious ball.

Presently they come upon a worried looking man, who is studying the ground with a face the pattern of despair. The roper observes him and wants to know whether he has lost something.

"Lost something, indeed!" says the man. "Why, I've lost an invention of mine that I wouldn't have taken $10,000 for. It was a patent fire safe which would save hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of papers and valuables every year. I was just on my way to Blank & Blank's, the safe manufacturers, to get one made, and here I have lost the model."

The roper is evidently much touched by the inventor's distress. He produces the wooden globe and is immediately overwhelmed with expressions of gratitude.

"But what good is that invention of yours?" asks the roper.

"Well," says the inventor with pride, "you see, it is set on props. When there is a fire all you have to do is to knock out the props and the safe rolls down an incline right out of the building as neat as you please. There's a box inside to hold the papers. There is a paper in this box right now."

At that the roper winks slyly at the farmer and whispers in his ear, "I'll make him a bet on that piece of paper."

"Come," says the roper, "that's a pretty tall yarn. I don't believe there's any paper in that ball. I'll bet there isn't a scrap of paper in it."

"I'll bet you $1,000 there's a paper in it," says the inventor, much incensed.

"I haven't that much with me," says the roper, "but I'll just bet you a hundred on it." With that he takes out a number of bills, say $50 or so, and a bank check for the other $50. To his friend the farmer he says, "Will you just lend me $50 on this check until I can get to my hotel?"

The farmer sees that his friend is sure to win. He advances the $50, when, behold, the inventor draws out the plug, removes the concealed paper from its small chamber and collects the bet. The roper is decidedly crestfallen, but while he is still lamenting his folly a policeman rushes up, charges him with gambling and makes a grab for him. Roper flees, but the farmer is caught. After protesting his innocence the farmer is allowed to depart. Still fearful of arrest, he flees the city. When he presents his check he discovers that roper, inventor and policeman are all confidence men who have enriched themselves at his expense.—Chicago Record Herald.

"I Suffered Intense Pains in My Left Side."

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

15 YEARS A DYSPEPTIC

Forced to Live on Stale Bread and Porridge.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HIM

AVONDALE, N. B., October, 15th.

"I have been a great sufferer from Indigestion for fifteen years. I was forced to deny myself all such hearty foods as beans, meats, potatoes and could not drink tea or coffee. For the past two years, I lived on porridge, stale bread, etc. I had treatment from two doctors, and tried nearly every kind of medicine, but got worse.

"Finally I saw a testimonial of "Fruit-a-tives" and concluded to give them a trial. I took nearly four boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" and they have made me feel like a new man. I can eat all kinds of hearty foods without suffering, and am no longer constipated."

LEMUEL A. W. BROWN.

Many people look on "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous medicine. It has indeed performed what have seemed like miraculous cures in hundreds of cases of chronic Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Constipation and Biliousness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fresh fruit juices and valuable tonics. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

ECCENTRIC WAGNER.

A Glimpse of the Famous Composer in One of His Moods.

Richard Wagner, the composer, needed a good deal of managing, and Frau Cosima was always tactful, according to Judith Gautier's "Wagner at Home." When the author hesitated before accepting Wagner's invitation to an excursion she says Frau Cosima made signs to her and, coming nearer, said in a low voice: "Do not refuse, he would be angry. And let him manage it all; let him take the lead, if you do not wish to grieve him."

Later on she gives another curious scene: "Behind the house, in that court which formed a part of the garden, and from which the carriage drive started, there was a high swing, which the children were allowed to use very carefully, and with which the older people sometimes amused themselves. One day Mme. Cosima was sitting on the narrow board. Wagner offered to start the swing and give her a good flight through the air. All went well for a time, but, little by little, the motion became more rapid; higher and still higher went the swing. In vain Mme. Cosima begged for mercy. Carried away by a kind of frenzy, the master paid no attention and the incident began to have a terrifying effect.

"Cosima grew white; her hold relaxed, and she was about to fall. 'Do you not see that she is fainting?' I cried, throwing myself toward Wagner. He grew pale in his turn, and the danger was quickly averted. But, as the poor woman continued to be dizzy and trembling, the master concluded it would be wise to create a diversion. He ran rapidly toward the house, and by the aid of the shutters, the moldings and protections of the stones, he climbed nimbly up the side and, reaching the balcony of the floor above, leaped over it.

"He had obtained the desired effect, but in replacing one evil by another. Trembling with anxiety, Cosima turned to me, saying under her breath: 'Above all things, do not notice him; do not look surprised, or you can never tell where he will end.'"

Tablets For Cabinets.

Tablets giving the names of the members of the Cabinets of Ontario since Confederation are to be placed in the new library wing of the Parliament Buildings at Toronto. They will be placed in the corridor leading from the main staircase in the old building to this new wing to the north. It is understood that it is proposed to erect tablets giving the names of the members of the Legislatures since 1867. But it is feared that there is not sufficient space for this big undertaking.

George W. Gouinlock, the architect of the new wing, confidently expects to have it ready for occupation by the New Year. The stone work is now complete, save for the carving. The roof is now on and the floors are all in now.

The whole building is absolutely fireproof. The outside window casings are all metal, the window glass in wire meshed and fireproof and each window has a metal curtain which drops automatically when fire breaks out. The library will have fireproof fittings as well as the various offices on the ground floor.

A GREAT EXPLORER.

Dr. James M. Bell Did Valuable Work For the Dominion.

Dr. James Macintosh Bell, F.R.G.S., who has recently been in Canada, and who while here took over the old homestead, in which he was born, is a native of Almonte, Ont., a son of Mr. Andrew Bell, C.E., of that place, and a nephew of Dr. Robert Bell, formerly director of the Geological Survey. Dr. Macintosh Bell, himself, was, as a matter of fact, for some years a very prominent member of the staff of the Geological Survey of Canada. In 1898 he accompanied his uncle, Dr. Robt. Bell, to Grand Lake Victoria on the Upper Ottawa, and thence to Mimiskow Lake on the Rupert River. In 1899, he assisted his uncle in making his historical geological reconnaissance of the Michipicoten district, and the following year accompanied him to the Mackenzie Valley, where he performed some invaluable exploratory work. He spent the winter of 1900-1901 at Fort Resolution, and the following summer, accompanied by Mr. Charles Camsell, he traveled by an unknown route to Great Bear Lake and made a geological exploration of its northern shores, returning to civilization via a previously untraveled portage route to the north arm of Great Slave Lake, the Athabaska River and Edmonton. His party arrived at the latter place so late in the winter that considerable fears were entertained for their safety.

On this trip Dr. Bell suffered great hardships, he and his party being several times threatened with starvation. The results accomplished were very valuable, and Dr. Bell's report of his expedition is one of the most valuable publications of the Dominion Geological Survey. The pluck and skill he showed during this trip attracted world-wide attention, and almost as soon as he had completed his report he was appointed geologist to the Lake Superior Corporation with headquarters at Sault Ste. Marie. In 1903 he was engaged by the Government of Ontario to direct the provincial survey of the region south of James Bay, and the following year he was attracted to New Zealand by the offer of the appointment of director of the Geological Survey of New Zealand. He resigned the position a few months ago and has removed to London to take up practice as a consulting mining expert, but hopes to spend some time every year in Canada and eventually to retire from practice and take up his residence at Almonte. Dr. Bell's work in New Zealand was attended with great success, the geological survey being placed upon an entirely new footing, and the mining interest as a result receiving a considerable impetus.—Family Herald.

A Camp Joke.

A good story is told by the officers who attend Niagara Camp regarding a young spring of an officer, and though it has probably not lost any color as time has gone on, the most recent version may be given.

A young man whose father was rather prominent in the military about two decades ago became an officer in a rural regiment. His limited experience did not keep him from feeling his importance, though he was not quite sure of his duties. He had only been at camp for a few days when a very serious looking officer went up to him and asked him to go to headquarters for some red paint. "We will need it to paint the last post," he said.

Shortly afterwards, the young man returned and said that the paint had all been used up.

"Then go into town and ask the man at the hardware store," said the officer. "Tell him what we want it for and he will know what we always get."

Off started the junior officer through the heat, and Niagara-on-the-Lake can be hot when it tries. He returned about an hour later, very warm and very angry. He had been offered some other paint to cover up the "green on a few of the officers," and he "tumbled" to the fact that he was being made the subject of a practical joke.

very Simple.

"I've been working two or three evenings making an umbrella stand,' says the man who has taken up arts and crafts endeavor.

"Two or three evenings!" exclaims the other man. "Why waste all that time? Why don't you lean it in a corner or stick it in the ground?"—Judge.

The Trouble.

"What's the trouble?" inquired the judge.

"This lady lawyer wants to make a motion," explained the clerk, "but her gown is too tight."—Washington Herald.

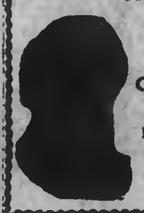
PEOPLE'S PULPIT.



Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

PARADISE LOST TO BE RESTORED

Mankind to be Redeemed Through the Sacrifice of Jesus.

Midocean, Oct. 8.—Pastor Russell made some startling statements in connection with his discourse on the Blood of Atonement. He took for his text the words, "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an Atonement for your souls." (Leviticus xvii, 11.) He said:—

All the trend of religious scholarship in recent years is away from the Bible and in line with the Evolution theory. The Bible sets forth that the first man was created perfect, in the image and likeness of his Creator, and that when on trial for life or death everlasting he was disobedient, and came under the sentence of death; and that all trouble, all sin and sorrow, pain and death, for the past six thousand years, is the penalty, the result, of that fall from obedience and harmony with God. The Bible teaches the necessity for an Atonement for sin, and this lesson was shown in the typical sacrifices of bullocks and goats, which Israelites for centuries commemorated, especially upon their Atonement Day, at the beginning of each year.

Evolution claims that man started as a cousin to the monkey, and that instead of falling into sin and death, an evolution process has been bringing him up, up, up to his present high elevation. This theory, having no place for sin or a fall, finds, of course, no place or need for a recovery, through a Redeemer, a Saviour. The two theories are absolutely opposed. Whoever believes the Darwinian theory cannot, logically, be a Christian. Whoever is a Christian cannot, logically, hold to the Darwin theory. And yet the pulpits of Christendom are well stocked with Higher Critics and Evolutionists, and all of our colleges and theological seminaries are graduating others, all antagonistic to the Bible and its presentations. For years the fight has been conducted on the quiet. The unbelievers hold the best and most influential pupits and professorships in Christendom, and insidiously, craftily, undermine the faith of those who are paying them their salaries.

It is time that the battle between truth and error should come out into the open, because the majority of those who are being misled do not realize the situation until their faith is entirely undermined — until their minds are so entrenched in error that the verities of God's Word, including the words of Jesus and the Apostles, have passed with them into the list of absurdities, amongst these, the stories of Jonah and the whale, Noah and the flood, etc., endorsed by Jesus and the Apostles.

To-day every college, every theological seminary throughout the whole civilized world is teaching what is commonly known as Higher Criticism of the Bible—though the proper name for it would be higher infidelity—infidelity amongst the high ones of all Christendom. These Higher Critics are doing the same work exactly that Thomas Paine and Robert Ingersoll did, only that they are carrying on their work on a higher plane—appealing not to the gross and the vile, but to the refined, intelligent and truth seeking. As a result their influence is a thousand fold more injurious. Those to whom Paine and Ingersoll appealed were very rarely Christians at all; hence they destroyed very little faith—they merely made the unbelief more rank and foul.

But these Higher Critic infidels of this "evil day" are making use of all the vast machinery of Christendom in all denominations, especially through theological seminaries, to undermine and overthrow the faith of all who have named the name of Christ, great and small, rich and poor, cultured and ignorant. It is being done systematically, too, craftily, deceitfully, in a manner that the masses of the people would scarcely credit. It is safe to say that fully four out of five who graduate from theological seminaries of all denominations are Higher Critic infidels, who are instructed that their main business is to promote morality amongst the people, especially to build up Churchanity, particularly their own denomination, and to gradually, stealthily, craftily wean the people from the faith of the Bible to their higher critical dogmas. And they are succeeding most wonderfully. A "pestilence" is the only figure of speech which really fits to this pernicious influence.

"Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee," said the Lord, and in harmony with this we find that in the Lord's providence these Higher Critics are gradually more and more telling on themselves. But the nominal Christian is quite obtuse, and many of the true Christians, as the Apostle explains, are merely "babes in Christ," unable to use the strong meat of the Word, and capable only of enjoying or using the "milk of the Word," and incapable of using its strong meat. Hence the open declarations of these wolves in sheep's clothing, who masquerade as sheep, are not taken seriously. If the sheep are startled by the words, they are soothed again by the thought that this is our kind minister, polished in manner and well educated, and he surely would not lead us astray, he surely would not deceive us. If he had ceased to believe the Bible and become an infidel he surely would have left the pulpit. Poor innocents!

Our text refers to a blood-atonement for sin. The Law Covenant required the death of a bullock and a goat, but the repetition of these sacrifices every year indicated that no cancellation was effected thereby—merely a typical covering of sin for a year. The Law required an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a man's life for a man's life, which implies that a perfect man must of necessity die in order to be the Redeemer of Adam and the race which shared his condemnation. The bullock of the sin-offering, therefore, was merely a type of a better sacrifice. The true sacrifice was provided in the death of the man CHRIST Jesus. He was a man, yet not a sinful man, because, although born of a woman, His life was from above. Had He received His life from an earthly father, He would have been a blemished, imperfect, sinful man, and as such could not have paid the ransom-price for another. For this cause One was chosen to be the Redeemer who was "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners." And all this because of His miraculous conception.

As in the type the blood of the bullock was used to made a typical atonement for a year, so in the antitype the blood of Jesus is efficacious to make atonement for the sins of the whole world. In the type an earthly priest offered the blood, in an earthly tabernacle; in the antitype, He who became the Sin-Offering, begotten of the Holy Spirit, at the time of His consecration, was therefore recognised as the great Antitypical High Priest. After His resurrection He ascended on high, "to appear in the presence of God for us" — for the Church—first; and when the Church shall be completed, He will appear for the world. He will seal the New Covenant for Israel, applicable to all the families of the earth, through Israel. Then, as the great Mediator of that New Covenant (Jeremiah xxxi, 31)., He will, for a thousand years, reign as King of earth, the Antitype of Melchisedec—a Priest upon His throne—a Royal Priest, possessed of the necessary power to put down sin and to uplift humanity and perform the function of instructing and blessing mankind.

The Paradise lost when Adam sinned was a miniature one. It is to be restored and to be world-wide in extent. "God will make His earthly footstool glorious." He has promised to make His footstool glorious—"He formed it not in vain, He formed it to be inhabited."—Isaiah lx, 13; lxvi, 1; xlv, 18.

As the earthly Eden it will be inhabited by its master, man; the restored earth would be naught without its master restored. And this is the Divine provision, that as by man came death, sin, sorrow, pain, trouble, by a man also shall come the resurrection of the dead, the uplifting of Adam's race, mentally, morally, physically, to human perfection, happiness and everlasting life. Earth's blessings will be for all except two classes: (1) Those who love sin and hate righteousness, after having been brought to a full knowledge of both good and evil, will have no further Divine favor, but will die the Second Death. (2) The others who will not get human perfection and earth's blessings will be a spiritual class, a saintly class whom God is now selecting from among mankind to be His co-laborers with Christ in the uplifting and restitution of humanity.

Unquestionably, the Almighty could have arranged a plan for dealing with humanity differently—He could have put a different penalty upon Father Adam. The present arrangement was made so as to display (1) Divine Justice, (2) Divine Love, (3) Divine Power, (4) Divine Wisdom. Man's fall and degradation under the death sentence witnessed to men and to angels the downward tendency of sin and Divine Justice in man's condemnation. Divine Love is manifested in the work of redemption. Divine Power will be manifested, during the reign of Messiah, in the uplifting of humanity from sin and death—the resurrection of the dead. Divine Wisdom will finally be seen by all when the great work of reconciliation and regeneration shall have been effected.

We have always known that in a very important sense the life of every creature is in its blood, as our text declares. But we are continually finding that the Bible contains such a superhuman wisdom that many of its statements grow in importance as our knowledge increases. Our text is no exception to this rule. The latest findings of science are to the effect that life and nature are more particularly represented in the blood than in any other manner.

If the theory of Evolution seemed supported by Mr. Darwin's careful inter-breeding of his pigeons, we are not to forget the difficulty he encountered in maintaining his fancy breeds. The constant tendency appeared to be to turn back to the original stock. We are now informed that this is a rule, a law of nature, which applies both to animal and vegetable life. We are informed that all such breedings return to their original species in the third or fourth generation, and this most fortunately, otherwise the physical health of humanity might be much more impaired than it is.

Is not this a direct corroboration of that Bible statement which some of us once thought so ungracious—God's declaration that He would "visit" the sins of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation?" (Exodus xx, 5.) It now appears that, instead of being a mark of Divine disfavor, it is a mark of Divine mercy that hereditary taint in the blood is limited to the third of fourth generation.

A celebrated physician and scientist, Dr. William Hanna Thomson, promulgating this theory, said:—

"Professor George H. F. Nuttall, of the University of Cambridge, took up the subject and has so extended its application that a single drop of blood from any animal now suffices, not only to show by its own peculiar chemical reaction what animal it comes from but also how nearly related an animal is by his blood to other animals. It begins, therefore, to look as if the whole classification of zoology might have to be re-arranged according to these blood tests. Thus a drop of blood from a walrus shows no relation to a drop of whale's blood, or the blood of any other cetacean, such as seals or porpoises, which, like the walrus, are mammals that have taken to the sea."

We may be sure that those who hold fast to the teachings of the Bible will come out on the right side of the argument in the long run. The endeavor of worldly-wise men to get away from God's book has led many of them to extremes of thought and of statement, which some day will be fully rectified to their shame, said Pastor Russell. The Bible foretells this, saying, "The wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." (Isaiah xxix, 14.) St. Paul refers to science, falsely so-called, which will ultimately be proven entirely wrong.

For nearly six thousand years the reign of sin and death has prevailed. It is nearly two thousand years since the Redeemer came to give His life as man's redemption price, yet still the reign of sin and death continues. It is not because the blood of Christ was insufficient to satisfy the claims of Justice for the sins of the world, but because, before the merit of the blood of Christ could be given to Adam and his race, it must have a previous use. That use has been in progress for the past eighteen centuries, during which it has been the basis of the Church's justification by faith.

There is a difference between the Church's faith-justification of this Age, and the world's actual justification, to be accomplished in the next Age. The world will actually get restitution to human life and its privileges, earthly dominion, etc. All that Adam had and lost, all that Jesus redeemed, will be given to Adam and his race to have and to hold as theirs forever.

But, meantime, the merit of Christ's blood or sacrifice is used in the interest of "the Church of the First-born." The earthly, natural rights will not be given to the Church, for she is to have "some better thing"—a heavenly inheritanace with her Lord and a participation in His spirit nature. The Redeemer's merit is imputed to the Church, to cover the impeffection and weakness of each one called and drawn of the Father to membership in the Bride of Christ. The difference between a gift and an imputation is manifest—an imputation signifies merely a loan, an assistance. Thus the merit of Christ, imputed to those who would become His Elect Church, covers their blemishes so that they may present their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God; as footstep followers of Jesus—as participants with Him in His spirit nature and in an attainment of the heavenly nature.

Thus it will be seen that since the entire world lost life and all its privileges through the disobedience of Adam, all of these may be fully recovered from their inherited disaster, through the Redeemer, because His life was given—figuratively. His blood was shed—"the Just for the unjust," as the great Sin-Atonement for the world.

In our text the word soul is a synonym for person or being. Father Adam was a human soul, a human being, so also his children. He alone, however, had a standing before Justice. He alone was perfect, he alone was on trial, and through his disobedience and fall his children are involved. Jesus was, originally, a spirit being, personality or soul, the Logos. He became a partaker of flesh and blood; He was not, previously, a human soul, hence it was that it was necessary for Him to lay aside the glory of His higher nature or order of being and become a human soul, "that He, by the grace of God, might taste death for every man." (Hebrews ii, 9.) He gave His blood, His life, a Ransom for all, and thus we see the fulfillment of our text, the exhibition of Divine favor and love with the resultant blessing to the world, during Messiah's reign, and the blessing and exaltation of the Church, which must precede.

England's Broad Arrow.

The property of the English crown has been marked with the broad arrow from times so early that no one can now tell when it was first used for this purpose or what was its meaning. This queer mark is stamped upon the King's property of every description from castles, ships and big guns down to bagging and convicts' uniforms, and there is a penalty of $1,000 for removing it.

Shut In Paraguay.

Paraguay is shut in on the west, north and east by hundreds of miles of thick, almost uninhabited forest country. On the south the greater part of the outlet is barred by swampy land, practically without population. From the day of its discovery to the present time the country has had only one artery of exit and entrance, the Parana River.

Right to the Point.

As a short and straightforward proposal nothing has ever surpassed that of the youth who, on entering the room, knelt down before the lady and, producing a ring from his pocket, said, "May I?"

A New Record.

One of the latest of records is that of Mrs. Sarah Smith, of Bradford, a lady well over ninety years of age, who has spent a holiday in Bridlington (Eng.) every year for eighty-six consecutive years.

Man's Dress.

Since 1825 the clothing of men has grown simpler and simpler, and [illegible] course of evolution has taken away from the picturesqueness of the crowd it has added to the dignity of the man.—Men's Wear.

His Disappearing Pulse.

"My!" exclaimed the doctor. "You have hardly any pulse to-day!"

"Well, don't you remember, doctor," replied the patient, "you took it when you were here yesterday?"

Perseverance.

Perseverance is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.

LARGEST EGG IN THE WORLD

The Aepyornis Surpassed the Ostrich, the King of Modern Birds

The largest egg in the world has recently been exhibited in the Museums of Natural History of New York and some other cities. It is the egg of the gigantic extinct bird called Aepyornis, which formerly lived in considerable numbers on the island of Madagascar. This was a huge wingless creature, the largest and most formidable bird of prey that ever trod the earth. In life it has been variously estimated to have stood from seven to twelve feet in height, possessing massive and powerful limbs. This great bird surpassed the ostrich, the king of modern birds, both in size, herculean strength and build. The Aepyornis egg is six times larger than that of the ostrich, having a capacity of 150 hen eggs. Here are some of the astounding dimensions of the big egg: The shell is about one-eighth of an inch thick, the lengthwise circumference is two feet eight inches, and two feet two inches around the middle. Though termed a fossil egg, it is not petrified or turned to hard stone as in the case of dinosaur bones. It is in a surprisingly perfect condition, unbroken, and has a yellow color, although finely pitted in places. The contents have not been removed, as they have turned to fine dust, which comes out when handled through a small natural perforation on one side. The Aepyornis that laid this colossal egg has not been seen in the life of the present generation of the inhabitants of Madagascar. In former times, several centuries ago, they were quite abundant. Several incomplete fossil remains of the bird have been discovered, but no complete skeleton has yet been found. These show that the bird was not only of massive proportions, but short winged, and has been classed as a distant relative of the Moas and the Apteryx, fossil birds of New Zealand. The natives of Madagascar have for many years used the great eggshells for various domestic purposes, for carrying water and as jars for storing and holding food. Only two or three of these huge eggs have been obtained by Europeans and these were usually found in the sand beds of torrents. The present egg is said to be one of the largest and most perfect ever brought into civilization.

DON'T WASH YOUR HORSE

It Removes the Natural Oil From the Outer Skin

The practice of washing horses, as a rule, is injurious because it removes the natural oil from the outer skin and predisposes the animal to chill, writes a practical man in the Kentucky Stock Farm. The application of water to a horse's skin increases the heat conducting power of his coat and lowers the temperature of the surface by evaporation and also by conduction, in the event of the temperature of the water being cooler than that of the skin. Even in the tropics, washing a horse always takes the gloss off his coat no matter how vigorously the subsequent "grooming may be performed. This fact is certainly a strong argument against the practice in question. If it is imperative to wash, and there is not sufficient help to have the horse rubbed dry, without loss of time, we may, after scraping and going over him with two or three dry rubbers, take him out and exercise him at a brisk pace until he gets dry. We should then walk him about until his circulation regains its normal condition before taking him in. If we can not give this exercise, we may, after scraping and driving him, put on him a good supply of warm clothing, bandage his legs, and leave him thus to dry under his rugs, which he will do in an hour or less. He should after that be exercised and well rubbed down, so as to prevent his getting chilled. A good plan for getting horses to dry quickly and safely under clothing is to cover the animal's back and loins with straw before putting on a rug, so as to utilize the low heat conducting power of air and to give as little impediment as possible for the escape of moisture.

DISCOVERED RADIUM ORE

A Valuable Deposit Was Found at Mount Painter, Australia

The Antarctic explorer, Dr. Douglas Mawson, who is an eminent geologist, aroused excitement in local mining circles by the announcement that he had discovered a valuable deposit of radium ore at Mount Painter, in a far northern district of the State of South Australia. Dr. Mawson has since his return from England again visited the spot and issues a long report on his later investigation. He declares that there is a vast lode of radium ore at least three miles long and from a few feet to several hundred yards wide. The deposit is of high grade, and a quarter of a ton is ready for shipment. Dr. Mawson calculates the net profit per ton of ore at $1,135. He says that there are huge deposits of corundum and aluminum-bearing ore in the vicinity.

Goods Train on Fire.

Some excitement was caused outside Chalk Farm Station by a goods train catching fire. Two trucks laden with tar barrels became involved, and the flames shot up to a height of 200 feet. The fire spread to the guard's van. Railway employes used sand to extinguish the flames. Several thousands of people assembled in the vicinity of the station.

Contributed a Pig

To a request for a harvest festival contribution the owner of a trawler sent a Grimsby clergyman a little pig in a crate. The animal was duly placed in the Grimsby fishermen's church on Sunday at the foot of the pulpit.

Railway Service Record.

The death took place at the age of seventy-three of Alexander Luck, for fifty-two years employed at Putney Station. He rose from porter to be a signalman in the station box, and retired on a pension in 1908.

The King and Norfolk Weed.

Hearing of the experiment of Major G. F. Whitmore in tobacco growing on his Mithwold estate, Norfolk, King George, as a neighbor, sent a note of congratulation. Specimens were sent by return to His Majesty. One leaf measured over 16½ in. in breadth.

Fourpence a Day.

A witness at Birmingham Police Court stated that he found the starving wife of an idle husband working at putting "eyes" on chains for payment of a halfpenny per gross. By working all day the woman was able to make just fourpence.

Seven Foot Potato Plant.

At Briston, Norfolk, a gardener has grown a number of potato plants to an extraordinary height. Many of them are over six feet high, while one measures over seven feet. The tubers have not in any way been affected, and as much as nine pounds were dug from a seven-foot tree.

Learned Music at Seventy.

Mrs. Maria Rose, a remarkable old lady, has just died in South Lincolnshire, at the great age of ninety-nine. She preserved her faculties to the last, and it is recorded of her that she learned music at the age of seventy. Up to ninety-five she had never received a telegram.

County Armagh Outrage.

An old woman named Mary Morgan has died at Mullabawn, as the result of injuries caused by an unknown masked man. The old woman lived alone a short distance outside the village, and her assailant, who entered the house and attacked her, is believed to be a tramp. She had some money in the bank.

Bank Manager's Death.

William F. Fetherstonhaugh, of Vernon-terrace, Frankfort-avenue, Dublin, died suddenly at the Brookfield lawn tennis grounds. He was fifty years of age, and a bank manager in Dublin. He had just finished a game of tennis, when he sat down, and after a few minutes was seen to fall off his seat. He suffered from heart disease.

Pigeon in Church.

At a recent evening service in Cambuslang Parish Church the building had an unusual visitor in a pigeon which had entered the place unobserved. Amusement was caused among the congregation, as at the time they were singing the words, "Even as a bird out of the fowler's snare."

Child Kicked to Death.

A distressing affair isreported from Echt, near Aberdeen. Henry Robertson, two and a half years old, was found lying near the door of his father's house. An angry mare was standing beside him and attempting to kick the prostrate body. The injuries which the child sustained proved fatal.

Falkirk's Historic Spot

A memorial fountain is to be erected at Falkirk to indicate the spot which tradition asserted was where Sir John de Graeme, Wallace's comrade-in-arms, fell at the battle of Falkirk in 1298. Mr. Robert Dollar, of San Francisco, a wealthy native of Falkirk, who has in the past befriended the town, will bear the expense.

Gold, Silver, and Copper.

In the copper mine at Lochgilphead, Argyllshire, the metal-bearing reef has again been tapped at 100 ft. below the surface, and the copper has been found much richer than at a depth of 60 ft., where the miners first came across it. The ore at 100 ft. is expected to produce a larger percentage of metal, chiefly copper, but also lead, silver, and perhaps a small percentage of gold.

"SWIMMING AND TEA FROM FIVE TO SEVEN"

The Paris Fashionable Set Have a New Idea for Entertaining Their Friends

The latest novelty in Parisian society is the issuing of cards bearing the inscription "Swimming and tea from five to seven," and if you happen to be in the rue de Chaseiles, near Parc Monceau, between these hours, you will see a procession of smart motor cars and broughams depositing fashionable ladies and subsequently fashionably gowned women before the "piscine" kept by Dr. Guimard. The central swimming pond occupies three sides of a square, with one end roped off for children and beginners. The rest is deep water, for those who can stand swim and play at waterpolo. The baths are got up in an art-nouveau style of architecture, with plat forms running out over the water, supported by mosaic columns. The sides are lined with mirrors, and the pond is lit from the ceiling, which is dotted with myriad electric bulbs. Mixed bathing is permitted, or rather it is one of the attractions. The establishment cost $400,000 to equip, and is the most up-to-date "institute medical" of its kind. The bath is filled with Paris drinking water and before it reaches the pond it is boiled, filtered, and clarified with lime. So that there is small risk of anyone being poisoned, especially as it is changed twice a day. There are 300 cabins, and so great is the rush on the baths on some days that the people have to wait their turn.

DOGS IN WARFARE

They Are To Be Used In Scenting Ambushes

For the first time trained dogs are to be used by a British force on active service. Two big and strong Airedales from Major Richardson's kennels are to accompany a punitive expedition on the Indian border to scent ambushes.

The expedition, consisting of a Ghoorka regiment, is to cross the Assam border to punish the Abor tribe for the murder of Mr. Noel Williamson and his party. Much of the country through which the Ghoorkas will have to pick their way is dense scrub, and these Airedales have been trained to utter a low growl to warn their friends of the vicinity of strangers. They have the faculty of "winding" game or people over a mile away, and have been trained not to bark.

Although nearly all the Continental countries, and Japan and the United only, count among their military units a dog corps, British military authorities have held divided views as to the utility of these four-footed scouts, some officers contending that they would by barking disclose, not only the presence of an enemy, but also warn the enemy of attack.

Major Richardson, who has devoted much care and thought to the breeding and training of war, police, and watch dogs, stated in an interview in the "Daily Telegraph" that for many reasons his choice fell upon Airedales —not the show dog of that breed, but the larger and heavier old-fashioned type, which was strong, very plucky, not apt to be afraid of anything, and not gun shy.

"The great advantage, in my opinion," said Major Richardson, "of a dog to a sentry or outpost picket is that at once the value of his services is more than doubled. A picket accompanied by a dog will never give a false alarm, and in the case of attack the approach of an enemy is noticed by the dog owing to its extraordinary keen sense of smell and sound long before the man has any definite idea of their presence.

"During the Matabele War a police patrol had turned in in their blankets for the night, leaving one of the number on guard. They had an old retriever with them. The night was very dark. The sentry saw and heard nothing, but the dog was restless and growled. Thinking something was wrong, the sentry roused his comrades. They were up, and had just prepared for an attack when a party of natives attempted to rush them. But for that dog that patrol would in all probability have been wiped out.

"It may interest you to learn," added Major Richardson, "that since the Borkum spy affair dogs patrol those fortified islands day and night."

"Ah, John!" said the wife to her recreant spouse. "When you remain away from me I miss you."

"But—hic—when I'm here?" he asked thickly.

"Then I don't miss you."

Bang!

"Take that!"

ALWAYS LOOK FOR THIS TRADE MARK ON MEDICINAL PREPARATIONS. IT'S YOUR GUARANTEE OF HIGHEST QUALITY.

The modern weapons against the "White Plague" are fresh air and nourishing food. For years Cod Liver Oil has been recognized as probably the best form of nourishment.

The difficulty has been with its nauseating taste and its tendency to upset the digestion. In the nasty taste and the indigestibility have been done away with entirely. The Compound is very agreeable both to the palate and the stomach. At the same time it retains the nutritive and curative properties of the pure Norwegian Oil, strengthened by the addition, in just the right proportions, of Extract of Malt, Wild Cherry, and Hypophosphites of Lime, Soda, Potassium, Manganese and Iron.

When a cold or cough "hangs on", particularly with a child or growing boy or girl, don't take chances. Start right in with a bottle of Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound—it will quickly build up the strength to throw off the cough or cold.

Ask your druggist about Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound. He has it—or can get it—in 50c. and $1.00 bottles. 103

TO RESTRICT FIGHTING.

Germany Endeavoring to Keep War Close to Tripoli.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—Although Germany finds that the time is not ripe for an offer of mediation to end the war between Turkey and Italy, pending the completion of the Italian occupation of Tripoli, the Government is endeavoring further to localise the hostilities and prevent fighting in the Red, Aegean and Adriatic Seas.

If Turkey will give assurances that she will not interfere in the transport of the expedition to Tripoli there is hope that all other hostilities will be suspended. The prolongation of war movements outside of Tripoli presents great risks to international shipping, and it is even feared that the service on the Suez Canal might be interrupted. The landing of the Italian expedition is said to present difficulties not anticipated. The weather on the Tripolitan coast has interfered and it will be at least a week probably before Italy is ready to treat with Turkey.

It is learned in diplomatic circles that Italy probably is willing to indemnify Turkey to the extent of about $12,000,000, but it is a question whether she is willing to recognize Turkish suzerainty over Tripoli in any form. Popular feeling and desire to avoid future sources of conflict may have changed the attitude that Italy held before the war began.

Turkish Refugees.

Malta, Oct. 11.—The Italian cruiser Bores wharved here Monday escorting the steamer Assyria, carrying many Turkish refugees from Tripoli, left port yesterday morning. She was permitted to take on only sufficient water to carry her to Syracuse.

The Italian consul raised objection to the action of the British authorities, contending that as the Bores was escorting a steamer filled with passengers, who were liable to mutiny and capture the ship, she should be commandered and could not be considered as being employed for warlike purposes, and she should, therefore, have free use of a neutral port.

The refugees, who were permitted to land, will take the next steamer for Constantinople. They complained bitterly of ill-treatment at the hands of Italians, saying that they had not been supplied with sufficient water.

A second Italian steamer, with 150 Turks, their wives and families, deported from Tripoli, arrived here yesterday afternoon. Many of the refugees will return to Tripoli on steamers which are now leaving daily.

Close Down on Italians.

Constantinople, Oct. 11.—At a Cabinet Council yesterday it was decided to close all Italian industrial, financial and scholastic establishments in Turkey, and to seize Italian steamers.

Italy's Purpose.

Chiasso, Oct. 11.—A confidential note from Italy to the powers confirms the purpose of Rome. The two objects, it says, are quite clear and distinct—namely, the conquest of Tripoli and the maintenance of the status quo in the Balkans.

It is semi-officially stated that Italy is now no more than satisfied with a simple protectorate over Tripoli, as in future events when other partition of territory occurs the interested powers may assign her a simple annexation of Tripoli to the detriment of other Italian aspirations.

Expedition On the Sea.

Rome, Oct 11.—The greater part of the Italian army expedition is now at sea en route for Tripoli. The battleship envoy covers a moving area one mile wide and five miles long. It is expected that, with a favorable sea, the troops can be landed in two days.

The first expeditionary force, which left Naples Oct. 5, was landed at Tobruk yesterday.

Britain Was Alarmed.

London, Oct. 11.—Turkey has now agreed to permit the free passage of neutral vessels, grain laden, to their destination. For the greater part of the day it looked as if Great Britain's food supply was endangered by the action of Turkey in declaring grain contraband, as 250 grain-carrying ships were tied up in the Black Sea At this season fully 30 per cent. of the wheat imported has to pass through the Bosphorus.

Powers to Wait on Italy.

London, Oct. 11.—A news despatch from Rome says that the Turkish soldiers who retreated to the interior when Tripoli was bombarded, have been obliged to open negotiations for their surrender, owing to the failure of their supplies.

The correspondent of The Chronicle at Constantinople telegraphs that the latest Turkish note to the powers was so conciliatory in tone that Germany has decided, with the other Governments, to renew the approaches at Rome for an understanding. Some of the answers received by the Porte from the powers Monday night are favorable to Turkey's request.

Reports from Benghazi that two Italian cruisers were destroyed, and from Derna that two Italian torpedo boat destroyers had been blown up by mines, are in circulation, but have not been confirmed.

May Lose His Leg.

Barrie, Oct. 11.—While out with a number of friends Monday evening hunting coons on the outskirts of Barrie, Fred. Salisbury was shot in the right leg by the accidental discharge of his gun. The shot entered his right leg just above the ankle, carrying away about one and three-quarter inches of bone and lacerating the flesh terribly. Slight hopes are entertained of being able to save the limb.

Uses Only Cuticura Soap for Prize Baby

"I have always used Cuticura Soap and no other for my baby, and he has never had a sore of any kind. His dear not even chafe as most babies do. I find that it is all owing to Cuticura Soap for he is fine and healthy, and when five months old won a prize in a baby contest. It makes my heart ache to go into so many homes and see a sweet faced baby with the whole top of its head a solid mass of scurf, caused by the use of poor soap. I always recommend Cuticura, and nine times out of ten the next time I see the mother she says 'Oh! I am so glad you told me of Cuticura.'" (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redondo Beach, Calif.

Although Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a postal to "Cuticura," Dept. 31K, Boston, U.S.A., will secure a liberal sample, with 32-p. book on the care of skin, scalp and hair.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Fear that Black Sea shipments would be hampered by the Turks had a bullish effect to-day on wheat. So did frost reports from the Argentine. In consequence the close was 1-8c to 1-2c and 5-8c higher than last night. Corn finished at 5-8c and 7-8c net advance; oats unchanged to 1-4c up, but hogs products were 2 1-2c to 14 1-2c and 25c down.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¾d to 1¼d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ¼d to ½d higher on corn. Budapest wheat closed ⅝c higher, Antwerp unchanged and Berlin ⅜c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 10.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, and the prices bid were 1½d higher, which was due to cables being received from Rosario reporting hard frost. There was an increased demand from local buyers for oats, and sales amounting to 100,000 bushels were made at steady prices. The foreign demand for oats was also better, but the prices bid for October shipment were out of line.

A fair volume of business was worked in spring wheat flour over the cable, and sales of 20 per cent. winter wheat grades were made to Aberdeen for October shipment at 25s. The trade in millfeed is fairly active. Demand for butter, cheese and eggs is good, and provisions are fairly active. Potatoes strong and in demand at 85c to 91 per bag, in car lots.

Pork Argument No Good.

When an election campaign gets really hot, the true stories that develop from the action of the drama are invariably better than the stock yarns that are always revived in every campaign. The densely populated and complex riding of Centre Toronto has already commenced to add to the anecdotage of the campaign. It is a riding which contains "The Ward," and embraces voters of many nationalities, with the Hebrews predominating. The Liberal candidate is Mr. Louis Heyd, K.C., a lawyer who has contested ridings in several parts of Ontario, but has never tackled a city constituency before. Now, one of the arguments used in this campaign by Liberals has been the "hog" argument. The speaker, by copious figures, attempts to show that the farmer and the consumer alike get the lean, and that the fat of the ugly brute goes to the "interests" which are arrayed against reciprocity. Mr. Heyd was speaking to a large audience of Hebrew constituents, and forgetful of the Mosaic law, he spoke at considerable length on the hog, promising his hearers cheaper pork this winter if Laurier was returned. He noticed that his audience was growing indifferent and finally hostile, and could not understand it, until finally a prominent Hebrew Liberal, who could stand it no longer, set him right by calling out: "Give us something else, Mr. Heyd, what do we care about pork?"

Mr. Heyd abruptly stopped, and hurried through his notes until he came to the page marked "beans."—Saturday Night.

Toronto Girl an Ocean Queen.

A unique honor not long ago was paid Miss Dorothy Langmuir, a well-known Toronto society girl. Miss Langmuir was returning from Europe on the palatial Royal Edward of the Canadian Northern line.

The passengers on the boat were filled with coronation spirit. Nothing would satisfy some of the gallant gentlemen on board but that they should crown an ocean queen before they reached Canada. Miss Langmuir was crowned. The ceremony was rendered particularly interesting in that Premier Bifton of Alberta, and Premier Scott of Saskatchewan participated—the first time Canadian Premiers ever officiated on such an occasion. Miss Marjory Wilks of Brantford, was a maid of honor.

Graphite by Electricity.

At Niagara Falls graphite is now made artificially by electric power, several thousand tons being produced there last year. Anthracite coal that carries a small amount of finely distributed ash is used in making the ordinary grades. The better grades are made from petroleum coke.

Cheaper Water For Brockville.

Brockville, Oct. 11.—The commissioners of Brockville's municipal water department have just announced another discount of five per cent. in the payment of half yearly rates, which now amounts to 30 per cent.

Strike on G.T.P.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 11.—Over 350 machinists of the G.T.P. struck at 10 a.m. for higher wages. No disorders followed though it is said the train operating department is likely to go out in sympathy.

Marked "Down."

Mrs. Guyer—Where are you going? Another bargain?

Mrs. Buyer—Yes, indeed! John told me this morning that half the elevators in Smither's department store are marked down.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medicinal forest plants. PETERBOROUGH WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 11 1911

INFLUENCE OF NATIONALISTS CLEARLY SHOWN IN MAKEUP OF BORDEN'S CABINET

Rejection of Andrew Broder is Solely Due to Them---Farmers of Canada Not Represented at All Except by a Fruit Grower---Personal Friends of Premier Are Not Given Portfolios Although They Are Taken Into the Cabinet.

SEVERAL OF THE CHOICES ARE NOT POPULAR

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 10.—Perhaps the most striking feature about the Borden Cabinet is the winout for the Nationalists which its personnel indicates. With F. D. Monk as Minister of Public Works, L. P. Pelletier as Postmaster-General and Bruno Nantel as Minister of Inland Revenue, the victory for the Nationalist sympathisers is most marked.

There were two things for which the Nationalist element from Quebec contended; and they won out on both. In the first place they insisted that the Protestant minority from Quebec should be represented by only one Minister, and that he should be without portfolio. The result was the appointment of G. H. Perley in that subordinate position. In the second place they went after the portfolio of Public Works for Mr. Monk, and they got that.

What Laurier Did.

It is interesting to compare the representation of the Protestant minority in Quebec with Mr. Borden as Premier with that accorded it by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It was frequently charged against Sir Wilfrid that under his administration the Roman Catholic church held too much of the balance of power and Mr. Borden's accession has been heralded as almost to put an end to this. But Sir Wilfrid gave the Protestants of Quebec three Ministers, one Hon. Sydney Fisher, with portfolio, and Sir Henri Joly DeLobiniere and R. R. Dobell without. Under Mr. Borden these same people have only Mr. Perley without portfolio.

The boasts that Mr. Bourassa would be disregarded have, it is very evident, not been quite fulfilled. Indeed, Mr. Bourassa seems to have had quite a lot to say about the make up of Canada's new Government.

Painful Surprise to Farmers.

The omission of Andrew Broder's name from the Cabinet list will be a painful surprise to a large number of Canadian farmers. Until the last forty-eight hours everyone assumed that Mr. Broder was certain of a place, and both sides here expressed themselves as greatly pleased. Then, at the last moment, Mr. Broder was quietly dropped in favour of Martin Burrell. If a practical farmer is really desirable at the head of the Canadian Department of Agriculture, no better man could have been found in the Dominion than Mr. Broder. Mr. Burrell has specialized on fruit-growing entirely, but should prove a good man as far as the administrative end of his work is concerned. He may be said to represent the "British-born" in the new Cabinet.

Why Reid Was Favoured.

The elevation of J. D. Reid to the Cabinet comes as a decided surprise to those who have watched him in the House. It was never supposed that the Grenville man was of Cabinet calibre. He was, however, very active in the last campaign, and took charge of over twenty constituencies in his own part of Ontario.

Rodolphe Forget was offered a portfolio, but would not accept—at least, not at present. The matter of the license of the International Bank has not been settled, and until it is Mr Forget feels that he is not at liberty to take an inside position.

Mr. White's installation as Mr. Borden's right-hand man, is not more popular with the rank and file here than it appears to be in Toronto. It has been known for some days that his elevation to the Cabinet was a certainty, and around the rotunda of the Russell the same complaints were heard that have been agitating the faithful workers of the Albany Club. Mr. White will remain an "outsider" and a "representative of the trusts" to many of the Old Guard. The new Minister therefore takes office under somewhat unpleasant circumstances and his task will be so much the more difficult.

W. B. Nantel is another surprise so far as his portfolio is concerned. It was expected that the Monk-Bourassa influence would be strong enough to get him into the Cabinet, but it was thought that the most he could expect was the Solicitor-Generalship. But the power that got him there was strong enough to get him into the inner circles.

A Straight Anti-Naval Man.

Mr. Nantel was originally a straight Conservative, but his Nationalist leanings have been most pronounced of late years, and all his votes have been cast with that block. He has always been a straight anti-navy man and in order to retain the support of his most powerful friends must persist in that attitude.

Judge Doherty has been sure of the portfolio of Justice from the beginning. It was hinted that he might be given the Speakership for a few days, but this was never seriously considered.

Crockett Sidetracked.

By the admission to the Cabinet of Hon. J. D. Hazen, Premier of New Brunswick, O. S. Crockett, who was the general favourite for a seat, has been ousted. This is another offence in the eyes of the old guard. Mr. Crockett's ability was above question, and he has rendered valuable service to his party in the House. It was generally expected that he would get the portfolio of railways. Mr. Hazen arrived post-haste several days ago, and all kinds of pressure were brought to bear on the new Premier. It is likely that Mr. Crockett will be given a consolation prise of some kind to make up. He is already mentioned for a position on the Transcontinental.

A Ross Rifle Triumph.

There will be a sigh of relief over the announcement that Col. Sam Hughes' tribulations are over. The Militia Department has been the cause of more speculation in the last two weeks than any other office in the gift of the new Premier. Major Currie of Simcoe, succeeded Sam. Sharpe of Ontario, as the Colonel's most serious rival, but the weight of the Orange Order was brought to bear in Col. Hughes' favour, and he finally won out. Major Currie seemed to think well of his own chances towards the last, and Col. Hughes' stock took a big slump until yesterday, when the news filtered through that he had finally been chosen. Col. Hughes' appointment is another triumph for the Ross Rifle.

A Triumph for Bourassa.

L. P. Pelletier's seat can only be taken as a triumph for Mr. Bourassa. T. Chase Casgrain was the nominee of the English powers in Quebec, and a fierce fight has been raging for days around these two men. Indeed, it may be said that the difficulty Mr. Borden has had to face over the settlement of his Quebec difficulties has delayed the final announcement of the Cabinet slate for some days. The difficulty was not finally settled, if indeed it can be said to be settled at all, until noon yesterday. Mr. Pelletier owes his election to the Nationalists with whom he has cast in his lot, although he was originally a most orthodox Conservative. Mr. Pelletier is a man of compromises and will make no difficulties with any party or group so far as he himself is concerned. This nomination will, however, scarcely mollify Sir Hugh Graham and the other English representatives. Whether Mr. Forget was booming Mr. Pelletier or Mr. Casgrain, it is impossible to find out, but the Montreal financier was certainly in anything but a pleasant mood when he left here on Monday. As was said yesterday, Mr. Borden was on the point of taking a hurried run to Montreal yesterday and people here are asking whether he would have been compelled to consult Mr. Bourassa.

Another Part of the Bargain.

It was not generally expected that Mr. Monk would get so important a portfolio as that of Public Works. He was thought to be much more likely to succeed Hon. Chas. Murphy as Secretary of State or Hon. Mackenzie King in the Department of Labour. His elevation to one of the premier Cabinet positions in the Government is another indication of the price Mr. Borden has had to pay to keep Quebec in line. There is, of course, no question of Mr. Monk's ability, though it is felt that he would have been better suited to another department. He is known to have a deep interest in the Labour Department, but the demand for big positions on the part of the Quebec wing has had to be met.

Old Guards Object.

Hon. Frank Cochrane has been assured of a portfolio since the beginning of the Cabinet selection. His appointment will not be popular with those who maintained until the last that Mr. Borden should have picked his advisers from among the men who helped him fight his battles in the House. Members of the old guard around Ottawa have been very emphatic on this head, and some of them refused to believe that the new Premier would go outside the House for the men who were to have the Cabinet positions. Mr. Cochrane's organizing ability, and the character of the work he has been called on to do in Ontario since he joined the Whitney Administration will be of valuable experience to him. He had been slated for Public Works until the final shuffle came.

Roche An Able Man.

Dr. W. J. Roche was it was thought, to receive a more important berth than has fallen to his lot. His training has not been of a nature which tended to fit him for the Secretaryship of State. Failing a cabinet position Dr. Roche was called for membership on the Western section of the Railway Commission. He is one of the ablest of the Western men.

Foster Shoved Aside.

Mr. Foster's relegation to the comparatively minor position of Minister

CHURCH FACES PROBLEM OF CITIES

Dr. Frank Mason North Urges Readjustment of Church Work in the Cities

THE SOCIAL PURPOSE

TORONTO, ONT., OCT 11.—It was the problem of the city which was the theme of Rev. Dr. Frank Mason North's address at this afternoon's session of the Ecumenical Conference. He urged the readjustment of church work in the urban centres. He did not think the city was the "final embodiment of evil culmination of adversary's plan of campaign against humanity." The statesmanship of the Church, said Rev. Dr. North, who comes from New York, which cannot hear the ceaseless tread of feet of the ever growing multitude upon the streets of the cities of the world is criminally indifferent and hopelessly stupid, the serial problems of the world are condensed in the life of the city. The Methodists' new approach to the people in the cities of Great Britain has given heart to the church in every land. The social purpose finds a ranking place in the programme of our missions in pagan lands.

HAD BAD SORE FOUR YEARS

ZAM-BUK HAS HEALED IT!

Mrs. Wilson, 110 Wickson Ave., Toronto, says: "About four years ago a sore spot appeared on the right side of my face. This spot increased in size until it became about half an inch in diameter and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not have any good effect. The sore continued to discharge freely, and was most painful. I had it cauterized, tried poultices and all kinds of salves, but it was no good, and I continued to suffer from it for four years.

"Asample of Zam-Buk was one day given to me, and I used it. Although the quantity was so small, it seemed to do me some good, so I purchased a further supply.

"Each box did me more and more good ,and, to my delight, before I had been using Zam-Buk three weeks, I saw that it was going to heal the sore. In less than a month it was healed!

"I know a lady in the east of the city, whose husband suffered for years with an open sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried in that case. The other day, when I saw her, she told me that it had healed the sore completely.

"My daughter, who lives in Lethbridge, Alta., has also used Zam-Buk with the same satisfactory result. I think it is, beyond all doubt, the finest healing balm known."

Such is the opinion of all persons who have really tried Zam-Buk. It is a sure cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm, cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases, 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. In case of skin disease use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

Dummer Man Charged With Serious Offence

H. F. Wood of Dummer, laid a charge against Fred L. Payne of Dummer, accusing him of unlawfully enticing and encouraging Hubert Francis Wood to leave his foster home and situation, in which he was placed for adoption or apprenticeship, by the Catholic Emigration Society, Ottawa, being a society within the meaning of sub sections 2 of Section 1, Chap 264, of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, the said Hubert Francis Wood being under the age of eighteen. The case will be tried before Magistrate Edmison in the County Court at 11 a.m., Oct. 17th.

A LAND BATTLE

The Turks Made Determined Attack on Italian Defences But Were Repulsed—Heavy Losses on Both Sides.

SEARCHLIGHTS USED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ROME, OCT. 11.—Official word was received here of fighting early yesterday morning, when the Turkish irregulars made a determined attack on the Italian defences in inner Tripoli, and were beaten off only when vessels of the fleet in the harbour turned on their searchlights and used the guns with powerful effect. The Italian casualities numbered hundreds and the Turks left a number of dead on the field. It is rumoured here that many of the Italian casualities were caused by the fire of the ships' guns, which were badly aimed and, falling short, cut into the Italian troops.

THE WONDERFUL EXHIBITION NOW IN PETERBORO'

Hundreds are being attracted to the wonderful exhibit now in Peterborough, of an Alaskan Eskimo mummy, preserved in such a state that the flesh is pliable, hair, teeth and nails being quite natural. It is the only mummy in the world in such a state and is the wonder of the medical profession and scientific men of the day. No one should fail to see it on exhibition in the store formerly occupied by the Boston cafe, 410 George street.

Ladies in numbers are also seeing this marvellous exhibit, but are asked to call in the afternoons as the evening is so crowded. There is nothing immodest or ghastly about the exhibit, which may be seen with interest by all citizens of Peterborough. Admission 10c.

CABINET MET TO-DAY

Matters of Business Demanding Immediate Attention Were Discussed —Left for Quebec

WILL GREET NEW GOVERNOR

OTTAWA, OCT. 11.—There was a meeting of the new Cabinet again this morning, at which the new ministers got used to the feeling of leather chairs in the Council Chamber, and ddiscussed some small matters, which demanded immediate attention. Then they went off to their respective departments to become acquainted with their staff. They left in a body this afternoon for Quebec to greet the new Governor-General, and Ottawa will be dead till their return.

PROPOSAL TO APPOINT A COMMISSION

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT. 11.—The business committee of the Ecumenical Methodist Conference to-day submitted a proposal to appoint an Ecumenical Methodist Commission, to act in ten years, separating the Conference to continue ecumenical relations of various branches of Methodism, that the results of the Conference may be conserved. It is proposed that the Commission be composed of 100 members, 50 from the Eastern section and 50 from the West. Sir Robert Perks urged that the influence of the Methodist Church should be concentrated by the establishment of such a commission. Joint action in such countries as Russia and Spain in days gone by, might have saved the church members from cruel persecution. The discussion will be resumed later.

M'NAMARA TRIAL COMMENCED TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner.

LOS ANGELES, OCT. 11. — The greatest trial in the history of organized labour commenced here this morning, when James B. McNamara was placed on trial for murder of the men killed in the explosion in the Times printing office.

A year ago the announcement was made when the court was opened by District Attorney Fredericks, that the prisoner would be tried first, leaving his brother John J., till later. The selection of the jury immediately commenced. The chief labour leaders of America are here, with all kinds of funds to back up the defence of the McNamara brothers.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the Kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

MARK HAMBOURG

A Rare Musical Event for Peterborough

Seldom is an opportunity afforded us to hear the works of the great composers interpreted in our town by so eminent a master as Mr. Mark Hambourg. We trust, therefore, that the music lovers of Peterborough and district will show their appreciation on this rare occasion by giving substantial support to Mr. Turner's appeal to assure the financial success of this engagement at the Opera House, Oct. 17.

Mark Hambourg, though only thirty years of age, has already achieved world-wide fame and has won so high a place among modern pianists that he is called the "Napoleon of the Piano," and, during his recent Canadian tour the critics spoke of him as a formidable rival to Padcrewski.

Born in Bogotchar, in the Province of Voronezh, Southern Russia, Mr Hambourg developed talent at such an early age that his father, who, by the way, is now a resident of Toronto, personally undertook his musical education and brought him out as a prodigy in 1889. In 1891 he left London, whither the family had migrated, and went to Vienna, to study under Leschetizky, and remained 3 years, after winning the Liest Scholarship. In addition to having made three tours to Australia, he has been twice to South Africa; three times to America, and this season will make his second Canadian tour from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast.

DISASTROUS RESULTS FOLLOW BREAKING OUT OF REVOLUTION

Alarming Reports From Revolutionary Centres of China --Wuchang, Capital of Hu Peh, Reported to Have Been Captured---British Gun-Boats Ordered to the Scene of Hostilities.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

PEKIN, CHINA, OCT. 11.—The revolution has broken out again in different parts of the Empire. They have captured Wu Chang, the capital of Hu Peh province, where the trouble was reported for some days. The commander of the Government troops was killed, with many of his soldiers. The population is about six hundred thousand.

LONDON, OCT. 11.—The news of a fresh outbreak of the revolution in China is regarded here as very serious, and English gunboats have been ordered to proceed at once up the river to the affected districts. Private despatches here say that women and children of the foreigners are taking refuge on the steamers and are sailing for Pekin. It seems that a large part of the Government's army went over to the revolutionists' side, and they have several modern guns and thousands of latest pattern rifles.

The Architectural Designs Of Peterborough Public Buildings Lack Variety And Taste

The buildings of the city came in for some criticism at the hands of a well known business man, in conversation with an Examiner reporter this morning. During the conversation the following was the opinion expressed by the man as regards the architecture of the city in general:

"Some wise person has been criticising the architecture of the new Baptist church and does not credit the architect with much taste. He states that there is only one church in the city worthy of admiration, and that is the new Catholic church—Sacred Heart. This is no doubt a handsome church, but it must be borne in mind that it is simply one of ten churches throughout the world, the evolution of a thousand years of the taste and skill, which characterizes the Catholic churches throughout the world. Most of the finest churches in England, and I may say all on the continent ,are products of the Catholic church, which has always aimed to appeal to the esthetic and beautiful as a means of impressing the claim of religion on the respect and admiration of the people. The Protestant church, which has to provide for the various operations of the church, ir Sunday schools, societies and weeknight devotion and so on has, of necessity, been compelled to add to the church edifice proper large additions, which are very frequently not in keeping with architecture of the church and frequently break up the grace and harmony of the church proper. The new Baptist church edifice combines the church and ample provisions for the sabbath school and requirements of the church system. They have accomplished this with very great success. The addition to the church, of Sabbath schools, etc., is exceedingly beautiful and the whole structure, in old English gothic, is a charming church edifice. Absolutely correct in style, pleasing and possessing those charms which characterize old English churches. The George street Methodist, St. Andrews, All Saints and Knox church, are all fine edifices, and a credit to the city. The domestic architecture of the city is not such as to compel much commendation. There is a sterility and uniformity beyond that which characterizes any of our fast growing towns. The cities of the west, where there are new and young architects, have great variety of architectural design beyond anything that Peterborough possesses. Our new churches are creditable, but the same cannot be said of our domestic architecture. The homes are good, but have not that variety and taste which is desirable."

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF THE QUEEN MARY HOSPITAL BOARD

The Queen Mary Hospital Board met yesterday afternoon and transacted considerable business. The following were present: Mayor Morrow, chairman; Dr. Boucher and Ald. Duncan.

Applications were read for the position of caretaker from the following: Samuel English, James Edmison, George McLean and Jos. Craig, and were referred to Ald. Duncan and Dr. McPherson, to deal with.

A letter was read from W. J. Johnston, saying he would supply storm doors and sashes for the hospital on the north and west sides, except the basement, and one door on the basement for $75.00.

The tender was accepted on motion of Ald. Duncan.

A letter was read from Wm. James saying that he would lay out the grounds of the hospital, doing all the work and furnishing the material for $700.00.

Another letter was read from Wm. James, saying he would put in a cedar hedge at the hospital for $75.

The communications were received.

The following accounts were read, and moved to be paid:

INTERESTING LECTURE BY MISS ELIZABETH HENRY

Interesting in the extreme was Miss Elizabeth Henry's lecture on the Passion Play, given last evening in the St. Alphonsus Lyceum. The seating capacity of the hall was taxed to its utmost, while the expounding of the various phases of the play was listened to with marked attention.

The evening was enlivened by songs ably rendered by Miss Simonds Messrs. J. Haunshan, H. Quinlan and G. Daly.

The lecturer, who was introduced by the Rev. Father McColl, opened her lecture with a few remarks about the Passion play which is performed every ten years. "The caste," said Miss Henry, "is composed of approximately six hundred performers and is witnessed by a colossal audience numbering upwards of four thousand.

The Passion play is the only piece of old work produced in these modern times. The reason for its attractiveness is the devotional spirit in which it is rendered. It is the ambition of every boy to assume the role of Christus (the representation of the Saviour) in the play and this ambition is equally shared by all mothers who long to see their sons contribute to the performance. By the aid of limelight, some beautiful Bavarian buildings and sylvan scenes were presented to the gathering and each picture was fully explained.

In referring to education, the lecturer said: "Bavaria has been ruled for centuries by kings who have fostered education." Pictures representing the Passion play from the ousting out of the temple of the money changers to the resurrection, with full explanation, followed.

The evening closed about ten o'clock by the singing of the national anthem.

It might be remarked that Miss Henry is a native of Peterborough and has of late gained considerable fame in Toronto on account of her lecturing.

BOURASSA IS THE "BOSS."

The Borden-Bourassa alliance in the recent election has produced the Bourassa-Borden cabinet. We say Bourassa-Borden, for Mr. Bourassa should come first, as he has shown himself to be the master of the administration. He has dictated the appointment of three French-speaking members, fiery followers of Bourassa and the anti-British, anti-Imperial policy he stands for. Even Mr. Bourassa, who one would think, would be hard to satisfy, is satisfied. He says so through his newspaper, Le Devoir, which has come to be the official organ in Quebec of the Borden government. It says.

"On the night of Sept. 21st, Mr. Borden said: "Quebec has done a big share; it will get justice." He has kept his word—il vient de tenir parole."

It further points out with empressment, that, while in the Laurier administration at its end, there were only two French ministers; in the Borden, all-British, true-blue-Tory, cabinet, "there are three ministers of the 'French tongue.'" And, one of these, Mr. Monk, in charge of the largest spending department in the government, Public Works, and the most bitterly hostile to the idea of Canada doing anything to share the burden of imperial defence.

Now, in the abstract, there is no objection in having the French Canadian elements in a Canadian cabinet. That is only fair play—representation according to population. But what is objectionable, is that the leader of a party, blown into power by the gale generated by frantic waving of the British flag—in this province and riding, anyway—should choose three anti-British and anti-imperial Frenchmen, three traitors, par excellence, to everything British, to be elevated over the heads of loyal, capable, and truly British French speaking Conservatives should choose for preferment three men, who in the good old days, not long past, would have been hanged as the traitors they boast they are, instead of being sworn of the Privy Council of a British sovereign and made members of the Tory government of a British country—the government of a party that claims all the loyalty to things British extant, and holds a blanket chattel mortgage on the flag in every form.

In view of the grounds upon which the campaign against Laurier was waged in Ontario and West Peterborough—because he was a Roman Catholic and a Frenchman—it might be pointed out that Sir Wilfrid in his first cabinet in 1896, outside of himself, had only one French Canadian Roman Catholic, Hon. J. Israel Tarte, and counting Hon. R. W. Scott, only two Roman Catholics in his cabinet, and both were loyal Britishers. Hon. Mr. Borden's first cabinet contains three French Canadian Roman Catholics, not good and true Britishers; and altogether there are four Roman Catholics in Mr. Borden's first cabinet.

There is nothing objectionable in this, in the abstract. Roman Catholics, according to the genius of free British institution, have their rights to recognition and a fair share of public office. No good Canadian will deny them that; but they must be good and true men, not traitors, such as Hon. Mr. Borden has preferred for the responsibility of office.

Was it for this that the P. P. A. in Peterborough and elsewhere "raged" and as the outcome shows, "imagined a vain thing?" Was it for this that the pipes were laid, the ropes were pulled, to displace Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a true and loyal Briton at heart, a Canadian statesman who has done more to show, and not say, his loyalty to Britain and the British empire, than any statesman in Canadian history? Was it for this that the doctrine of exclusion of Roman Catholics from office was pushed even into the domain of municipal office? Was it for this that Mr. Borden swept into power by an unprecedented Ontario majority, on the flag-waving, British-loyalty—and vote - for - Burnham-and - British connection cry, weakly surrendered to the empire-wrecking forces and anti-British cult of Bourassa, to destroy which, the "no surrender" party fought its devious and underground campaign? Was it for this they fought—to win Bourassa's approval and foist three French speaking traitors upon loyal Canadians as their rulers and masters? Was it for this that a thousand stalwarts waved flags in the Opera House to acclaim the Tory leader, who has trodden under foot the principles of loyalty to Britain by making three anti-British traitors advisers of his Majesty's representative and members of his Privy Council? Was it for this that the British Born were herded and hustled to the polls to win the battle of British connection—to place anti-British traitors in the seats of the mighty?

These things are pointed out and made plain to help appreciation of the utter hollowness and hypocrisy of the race and religion and loyalty cry as employed in the late contest, by which so many were stampeded into taking a stand contrary to their party convictions and cooperating with interests which, while professing to have at heart the welfare of the country only, have shown themselves to be, in fact, allies and adjuncts of the Conservative party, for purely party purposes. Their eyes are now opened and they can see to what extent they have been duped.

THE NEW CABINET.

(Montreal Herald)

Probably nobody will seriously object to the statement that new Borden Cabinet is the weakest first cabinet since Confederation. It does not compare, for instance, with the first Laurier Cabinet, which included Mowat, Blair, Fielding, Sifton, Tarte and Davies. It does not compare with the Macdonald Cabinet of 1878. It is not, take it any way one likes, equal to the Cabinet it replaces. It is not, finally, as strong a Cabinet as people expected to see formed when they heard of the victory, and which would have included Mr. Borden, Sir James Whitney, Mr. McBride, Mr. Sifton, as well as Mr. Monk, Mr. Doherty, Mr. Foster, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hazen. Why the victorious Conservatives did not see fit to give the country that kind of a Cabinet is their affair; but they cannot expect the substitute they offer to be taken as being just as good.

The stronger men of the Cabinet, such as it is, are Messrs. Borden, Monk, Doherty, Foster, Rogers, and Hazen, in about that order. There is significance to the appointment of Mr. White to the Finance Department, but it is for what he may become, rather than for what he has done. Messrs. Burrell, Reid, Nantel, Crothers, Hughes, Pelletier, Cochrane and Roche are none of them men of such compelling force as to warrant their being more than midway forward of the back benches. They are just good, average Members of Parliament, and their being put into Cabinet positions cannot be expected to make them much more.

The slate, as it stands, reveals something of the difficulty Mr. Borden has had to encounter. Mr. Andrew Broder is not in the Cabinet, for instance, when nearly everybody would have picked him for Minister of Agriculture. Col. Sam Hughes is in the Cabinet; where it may be doubted if his company is very much desired by any of those he will meet there. There has apparently been a good deal of a contest to decide who is who in Quebec, and the Nationalists have carried it over the Ghosts. The men who attended the famous dinner are none the better for doing so. Mr. Casgrain is not in the Cabinet, neither is Mr. Marechal. Mr. Monk, Mr. Pelletier and Mr. Nantel, all most closely associated with the fighting wing, are in the Cabinet. Indeed the Pelletier and Nantel appointments seem to give Mr. Monk a group of three in the Cabinet, when it would not have been impossible to fill the other Quebec offices with men who are more or less his rivals, as Mr. Casgrain and Mr. Forget. We take it, therefore, that in Quebec it is Mr. Bourassa who has had his way.

In the Ontario delegation there is nothing startling to remark, outside the appointment of Mr. White. Mr. Reid has been a consistent Borden man through all the cabals for his replacement. He rather has the laugh on some of those who were not so loyal, and whose qualifications are at least equal to his. Mr. Foster goes to the Commerce Department. Like Sir Richard Cartwright, he "didn't come back" to his old office of Finance Minister. There was talk of leaving him out of the Cabinet, but it was evidently thought to be less dangerous to take him in, and the decision was probably well taken. He is the sole survivor of the Old Conservative government in the ranks of the new one, in itself a striking tribute to his power. Mr. Cochrane, the other supposedly strong man from Ontario, lays no claim to being a moulder of public opinion. He is an organizer of his party friends and a very successful one, so far.

Except, however, for what influence Mr. Foster will have by reason of his superior knowledge, it is Mr. White who is designated to dominate the Ontario wing of the Cabinet. His appointment means that the business intrests which in Toronto centre around the Bank of Commerce, and the politico-business circle which is domminated by Mr. J. W. Flavelle, will have the upper hand for some time to come. They had a great deal to do with organising the defeat of Laurier, and their influence was by no means confined to Ontario. It reached down to the County of Bromee, for example. Mr. Flavelle, himself an ardent and persistent Conservative, was clever enough, with the assistance of Mr. Sifton, to interest others of his group in the defeat of Laurier. The nomination of Mr. White is the recompense they have exacted. Behind the new Finance Minister, outside the Cabinet, stand Mr. Flavelle, Mr. Sifton, Sir Edmund Walker and Mr. Lash. Not far from the latter is Sir William Mackenzie, who is also believed to be on very good terms with Mr. Cochrane, the new Minister of Railways. They have been saying for some years in Toronto that when the party came back to power Toronto would take the priority Montreal had hitherto been accorded. It rather looks as if, with this group naming their man to the Finance Department, and that not a seasoned warrior of politics but one who has no other claim except their favour, there might be something in it.

It is to be noted that not much consideration of like kind has been meted out to the corresponding group in Montreal. It is known that great efforts were made by and on behalf of Sir Hugh Graham, to secure something like the same privilege of nomination that was given Mr. Flavelle, but without success. Mr. Casgrain is not in the Cabinet. Mr. Monk is in it. And to those who know the underneath of politics it looks more and more clear that Sir William Van Horne spoke for himself and not for the Canadian Pacific.

Nova Scotia has lost one of its Ministers, the West taking it. This has been demanded for some time, ever since, indeed, the possibility of Sir Frederick Borden's retirement was mentioned. It was the only way to satisfy the ambition of Dr. Roche, and at the same time make room for Mr. Rogers, who has always been able to get Mr. Borden to see reason. Possibly the post of Solicitor-General will go to the Maritime Provinces as some compensation. The translation of Mr. Hazen to Ottawa is good for Mr. Borden; it may be the means of losing the New Brunswick Legislature. Mr. Burrell is undoubtedly the sblest of the British Columbia delegation, but he will not prove a very good substitute for Mr. McBride. Montreal can fairly claim to have contributed a large share of what strength the Cabinet has in intellect and character, for Mr. Monk, and Mr. Doherty must be held to rank very close after the Prime Minister, in whatever way their position is studied.

It is not very probable that this Cabinet will be found to suit the Conservative party very well. For that reason, no doubt, it may be held to suit very well the group of young and miltant Liberals who, under Sir Wilfrid Laurier's guidance, will take up the work of reorganising the Liberal party and fitting it for victory. Meantime, if Mr. Borden has his difficulties, he also has his chance for fame.

The Journalistic "Vicar Of Bray" Wants Protection—In Spots

In Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, Smith's Falls, and other Ontario centres there are at least ten thousand men engaged in the production of agricultural implements. Two weeks ago these men were urged to vote for protection. It was asserted that the reduction of 2½ and 5 per cent. proposed by the Liberal Government on various classes of farm implements would but whet the farmer's appetite, and that the remaining 15 per cent. duties on imported implements would not survive the next pilgrimage of the farmers to Ottawa.

The enormous Conservatives majorities in the implement-making constituencies proved that the workmen were influenced by this argument. They must now be rubbing their eyes and wondering whether they are awake when they see The Montreal Star's call for free trade in agricultural implements. The Star was one of the chief campaigners for Borden and protection. But it was for protection in spots. Ten thousand workmen of West Toronto and Hamilton, and Brantford are to be excluded from the charmed circle.

The Montreal Star in its weekly edition says:

"And here we step beyond the line of Borden pledges. He proposes to establish a tariff commission and let that commission decide whether or not agricultural implements should go on the free list. It is our opinion that the tariff should be entirely removed from all agricultural implements, without waiting for the report of any commission, for there should be no tax on the tools of our chief industry. Then it is notorious that our agricultural implement makers are quite able to compete on equal terms with their American rivals in other markets; and, that being so we can see no reason why they should not be compelled to compete with them on equal terms in the Canadian market, thus giving our farmers the benefit of any reduction in price which this competition would bring. Free agricultural implements is a plank in our platform; and we propose to fight for it."

After helping to return a high protection Government to power at Ottawa The Montreal Star is going to fight for free trade in farm implements. The gratitude of the farmers of Canada is surely due to The Star for its courageous action. It has tied their hands and manacled their ankles, and now it invites them to do battle with the triumphant forces of high protection. We fancy the Montreal Star will hear from its farmer readers in large numbers, and that a good many of the letters will not be suitable for publication. For the implement factory employees of this Province the Star cares not a jot. They do not buy the organ of adequate protection—in spots. That is their misfortune. If they did so we may be sure that The Star would in their case, as in all others, "still be the Vicar of Bray, Sir."

INFLUENCE OF NATIONALISTS CLEARLY SHOWN

of Trade and Commerce is not much of a surprise when it was once decided that he was not to get finance At first, of course, it was expected that the major seat in the Cabinet, next to the Premier, would go to him. Objection was at once raised in certain quarters, and this objection grew in volume as the days passed by. Much of it came from Toronto, but the maritime Provinces also made themselves heard. From them came the man who carried off the prize which Mr. Foster was billed to get, failing finance, that is to say, marine and fisheries. Mr. Foster is, of course, splendidly equipped for his new office.

The question was generally asked: "Where in the House will Mr. Borden get anyone to take charge of finance if Mr. Foster does not?" and it was a question which evidently could not be answered. The expected "dark horse" made his appearance at this point and jostled Mr. Foster out of his coveted position. Mr. Foster's experience in matters of finance will, of course, be of great service to the new Minister.

Two Personal Friends.

In Messrs. Kemp and Perley, Mr. Borden has raised to Cabinet positions two of his most faithful and devoted personal friends. Mr. Kemp was spoken of as a likely man for the head of the Customs Department, and it was expected that Mr. Perley, representing as he does the Protestant minority of Quebec, would get something better than he has. He was not at all anxious for a portfolio, however, and will probably be better satisfied with things as they are. The final result, so far as Mr. Perley is concerned, will not be pleasing to those he represents.

It was said that Ontario would not lose anything by the way she voted in the recent elections, but a comparison of her representation in the Borden Cabinet with that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, shows that Ontario has been given only one more Cabinet position, and that without portfolio. Quebec remains the same, except that she loses the honour of furnishing the Dominion with a Premier. If the present plan is adhered to, Saskatchewan will get her first representation in the Cabinet by the return of Hon. Robert Rogers from Prince Albert, whereas Alberta, which was represented by Hon. Frank Oliver, will now have representation only in the Senate in the person of Mr. Lougheed.

An Unpopular Surprise.

The forecasts of the personnel of the new Cabinet had been quite accurate, except in the case of W. B. Nantel, who was not expected until the last minute. Speculation as to the assignment of the portfolios was wrong in the majority of cases, however, and these contained a number of real surprises. The omission of Andrew Broder was, as has been said, the greatest surprise, and will likely be very unpopular.

CONSUMPTIVES READ THIS!
Dr. Morrisey's No. 10 May Save Your Life. It Has Made Many Remarkable Cures.

ST. ANDREWS, N. B., July 25, 1911.
"In the Autumn of 1907 I found myself the victim of a very distressing cough, and in October, 1907, during a fit of coughing I had a dreadful hemorrhage, and great streams of blood issued from my mouth. We called in the family physician, who pronounced it Tuberculosis, and said it was a matter of but a very short time. We had heard a great deal of the wonderful Father Morrisey, and we wrote him to send us some of his No 10 Lung Tonic, for I had heard what a fine remedy it was, and felt sure it would help me. The dear good man sent the cure, and I took it faithfully, but in the spring of 1908 the family called in a local physician, who said I had consumption, and there was no hope for me. This however, did not daunt me, for I knew that the cure was helping me, and I kept on taking it faithfully for over a year, and never missed, and to-day I am in splendid health. Every one in town has said it was the most wonderful and miraculous cure they had ever heard of. I can walk 8 to 10 miles a day—can eat anything I want, and look as though there never had been anything wrong with me. People look on sort of filled with awe, but still they have no idea how wonderful my recovery has been.
I could write quite a book on what your No. 10 Lung Tonic has done for me, and then feel that I had not done it justice. I took a full two years' treatment of your medicine and I am cured of consumption. I cannot possibly express my gratitude because words fail me. We always recommend your No. 10, and I know it will cure other cases as bad as mine if they will only use it faithfully.
I will gladly answer any questions from anybody who wishes to know further particulars.
Harry Montgomery Byrne.
The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

GREAT INTEREST IN THE BIG GAME ON SATURDAY

Considerable interest is being taken in the opening fixture of the Rugby season at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon when the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. team will meet the West End Club in a junior O.R.F.U. game. There is an interested crowd of fans at the practises of the local club at Central Park every night and this is strong evidence that the game is growing in popularity. With fine weather there should be a splendid crowd in attendance at Riverside Park on Saturday.

The Peterborough team is rounding into shape now and will be strong in all departments on Saturday. Both wing line and halves have shown improved form at the recent workouts and the team is developing more speed and precision all along the line. Some changes have been made in the line-up and it is felt that the team which will be sent out will be one that will give George Barber's Y.M.C.A. team a lively argument for the honours. The visitors demonstrated their class last Saturday by trimming Victoria College and they should be an awkward proposition. The Peterborough team will practise to-night at Central Park at 7.15 o'clock. A full turnout of players is expected.

GRAIN ROUTES WILL BE COMPLETED THIS FALL

At Least This is the Opinion of Those Who Are Concerned in the Work---Newsy Notes from the Scene of Hostilities.

Examiner Special:

The track laying between Lindsay and main line of the C.P.R. is rapidly nearing completion. No trouble is being experienced in the construction on any part of the grain line, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. It is quite probable that the road will be finished before the end of the year.

The work in connection with the large cut at Byers' Hill near Bethany, will be finished in about five days. This is the largest cut on the route, and one that called for the use of a 75 ton steam shovel. Speculation is rife as to whether Bethany will be favoured with a station, but at present there is no information concerning the matter from an official source.

The foreign element employed by the Toronto Construction Co. represents about 200 Polacks and about 300 Italians. The range of their work is chiefly confined to the pick and shovel. They work anywhere from ten to sixteen hours per day, according to their own inclination, and the majority board themselves. They live in tents and are summoned to their work in the morning by the shrill whistle of the yard engine. Other gangs are employed on trestle work, bridge construction, track laying and all things that constitute a well equipped line of railway.

WEDDING BELLS

WELCH—ROGERS.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized this morning by the Rev. Mr. Riddiford, when Miss Flaudy Rogers, youngest daughter of Mrs. Jos. Rogers, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Norman Welch, son of Mr. Lee Welch, Otonabee. The bridal couple left on the 8.30 train for Belleville, Kingston and other points east, and on their return will reside at 249 Park street, Peterborough.

TOUGAS—EDGAR.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Charlotte street Methodist parsonage at 7 o'clock this morning, when Miss Sarah Edgar, the eldest daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Edgar, Sherbrooke street, became the bride of Mr. William J. Tougas, eldest son of Mr. J. Tougas, Harvey street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Henderson. The young couple were unattended. They left on the 7.40 C.P.R. train for Toronto and other western points and on their return will take up residence in Peterborough.

TATE—BELL.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bell, Millcrest farm at high noon Wednesday, Oct. 11th, when their eldest daughter, Pearl B., and Albert J. Tate a prominent business man of Moose Jaw, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. The bride was beautifully attired in cream satin, trimmed with embroidered chiffon, wearing the customary veil caught with a coronet of lilies of the valley and carrying a shower bouquet of white roses.

To the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Lizzie Smith, of Peterborough, the bride entered the parlour on the arm of her father. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of Charlotte street church, Peterborough, assisted by Rev. J. Ireland of Bridgenorth. Afterwards the company adjourned to the dining room where a dainty dejeuner was served.

The bride's costume de voyage was of navy blue broadcloth, with picture hat of silk velvet and ostrich plumes. Among the many gifts was a Persian lamb jacket, the gift of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Tate left on the 4.28 C.P.R. train for Toronto, and after visiting Winnipeg, Fort William, Regina and other places, they will reside in Moose Jaw. The bride was a popular young lady and takes with her the best wishes of many Peterborough friends.

MINISTER OF MILITIA IN CITY TO-NIGHT

Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, will be in Peterborough for a short time this evening, and the officers of the garrison will meet at the Armouries at 8.30. The Minister will come from Lindsay about 6 and spend the time, till the departure of the midnight train, in the city.

Nominations Oct. 25

OTTAWA, OCT. 11.—It was decided to issue writs for members of the bye-elections, setting nominations for October 25th, and polling if necessary, one week later.

DANCE WAS A SUCCESS

The annual dance of the Peterborough Baseball Club held last night in the Conservatory of Music, was a marked success.

The hall was very decorated with flags and bunting and the attendance numbered some seventy couples. From nine till two o'clock there was not a dull moment. Indeed, such a thing could not exist, in view of the fact that Mr. Strathdee of Toronto, supplied the music.

Under the management of Messrs. A. E. Quinlan and J. J. Dorris, everything was well arranged and during the evening there was not a hitch. At two o'clock the assembly dispersed.

The patrons were Mr. and Mrs. F. McGrath, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Graham and Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Gallivan.

A DRUNKEN STUPOR

A man, apparently under the influence of liquor, or some powerful dope, was the centre of attraction for a small-sized crowd on Hunter street, about two o'clock this afternoon. During the time that he was the cynosoure of many eyes, he performed some remarkable capers, until finally he fell over on the road. He was removed from his unenviable position to a near-by stable, where he was left to sleep the effects of his debauch off.

CHANGE OF TRAIN SERVICE

Commencing on October 2nd the Lakefield train service will be changed as follows: The train which has been leaving here at 8.30 a.m. will now leave at 7.00 a.m. and returning will arrive in Peterboro 8.15 a.m. The noon train for Lakefield will leave at 12.20 and returning will arrive Peterboro 5.15 p.m. The evening train is discontinued. The public will be glad to learn that the new service inaugurated this Summer to Port Hope will be maintained throughout the Winter and will thus enable all passengers to leave Toronto at 9.00 a.m. any arrive in Peterboro at mid-day. This train also affords good connection for all Eastern points to Montreal and Boston. 12d-77

How They Compare

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 9.—An interesting comparison of the relative strength of the New York Nationals and the Philadelphia Americans, who will be in their battel for the world's championship next Saturday, is made by the unofficial records of the teams for the present season.

In batting the Giants have a team average of .272 for 146 games, while the Athletics show .294 for 150 games. In fielding the Giants average .961 and the Athletics .962.

McGraw's men have stolen 338 bases, while the Athletics have a total of 328 bases. The Athletics have made 856 runs and the Giants 720. In safe hits, the figures give the Athletics 1,506 and the Giants 1,298.

New York, Oct. 9.—A rough estimate of the gross receipts when the Giants and Athletics play the first world's series game at the Polo Grounds here next Saturday, provided weather conditions are favourable, is as follows:

400 boxes at $25 each, $10,000; 16,000 lower grandstand seats at $2 each, $32,000; 10,000 upper grandstand seats at $3 each, $30,000; 5,000 grand stand admissions at $2 each, $10,000; 15,000 open stand seats at $1 each, $15,000; gross receipts, $97,000.

Of this total the National Commission's ten per cent. will be $9,700; club owners' share, 30 per cent., $29,100; players' share, 60 per cent., $58,200. A guess places the entire gross receipts for the series, provided seven games are played, at more than $300,000.

Local Boys In Limelight

The Ottawa Free Press says:

Hefferman is a new one on the back division. He has a sure pair of hands and a good foot. He showed fine form until injured in the second half. He played the biggest part of the second half and all of their third quarter under a heavy handicap.

Dick Sheehy, however, who was carried down as spare and not put into the game until the last half, when he relieved Cornellier, was right on deck with all kinds of good stuff. He played a remarkable game. Once he got his hooks onto the rubber he never let go and generally advanced it a good many yards before downed. Dick has the short arm down to a science as many McGill men will testify.

There was not enough room in the stand and many spectators were found running up and down the line with every play. They interfered with the view of the spectators as well as with the playing of the teams, a number going so far as to interfere with some College men. This latter little drawback was remedied by Quilty of the College team, however. Manager Davis and a supporter of the McGill outfit started to hand it to Hefferman and Killian when they had downed a home runner near the line. Heff handed it to one of them, while Quilty shipped across the punch onto Davis that sat him, with considerable force against a nearby tree. The battling in business ended here.

RAIN ROUTES WILL BE COMPLETED THIS FALL

At Least This is the Opinion of Those Who Are Concerned in the Work---Newsy Notes from the Scene of Hostilities.

Examiner Special:

The track laying between Lindsay and main line of the C.P.R. is rapidly nearing completion. No trouble is being experienced in the construction on any part of the grain line, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. It is quite probable that the road will be finished before the end of the year.

The work in connection with the large cut at Byers' Hill near Bethany, will be finished in about five days. WEDDING BELLS

WELCH—ROGERS.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized this morning by the Rev. Mr. Riddell, when Miss Flandy Rogers, youngest daughter of Mrs. Jos. Rogers, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Norman Welch, son of Mr. Lee Welch, Otonabee. The bride and couple left on the 8.30 train for Belleville, Kingston and other points east, and on their return will reside at 249 Park street, Peterborough.

TOUGAS—EDGAR.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Charlotte street Methodist parsonage at 7 o'clock this morning, when Miss Sarah Edgar, the eldest daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Edgar, Sherbrooke street, became the bride of Mr. William J. Tougas, eldest son of Mr. J. Tougas, Harvey street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Henderson. The young couple were unattended. They left on the 7.40 C.P.R. train for Toronto and other western points and on their return will take up residence in Peterborough.

TATE—BELL.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bell, Millerest farm at high noon Wednesday, Oct. 11th, when their eldest daughter, Pearl B., and Albert J. Tate a prominent business man of Moose Jaw, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. The bride was beautifully attired in cream satin, trimmed with embroidered chiffon, wearing the customary veil caught with a coronet of lilies of the valley and carrying a shower bouquet of white roses.

To the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Lizzie Smith, of Peterborough, the bride entered the parlour on the arm of her father. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of Charlotte street church, Peterborough, assisted by Rev. J. Ireland of Bridgenorth. Afterwards the company adjourned to the dining room where a dainty dejeuner was served.

The bride's costume de voyage was of navy blue broadcloth, with picture hat of silk velvet and ostrich plumes. Among the many gifts was a Persian lamb jacket, the gift of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Tate left on the 4.28 C.P.R. train for Toronto, and after visiting Winnipeg, Fort William, Regina and other places, they will reside in Moose Jaw. The bride was a popular young lady and takes with her the best wishes of many Peterborough friends.

How They Compare

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 9.—An interesting comparison of the relative strength of the New York Nationals and the Philadelphia Americans, who will be in their battel for the world's championship next Saturday, is made by the unofficial records of the teams for the present season.

In batting the Giants have a team average of .272 for 146 games, while the Athletics show .294 for 150 games. In fielding the Giants average .961 and the Athletics .962.

McGraw's men have stolen 338 bases, while the Athletics have a total of 238 bases. The Athletics have made 856 runs and the Giants 720. In safe hits, the figures give the Athletics 1,508 and the Giants 1,298.

New York, Oct. 9.—A rough estimate of the gross receipts when the Giants and Athletics play the first world's series game at the Polo Grounds here next Saturday, provided weather conditions are favourable, is as follows:

400 boxes at $25 each, $10,000; 16,000 lower grandstand seats at $2 each, $32,000; 10,000 upper grandstand seats at $3 each, $30,000; 5,000 grand stand admissions at $2 each, $10,000; 15,000 open stand seats at $1 each, $15,000; gross receipts, $97,000.

Of this total the National Commission's ten per cent. will be $9,700; club owners' share, 30 per cent., $20,100; players' share, 60 per cent., $58,200. A guess places the entire gross receipts for the series, provided seven games are played, at more than $300,000.

Local Boys In Limelight

The Ottawa Free Press says:

Hefferman is a new one on the back division. He has a sure pair of hands and a good foot. He showed fine form until injured in the second half. He played the biggest part of the second half and all of their third quarter under a heavy handicap.

They interfered with the view of the spectators as well as with the playing of the teams, a number going so far as to interfere with some College men. This latter little drawback was remedied by Quilty of the College team, however. Manager Davis and a supporter of the McGill outfit started to hand it to Hefferman and Killian when they had downed a home runner near the line. Hefferman handed it to one of them, while Quilty slipped across the punch onto Davis that sat him, with considerable force against a nearby tree. The battling in business ended here.

EXCLUSIVE MILLINERY

But Not Extravagant Prices

IT IS A style that costs in a Hat. The indefinable something that gives to the twist of a loop or the droop of a feather the touch of distinction which raises the hat, upon which it appears immediately above the commonplace.

Our Hats have style, positive, undeniable style--the style for which women willingly pay exorbitant prices. They are correct, beautiful and becoming--fine quality, and skillfully put together. Yet they cost no more than ordinarily asked for the ordinary production of the ordinary millinery. : : :

Let your new hat be a hat of distinction--a hat which will prove an important asset to your appearance--a hat which will mark its wearer in any assemblage as a woman of superior taste in dress.

Remember—Exclusive Style Does NOT Entail Extravagant Price at This Store

THE BOARD OF WORKS HELD A BUSY SESSION

William Hamilton Company Were Given Permission to Construct Tramway---City Solicitor Will Look Into Matter of C. P. R. Siding.

A number of important issues came up for the consideration of the Board of Works last night, and a large amount of business was transacted. Mr. Wm. Gladman waited on the Board, on behalf of the William Hamilton Co. He set forth a request by the Company, to run a little track or tramway across Reid street, the length of the foundry, with entrances to the different doors. He stated that the track would only be 48 inches wide, and would project only 10 ft. 6 in. out from the building. The lorries which would run on it, would be pushed around by the men, and no steam power would be used. The Mayor moved that they be granted the privilege, providing that they consent to the work being done under the supervision of the City Engineer; also that they agree to a contract, whereby they will remove the track upon the request of the city. They will also be asked to pay a small rental for the privilege of having the right-of-way, in order that the city's rights may be protected.

The matter of constructing an approach to the property in front of the North Ward School, on Barnado Ave., was referred to the Chairman and the Engineer with power to act.

A request from the Peterborough Light and Power Co., to be allowed to put up five poles on Dale Ave., near Ingleburn Ave., and also to put in a gas main on Burnham street, was granted.

A request from Wm. Stock & Sons to have an approach constructed to their stables on Stewart street, south, of Sherbrooke street, was granted.

A letter from the Engineer, re the surplus poles on Chambers street, was received. He stated that five of the poles could be removed, if the company would agree. There are thirteen poles altogether on the street.

No action was taken in the case of Mrs. Walker, Aylmer street, who requested that the trees in front of her residence, be removed, as they shaded her house too much. The City Engineer reported that there was one of the trees, which should be removed, but the others would be all right if trimmed.

A petition for a sidewalk on the west side of Park stree ,from Albert to Lake street, also a petition for one on the south side of Bolidar street, were left over until next year.

Petitions for sidewalks must be in before the 1st of February, 1912, in order that the Engineer may be able to fix the assessment. A communication for a sidewalk on the north side of Anson street, was also left over.

A communication was recived from T. F. Matthews, asking that a concrete crossing be built on Murray St., in front of the new church. A resolution was passed to grant the request, but the Board is doubtful if the work can be done this season. A request for a crossing on Hunter street, at the end of Driscoll Terrace, was also granted.

The City Engineer was asked to report on the drain on Park street, south of Albert street, as the result of a request to have the drain tiled and filled up. Ald. Buller stated that the drain was a dangerous one, as well as containing stagnant water and rubbish.

Ald. Buller drew the attention of the Board to the fact that the G. T. R. had not connected their hydrant on Bethune street, with the sewer, and it was arranged that the City Engineer take up the matter.

A request for a wooden sidewalk on Aylmer street, from Lansdowne to Princess street, was granted.

"Jerry," the horse which was expelled from the Fire Department, and put on the "dump cart line," and who has figured in many scrapes since, came in for some discussion, as to his disposal. The charman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee and the Chairman of the Board of Works, will decide, however, what shall be done with him.

It was brought to the attention of the Board that Clifton street is wider at one end than it is at the other, and it is not known which is right; so it was decided that the Engineer and the Chairman will make a survey of the street and surrounding property, and will negotiate accordingly.

City Solicitor Hall and the Chairman will look into the matter of the C. P. R. siding over Sherbrooke St., as the siding is higher than the street, and will be detrimental to the draining.

Harry Evans, the Street Commissioner, was granted his holidays to begin at a time arranged by the Chairman.

The Council will meet on Oct. 27.

FELL IN A FAINT

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

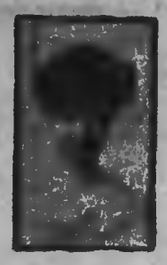
By Ruth Cameron

"SHE was married by momentum."

I wonder of how many married women that might be said.

A pathetic little letter lies on my desk. It is from a young girl who has discovered that she does not love the man she is engaged to marry in less than two months.

"But what can I do?" she cries, "I have almost all my trousseau and most of my household things. My girl friends have given me showers, and we've even picked out the house and hired it, and we're beginning to talk about setting the actual date for the wedding. I've been afraid for two or three months that I didn't care enough, but that was what made me realize just how badly I did feel. Why, when we talked about actually being married on this day or that it just seemed as if everything went black, I felt as if I were being sentenced to prison. Isn't that a perfectly awful way for a bride to feel?



"But what can I do? How can I break it off? What will people say? What will he say? Oh, Miss Cameron, sometimes when I wake up in the nights and think it all over, I feel as if I were going crazy, or as if it must be all a terrible dream. But I can't possibly turn back. Can I?"

I wonder what the other women who have been in that same position and have gone on would say to "I can't possibly turn back. Can I?

I am afraid they would laugh if they heard it — that terrible bitter melancholy laugh—like the laugh of the girl that Dick painted in "The Light that Failed"—which is the saddest sound in the world.

"You think it takes more strength than you've got to stop now," they would say. "Now how much strength do you think it's going to take to go on and live forty or fifty years with a man you don't love?"

One mistake never corrects another.

The bramble bush philosophy of our nursery rhyme doesn't work in real life.

This girl has made one terrible mistake in getting engaged to a man she doesn't love. She certainly can't correct it by making the even more terrible blunder of marrying him.

Listen, my dear girl—and any others who may be in a similar position—first, don't be swayed by any passing mood of resentment or overtried nerves in this matter. Be sure you know your own mind this time. Give your feelings a reasonable test of time. But once you are sure, don't let any considerations of what people will say or what he will say have a feather's weight with you. Think how much worse things they would probably say at the divorce suit.

Go ahead and do what you know is right and best, and you will find strength for all the recriminations and embarrassments and misery of broken habits that can possibly come.

Go straight ahead and if discouraged moments come hold tight to your heart the comfort that six months' of misery is better than sixty years.

You feel as if you were in a terrible dream. You are. And you can awaken yourself now if you will make the effort. But marriage would convert your dream into a reality from which you could never awake.

May you have the strength to do what God means you to and find the best happiness that He has in store for you.

RECORDS OF COW TESTING ASSOCIATION SHOW SOME INTERESTING RESULTS

The records of the Cow Testing Associations of Trewern, Central Smith, Shearer, Maple Leaf, Warsaw, Peterborough, Ennismore, Norwood and Keene have been compiled for the month of August and show the following results:

The best cow give 1,410 lbs. of milk testing 3.8 per cent., thus producing 53 1-2 lbs. of fat. Valuing the fat at 25 cents per lb., she brought in for her owner $13.37. The poorest cow gave 175 lbs. of milk, testing 4 per cent., thus producing 7 lbs. of fat, which would be worth $1.75, or about $11.50 less than that produced by the best cow.

Many people consider that because a cow is giving a small amount of milk that it is extremely rich, and that the cow is probably as profitable as larger milkers in the herd, and in many cases are right in their belief, but we have here an example of a cow which has never tested over 4 per cent., and has never given over 335 lbs. of milk in a month. No doubt there are many cows equally as unprofitable in Peterborough county.

The best cow, referred to above, is a five-year-old Grade Holstein, owned by Mr. F. J. Greenbank of Norwood, whose herd, in the month of June, averaged 1,388 lbs. of milk and over 44 lbs. of fat. Mr. Greenbank has used pure-bred Holstein sires, sires with official backing, for about twenty years, and by saving the heifers from the best cows, has graded up a herd which he may well be proud of.

The highest average lbs. of fat for the month was 40 3-4 lbs., which was produced by Mr. Greenbank's herd. The herd of Mr. Louis Brown of Norwood, was a close second, with 39 1-2 lbs. fat.

Leaving the Norwood Association out of consideration and looking over the records of some of the herds nearer Peterborough, we find some excellent herd averages. The herd of Mr. J. A. McGregor of Central Smith, averaged 33 1-2 lbs. fat. The herd of Mr. R. Scott, also of Central Smith, averaged 32 lbs. of fat. The herd of Mr. Joseph Mann of Trewern, averaged 32 1-2 lbs. of fat, and the herd of Mr. Wm. Telford of Ennismore, averaged 34 1-4 lbs. fat.

A remarkable cow in this herd is a six-year-old Grade Holstein, which Mr. Telford did not consider amounted to much, but the scales and the Babcock Test have proven otherwise, as this cow has, in four months, produced 3,800 lbs. of milk, and 161 lbs. of fat, or more than the average cow in Canada produces in a year. No doubt there are a number of excellent cows sent to the butcher every year, because their owners do not realize their value.

FOR A SICK, SOUR, BILIOUS STOMACH, GAS OR INDIGESTION SURELY TAKE CASCARETS

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended forever. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning — a 10-cent box will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

Elliot's Millinery Department Makes Gratifying Progress

Elliott's millinery department, under the able leadership of Miss Noble, is meeting with very gratifying success.

The management desires to express their grateful appreciation for the substantial patronage and approval so liberally evidenced by the ladies of this district.

Miss Noble feels so much encouraged by her reception in Elliott's millinery parlours by so many ladies that she is making still larger plans for the coming seasons.

She is even now making arrangements to receive from Paris and London, as soon as they develop, the newest ideas for the future season.

It is pleasant to hear so many hundreds of ladies say how much they admire the smart, exclusive styles she has been showing this season, backed up as they are by so many liberal orders.

Miss Noble says that she feels so much encouraged by the enthusiastic reception she has received from her innumerable friends and patrons, that as the seasons roll on she intends to do her utmost to make Elliott's millinery department the finest in Canada.

Wonders Of The Wireless

"Going down to meet a friend of mine just arriving from Europe on the Merion," remarked a young lawyer to a friend whom he met on Chestnut street yesterday afternoon. "Got some hot news for him, too. I'll knock him off his feet by selling him the surprises of the election, and all about the war between Italy and Turkey and the horrors of the big dam burst up in Austin. He's ben on the ocean a week, and out of touch with things. "Don't be so speedy," replied the friend. "You are doomed to disappointment. All the pleasures of greeting friends from abroad is about gone these days. You remember when the Tradesmen's Trust Company closed its doors? Well, I had a friend on the ocean who was a heavy depositor. When he arrived I hastened down to the pier bursting with the news. I started to pour it out to him, but he stopped me. He knew all about it. They had received the news by wireless on the same day the company suspended, almost as soon as the newspapers had it. And that's the way they get all the news. They publish a paper on the big boats, printing all the wireless news, which is relayed from boat to boat. Your friend knows as much about the war, the election and the disaster as you do."—Philadelphia Record.

Gave Lecture In Guelph

Rev. Dr. Marsh was in Guelph last week, where he delivered a lecture at the opening of the Guleph centre of the Royal Astronomical Society. Dr. Marsh is a former resident of Guelph and was given a hearty welcome on his return to his former home. There was a large attendance at the meeting which the speaker addressed on the subject of "The Physical Features of the Moon." The chair was occupied by the president, Mr. Westoby. The Guelph centre, although only organized last year, has a membership of upwards of one hundred and fifty.

The Least Fuel, The Most Satisfaction.

Exchange Your Baking Worries for a "Happy Thought"?

It isn't good policy and it's mighty poor economy to struggle along with an unsatisfactory range, working yourself to death, and wasting good food and high-priced fuel, when you can obtain a and possess a range that will always give you complete satisfaction. Its efficiency is based on a stove experience of over half a century. Its improvements are those that have been thoroughly tested and found to be of real value to a range.

HAPPY THOUGHT

It is made of material that will give lasting service, the parts subject to the greatest strain and wear are especially reinforced and it has a reputation to live up to that obliges the makers to see that every range turned out of their factory is perfect.

It is always good policy to be thoroughly informed about any articles before buying.

We will be pleased to explain the Happy Thought Range to you and then when you have examined the other stoves in the market—we will be ready to do business with you.

More than a quarter of a million "Happy Thoughts" are in daily use in Canada.

"THE ARRIVAL OF KITTY"

Favourite Breezy Comedy Will be at the Grand on Saturday for Two Performances

That bright, breezy, speedy comedy, "The Arrival of Kitty," which has made millions laugh, will play an engagement of two performances at the Peterborough Grand Opera House, Saturday, Oct. 14.

Kity needs no introduction to the audiences of Peterborough, as she has appeared here before and was highly praised and much appreciated by those who were fortunate enough to see her. The clean, sparkling comedy with which the dialogue is replete, has been retained, and the author has added considerable to it since its last appearance here, so that now it is almost a new show. Not alone is the dialogue bright, clean and wholesome, but it is free from the slap stick action usually found in farce comedy. A series of complications are gradually worked out with ludicrous effects, which is further enlivened by pretty girls who sing and dance original and up-to-date musical numbers.

The play is full of excitement from start to finish, the participants glide from one predicament to another causing more and more amusement as the play progresses. The cast is composed of the best in their respective lines and contains the names of such people as William Henderson, lately with Miss Maud Adams in "Peter Pan," Louis Marlow, the well known impersonator ,and little Evelyn Grey of Vaudeville fame. These three people alone would assure you of a good evening's entertainment, but there are a few more who, though probably not so well known, will nevertheless make you laugh.

Examined By Dr. Kincaid

In connection with the display of the wonderful Eskimo mummy, which is on exhibition in the old Boston Cafe, George street, an interesting feature is that the body has been examined and operated upon by Dr. Kincaid of the State University, Washington, who is an old Peterborough boy, who is well known here. The incision in the arm of the body it is said ,was made by Dr. Kincaid with a view of investigating the specimen. The curiosity has created considerable comment in the city, and a large number of people saw the mummy yesterday. The management have extended an invitation to the medical profession of Peterborough to attend the exhibition, free of charge.

The Ladies of Peterborough May Now Have Beautiful Hair. McDermid & Jury Have the Article and Guarantee it to Grow Hair, or Refund Your Money.

McDermid and Jury, backed up by the manufacturers of SALVIA, the Great Hair Grower, guarantees it to grow hair.

SALVIA destroys Dandruff in ten days.

The roots of the hair are so nourished and fed that a new crop of hair springs up, to the amazement and delight of the user. The hair is made soft and fluffy. Like all American preparations SALVIA is daintily perfumed. It is hard to find an actress who does not use SALVIA continually.

Ladies of society and influence use no other.

SALVIA is a non-sticky preparation, and is the ladies' favourite. A large, generous bottle, 50c. The Scobell Drug Co., St. Catharines Canadian distributors. Also sold at Payne's Drug Store.

SOCIAL WAS A HUGE SUCCESS

A concert and pie social was held under the auspices of the Cheerful Workers' (Young Ladies') and the brotherhood classes of St. James' Sunday School, Tuesday, Oct. 10th, when there was a large attendance, and a marked interest was taken in the proceedings, the pastor, Rev. Mr Brown, introduced the Chairman, Mr. Goodwin, teacher of the Cheerful Workers' Class, and needless to say that the latter carried his duties to a successful issue.

The following programme was run off:

Opening chorus— "Be a Hero"
Chairman's address.
Song—Mr. H. Lee.
Recitation—Miss Leader.
Cornet solo—Mr. Miller.
Recitation—Miss Moss.
